

BIRLA CENTRAL LIBRARY

PHILM (RAJASTHAN)

Call No 808.98

8847

Accession No 121678

Acc. No. 121678

ISSUE LABEL

Not later than the latest date stamped below.

~~102-38~~
25-8-82

~~3-3-82~~
~~8-2-82~~

~~1-1-82~~

~~1-1-82~~

THE MACMILLAN BOOK OF PROVERBS, MAXIMS, AND FAMOUS PHRASES

T H E

MACMILLAN

B O O K   O F

PROVERBS, MAXIMS, and Famous Phrases

---

Formerly entitled The Home Book of Proverbs, Maxims and Familiar Phrases

---

SELECTED AND ARRANGED BY
BURTON STEVENSON

*Editor The Home Book of Verse, The Home
Book of Quotations, The Home Book of Shakespeare Quotations*

Though old the thought and oft express'd,
'Tis his at last who says it best

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, For an Autograph.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY
NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1948, BY
THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the Publisher.

Seventh Printing 1968

PRINTED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY, NEW YORK
COLLIER-MACMILLAN CANADA LTD., TORONTO, ONTARIO

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The attempt is made in this book to trace back to their sources the proverbs, maxims, and familiar phrases in ordinary English and American use; to show their development from the first crude expression of the idea to its streamlined modern form, and to note the variations and perversions which, year after year, have been built around the central theme. In order to make the book complete, many so-called "familiar quotations" have been added, either because they contain a well-known phrase, or because they relate to the development of some proverbial expression. In a few instances, the trail leads back nearly six thousand years to the early Egyptian scribes, but for the most part it goes no farther than the Homeric and Hesiodic writings of about 800 B. C., and the Hebrew wisdom literature of perhaps a century later.

Just what is and what is not a proverb has long been a subject of learned controversy, and a number of the more famous definitions will be found in the body of the book. But this compiler has not concerned himself with fine-drawn distinctions. He has proceeded upon the assumption that a maxim is the sententious expression of some general truth or rule of conduct, that it is a proverb in the caterpillar stage, as Marvin puts it, and that it becomes a proverb when it gets its wings by winning popular acceptance, and flutters out into the highways and byways of the world. He has permitted himself the widest latitude of inclusion, and has not disdained the lowliest sources, as every user of the book will quickly discover.

For the citations from other languages than English, the compiler has depended entirely upon his own research. For the English, he has, of course, read the principal sources—Chaucer, Shakespeare, Swift, Pope, and so on—and made his own selections, but for citations from innumerable minor ones he has leaned heavily upon that vast treasure-house of quotation, The Oxford English Dictionary, and he has not hesitated to avail himself of the discoveries of his predecessors in this particular corner of the field, especially those of Mr. G. L. Apperson (English Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases) and of Mr. William George Smith (The Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs). For the American quotations, the Dictionary of American English furnished much interesting material connected with familiar phrases; John R. Bartlett's Dictionary of Americanisms and various less extensive works were also of use, but for the most part the compiler was compelled to depend upon himself.

The Greek selections are the result of a careful reading of the great epics, tragedies, biographies, and histories, from Homer to Plutarch, as well as of many minor works. The same is true of the Latin, except that here the compiler had the assistance of two collections which he has used entire, the so-called Dicta Catonis, which may or may not stem back to Cato Major, and the Sententiae of Publilius Syrus, dating from about 43 B. C. He has also made extensive use of that greatest and most scholarly of all such compilations, the Adagie of Erasmus, which dates from 1500. Quotations from Greek, Latin, German, Italian, Spanish, French and Dutch are given in the original, as well as in translation, but this was not possible for Hebrew, Arabic, Chinese, and other Semitic or Asiatic languages, though for some of the Chinese proverbs the transliterations of Justus Doolittle and of William Scarborough have been used. For the Greek and Latin texts, the Loeb Classical Library has been followed, in so far as it was available.

The English quotations have been taken from literary sources wherever possible, with their exact location indicated, but in very many instances their first appearance in print was in one of the collections of the early paroemiographers, as they liked to call themselves. Rarely indeed is one permitted to sit in at the birth of a proverb, or to name its author. The lines of Homer which have become proverbial, and the maxims which Solomon is supposed to have assembled had no doubt been in the mouths of the people, though perhaps in cruder form, for many generations before Homer and Solomon immortalized them. So it is to these early collections one must go, to Heywood, Camden, Herbert, Ray, Fuller, and many others. The earliest of these, John Heywood's A dialogue containing the number in effect of all the proverbes in the Englishe tongue, first published in 1546, has been included practically entire, and many have also been used from the collections listed below. In every case the original spelling has been retained, with such explanation of obscurities of meaning and of reference as seemed necessary, and all quotations have been carefully dated in order that the chronological sequence might be clear. The O.E.D. has been followed in the spelling of proper names.

The most famous American source is Benjamin Franklin's Poor Richard's Almanack, which ran from 1733 to 1758. It is crammed with "pleasant and witty verses, jests, and notable sayings," as the advertisement of the first issue announced. Very few of these were original with Franklin—he himself says that they were "the wisdom of many ages and nations"—but they were "filtered through his brain," in Paul Leicester Ford's phrase, embellished with new wit and sparkle, and many of them were given the form in which they are now best known. Indeed, Pope is perhaps the only one who outdid Franklin as a phrase polisher. There are no other American collections of importance, and in recent years American genius has run rather to perversion than to polishing. As a perverter, no one has approached O. Henry, unless it be Ogden Nash.

The compiler is indebted to Eric Partridge for permission to quote from his Dictionary of Clichés, published by The Macmillan Company; to Archer Taylor, for permission to quote from his book, The Proverb, published by the Harvard University Press; to Henry H. Hart for permission to use some of his Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, published by the Stanford University Press; to H. W. Thompson, for permission to quote some of the American variants cited in his Body, Boots and Britches, published by the J. B. Lippincott Company; and to Selwyn Gurney Champion, for permission to use a few of the proverbs he has collected in his Racial Proverbs, published by George Routledge. E. P. Dutton has permitted quotation from Arthur Guiterman's A Poet's Proverbs, and William Morrow and Company from Meditations in Wall Street, which was published anonymously, but whose author has since been stated to be Mr. Henry S. Haskins. Assistance has been received from many sources, and the compiler wishes especially to acknowledge that of Lieut.-Colonel Henry Alford, of Seaton Court, St. Andrews, Scotland. He is also deeply indebted to Mr. David C. Mearns, Director of the Reference Department of the Library of Congress, and to the late Mr. Charles F. McCombs, Chief Bibliographer of the New York Public Library, both of whom have been most generous in placing their resources at his disposal.

Chillicothe, Ohio,
July 19, 1947.

IMPORTANT EARLY COLLECTIONS OF ENGLISH PROVERBS

JOHN HEYWOOD, A dialogue containing the number in effect of all the proverbes in the Englishe tongue. 1546.

JOHN HEYWOOD, An Hundred Epigrammes. 1550. This was followed in 1555 by Two Hundred Epigrammes, and in 1560 by A fourth hundred of Epygrams.

DAVID FERGUSON, or FERGUSSON, Scottish Proverbs a. 1590. Ferguson died in 1598, but his collection was not published until 1641.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remaines of a greater worke concerning Britaine. 1605.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca Scholastica Instructissima. 1616.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina. 1639.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum a. 1633. The first edition, published in 1640, seven years after Herbert's death, was called Outlandish Proverbs, and in the second edition (1651), changed to Jacula Prudentum, javelins of the wise.

JAMES HOWELL, Paroimiographia: Proverbs, or, Old Sayed Sawes & Adages. 1639.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. 1670. An enlarged edition in 1678.

JAMES KELLY, Complete Collection of Scottish Proverbs. 1721.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia: Adages and Proverbs. 1732.

There have been many more-recent collections, the most important of which are H. C. Bohn's Hand-Book of Proverbs (1855), largely a reprint of Ray; W. Carew Hazlitt's English Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases (1869), whose usefulness is impaired by its confused arrangement; and Vincent Stuckey Lean's Collectanea (1902), a huge collection which Lean would doubtless have put in some sort of order had he lived.

Earlier than any of the books mentioned above were two translations of proverbs from foreign languages, that by Antony Woodville, Earl Rivers, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, which had been translated out of Latin into French, which Woodville translated from French into English, and which was published by William Caxton in 1477, the first book to come from his famous press. The other was Richard Taverner's Proverbes or Aphorismes out of Erasmus, published in 1539. Mention should also be made of Jehan Palsgrave's L'Éclaircissement de la Langue Française (1530), Randle Cotgrave's Dictionarie of the French and English Tongues (1611), and John Florio's Firste Frutes and Second Frutes (1578, 1591), renderings of Italian proverbs and aphorisms. All of these books, as well as many others, have been drawn upon in the preparation of this one. Few persons realize the extent of proverb literature. Wilfrid Bonser, in his Bibliography of Works Relating to Proverbs, published in 1930, gives the titles of 4004 books, and those omitted or overlooked by Bonser or published since 1930 probably number half as many more.

ABBREVIATIONS

a., ante, before.
 apol., apologue.
 Arb., Arber edition.
 attr., attributed.
 bk., book.
 c., circa, about.
 cent., centuria, century.
 ch., chapter.
 chil., chiliadis (chiliad, a thousand). Erasmus so called the main divisions or books of his Adagia. Each chiliadis contains ten chapters or centuriae, and each centuria cites one hundred proverbs.
 chron., chronicle.
 col., column.
 comp., compiler.
 D.A.E., Dictionary of American English.
 dial., dialogue.
 ecl., eclogue.
 ed., editor.
 edn., edition.
 E. E. T. S., Early English Text Society.
 eleg., elegy.
 emb., emblem.
 epig., epigram.
 epis., epistle.
 E.P.P., Early Popular Poetry of England, W. C. Hazlitt, ed.
 fab., fable.
 fo., folio.
 frag., fragment.
 Gros., Gro-art edition.
ibid., ibidem, in the same place.
i.e., id est, that is.
 ind., induction.
inf., infra, below.
 intro., introduction, or introductory.
 K., Kock, Comicorum Atticorum Fragmenta l., line.
 lect., lecture.
 let., letter.
 lit., literally.
 Loeb, Loeb Classical Library.

max., maxim.
 memb., member.
 MS., manuscript.
 No., number.
 O.E.D., Oxford English Dictionary.
 p., page; p. 23-3 indicates page 23, column 3.
 P.L.M., Poetae Latini Minores, ed. Baehrens.
 prol., prologue.
 prov., proverb.
 pt., part.
 q. v., quod vide, which see.
 S., Society.
 sat., satire.
 sc., scene.
 sect., section.
 ser., series.
 Sh. S., Shakespeare Society.
 sig., signature.
 Spens. S., Spenser Society.
 st., stanza.
 subs., subsection.
 s. v., sub verbo, under the word.
 tr., translator.
 T.T., Tudor Translations.
 vol., volume.

A date in parenthesis after the title of a book indicates the date of the edition from which the quotation was taken. If no such date is given, the date of the book itself indicates the edition.

With a book or set of books, ii, 45, indicates volume and page; with a play, i, 3, 76, indicates act, scene, line; with the Bible, ii, 5, indicates chapter and verse; with an epic poem, ii, 4, indicates canto and line; with such things as Horace's Odes and Satires, ii, 4, indicates the number of the ode or satire and the line; with Hudibras, i, i, 131, indicates part, canto, line; with Erasmus's Adagia, i, x, 80, indicates chiliadis i, centuria x, No. 80.

THE MACMILLAN BOOK OF PROVERBS.
MAXIMS, AND FAMOUS PHRASES

A

ABILITY

- 1 Attempt only what you are able to perform.
(Quod potes id tempta.)
CATO (?), Disticha, Bk. iv, No. 33. (c. 175 B. C.)
Let us not attempt more than mortality permits.
(Nec plus conemur quam sint mortalitas.)
PHAEDRUS (?), New Fables, Fab. 2. (c. 25 B. C.)
One who cannot pick up an ant and wants to pick up an elephant will some day see his folly.
GEORGE HEPTOG, Jaho Proverbs, p. 48 (1936)
- 2 I am short a cheek-bone and an ear, but am able to whip all Hell yet.
JOHN M. CORSE, Dispatch to L. M. Dayton, aide-de-camp to W. T. Sherman, from the battlefield at Allatoona, Ga., 6 Oct. 1864
- 3 What nature vetoes, nobody can accomplish
(Quod natura negat, reddere nemo potest.)
GAIUS CORNELIUS GALLUS, Elegies Eleg. v. 1 54. (c. 35 B. C.)
No man can ask more of a man than hee is able to doe.
JOHN SCOTTIN, Jests, p. 158 (1613)
A man can do no more than he can.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67 (1670)
Beyond what is possible, no one is obligated (Ultra posse, nemo obligatur.)
PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 226 (1778)
We do all we can, and no man can do more
JOHN RHODE, Dead of the Night, p. 137 (1942)
SUPRA VIRE, see under STRENGTH
- 4 Ability will see a Chance and snatch it.
Who has a Match will find a Place to scratch it.
ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 64 (1924)
- 5 That one may not another may.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. II, ch. 2. (1546)
What one cannot, another can.
SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, The Cruell Brother, Act I. (1630)
- 6 No man is able of himself to do all things.
(ἀλλ' οὐ πως ἑαυτὰ ἑωφάται αὐτὸς πάντα.)
HOMER, Iliad, Bk. xiii, l. 729. (c. 850 B. C.)
No man is skillful in every work. (οὐδ' ἑαυτὸς ἅν' ἐν παντί σοφὸς καὶ δαήμων φῶτα γινώσκει.)
HOMER, Iliad, Bk. xxiii, l. 670.
Not all things can we all do. (Non omnia possumus omnes.)
VERGIL, Elogues, Ecl. viii, l. 63. (37 B. C.)
Cited by MACROBIUS, Satires, vi, 35 (c. A. D. 400) and by ERASMUS, Adagia, II, iii, 94. (1523) Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 36, with the rendering, "All men can not do all thynges."
All things are not equally suitable to all men.
(Omnia non pariter rerum sunt omnibus apta.)
PROPERTIUS, Elegies, Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 7. (c. 26 B. C.) A similar Latin proverb is, "Nec omnia, nec semper, nec ab omnibus" (Neither all things, nor always, nor by all persons).
Every soil bears not everything. (Non toute terre porte tout.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel, Bk. iv, ch. 54. (1548)
No living man all things can. (Non omnia possumus omnes.)
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 147. (1639)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 56. (1670) On p. 97, CLARKE has, "No man is good at all things," and on p. 82, "All things fit not all men."
No man is capable of undertaking all things.
OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1709)
One cannot, as the Americans say, play every instrument in the band.
ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 168. (1940)
- 7 My heart bids me do it, if do it I can, and it is a thing possible to do. (τελέσαι δέ με θυμὸς ἀνθρώπων, | ἐλθέτω αὖτε τελέσαι γέ και ἐτελεσμένον ἔστω.)
HOMER, Iliad, Bk. xviii, l. 426. (c. 850 B. C.) A form of vow frequently repeated, in both Iliad and Odyssey, in the latter, for example, in v, 89.
"I will doe myne endeavor," quoth he that thrasht in his cloake.
JOHN MANNINGHAM, Diary, p. 131. (1602)
I'll DO MY BEST, see under BEST.
I do what I can, quoth the fellow, when he thresht in his cloak.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 155. (1639)
I'll do my good will, as he said that thresht in's cloak.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 247. (1670)
"This was some Scotchman," Ray adds, "for I have been told, that they are wont to do so." These are all elaborations of the Latin proverb, "Quod potui perfecti" (What I could do I did).
I had done my possible (in French phrase) to gratify you.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, Life of Andrew Bell, II, 483. (1808) The French phrase is, "Je feral tout mon possible."
- 8 I can do nothing else. (Ich kann nicht anders.)
MARTIN LUTHER, Speech, to the Diet of Worms, 18 April, 1521. Concluding sentence. Inscribed on his monument at Worms.

We cannot. (Non possumus.)

POPE CLEMENT VII, to Henry VIII, when the king demanded that the Church give him a divorce from Catherine of Aragon (1529)

It has since been the formula for such refusals.

God helping her, she [America] can do no other.

WOODROW WILSON, War Speech, to Congress, 2 April, 1917. Conclusion, echoing Luther Hell is paved with great granite blocks hewn from the hearts of those who said, "I can do no other."

HEYWOOD BROWN, Syndicate Column, 20 Jan. 1934

1
Unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability. (ἐκάστῳ κατὰ τὴν ἰδίαν δύναμιν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 15 (c. A D 65)

The Vulgate is, "Unicuique secundum propriam virtutem."

From each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs. (Jeder nach seinen Fähigkeiten, jedem nach seinen Bedürfnissen.)

KARL MARX, Rundglossen zum Programm der Deutschen Arbeiter Partei, p. 27 (1875)

Max Eastman, tr. In Program Critique (Critique of the Gotha Program), by Marx and Engels

To each according to his needs, from each according to his means

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman, Act iii (1903) Paraphrasing Marx

2
Man is capable of all things. (L'homme est capable de toutes choses.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk. ii, ch. 12 (1580)

3
No can?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Christian and Horatia, p. 180 (1576) A fairly common Elizabethan construction, but this phrase as a complete sentence, seems unique. It has survived as latter-day slang

Can do?

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 110 (1941) Repeated in later chapters

4
He who is able to do too much wants to be able to do more than he is able. (Quod non potest vult posse qui nimium potest.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 215. (c. A D 60) Another rendering is, "He who is too powerful seeks power beyond his power." A tyrant, in other words, always wants to be a greater tyrant. ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies (1524), quotes a somewhat similar proverb, "It possumus quando ut volumus non licet" (We are not permitted to be able to do as much as we wish to do).

We commonly think that we can do more than we are able. (Fere plus nobis videtur posse quam possumus.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi, Ch. 6, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 60)

5
I am as able and as fit as thou.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33. (1593)

He is able to put him up in a bag.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Cardigan, iii, 520. (1662) "They had a kind of play," says Fuller, "wherein the stronger . . . put the weaker into a sack; and hence we have borrowed our English byword."

6
Ability when indolent scarcely ever raises itself out of narrow fortunes. (Pigra extulit artis haud umquam sese virtus.)

SELIUS ITALICUS, Punica Bk. xiii, l. 773. (c. A D 90)

7
It is true that I have never learned to sing, nor even to play the lyre, but I know how to make a small and obscure city rich and great (πόλιν δὲ ποιῆσαι μεγάλην καὶ πλοσίαν ἐπιστάσθαι.)

THEMISTOCLES, Retort, when taunted for his lack of musical accomplishments and declared to be less cultured than Cimon (c. 490 B C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Cimon, ix, 1, Themistocles, ii, 3.

Let him sing to the flute, who cannot sing to the harp (Auloedus sit, qui citharoedus esse non possit.)

CICERO, Pro Murena Ch. 13 sec. 29 (63 B C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia Chl. ii, cent. iii. No. 44

If you cannot drive an ox, drive a donkey (Si bovem non possis, asinum agas.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon (c. 950) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 4 "If you haven't a capon, feed on an onion."

God hath given to some men wisdom and understanding, and to others the art of playing the fiddle

SOUTHEY, The Doctor Ch. 69 (1812) Quoted from "Professor Park's Dogmas of the Constitution," who in turn assigns it to "some proverb maker"

Put the man to the mear [mare] that can manage the mear

ALEXANDER HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 250 (1862)

He who has ability finds his place. (Chi ha arte, ha parte.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 178 (1856) A similar Italian proverb is, "Che ha arte, Per tutto ha parte."

8
Consciousness of our abilities augments them. (Le sentiment de nos forces les augmente.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions, No. 75 (1746)

9
They are able because they seem [to themselves] to be able. (Possunt, quia posse videntur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid Bk. v, l. 231. (19 B.C.) More freely, "They can, because they think they can."

ABOVE-BOARD

<sup>1</sup> All his dealings are square, and above the board.

JOSEPH HALL, Virtues and Vices, p. 15 (1608)

This early use of the phrase clearly indicates its derivation from the rule that, when dealing cards, gamblers must keep their hands above the board.

Fair play, and above-board too.

FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Custom of the Country. Act i, sc. 1. (1619)

Fair and above-board, without legerdemain.

JOHN EARLE, Microcosmographie, lxxvi, 157 (1628)

Here's nothing but fair play, and all above board

RICHARD BROME, The Antipodes. Act iii, sc. 1 (1640)

All is fair, all is above-board

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i, 185 (1753)

It is all fair and aboveboard

A CONAN DOYLE, The Sign of the Four. Ch. 12 (1890)

Everything's open and above board

STEVENSON AND OSBOURNE, The Wrecker. Ch. 9 (1891)

ABSENCE

<sup>2</sup> Absent. Peculiarly exposed to the tooth of detraction

AMBROSE BIERCY, Devil's Dictionary (1906)

<sup>3</sup> Even enemies, when absent, should not be harmed. (Ipsos absentes inimicos laedere noli)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. Pt. iii, l. 58. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626

Cato also says, "Champion the absent against backbiting tongues."

Let no one be willing to speak ill of the absent (Absenti nemo non nocuisse velit)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 32. (c. 26 B.C.)

The false accuser, who according to the proverb speaketh reproachful words to one that is dead, which is, to backbite the absent

STEFANO GUARZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 71 (1574) Pettie, tr

Speak not evil of the absent: it is unjust

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Rules of Civility (c. 1780) See SPARKS, Writings of Washington, ii, 415

<sup>4</sup> The absent feel and fear every ill. (Quien está ausente todos los males tiene y teme.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25 (1605)

SHELTON (1612) renders this, "To him that absent is All things succeed amiss," using an old English proverb.

<sup>5</sup> Though absent, we are present, in death, we are alive. (Ut absentes adessemus, mortui viveremus.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Sec. 97. (52 B.C.)

Friends, though absent, are still present. (Absentes adsunt.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 7, sec. 23. (44 B.C.) Though absent each from each, she sees and hears him. (Illum absens absentem auditque videtque.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 83. (19 B.C.)

Though absent, you are ever present in my heart (Absim, vos animo semper adesse meo.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 74. (c. A.D. 10) Absent in body, but present in spirit. (ἀπὸν τῷ σώματι παρὼν δὲ τῷ πνεύματι.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, v, 3. (c. A.D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Absens corpore, praesens autem spiritu"

Though severed in body, one mind keeps us linked (Corpore divisos mens tamen una tenet)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i, l. 178 (c. A.D. 416)

They may seem being absent to be present

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)

<sup>6</sup> He is neither absent without fault, nor present without excuse

THOMAS DRAX, Bibliotheca, p. 43 (1633) A rendering of the French proverb, "Absent n'est point sans coulpe, ni présent sans excuse" The Spanish form is, "Ni absente sin culpe, ni presente sin disculpa"

The absent are never without fault, nor the present without excuse

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

<sup>7</sup> Absence is the greatest of evils (L'absence est le plus grand des maux)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Les Deux Pigeons. Bk. ix, fab. 2 (1678)

Som men ben so long absent from there play, That others come and take there game away; And therfor it is said in wordes few,

How that long absence is a shrew

UNKNOWN, Piers of Fullham, l. 288. (c. 1480)

In HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, ii, 12.

<sup>8</sup> For princis ofte, of furious hastynesse,

Wil cache a quarrel, causeles in sentence,

Ageyn folk absent, thowh ther be non offence

JOHN LYNGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 3027 (c. 1440)

The absent party is still faulty.

GEORGE HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 320. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4390.

The absent party is always to blame

SAMUEL PALMER, Proverbs, p. 51. (1710)

The absent are always in the wrong. (Les absents ont toujours tort)

PHILIPPE NÉRICAUXT, dit DESTOUCHES, L'Obstacle Imprévu. Act i, sc. 6. (c. 1720) A proverb in some form in nearly all languages. The Latin is, "Absens haerens non erit" (The absent shall not be made heir); the Spanish, "Nunca los ausentes se hallaron justos" (Never were the absent in the right).

<sup>9</sup> So near and yet so far. (Tam prope tam proculque.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 86. (c. A.D. 85)

If I were near you I would not be far from you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

He seems so near and yet so far.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam, xcvi, 6. (1850)

1
Tho' lost to sight, within this filial breast
Hendrick still lives in all his might confest.

WILLIAM RIDER, Tho' Lost to Sight. See London Magazine, 1755, p. 589.

Tho' lost to sight, to mem'ry dear.

GEORGE LINLEY, Tho' Lost to Sight. (1830)
Written by Linley for Augustus Braham, who sang it with great success. The song had a wide vogue for many years, but the line was not original with Linley. It had been quoted as a proverb in The London Magazine for January, 1827, and is probably much older.

2
There is not one among them but I dote on his very absence.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i. 2, 121. (1596)

3
They shone forth the more that they were not seen. (Eo magis praefulgebant quod non videbantur.)

TACITUS, Annals. Adapted from Bk. iii, sec. 76 (c. A.D. 115) Tacitus is speaking of the funeral procession of Junia, sister of Brutus and wife of Cassius, and remarks, "Brutus and Cassius shone with preëminent lustre for the very reason that their images were not displayed."

Brutus and Cassius shone by their absence (Brutus et Cassius brillèrent par leur absence.)

MARIE-JOSEPH DE CHÉNIER, Tibère. Act i. sc. 1. (c. 1800) The first representation of the play at the Théâtre-Français was not until December, 1819, eight years after the author's death.

Among the defects of the Bill, which were numerous, one provision was conspicuous by its absence, and another by its presence.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Address to the Electors of the City of London, 6 April, 1859. Of the Reform Bill introduced by Lord Derby.

Of all the methods of making itself conspicuous, the Court of St. James's has adopted the most economical: that of being conspicuous by its absence. (Celle de briller par son absence.)

M. O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 236 (1890)

He had this great quality, which very few of us can claim, that his presence was as big as his absence.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Innocence of Father Brown: The Secret Garden. (1911)

4
Greater things are believed of those who are absent. (Maiora credi de absentibus.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. ii, sec. 83. (c. A.D. 109)

They are aye good that are aye.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 338. (1721)

Spoken when people lavishly commend the absent or the dead.

DISTANCE LENDS ENCHANTMENT, see DISTANCE

5
He rages against the absent. (Saevit in absentis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 63. (19 B.C.) Referring to Turnus, son of Pylumnus.

II—Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder

6
Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

T. H. BAYLY, Isle of Beauty. (1850) Not original with Bayly, for the phrase appeared as the first line of an anonymous poem in Davison's Poetical Rhapsody (1602), but it was his use of it which gave it popularity.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder,

Longing to be near your side.

ARTHUR GILLESPIE, Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder. (1900) By this time the line had been worn decidedly threadbare, and some one amended it, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder—of the other fellow."

My love was suddenly awakened, because absence makes the heart grow fonder

A. A. AVERY, Anything for a Quiet Life, p. 90 (1942) The French say, "Jamais pour longue demeure n'est bon amour oublié" (Never through long absence is true love forgotten)

7
Absence diminishes little passions and increases great ones, just as the wind blows out a candle and fans a fire. (L'absence diminue les médiocres passions, et augmente les grandes, comme le vent éteint les bougies et allume le feu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 276. (1665)

Absence is to love what wind is to fire; it puts out the little, it kindles the great (L'absence est à l'amour ce qu'est au feu le vent; il éteint le petit, il allume le grand.)

ROGER DE BUSSY-RABUTIN, Maximes d'Amour. (1666)

8
Always toward absent lovers love's tide stronger flows (Semper in absentes felicius aestus amantes.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 33, l. 43. (c. 26 B.C.) Butler renders it, "Woman's heart is kinder always toward absent lovers."

The farther off, the more desired;

Thus lovers tie their knot.

HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY, The Faithfull Lover Declareth His Paines. (s. 1547)

Absence doth nurse the fire,

Which starves and feeds desire

With sweet delays.

FULKE GREVILLE, Absence and Presence. (c. 1586)

Absence doth sharpen love, presence strengthens it; the one brings fuel, the other blows it till it burnes cleare.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, News of My Morning Worke. (1616) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 255. (1732)

Absence, not long enough to root out quite

All love, encreases love at second sight.

THOMAS MAY, Henry 8th. Act iii. (1633)

Distance sometimes endears friendship, and absence sweeteneth it.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 1, let. 6. (1619)

No Friend to Love like a long Voyage at Sea.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover Act i, sc. 2. (1677)

I find that absence still increases love.

CHARLES HOPKINS, To C C (1694)

Separation secures manifest friendship.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs, No. 19. (1842)

Absences are a good influence in love and keep it bright and delicate.

STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque Pt. i. (1881)

1 She mourn'd his absence as his grave.

TENNYSON, Enoch Arden, l. 246. (1864)

2 Think of my loyal love, my last adieu;

Absence and time are naught if we are true.

HENRY VAN DYKE, tr., Rappelle-Toi. (a. 1933)

III—Absence Weakens Love

3 The absent get farther off every day.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

4 Ful sooth is this proverbe, it is no lye,
Men seyn right thus, "alwey the nye slye
Maketh the ferre leve to be looth."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 205 (c. 1386)

An olde sawe is, "Who that is slyh

In place where he mai be nyh,

He maketh the ferre leve loth"

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 1899. (c. 1390) The modern form of the "old sawe" to which both Chaucer and Gower refer is, "Near love by craft maketh far love loathed," or, as the Germans say, "Das Nächste das Liebste" (Nearest is dearest)

5 Absence of hir shal dryve hir out of herte.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iv, l. 427. (c. 1330)

6 Distance weakens love. (Spatio debilitatur amor.)

CLAUDIAN, Ad Olybrium, l. 12 (c. A. D. 400)

The remedy for love is land between

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 514. (1855)

7 Absence is a remedy for hate as well as an armor against love. (L'absence est aussi bien un remède à la haine | Qu'un appareil contre l'amour.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables Bk. x, fab. 12. (1678)

The Italians say, "Assenza nemica di amore" (Absence is the enemy of love).

8 Salt water and absence always wash away love.

HORATIO NELSON, Letter. (c. 1805) See SOUTHEY, Life. Ch. 2.

Salt water cures love, they say, sooner than anything else.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 38. (1840)

9 Unminded, unmoaned.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

But when folk's missed, then they are moaned.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 9. (1815)

10 Out of sight, out of mind. (ἄστος ἀπύστος.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 242. (c. 850 B. C.) See under SIGHT.

Seldome seene, soone forgotten.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britaine (1870), p. 330. (1605)

Out of Mind, when out of View.

SWIFT (?), A Poem Address'd to the Quidnuncs, l. 45. (1724)

11 Friendship, like love, is destroyed by long absence, though it may be increased by short intermissions.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler, No. 23. (1758)

They cease to be friends who dwell afar off (Non sunt amici, qui degunt procul.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 283 (1869) The French have a similar proverb, dating from the fifteenth century, "Longue demeure fait changer ami" (Long absence changes a friend).

12 A distant journey can change a woman's heart. (Mutat via longa puellas.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 12, l. 11 (c. 26 B. C.)

A short absence is safest: affection wanes with lapse of time: an absent love vanishes, and a new one takes its place. (Sed mora tuta brevis: lentescunt tempore curae, | vanesque absens et novus intrat amor.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 357. (c. 1 B. C.)

13 Indeed, sir, you'll find they will not be missed.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2. (1779)

They'll none of 'em be missed

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i. (1885)

14 For he that is uten biloken [shut out, absent] he is inne for-geeten.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred, l. 483. (c. 1250) South, ed., 1931. Some editors insert "sone" [soon] before "for-geeten."

Long absence alters affection.

COTGRAVE, French-Eng. Dict.: Ami. (1611)

Long absent, soone forgotten.

THOMAS DRANE, Bibliotheca, p. 2. (1633)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55. (1670)

"Parallel to this," Ray adds, "are Out of sight, out of mind, and Seldom seen, soon forgotten."

15 Fer from eye, fer from herte.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, l. 27. (c. 1300)

Hert sun forgettes that ne ei seis.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 4508. (c. 1300)

Ferre from ye, ferre from hert.

UNKNOWN, MS. Latin No. 394, Rylands Lib. (c. 1400)

Far from the eyes, far from the heart. (Lontano dagli occhi, lontano dal cuore.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 196. (1856)

Present to the eye, present to the mind.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 358. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Far from the eyes, far from the heart. (Loin des yeux, loin du cœur.)

GEORGES SIMENON, Liberty Bar, p. 42. (1940)

Quoting an old French proverb. It is common to many languages. The Germans say, "Aus den Augen, aus den Sinnen"; the Spaniards, "Lejos de ojos, lejos de corazón"; the Dutch, "Uit het oog, uit het hart."

WHAT THE EYE SEES NOT THE HEART CRAVES NOT, see under EYE.

IV—Absence: Absence of Mind

<sup>1</sup> The mind is here, but is gone away. (ὁ νοῦς ἐστὶν παρὼν ἀποδημεῖ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 1120 (424 B C)

DIOGENIANUS (vi, 85) gives the proverb. "Absent-minded" (νοῦς τὸν ἕτερον.)

<sup>2</sup> Though present, absent. (Praesens abest.)

ERASMUS, Adagia Chil. ii, cent. vii, No. 84 (1523) Said of persons who, engaged in thought, pay no attention to what is done in their company.

<sup>3</sup> Absent men, . . . whose minds and bodies never keep company with one another

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator, No. 30 (1711)

<sup>4</sup> Absence of mind Brabantio turns to fame, Learns to mistake, nor knows his brother's name.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame, Bk. iii, l. 103 (1728)

Absence of mind is on every face.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution Vol. i, bk. vii, ch. 6. (1837)

WOOL-GATHERING, see under WOOL.

ABUSE

See also Use and Abuse

<sup>5</sup> When certain persons abuse us, let us ask ourselves what description of characters it is that they admire; we shall often find this a very consolatory question.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, Vol. ii, No. 28. (1820)

Abuse is an indirect species of homage.

HAZLITT, Characteristics, No. 22. (1823)

<sup>6</sup> The difference between coarse and refined abuse is as the difference between being bruised by a club, and wounded by a poisoned arrow.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 11 June, 1784.

<sup>7</sup> Most true it is that the thing the better it is, the greater is the abuse, and that there is nothing but through the malice of man may be abused.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 100. (1579)

Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii. 3, 19 (1595)

The best things may be abused.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemologia, p. 5 (1639)

Everything may be abused.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 1. (1666)

<sup>8</sup> Inevitable abuses are part of nature's law (Les abus inévitables sont des lois de la nature.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions, No. 26 (1746)

ACADEME

<sup>9</sup> In the shady walks of the divine Hecademus (ἐν εὐσκόλοις ὁρόμοισιν Ἑκαδημοῦ θεοῦ)

EUPOLIS, The Shirkers Act ii, 1437 (c. 425 B C)

Having returned to Athens, Plato lived in the Academy (Ἀκαδημία), which is a gymnasium outside the walls, in a grove named after a certain hero, Hecademus

DIODGENES LAERTIUS, Lives, Plato Ch. 7 (c. A D. 230)

Our court shall be a little Academe

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, I. 1, 13 (1588)

Thy solitary Academe should be Some shady grove upon the Thames' fair side

HENRY PERCIVAL, Emblems (c. 1642)

See there the Olive Grove of Academe, Plato's retirement.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd Bk. iv, l. 244 (1671)

The green retreats of Academus

MARK AKENSIDE, Pleasures of the Imagination Bk. i, l. 591. (1744)

That best academe, a mother's knee

J. R. LOWELL, The Cathedral. (1870)

ACCIDENT

See also Chance

<sup>10</sup> Accident. An inevitable occurrence due to the action of immutable natural laws.

AMENOSÉ BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary (1906)

<sup>11</sup> By some fortuitous concourse of atoms (Fortuito quodam concursu atomorum)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum, Bk. i, ch. 24, sec. 66 Although often quoted thus, it is not what Cicero actually wrote. His words are, "Nulla cogente natura sed concursu quodam fortuito" (Not by compulsion of any natural law but by a sort of accidental colliding). He is denouncing the theory of Democritus that heaven and earth were created by a multitude of minute particles colliding accidentally.

How comes it to pass, if they be moved by chance and accident, that such regular mutations and generations should be begotten by a fortuitous concourse of atoms?

JOHN SMITH of Cambridge, Select Discourses. Vol. iii, p. 48. (1660)

A blind, fortuitous concourse of atoms.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding Bk. iv, ch. 20, sec. 15. (1690)
Epicureans, that ascribed the origin and frame of the world not to the power of God, but to the fortuitous concourse of atoms

RICHARD BENTLEY, Sermons. Vol. iii, p. 147. (1692)

That ordinary cant of illiterate atheists, the fortuitous or casual concourse of atoms

RICHARD BENTLEY, Boyle Lectures, p. 200. (1692)

To what a fortuitous concurrence do we not owe every pleasure and convenience of our lives

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 31. (1766)

Accidental and fortuitous concourse of atoms

LORD PALMERSTON, Speech, House of Commons. 5 March, 1857

Let me say three things which shall become proverbs after my death: the best of horses may stumble; the best sword rebound without cutting; the best of men commit a fault

AL HILLALI (c. 1000). See Ibn Khallikan, Deaths of Eminent Men (Wafat-ul-A'ayan), i. 240.

Well (quoth his man) the best cart made over-throwe

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

The best Cloth may have a Moth in it

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4431. (1732)

Even genii sometimes drop their swords. (Shen hsien yeh yü i ch h chien)

DODDIE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 180. (1872)

There is no ladle which never strikes the edge of the pot

S. G. CHAMBERN, Racial Proverbs, p. 366. (1938) A Chinese proverb

Accidents sometimes occur in life, from which only a touch of madness can extricate us. (Il arrive quelquefois des accidents dans la vie d'où il faut être un peu fou pour se bien tirer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 310. (1665)

By many a happy accident

THOMAS MIDDLETON, No Wit, No Help, Like a Woman's. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

These things the vulgar commonly call omens, . . . will by him who is wise be esteemed and reckoned happy accidents merely. (Buenos acontecimientos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 58. (1615)

To what happy accident is it that we owe so unexpected a visit?

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 19. (1766)

He was led to the discovery by a series of happy accidents.

W. B. CARPENTER, Mental Physiology, ii, xii. 504. (1879)

Whatever can happen to one man can happen to every man. (Cuius potest accidere quod cuquam potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. (c. 43 B.C.)

Quoted by SENECA, Ad Marciam de Consolatione. Ch. 9, sec. 5.

That may happen to many

Which doth happen to any.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, 101. (c. 1590)

Accidents, accidents will happen.

GEORGE COLMAN, SR., The Deuce Is in Him. Act. i. (1763)

Nay, my lady, . . . such things will befall in the best regulated families.

SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 49. (1823)

Accidents will happen: best regulated families

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1836)

Accidents will occur in the best regulated families

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 28. (1849)

Misfortunes will happen in the best regulated families.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleach. Ch. 13. (1880)

Casualties will take place in the most excellently conducted family circles

LORD WILLIAM LENNOX, Lacon. (c. 1866)

Accidents will happen in the best regulated families

WILLIAM ROUGHHEAD, Poison in the Pantry. Ch. 1. (1929) Frequently quoted recently in ROUGHHEAD, Murder and More Murder, p. 7. (1939), and MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday, p. 309. (1939).

An idiot - they happen in the best of families

PHILIP BARRY, The Philadelphia Story. Act. i. (1939)

Accidents happen in the best-regulated households

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Evil Under the Sun, p. 78. (1941)

Accidents will happen in the best regulated stations

RICHARD HULL, Beyond Reasonable Doubt, p. 20. (1941)

If accidents happen and you are to blame. Take steps to avoid repetition of same.

DOROTHY L. SAYERS, In the Teeth of the Evidence, p. 92. (1940) Mr. Egg quoting from: The Salesman's Handbook.

Moving accidents by flood and field.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 135. (1605)

The accident of an accident.

LORD EDWARD THURLLOW, Speech, in the House of Lords, in reply to the Duke of Grafton (1778) Grafton had reminded Thurlow, then Lord Chancellor, of his humble origin, and the latter, advancing angrily on Grafton, expressed his amazement and added, "The noble lord cannot look before him, behind him, or on either side of him without seeing some noble peer who owes his seat in this House to his successful exertions in the profession to which I belong. Does he not feel that it is as honourable to owe it to these as to being the accident of an accident?" Thurlow, who had begun as a barrister, was referring to the double accident, the death of Grafton's father and elder brother, which had brought the third Duke into the title. See BUTLER, Reminiscences, i, 188.

<sup>1</sup> The chapter of accidents is the longest chapter in the book.

JOHN WILKES. (c. 1769) As quoted by SOUTHEY, The Doctor, without indication of source. "The chapter of accidents": the unforeseen course of events.

Consider how propitious the chapter of accidents is to them.

HOPPE, Beauties of Chesterfield, p. 46. (a 1773)

As for Buonaparte. . . let us trust to the chapter of accidents.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Thomas Lieper (1807)

Leaving everything to the day and the chapter of accidents.

MAURICE KEATINGE, Travels, i, 160 (1817)

Putting their trust in the chapter of accidents

HARRIET LEE, Miss Barrington. Bk. i. ch. 21 (1871)

It will . . . trust to the chapter of accidents
T. H. HUXLEY, Cray-Fish Ch. 3 (1880)

ACCUSATION

<sup>2</sup> Woe to the man whose advocate becomes his accuser

SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut: Isaiah (c. 1250) Ray quotes the proverb (p. 403), and adds, "God required propitiatory sacrifices of his people; when they offered them up as they should, they did receive their pardon upon it; but if they offered the blind or lame, &c., they . . . increased their guilt, and thus their advocate became their accuser."

<sup>3</sup> A man is his own near friend, and no man is expected to incriminate himself.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 9b. (c. A.D. 450) The Latin law maxim is, "Nemo tenetur se ipsum accusare" (No one is obliged to accuse himself).

<sup>4</sup> Up jumps Zola, an' says he in Frinch: "Jack-use," he says, which is a hell of a mane thing to say to anny man.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, The Dreyfus Case. (1895) The reference, of course, is to Zola's famous open letter, "J'accuse!"

<sup>5</sup> Yet Michael . . . durst not bring against him

a railing accusation. (Non est ausus iudicium inferre blasphemiae.)

New Testament: Jude, i. 9. (c. A.D. 80)

Bring not railing accusation against them. (Non potant adversum se execrabile iudicium.)

New Testament: II Peter, ii, 11. (c. A.D. 100)

<sup>6</sup> A serious accusation, even lightly made, does harm. (Grave crimen, etiam leviter cum est dictum, nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 237. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> He who accuses himself cannot be accused by another. (Qui semet accusat ab alio non potest criminari.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 622. (c. 43 B.C.) Ribbeck gives the proverb as, "Qui se ipse accusat, accusari non potest."

ACE

<sup>8</sup> I was within an ace of being talked to death
THOMAS BROWN, Letters (1704) Works, i, 184.

I was within an ace of meeting you.

POPE, Letters (1736), v, 112 (1711)

I came within an ace of making my fortune
IRVING, Tale of a Traveller, ii, 45 (1824)

<sup>9</sup> Nay, there bate an ace, quoth Bolton
RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pythias Act iv. (1571) WHELSTONE, Promos and Cassandra, sig. E3 (1578) To abate a jot or tittle

Bate me an ace of that, quoth Bolton
UNKNOWN, Sir Thomas More, ii, 1 (Shakes Apoc) c 1590 CAMDEN Remains (1870), p. 319 (1605)

Bate me an ace, quoth Bolton
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 163 (1670) Ray comments "Queen Elisabeth, being presented with a collection of English Proverbs, and being told by the Author, that it contained all the English Proverbs, Ray replied she. Bate me an ace quoth Bolton; which happened to be wanting in his collection"

<sup>10</sup> I will not play my Ace of Trumps yet
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 2647 (1742)

<sup>11</sup> I will not much stick with you for one ace better.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Heracles Ch. 1 (1528) A single point, a jot, an atom

Better looke off than looke an ace too farre
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Steele Glas: Epilogue. (1587)

I took a young man down an ace lower
UNKNOWN, The Eunuch Act iii, sc 1 (1508)

The best must crave their aces of allowances.
WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 23. (1672)

<sup>12</sup> To have an ace up one's sleeve. To have something effective in reserve: a C. 20 colloquial variant of to have something up one's sleeve.
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Ace. (1941)

ACHILLES

1 You have in your hands the weapons of Achilles, with the which you both wound and heale.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 17. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Achilles speare could as well heale as hurt.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 107. (1579)

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear, Is able with the change to kill and cure.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v. 1. 100 (1590)
Malone and Hart assert that Shakespeare got the metaphor from Greene's Orlando Furioso, but there is some doubt as to whether Greene's work was really of an earlier date

A wound with the spear of Achilles, if so made and caused, must be so cured.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. vi, subs. 4. (1621)

Evolution may be compared to the spear of Achilles; it heals, at any rate, some of the wounds which it causes.

CHARLES BLOM, in The Church, Past and Present, p. 49. (1900)

The tale is that when the Greeks invaded Troy, Telephus, son in law of Priam, attempted to stop their landing, but Bacchus causing him to stumble, Achilles wounded him with his spear. The young Trojan was told by an oracle that "Achilles (meaning milfoil or yarrow) would cure the wound", instead of seeking the plant, he applied to the Grecian chief, and promised to conduct the host to Troy if he would cure the wound. Achilles consented to do so, scraped some rust from his spear, and from the filings rose the plant milfoil (Achillea millefolium, so called from Achilles), which, being applied to the wound had the desired effect.

E. C. BRIDGER, Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, p. 9. (1870)

2 I am not ignorant that a personage of account being asked whether hee had rather bee Achilles or Homer, made answer, Tell mee thou thy selfe whether thou hadst rather bee a Trumpetter, or a Captaine

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. ii, p. 216. (1574) Pettie, tr.

3 Achilles absent was Achilles still

HOMER, Iliad Bk. xxii, l. 418. (c. 850 B.C.)
This is Pope's rendering of ll. 333-335 of Homer's text "Far from him [Patroclus] a helper, mightier far, was left behind at the hollow ships, even I, that have loosed thy knees."

4 This is not the son of Achilles, but Achilles himself. (ὁὐ γὰρ Ἀχιλλεύς, ἀλλ' ὁ αὐτοῦ υἱὸς ἄνθρωπος.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades. Ch. 23, sec. 6. (c. A.D. 100) Quoting an old proverb

5 The Achilles heel of vivisection.

BERNARD SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma: Preface. (1906) "The heel of Achilles" is a proverbial phrase, indicating the vulnerable or weak point in anything, especially in a man's character. The tale is that Thetis, Achilles' mother, dipped him in the river Styx to make him invulnerable, and the water washed every part except the heel by which she held him. It was at this one weak spot that Paris aimed his fatal arrow. The sinew of the heel is called the Achilles tendon.

Like another Greek, I have a vulnerable heel

J. A. PHILLIPS, The Case of the Shivering Chorus Girls, p. 204. (1942)

ACQUAINTANCE

6 Thusgat maid thair thar aquentance.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce, ii. 167. (1375)

I shall desire you of more acquaintance.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii. 1. 185. (1596)

Let's . . . drink unto our better acquaintance.

LORD BYRON, Werner. Act i, sc. 1. (1822)

[I] hope our acquaintance may be a long 'un, as the gen'l'm'n said to the fi' pun' note.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers Ch. 25. (1836)

[They] had not the honour of his acquaintance.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 30. (1838)

7 Olde acquaintance betwene them erst had bene.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Cytizen and Up-londysman, p. 62. (1514)

Old famylyer accoytaunce

JOHN RASTELL, A Newe Boke of Purgatorye: Prologue. (1530)

Old acquaintance will soon be remembered

R. WEVER, Lusty Juventus. (c. 1565)

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And never thought upon?

FRANCIS SEMPHELL, Auld Lang Syne. (c. 1670)

This song, the earliest known version of Auld Lang Syne, appeared in James Watson's Choice Collection of Scots Poems (1711). Semphill was a Scottish ballad-writer, and was using a phrase which had already become proverbial. The song is sometimes attributed to Sir Robert Ayton.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

Though they return with scars?

ALAN RAMSAY, Auld Lang Syne. (1721) See FITZGERALD, Stories of Famous Songs.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And never brought to mind?

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And auld lang syne?

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne. (1788) Burns enclosed the poem in a letter to Mrs. John Dunlop, 17 Dec., 1788, with the explanation that it was an adaptation of an old Scottish song. To George Thompson, he wrote, "The old song of the olden times, which has never been in print, nor even in manuscript, until I took it down from an old man's singing."

However, with the exception of the title and the first line, the song is Burns's.

1 It requires a long time to become [thoroughly] acquainted with any one. (Es menester mucho tiempo para venir a conocer las personas.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 15. (1605)

2 'Tis a lamentable thing that one has not the liberty of chusing one's acquaintance as one does one's cloaths.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 10. (1700)

3 The more Acquaintance the more Danger.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4656. (1732)

4 They that know one another, salute afar off.
GEORGE HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 187. (1640)

5 Short acquaintance brings repentance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1670)

Sudden acquaintance brings long Repentance.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6365 (1732)

ACT

See also Deed

6 I am perplexed . . . whether to act or not to act. (ἀμυχανῶ . . . δράσαι τε μὴ δράσαι.)
AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 379. (c. 485 B.C.)

7 Our acts our angels are, or good or ill,
Our fatal shadows that walk by us still.
JOHN FLETCHER, Upon an Honest Man's Fortune. (c. 1620) Usually placed at the end of Beaumont and Fletcher's tragi-comedy, The Honest Man's Fortune

Our acts are an abridged edition of our possibilities.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 134 (1940)

8 Always act as if your acts were seen. (Obrar siempre como á vista.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim 297. (1647)

9 Slow to argue, but quick to act.

BRET HARTE, John Burns of Gettysburg (1875)

10 Execute every act of thy life as though it were thy last. (ὡς ἔσχατον τοῦ βίου ἐκαστην πράξιν ἐνέργει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 5. (c. A.D. 174) His prescription for a life of tranquillity and godliness.

Let thine every act and word and thought be those of a man who can depart from life this moment. (ὡς ἄδη δυνατόν ὅντος δεῖναι τοῦ βίου, ὅπως ἐκαστα ποιῆν καὶ λέγειν καὶ διανοεῖσθαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 11.

11 I am caught in the act. (Manifesto teneor.)
PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 679. (c. 220 B.C.)

This woman was taken . . . in the very act.
New Testament: John, viii, 4. (c. A.D. 110)

In the very act.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, l. 666. (1678)

HERVEY, Meditations, p. 220. (c. 1746)

IN FLAGRANTE DELICTO, see LAW, 1362:7.

12 What act

That roars so loud and thunders in the index?
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 51. (1600)

13 It is they who have the will to act who oftenest win the prizes. (τοῖσι τοῖνυν βουλομένοισι ποιεῖν ὡς τὸ ἐπίπαν φιλεῖ γίνεσθαι τὰ κέρδη.)

XERXES, to Artabanus, before the battle of Thermopylae. (480 B.C.) As told by HERODOTUS, vii, 50.

It is not enough to will, one has to act. (Es ist nicht genug, zu wollen, man muss auch tun.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

14 Help him who is acting, to cause him to act
UNKNOWN, Eloquent Peasant b l. 109-10. (c. 2000 B.C.) GUNN, tr. Referred to as a "commandment."

15 An act of God does injury to no one. (Actus Dei nemini facit iniuriam.)

UNKNOWN. A legal maxim.

RIOT ACT, see under RIOT.

ACTION

16 Action is but coarsened thought. (L'action n'est que la pensée épaissie.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 30 Dec., 1850.

17 It is necessary to make good acts secure by means of good acts, so that they may not fade from the memories of men. (ταὶ καλὰὶ πράξεις δεῖν καταλαμβάνειν πράξεσι καλαῖς, ἵνα μὴ τῇ δόξει ἀπορρῶσιν.)

CATO THE ELDER, Aphorism. (c. 175 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Romans Sec 199A.

The best way to keep good acts in memory is to refresh them with new.

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No 247 (c. 1600) Quoting Cato.

Good actions still must be maintain'd with good.
As bodies nourish'd with resembling food.

JOHN DRYDEN, To His Sacred Majesty, On His Coronation, l. 77 (1661) Referring to Charles II.

18 You advise me to make my actions fit the times. (Me mones, ut ea, quae agam, ad tempus accommodem.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum Bk. xi, epis. 21. (47 B.C.)

19 Ke Wan was wont to think thrice before he acted. The Master, hearing of it, said, "Twice would do."

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. v, ch. 19. (c. 500 B.C.) Legge, tr. Marshman translates this: "Reflect perpetually; this best answers the purpose."

The superior man is modest in speech, but surpassing in his actions.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiv, ch. 29, sec. 30.

1 Action may not always bring happiness; but there is no happiness without action.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Bk. iii. (1870)

2 'Tis action makes the Hero.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1709)

3 Great actions speak great minds.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act ii, sc. 3 (1647) An echo of Cicero's "Cernuntur in agendo virtutes" (Virtues are perceived in actions), and Sir Edward Coke's "Acta exteriora indicant interiora secreta" (Outward acts betray inward secrets, or Conduct indicates the secrets of the heart).

Great acts grow out of great occasions.

HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Thought and Action. (1821)

4 Action is the proper Fruit of Knowledge

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 760 (1732)

The end of Man is an Action, and not a thought.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus Bk. ii, ch 6. (1833)

The great end of life is not knowledge, but action

HUXLEY, Science and Culture. Ch. 3. (1870)

5 Brave Actions never want a Trumpet

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 1016 (1732)

One mad Action is not enough to prove a Man mad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 3767

6 Our own actions are our security, not others' judgements.

GEORGE HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No 179. (1640)

7 Neither praise nor dispraise thyself, thy actions serve the turn

GEORGE HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No 773. (1640) See also SELF-PRaise.

Actions speak louder than words.

A sentiment which appears in the proverbial literature of all languages. See WORD AND DEED.

8 He is the best man who is timid in counsel but bold in action. (ἀνὴρ δὲ οὐρα ἄν εἰς ἀπαιτος, εἰ βουλευόμενος μὲν ἀραυδὸς, ἐν δὲ τῷ ἔργῳ θρασύς ἐστι.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 49. (c. 445 B.C.)

9 It seems that our actions have their lucky and unlucky stars, to which they owe most of the praise or blame they receive. (Il semble que nos actions aient des étoiles heureuses ou malheureuses, à qui elles doivent une grande partie de la louange et du blâme qu'on leur donne.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 58. (1665)

There should be a definite relation between action and purpose, if the former is to produce its full effect. (Il doit y avoir une certaine proportion entre les actions et les desseins, si on en veut tirer tous les effets qu'elles peuvent produire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 161.

There are countless actions which appear ridiculous, whose hidden motives are very wise and weighty. (Il y a une infinité de conduites qui paraissent ridicules, et dont les raisons cachées sont très sages et très solides.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 163.

It is difficult to tell whether a clean, sincere, and honest action is due to virtue or discretion. (Il est difficile de juger si un procédé net, sincère et honnête, est un effet de probité ou d'habileté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 170.

Our actions are like rhymes, to which any one can fit such lines as he chooses. (Nos actions sont comme les bout-rimés que chacun fait rapporter à ce qu'il lui plaît.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 382. Bout-rimés, as any one who has seen Offenbach's La Belle Hélène will remember, are rhymes which are given out in a sort of contest, to which the contestants fit more or less appropriate lines. In this maxim, human actions are compared to the rhymes, and the motives ascribed to them to the lines fitted haphazard to the rhymes.

10 Action overcomes cold; inaction overcomes heat. (Tsao' shing hau; (sing' shing jeh.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 45 (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

11 I have always thought the actions of men the best interpreters of their thoughts.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding Bk. i, ch. 3 (1690)

12 Every action hath his ende, and then we leaue to sweat when we haue founde the sweete

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 157 (1579)

All actions beyond the ordinary limits are subject to a sinister interpretation. (Toutes actions hors les bornes ordinaires sont sujettes à sinistre interprétation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1580)

13 Not always actions show the man: we find Who does a kindness is not therefore kind.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 109. (1733)

14 Action is not life, but a way of dissipating one's strength. (L'action n'est pas la vie, mais une façon de gâcher quelque force.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 5 (1873)

Life is Act, and not to Do is Death.

LEWIS MORRIS, Epic of Hades: Sisyphus. (1877)

1
Action is eloquence.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 2, 76. (1607)
Demosthenes' advice (c. 345 B.C.) as to the three most important things in oratory is sometimes translated "Action, action, action," but the better rendering is "Delivery, delivery, delivery." See under ORATORY.

2
Suit the action to the word, the word to the action.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 20. (1600)

3
I have sedulously endeavored not to laugh at human actions, not to lament them, nor to despise them, but to understand them. (Sedulo curavi humanas actiones non ridere, non lugere, neque detestari, sed intelligere.)

SPINOZA, Tractatus Politicus. Ch. 1 (1677)

4
Our actions are neither so good nor so bad as our impulses. (Nos actions ne sont ni si bonnes ni si vicieuses que nos volontés.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 314. (1746)

5
A generous action is its own reward.

WILLIAM WALSH, Upon Quitting His Mistress. (1692) See also under REWARD

A good action always finds its recompense.

SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas, iv. 101. (1750) Quoted, "as the proverb says."

When we commend good Actions we make them in some measure our own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5619. (1732)

ACTOR

6
The audience is the reward of the speaker.
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 6b (c. A. D. 450)

7
Actresses often paint, but they do not always draw.

W. S. GILBERT, Epigram. (a 1911) See PEARSON, Gilbert and Sullivan

8
I've often heard it said that an actor can instruct a priest. (Ich hab' es öfters rühmen hören | Ein Komödiant könnt' einen Pfarrer lehren.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. I, sc. 1. (1806)

9
Beggars, actresses, buffoons, and all that breed. (Mendici, mimae, balatrones, hoc genus omne.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. I, sat. 2, l. 2. (35 B.C.)

The strolling tribe, a despicable race.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Apology, l. 206 (1761)

Actors are a nuisance in the earth, the very offal of society.

TIMOTHY DWIGHT, An Essay on the Stage (1824).

It worries me to beat the band

To hear folks say our life is grand;

Wish they'd try some one-night stand—

Ain't it awful, Mahel?

JOHN EDWARD HAZZARD, Ain't It Awful, Mahel?

(1908) Referring to the actor's life. A "one-night stand" is a town where the company plays only one night—usually small and uncomfortable. Other proverbial phrases derived from the theatre are, "To act a part," "To be in the limelight," and "To give the show away," "To bring down the house," "To play to the gallery," "To hold the center of the stage," "To stop the show," "The play must go on."

10

Once a trouser always a trouser.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act ii, sc. 1. (1931)

11

Like actors, you see them on the stage playing a duke or emperor, but as soon as they are off it they become cringing knaves and miserable rascals. (Comme les joueurs de comédie, vous les voyez sur l'eschaffaud faire une mine de duc et l'empereur; mais tantost apres les voylà devenus valets et crocheteurs miserables.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1580)

The king's a beggar, now the play is done.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well: Epilogue, l. 335. (1602)

Last night Mr. Creston Clarke played King Lear at the Tabor Grand. All through the five acts of that Shakespearean tragedy he played the King as though under momentary apprehension that someone else was about to play the ace

EUGENE FIELD, Critique, in the Denver Tribune (c. 1880)

She runs the gamut of emotions from A to B

DOROTHY PARKER, of Katherine Hepburn in a play called The Lake. (1933)

12

The whole world plays the histrian (Mundus universus exercet histriionem)

PETRONIUS ARBITER (c. A. D. 60) Fragment preserved by JOHN SALISBURY, Polycratie, iii.

8 Inscribed on the Globe Theatre, Southwark, London, 17th century Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii. 10, as "Mundus universus exercet histriioniam," and the French, "Tout le monde joue la comédie." See WORLD: A STAGE. A somewhat similar Latin proverb is "Totus mundus agit histriionem." (The actor acts the whole world, i.e., assumes every sort of character).

Why do the Romans call the Dionysiac artists histriiones? (τί τί τοὺς περὶ τὸν Διόνυσον τοὺς ἱστρίωνας ῥωμαῖοι καλοῦσιν;)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Roman Questions Sec. 289C. (c. A. D. 95) In answer, Plutarch cites an explanation given by CLUVIUS RUFUS, Fragments, 4. In very ancient times a pestilence swept from the Roman stage all persons appearing on it, and a new company was imported from Etruria, of whom the most famous was named Histri, and so after that all actors were called histriiones. Far-fetched as this seems, neither the Century Dictionary nor the O.E.D. has anything better to offer

- 1 Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 546. (1600)
- 2 What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her?
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 585. (1600)
- 3 A part to tear a cat in, to make all split.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 2, 32. (1596)
- I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyzes' vein
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 426. (1597)
Cambyzes was a ranting character in THOMAS PRESTON'S Lamentable Tragedy . . . of Cambyzes King of Persia. (1569)
- A dull actor.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 3, 40. (1607)
- An unperfect actor.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. 23. (1609)
[He] does over-act prodigiously, in beaten sattin.
BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Induction, l. 49 (1625)
- He's not a bad actor.
WILLIAM BURTON, Pasquinade. (1801)
- An actor. For my money, a bad actor.
HUGH ADAMS, Night Over the Wood, p. 66. (1943)
- 4 Like a strutting player, whose conceit Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffold-age.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 3, 153. (1601) In Shakespeare's time, the ham was not the thigh or buttock, as generally understood today, but the hollow or bend of the knee ("He hangs by his hams from a pole." — SUTT, Sports and Pastimes, iii, 5, 210.) The hamstring was the large tendon at the back of the knee. So a "ham actor" was one who strutted and clattered about the stage
- O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 10. (1600) The "groundlings" were the people who stood on the ground in front of the stage, the poorest and most ignorant part of the audience.
- A sweet ham!
TOLSTOV, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. ii, ch. 6. (1865) Dole translates this slang phrase "a regular milksop."
- The third-rate actor is called a hamfatter.
Editorial, N.Y. Evening Post, 20 Jan., 1887.
- The habits of the Rialto, known as "hamfatters."
UNKNOWN, Article, in New York Herald, 29 July, 1888, p. 8/5.

Ham. 1. Sporting slang for a loafer. 2. In theatrical parlance, a tenth-rate actor or variety performer.

SYLVA CLAPIN, A New Dictionary of Americanisms: Ham. (1902)

Stop acting. I hate ham fats.

EUGENE O'NEILL, The Great God Brown. Act i, sc. 3. (1926)

"Ham," a poor and generally fatuous performer, was originally "ham fatter," a neophyte in the minstrel ranks, forced to sing "Ham Fat," an old ditty of the George Christy days.

EDWARD B. MARKS, They All Sang, p. 66. This explanation of "ham fatter" may be right, but "ham" goes back to Shakespeare.

ADAM

- 5 The man without a Navel yet lives in me
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 10 (1643) "Adam, whom I conceive to want a Navel because he was not borne of a woman." Whether or not Adam had a navel was long a theme of theological argument. ADAM'S CHILDREN, see ANCESTRY.
- 6 A cup of cold Adam from the next purling spring.
THOMAS BROWN, Works, iv, 11. (1760) ADAM'S ALE, see under ALE.
- 7 The hye god, whan he hadde Adam maked And saugh him al allone, bely-naked, God of his grete goodnesse seyde than, "Lat us now make an help un-to this man Lyk to him-self"; and thanne he made him Eve.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 81. (c. 1386)
- He knew the seat of Paradise.
What Adam dreamt of when his bride Came from her closet in his side
SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, l. 173. (1663)
- Whilst Adam slept, Eve from his side arose: Strange his first sleep should be his last repose UNKNOWN, The Consequence. And Adam's greeting is a famous palindrome. "Madam. I'm Adam." Eve replied.
"I'm one of your ribs," and he laughed at the joke
DAN MANNING, Hi Dinky Doo. (c. 1880)
- 8 In Adam's Fall We sinned all.
BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (c. 1687) The apple which caused Adam's fall has given its name to the protuberance in the front of the throat caused by the thyroid cartilage of the larynx, because a piece of the forbidden fruit is supposed to have stuck there—Adam's apple. There is a Hungarian proverb, "Adam ate the apple, and our teeth still ache."
- Adam was but human—this explains it all. He did not want the apple for the apple's sake, he wanted it only because it was forbidden.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar (1893) See also under PROHIBITION.

1 Adam, that is man, was born to labor and to work, as the bird to fly. (Adam, c'est l'homme, nasquit pour labourer & trauailler, comme l'oyseau pour voler.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 24. (1548)

2 Our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed. (ὁ παλαιὸς ἡμῶν ἀνθρώπος.)

New Testament: Romans, vi, 6. (c. A. D. 57)
The Vulgate is, "Vetus homo noster."

The old and the new Adam. (Veteremque novus . . . Adam.)

APOLLINARIUS SIDONIUS, Works, p. 361. (c. 466)
Grant that the old Adam in these persons may be so buried, that the new man may be raised up in them.

Book of Common Prayer: Baptism of Those of Riper Years. (1548)

If you laied Adam aslepe, I meane, if you renounced all carnall affections.

ANDREW KYNGESMILL, A Godlie Advise Touching Mariage, p. 27. (a. 1569)

Consideration, like an angel, came
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 1, 29. (1599)

Corrupt self . . . is no other than old Adam.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian. (1642)

When shall this agony be o'er,
And the old Adam rage no more?

CHARLES WESLEY, On Galatians, iii, 22. (1739)

An impatience to shake off the old social and political Adam.

GEORGE GROTE, A History of Greece ii, 6. (1846)

Let him who would know how far he has changed the old Adam, consider his dreams.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 92. (1852)

The old Adam. Human (as opposed to Divine) nature in man; unregenerateness; often, men's sexuality.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Old. (1941)

3 And Adam was a gardener.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 142. (1590)

There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 35. (1600)

The first Men in the World were a Gardener, a Ploughman, a Grasier.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 4529. (1732)

The gardener Adam and his wife.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. (1833)

It is an ancient pursuit, gardening. Primitive, my dear sir; for, if I am not mistaken, Adam was the first of our calling.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 24 (1843)
See also GARDEN.

WHEN ADAM DELVED, see under GENTLEMAN

4 Adam, the first great benefactor of our race. He brought death into the world.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

5 "Who's that fellow?" . . . "Don't know him from Adam."

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Market Harbor. Ch. 7. (1861) The French say, "Je ne le connais ni d'Eve ni d'Adam" (I don't know him either from Eve or from Adam).

6 Adam was . . . ('Αδάμ ἦν ὁ . . .)

UNKNOWN, On the Transfiguration. (c. A. D. 400) Greek Anthology, i, 48. A Byzantine inscription.

Adam
Had 'em.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN, Lines on the Antiquity of Microbes. (1912)

ADAPTABILITY

7 The wise man does no wrong in changing his habits with the times (Temporibus mores sapiens sine crimine mutat)

CATO (?), Disticha de Moribus. Bk. i, No. 7 (c. 175 B. C.)

One should be compliant with the times. (Tempori parendum.)

THEODOSIUS II, his guiding maxim. (c. A. D. 440)

8 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. (τοῖς ἰσχυροῖς ἡγύρομαι πάντα.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 22. (c. A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Omnibus omnia factus sum." The French say, "Je me suis fait tout à tout."

I have been all things and it has availed nothing (Omnia fui et nihil expedit.)

SEPTIMIUS SEVERUS. (c. A. D. 208) See EUTROPIUS, Breviarium ab Urbe Condita, viii, 18; TREBELLIVS POLLIO (?), Historia Augusta, x, 18.

If they, directed by Paul's holy pen,
Become discreetly all things to all men,
That all men may become all things to them,
Envy may hate, but Justice can't condemn.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 211. (1763)

9 Were I a nightingale, I would act the part of a nightingale; were I a swan, the part of a swan. (εἰ γοῦν ἀηδὼν ἤμην, ὁμιλοῦν τὰ τῆς ἀηδός, εἰ κύκνος, τὰ τοῦ κύκνου.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 20. (c. A. D. 100)

10 Whosoever adapteth himself shall be preserved to the end. (Ch'äng ch'üen rh kwéi chí.)

LAO-TZE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue) Sec. 22. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

11 Adapt thyself to the estate which is thy portion. (οἷς συγκεκλήρωσαι πράγμασι, τοῖτοισι συνάρμοζε σεαυτόν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vi, sec. 39. (c. A. D. 174)

Every man must fashion his gait according To his calling.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act i, sc. 2. (1647)

Suit self to circumstances. (Chien ching shéng ch'ing.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1962. (1875)

CUT COAT ACCORDING TO CLOTH, see under COAT.

1 He feels the bridle less who yields himself to harness. (Frena minus sentit, quisquis ad arma facit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. ii, l. 16. (c. 13 B. C.) Adjust the stone to fit the line, and not the line to fit the stone. (πρὸς στάθμην πέτρων τίθεσθαι, μὴ τὴν πρὸς πέτρῳ στάθμην.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Progress in Virtue, 75F. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting an old proverb.

2 Treat a thousand dispositions in a thousand ways. (Mille animos excipe mille modis.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 756. (c. 1 B. C.)

3 Who to mankind will not adapt himself, For his disdain must pay the penalty. (Humanitati qui se non accommodat, Plerumque poenas oppetit superbiae.)

PHALDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 16. (c. 25 B. C.)

4 Be good with the good and bad with the bad. (Bonus sit bonis, malus sit malis.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 659. (190 B. C.) Meeting men or devils, talk as they do. (Yü jén shuo jén 'hua, yu kuei shou kuei 'hua.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1045. (1875)

5 Live as you may, since you can't live as you'd like (Vivas ut possis quando nec quis ut velis.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Plocium. Frag. 171. Loeb. (c. 175 B. C.) WE DO AS WE CAN, see under DEED.

ADMIRATION

See also Wonder

6 Admiration is a very short-lived passion, that immediately decays upon growing familiar with its object.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 24 Dec., 1711
FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT, see under FAMILIARITY

7 Admiration: Our polite recognition of another's resemblance to ourselves.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

8 Admiration is the daughter of ignorance.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Embassador. (1642) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

Things not understood, are admir'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4992. (1732)

There is an admiration which is the daughter of knowledge. (Une admiration qui est fille du savoir.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 77. (1810)

9 Who can tell what we owe to the Mutual Admiration Society of which Shakespeare, and Ben Jonson, and Beaumont and Fletcher were members?

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, p. 4. (1858)

Indians who evidently belonged to a "mutual admiration society."

S. W. COZZENS, The Marvelous Country, p. 396. (1873)

10 We always love those who admire us, but we do not always love those whom we admire. (Nous aimons toujours ceux qui nous admirent, et nous n'aimons pas toujours ceux que nous admirons.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 294. (1665)

Desire for sympathy or admiration is often mainly responsible for the confidence we repose in others. (L'envie d'être plaint ou d'être admiré fait souvent la plus grande partie de notre confiance.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 475.

11 Lues Boswelliana, or disease of admiration.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: William Pitt. (1834)

12 I know nothing worthy of great admiration (Je ne cognois rien digne de grande admiration.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

NIL ADMIRARI, see under WONDER.

13 The greatest admiration gives rise, not to words, but to silence. (Admirationem autem quae maxima est non verba parere, sed silentium.)

MUSONIUS, Fragments. (c. A. D. 65) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, v, 1.

14 Fools admire, but men of sense approve.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 191. (1711)

ADO

15 Make ado and have ado.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)

Mickle ado and little help.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120.

16 Much ado about nothing.

SHAKESPEARE. Title of play. (1599) L'ESTRANGE (1692) uses the phrase for the moral of his rendering of Aesop's mountain-in-labor fable.

It were better for herself . . . that she had not made so much ado about nothing.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Bk. v, ch. 12. (1748)

Some people will only laugh at it, and call it much ado about nothing.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Water Babies. Ch. 6. (1863)
Much ado about nothing. A fuss about a trifle.

... A common phrase even in Shakespeare's day.
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés: Much.
(1941)

1 The lordes buth than a-paste, wythoute more a-do.

UNKNOWN, Sir Ferumbras, l. 1495. (a. 1380)
We'll keep no great ado,—a friend or two.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 4, 23.
(1595)

They were married without more ado.

E. A. FREEMAN, The Norman Conquest. Vol. iii, ch. 12. (1876)

ADULLAM

2 David . . . escaped to the cave Adullam. . . . And every one that was in distress, and every one that was in debt, and every one that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him. (David . . . fugit in speluncam Odollam.)

Old Testament: I Samuel, xxii, 1-2. (c.800 B.C.)
The right honourable gentleman [Robert Lowe, Viscount Sherwood] . . . has retired into what may be called the political Cave of Adullam, and he has called about him "every one that was in distress and every one that was discontented."

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech on the Reform Bill, March, 1866, referring to Mr. Horsman and other liberals. Hence, Adullamites.

ADULTERY

3 Old age hurries upon him who commits adultery.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo.152b.(c.450)
Adultery in a house is like a worm in poppy-seeds.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 3b.

4 He is among the cucumbers and she is among the pumpkins.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 10a. (c. 450)
Infidelity on the husband's part conduces to unfaithfulness in his wife.

5 The tears of the adulteress are ever ready.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 264. (1817)

6 Thou shalt not commit adultery. (Non moechaberis.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xx, 14. (c. 550 B.C.)
The seventh Commandment.

Do not adultery commit;

Advantage rarely comes of it.

A. H. CLOUGH, The Latest Decalogue. (a. 1861)

7 Whoremongers and adulterers God will judge. (ἄνομους γὰρ καὶ μοιχεύοντες κρινεῖ ὁ θεός.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 4. (c. A. D. 90)
The Vulgate is, "Fornicatores enim, et adulteros iudicabit Deus."

8 Adultery without two persons to commit it is not possible. (Adulterium certe sine duobus committi non potest.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Let. i, sec. 6. (A. D. 370)

The sin ye do by two and two ye must pay for one by one!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tomlinson, l. 62. (1891)

It takes two bodies to make one seduction.

GUY WETMORE CARRYL, Epigram. (c. 1898)
See BEER, The Mauve Decade, p. 197.

It takes two to make a love affair.

F. W. BRONSON, Nice People Don't Kill, p. 127. (1940)

It takes two to be platonic.

OCTAVUS ROY COHEN, Sound of Revelry, p. 4. (1943)

9 Between a man and his wife a husband's infidelity is nothing. The man imposes no bastards upon his wife.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 10 Oct., 1779.

10 He ploughs other people's fields and leaves his own uncultivated. (Fundum alienum arat. incultum familiarem deserit.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 874. (c. 200 B.C.)

Cut your cabbages in a neighbor's garden. (Teneros caules alieni frerit horti.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iii, l. 116. (35 B.C.)

When he hunteth a doe, that he can not avow, All dogs barke not at him, I warrant yow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. v. (1562)
She feared . . . that he rowed in some other streame.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Cephalus and Procris (1938), p. 202. (1576)

11 Adultery may or may not be sinful, but it is never cheap.

RAYMOND POSTGATE, Somebody at the Door, p. 210. (1943)

12 What was thy cause? Adultery?

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery! No:

The wren goes to 't, and the small gilded fly

Does lecher in my sight. Let copulation thrive.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 111. (1605)

13 Men may commit theft as well as adultery with the eye.

XENOCRATES, Maxim. (c. 339 B.C.) See AELIAN, Miscellanies, xiv, 42.

Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart. (ὁὖς ὁ βλέπων γυναῖκα πρὸς τὸ ἐπιθυμῆσαι [αὐτῆς] ἤδη μοιχεύει αὐτὴν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 28. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Omnia, qui viderit mulierem ad concupiscendum eam, iam moechatus est eam in corde suo."

The mere wish to sin entails the penalty. (Patitur poenas peccandi sola voluntas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 208 (c. A. D. 120)

The mind is guilty of adultery even if it merely pictures to itself a vision of carnal pleasure

LACTANTIUS, Institutiones Divinae. Bk. vi. (c. A. D. 310)

No man, while drinking one cup, should have his eye on another.

Babylonian Talmud: Nedarim, fo. 20b. (c. 450) A married man should not look longingly at another woman.

Not only with the body but with the eye can adultery be committed.

Midrash: Leviticus Rabbah, xxiii, 12. (c. 600)

A wanton and lascivious eye
Betrayes the Hearts Adulterie.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Eye. (1648)

1 It is ordered that Miss Batcheller for her adultery shall be branded with the letter A.

UNKNOWN, Records of Maine Province. (1651)

It was around this law that Hawthorne built the story of The Scarlet Letter.

ADVANTAGE

2 Let nothing slip that will advantage you.
(Rem tibi quam nosces aptam dimittere noli.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis, ii, 26. (c. 175 B. C.)

Let not advantage slip.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 129. (1593)

See also under OPPORTUNITY

3 Lest Satan should get an advantage of us.
(ἵνα μὴ κερδαίνηθῃμεν ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατᾶ.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, ii, 11. (A. D.

57) The Vulgate is, "Ut non circumveniamur a satana."

Let his enemy the devil have none advantage of him.

BECON, The Sycke Mans Salur, p. 146. (1561)

Having the advantage on vs.

OSWALD GREENWAY, tr., Tacitus, xii, 8. (1603)

He doth arripere ansam, take all advantage.

ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, ii, v, 155. (1620)

You have the advantage of me.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals, Act v, sc. 2. (1775)

4 It's them as take advantage that get advantage i' this world.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 32. (1859)

5 Regula regularum, to seek and enforce all possible advantage.

GABRIEL HARVEY, annotation in Foorth's Synopsis Politica. (1599)

6 For whose advantage will it be? (Cui bono fuerit?)

LUCIUS CASSIUS LONGINUS, Maxim. (c. 125 B. C.) A Roman judge so noted for his severity that rigid judges were called after him, Cassiani iudices. "Cui bono" was the maxim on which he tried his cases. SENECA (c. A. D. 64) lays down the rule, "He to whom the crime was of advantage committed it" (Cui prodest scelus, is facit). The obverse of the maxim is, of course, "Cui malo?" (To whose injury?) Similar legal maxims are, "Qui sentit commodum, sentire debet et onus" (He who feels the advantage, should also feel the burden, or expense); "Privatum commodum publico cedit" (Private advantage yields to that of the public).

There was an ancient Roman lawyer . . . whom they called Cui Bono, from his first having introduced into judicial proceedings the argument, "What end or object could the party have had in the act with which he is accused?"

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings. (1794)

7 Every advantage has its disadvantage. (Omnis commoditas sua fert incommoda secum.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 308. (1869)

ADVENTURE

8 Those who seek adventures do not always find happy ones. (Los que buscan aventuras no siempre las hallan buenas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

Who seeks adventures finds blows.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

The French form is, "En aventure gisent grands coups," which dates back to the fifteenth century; but Montesquieu has pointed out, "Ce sont toujours les aventuriers qui font de grandes choses" (It is always the adventurers who accomplish great things).

9 The fruit of my tree of knowledge is plucked. and it is this. "Adventures are to the adventurous."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Ision in Heaven. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1853) Disraeli had used the phrase previously in Coningsby, iii, 1. (1844)

"Adventures are for the adventurous." But one no longer ventures.

R. H. DAVIS, In the Fog. Ch. 1. (1902)

ADVERSARY

10 Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him. (ἵσθι εὐρωὴν τῷ ἐνδίκῳ σου καὶ ῥᾶθ ἕως ὅτου εἶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 25 (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Esto consentiens adversario tuo cito dum es in via cum eo"

11 She is as implacable an adversary as a wife suing for alimony.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act i. (1676)

YOUR ADVERSARY, THE DEVIL, see under DEVIL.

ADVERSITY

See also Calamity; Friends and Adversity; Misfortune; Prosperity and Adversity

12 Afflictions induce calosities.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5, par. 9. (1658)

1 The adversities to which we are accustomed do not disturb us. (Damna minus consueta movent.)

CLAUDIAN, In Eutropium, ii, 149. (c. A. D. 400)

2 Adversity flattereth no man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 762. (1732)

3 In adversity a man is saved by hope. (ἀνθρώπος ἀτυχῶν σῶσθ' ὑπὸ τῆς ἐλπίδος.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 813K. (c. 300 B. C.)

4 Frowning fortune tossed him for a while in ye tempestuous seas of adversiti, yet at ye length he arrived at the haven of happy estate.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pullace: Germanicus and Agrippina (1938), p. 61. (1576)

5 If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small. (Si desperaveris lassus in die angustiae: imminuetur fortitudo tua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 10 (c. 350 B. C.)

6 The lucky man can never deal with adversity. (Potest uti adversus numquam felicitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 539. (c. 43 B. C.) A similar Latin proverb is, "Standum est contra res adversas" (One must make a stand against adversity).

7 Lo! here is a spectacle worthy of the regard of God as he contemplates his works; lo! here a contest worthy of God—a brave man matched against adversity. (Ecce spectaculum dignum ad quod respiciat intentus operi suo deus, ecce par deo dignum, vir fortis cum fortuna mala compositus.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 2, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 45)

Three things neuer want commendations, Good wine when it is drunken, a wise Sentence when it is spoken and a good man in aduersitie.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 23. (1578)

Seneca thinks the gods are well pleased when they see great men contending with adversity.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. i, subs. 1. (1621)

If there be

A sight on Earth worthy of you to see,
Tis a brave Man pursu'd by unjust hate,
Bravely contending with his adverse Fate.

SIR SAMUEL TUXE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

With pleasure Heav'n itself surveys,
A brave man struggling in the storms of fate,
And greatly falling with a falling state.

Pope, Prologue to Mr. Addison's Cato, l. 20. (1713)

The greatest object in the universe, says a certain philosopher, is a good man struggling with adversity; yet there is a still greater, which is the good man that comes to relieve it.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 30. (1766)

A virtuous man struggling with adversity [is] a scene worthy of the gods.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 48, 22 June, 1771.

See also under MISFORTUNE.

8 Adversity finds at last the man whom she has often passed by. (Quem saepe transit casus, aliquando invenit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 328. (c. A. D. 60)

9 A man I am cross'd with adversity.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 1, 12. (1594)

II—Adversity: A Blessing

10 Adversity is the first path to truth.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 50. (1823)

There is no education like adversity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 61. (1880)

The school of adversity is a very good school, provided you don't matriculate too early and continue too long.

L. K. ANSPACHER, The Unchastened Woman. Act i. (1915)

11 It is only in winter that the pine and cypress are known to be evergreens.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles, tr., p. 101. It is only in adversity that men are known for what they really are.

12 No man seems to me more unhappy than one who has never met with adversity. (Nihil mihi videtur infelicius eo, cui nihil umquam evenit adversi.)

DEMETRIUS, Apothegm. (c. 300 B. C.) As quoted by SENECA, De Providentia, iii, 3.

I judge you unfortunate because you have never been unfortunate. (Miserum te iudico, quod numquam fuisti miser.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 45)

13 Adversity is sometimes the rain of spring.

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary. (1872) CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 349.

14 In aduersitie men finde eies.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 6. (1633)

15 Whereas gold and silver are tried in fire, acceptable men are tried in the furnace of adversity. (Quoniam in igne probatur aurum et argentum, homines vero receptibiles in camino humiliationis.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, ii, 5. (c. 190 B. C.)

Fire tests gold, adversity brave men. (Ignis aurum probat, miseria fortes viros.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 5, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 54)

Some souls we see

Grow hard, and stiffen with adversity.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 443. (1687)

16 Mud never becomes potter's clay unless it is beaten. (ὁ πολλὸς ἦν μὴ δαρήν κέραμος οὐ γίνεται.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. 3, No. 42. (1523) Citing a Greek proverb, and giving the Latin, "Lutum nisi tundatur, non fit urceus" (Mud, unless beaten, can't be made into a ewer). κέραμος may also mean a jar or earthen vessel. The moral is, of course, that until it is beaten, mud never becomes fit for any useful purpose.

Animals whose hoofs are hardened on rough ground can travel any road. (Quamlibet viam iumenta patiuntur, quorum durata in aspero ungula est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 10 (c. A. D. 64)

It loves to be trodden and bruised under foot, and the more it is crushed the better it thrives. (Gaudet calcari et atteri, pereundoque melius provenit.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxi, sec. 6. (A. D. 77) Referring to the crocus.

Like as streames the more ye stop them the higher they flow; and trees the more ye lop them the greater they grow; or as Spices the more they are beaten the sweeter sent they send forth: or as the herbe Camomile the more it is trodden downe the more it spreadeth abroad, so virtue and honesty the more it is spited, the more it sprouteth and springeth.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Camma, p. 29. (1576) The first part of this quotation is apparently original with Pettie; the last part is a paraphrase of the Latin proverb quoted by Erasmus. Similia, "Ut aromata tum vehementius fragrant, cum moventur ac teruntur frangunturque; ita virtutis fama," etc.

Spices, which the more they are pounded, the sweeter they are.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 246 (1576)

Though the Camomile the more it is trodden and pressed downe, the more it spreadeth, yet the Violet the oftner it is handleth and touched, the sooner it withereth and decayeth

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 46 (1579)

It fared with me as with the herb Basill, the which ye more it is croushed, the sooner it springeth, or the Rew [rue], which the oftner it is cutte, the better it groweth, or the poppy, which the more it is troden with the fete, the more it florisheth.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 291

The camomile, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 439. (1597)

If you beat spice, it will smell the sweeter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2741. (1732)

As aromatic plants bestow

No spicy fragrance while they grow;

But crush'd, or trodden to the ground,

Diffuse their balmy sweets around.

GOLDSMITH, The Captivity. Act i. (1764)

The Good are better made by Ill,

As odours crushed are sweeter still.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. iii v. 18. (1814)

STORMS MAKE DEEPER ROOTS, see under TREE

1 Human life is a state of probation, and adversity is the post of honour in it.

JOHN HUGHES, The Spectator, 1 Dec., 1711

2 Though the Lord give you the bread of adversity and the water of affliction. (Pancin arctum, et aquam brevem.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 20. (c. 725 B. C.)

Feed him with bread of affliction and with water of affliction. (Pane tribulationis, et aqua angustiae.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xxii, 27. (c. 700 B. C.)

The phrase is repeated in II Chronicles, xviii, 26. (c. 400 B. C.)

Behold, I have refined thee, but not with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction. (Elegi te camino paupertatis.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlviii, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)

3 He that never was acquainted with adversity has seen the world but on one side.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 150 (1750)

4 Are afflictions aught But blessings in disguise?

DAVID MALLET, Amyntor and Theodora. (1747)

5 Wind in the face makes a man wise (Vent au visage rend un homme sage.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

The wind in one's face makes one wise

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 723 (1640)

Adversity makes wise, though not rich.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92 (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 764. (1738)

Affliction and adversity make men better

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92 Probably from the Latin proverb, "Vexatio dat intellectum" (Adversity—or hardship—gives understanding). The Welsh say, "Adversity comes with instruction in its hand."

6 Who would have known of Hector, if Troy had been happy? The road to valor is builded by adversity. (Hectora quis nosset, si felix Troia fuisset? Publica virtutis per mala facta via est.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 3, l. 75 (c. A. D. 91)

7 He knows not the value of a day of pleasure who has not seen adversity.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. viii, Apol. 4. (c. 1257)

8 In prosperous times I have sometimes felt my fancy and powers of language flag, but adversity is to me at least a tonic and bracer.

WALTER SCOTT: Journal, 22 Jan., 1826.

9 Sweet are the uses of adversity.

Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,

Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 1. 12. (1599)

The foul Toad bath a fair stone in his head.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 53. (1579)

1
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet cxix. (1609)

ADVICE

See also Counsel; Woman: A Woman's Counsel

2
Advice is always wanting when most wanted.
(Semper consilium tunc deest, cum opus maxime.)

ALBERTANO DE BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis.
(1246) Countered by the English proverb,
"Advice when most needed is least heeded."

3
Advice: the smallest current coin.
AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 20. (1906)

4
A fool sometimes gives weighty advice. (Un fat quelquefois ouvre un avis important.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Canto iv, l. 50. (1674)
The worst men often give the best advice.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Village Feast, l. 917.
(1839) See also under FOOL.

5
Advice given in the midst of a crowd is disgusting.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 691.
(1817) Burckhardt adds: "This meaning is well expressed by an ancient poet, as follows: 'If I should find my friend in the wrong, I reproach him secretly; but in the presence of company, I praise him.'" the shorter form is, "Never give advice in a crowd."

6
Ask advice about your own business, and one will say it is white and another it is black.
(Pon lo tuyo en concejo, y unos diran que es blanco y otros que es negro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 36. (1615)
Steer not after every Mariner's Direction.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4261 (1732)

7
For who-so wole of every word take hede,
Or rewhen him by every wightes wit,
Ne shal he never thryven, out of drede.
For that that som men blamen ever yit,
Lo, other maner folk commenden it.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk v, l. 757. (c. 1380)

8
Advice is judged by results and not by intentions. (Consilia ex eventu, non ex voluntate.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ix, epis. 7a. (49 B. C.)

9
Dare to give true advice with all frankness.
(Consilium verum dare audeamus libere.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 13, sec. 44. (44 B. C.)
Be niggards of Advice on no Pretence;
For the worst Avarice is that of Sense.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. (1744)

10
Even the best pilots are willing to take advice from their passengers in bad weather. (Etiam summi gubernatores in magnis tempestatibus a vectoribus admoneri solent.)

CICERO, Philippics. No. vii, ch. 9, sec. 27. (44 B. C.)

11
We ask advice, but we mean approbation.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 190. (1820)

To ask advice is in nine cases out of ten to tout for flattery.

JOHN CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. No. 59.
(1901) As Boileau says, "Aimez qu'on vous conseille, et non pas qu'on vous loue" (Love to be advised, not to be praised).

12
In vain he craves advice that will not follow it.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Croire. (1611)

I give myself admirable advice, but I am incapable of taking it.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to the Countess of Mar (1725)

She generally gave herself very good advice (though she very seldom followed it).

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DOUGLSON), Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 1. (1865)

13
Though powerful physic be nauseous to the taste, it is good for the disease; though candid advice be unpleasant to the ear, it is profitable for the conduct.

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii. 282 (1872)

14
Don't give your advice before you are called upon. (Ad consilium ne accesseris, ante quam voceris.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii. No. 90. (1523)

No part of Conduct asks for Skill more nice.
Tho' none more common, than to give Advice.
Misers themselves, in this will not be saving
Unless their Knowledge makes it worth the having.

And Where's the Wonder, when we will intrude
An useless Gift, it meets Ingratitude?

Shun then, unask'd, this arduous Task to try;
But, if consulted, use Sincerity.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack (1757)

Neither salt nor advice should be given unless asked for. (Nè sale nè consiglio, non dar mai se non pregato.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 185.
(1856) An Italian proverb. The Germans say, "Rathe Niemand ungebeten" (Never give advice unasked)

15
No gift is more precious than good advice.
(Bono consilio nullum est munus pretiosius)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Convivium Religiosum (1522) Or, more succinctly, "Good advice is beyond price"

16
If I had given Four-pence for that Advice,
I had bought it a Groat too dear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2685. (1732)

The English groat was equal to four-pence

17
Advice whisper'd in the Ear
Is not worth a tare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6359. (1732)

Advice whispered is worthless.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 105. (1902)

A Spanish proverb.

1

We find it easy enough to direct others to the right road, but we can't always find it ourselves.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.

Ch. 18. (1843)

2

Best is the man who can himself advise; He too is good who hearkens to the wise; But who, himself being witless, will not heed Another's wisdom, is a fool indeed.

(οὗτος μὲν πανάριστος, δι' αὐτὸς πάντα νοήσῃ. . . . ἑσθλὸς δ' ἂν κάκεινος, δι' ἐλπίοντι πίθηται· δι' δέ κε μήτ' αὐτὸς νοήῃ μήτ' ἄλλου ἀκούων ἐν θυμῷ βάλληται, δ' ἂν δ' ἀχρηῖος ἀνὴρ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 293. (c. 800 B.C.)

Cited by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, i, 4.

He is best of all men who follows good advice. (κεῖνος μὲν πανάριστος, δι' ἐλπίοντι πίθηται.)

ZENO, Epigram. Amending Hesiod. (c. 500 B.C.)

See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno, vii. 26.

This best of all to be endowed with wisdom, but next wise is he who listens to wise advice. (καὶ τῶν λογιόντων ἐὶ καλὸν τὸ μαθήσκειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 723. (c. 441 B.C.)

Wiseest, they say, is he whose own mind suggests the proper course; next comes the man who accepts the good advice of another. (Sapientissimum esse dicunt eum, cui quod opus sit ipsi veniat in mentem: proxime accedere illum, qui alterius bene inventis obtemperet.)

CICERO, Pro Cluentio Ch. 31, sec. 84. (66 B.C.)

I have often heard, comrades, that he is the greatest man who consults himself as to what he ought to do; second, he who gives ear to good advice. (Saepe ego audiui, milites, eum primum esse virum, qui ipse consulat quid in rem sit; secundum eum, qui bene monenti oboediat.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xvii. ch. 29. (10 B.C.)

There never came ill of good advisement.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595) See also under COUNSEL.

3

I will give such advice as I would devise for myself. (φράσσομαι ἑσὶ· ἂν ἐμοὶ περ αὐτῇ συμβόλην.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. v. l. 188. (c. 850 B.C.)

4

Whatever advice you give, be brief. (Quidquid praecipies, esto brevis.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 335. (20 B.C.)

5

A good scare is worth more to a man than good advice.

F. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

6

Advice is not disliked because it is advice; but because so few people know how to give it.

LEIGH HUNT, The Indicator. No. 51. (1821)

7

Advice, as it always gives a temporary appearance of superiority, can never be grateful, even when it is most necessary or most judicious.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 15 Jan., 1751.

8 One gives nothing so liberally as advice. (On ne donne rien si libéralement que ses conseils.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 110. (1665)

Who says Jack is not generous?—he is always fond of giving, and cares not for receiving,—what?—why, advice.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

The French say, "Les conseillers ne sont pas les payeurs" (The advisers are not the payers).

9 Nothing is less sincere than the way in which advice is sought and given. (Rien n'est moins sincère que la manière de demander et de donner des conseils.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 116. (1665)

10 There is often as much good sense required in knowing how to profit from good advice as there is to give it. (Il n'y a pas quelquefois moins d'habileté à savoir profiter d'un bon conseil, qu'à se bien conseiller soi-même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 283. (1665)

To profit from good advice requires more wisdom than to give it.

JOHN CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (1901)

11 We give advice, but we cannot give conduct (On donne des conseils, mais on n'inspire point de conduite.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 378. (1665)

You may give him good Advice, but who can give him the Wit to take it?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5946. (1732)

He won't obey my helm. (Pu ying wo ti to.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1704. (1875) He won't listen to my advice

12 Let your mind be watered through your ears by this advice. (Haec per auris pectus irrigarier.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Frag. 690, Loeb. (c. 131 B.C.)

13 Hazard not your wealth on a poor man's advice. (No adventures mucho tu riqueza Por consejo de hombre que ha pobreza.)

FRANCISCO MANUEL, Conde Lucanor. (1800)

14 I am giving you advice profitable to myself. (Utile quod nobis do tibi consilium.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epigr. 19. (A.D. 85)

Beware of him who is benefited by the advice he offers thee.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 76b (c. 450)

15 Those who give bad advice to cautious men lose their labor. (Consilia qui dant prava cautis hominibus, Et perdunt operam.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables, 25. (c. 25 B.C.)

1 Advice is a sacred thing. (συμβουλὴ Ἱερὸν χρῆμα.)

PLATO, Theages. Sec. 122B. (c. 375 B.C.)

2 I shall know if I have rightly advised you, if you rightly beware. (Tum demum sciam | recte monuisse, si tu recte caveris.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 347. (c. 200 B.C.)

Advice has greater authority coming from divine sources. (Consilia firmiora sunt de divinis locis.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 1104. (c. 220 B.C.)

3 Many receive advice but only the wise profit by it. (Consilium inveniunt multi sed docti explicant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 124. (c. 43 B.C.)

Fools need Advice most, but wise Men only are the better for it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758

4 It is bad advice that cannot be altered. (Malum est consilium quod mutari non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 403. (c. 43 B.C.)

It is an ill counsel that hath no escape.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

5 He who can shun advice may yet be wise. (Qui pote consilium fugere sapere idem potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 579. (c. 43 B.C.) That is, there is advice which it is wise not to take. But some editors read "capere" for "sapere"—"He who shuns advice may yet have to take it."

If ever I one thought bestow
On what such fools advise,
May I be dull enough to grow
Most miserably wise.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to James Stewart, 19 July, 1759.

6 However harsh an adviser is, he injures no one. (Quamvis acerbus qui monet nulli nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 620. (c. 43 B.C.)

To advise first and afterward to correct is the way of the kind-hearted. (Suadere primum dein corrigere benivoli est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 645. BURTON in his Anatomy of Melancholy quotes a somewhat similar proverb: "Qui monet amat" (He who admonishes loves).

7 It is too late to seek for advice after you have run into danger. (Sero in periculis est consilium quaerere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 684. (c. 43 B.C.)

When a thing is done, advice comes too late

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1670) Also RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe. Bk. iv, p. 119. However, the Germans say, "Guter Rath kommt nie zu spät" (Good advice is never too late). The Danes say, "Advice after an evil is done is like medicine after death." See also WISDOM AFTER THE EVENT.

8 My warm breath made no impression on his cold iron.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 6, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

When rust deep-seated has consumed the steel,
Its stain will never a new polish own;

Advice affects not those who cannot feel:

A nail of iron cannot pierce a stone.

SADI, Gulistan, ii, 19. Eastwick, tr.

9 Give such advice as may behove thee; if thy hearer receive it not, what concern is that of yours?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 7, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

It is foolish to act in accordance with an enemy's advice, but it is wise to hear it in order to take the opposite course.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 17.

He who gives advice to a conceited man is himself in need of counsel.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 27.

10 If your strength be small, don't carry heavy burdens; if your words be worthless, don't give advice. (Li wei hsiu fu chung; yen ch'ing mo ch'ian jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1963. (1875)

11 In giving advice, seek to help, not to please, your friend. (συμβούλιον μὴ τὰ ἡδίστα, ἀλλὰ τὰ ἀριστα.)

SOLON, Apothegm. (c. 600 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon, sec. 60.

12 Nothing is loathlier than bad advice. (βουλῆς γὰρ οὐδὲν ἴστωι ἔχθιον κακῆς.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1047. (c. 409 B.C.)

He gives advice such as the cat gives to the mouse.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 769 (1817)

13 How is it possible to expect that mankind will take advice, when they will not so much as take warning?

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

14 Advice was forthcoming from all; few accepted the danger. (Consilium ab omnibus datum est, periculum pauci sumpsere.)

TACITUS, Historv. Bk. iii, sec. 69 (c. A.D. 109)

15 What is easy? To give advice to another (τὸ δὲ εὐκολόν, τὸ ἄλλω ὑποβιβάζειν.)

THALES, Maxim. (c. 600 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales, i, 36.

'Tis easy for him who keeps his foot from harm
To give advice to him in misery

(ἑλαφρὸν ὅστις πημάτων ἔξω πόδα ἔχει παραίνειν νοθεύειν τε τὸν κακῶς πράσσοντα.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 265. (c. 470 B.C.) Whence the proverb, "Out of evils, advice is easy."

'Tis easier to advise the suffering than to bear suffering. (ῥῆον παραίνειν ἢ παθεῖντα καρτερεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Alceste, l. 1078. (c. 438 B.C.) This is the retort which Admetus makes to Hercules, when the latter tries to console him for the death of his wife, Alcestis. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 68.

It is easy when we are well to give good advice to the sick. (Facile omnes quom valemus recta consilia aegrotis damus.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 309. (166 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 68, in slightly different form, "Facile cum valemus," etc. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Whan we be hayle, we easily gyue good counsayles to the sycke." BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, condenses this to "Facile consilium damus aliis" (We easily give advice to others)

What is the easiest thing? To geue counsel to others. (Qual è la piu facile cosa? A dar consiglio à altri.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 37 (1578)
 'Tis all men's office to speak patience
 To those that wring under the load of sorrow,
 But no man's virtue or sufficiency
 To be so moral when he shall endure
 The like himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v. 1, 27. (1598)

From a safe port one can advise comfortably. (Vom sichern Port lasst sich's gemachlich rathen.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act i, sc. 1. l. 146 (1804)

Extremely foolish advice is likely to be uttered by those who are looking at the labouring vessel from the land

SIR ARTHUR HEILS, Friends in Council Bk ii, ch 2 (1847)

The Oracle being asked, what was the most difficult thing, answered, "To know ourselves." What the most easy? "To give advice to others."

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs Vol i, p 138. (1814)

I think the proverb is correct, "bad advice is worst for the adviser," and also that good advice is good for both adviser and advised. (Malum consilium consultori est pessimum.)

VARRIO, De Re Rustica, Bk iii, ch 2 (c. 35 B. C.)

Quoted by AULIUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, iv, 5; and by EMERSON, Compensation, who renders it, "Bad counsel confounds the adviser."

It is always a silly thing to give advice, but to give good advice is absolutely fatal.

OSCAR WILDE, Portrait of Mr. W. H. (1893)

He who gives advice is a bigger fool than he who takes it

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p 489 (1940)

AFFAIRS. See under Business

AFFECTATION

See also Hypocrisy, Pretense

All affectation is bad. (Toda afectacion es mala.)

CRIVANER, Don Quixote Pt ii, chs. 26, 43 (1615)

They are the affectation of affectation.

HENRY FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch 3. (1742) The beaux of the Temple.

There is a pleasure in affecting affectation.

CHARLES LAMB, Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading. (1822)

Affectation is as necessary to the mind as dress is to the body.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 157. (1823)

A man is never so ridiculous by those qualities that are his own, as by those that he affects to have.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735

Affectation is always to be distinguished from hypocrisy, as being the art of counterfeiting those qualities which we might with innocence and safety be known to want.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 26 May, 1750

He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, . . . too peregrinate, as I may call it.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v. 1. 13 (1595)

Affectation is a more terrible enemy to fine faces than the smallpox.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator, 7 April, 1711

AFFECTION

See also Liking, Love

A man . . . is subiecte to inmeasurable affections.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus (Arber), p. 146 (1545)

Good Affections are praeparatives vnto Vertue

MARTIN FOTHERBY, Athromastix Bk. ii, ch 8 sec. 1. (1622)

There are wonders in true affection . . . wherein two so become one, as they both become two

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici Pt. ii, sec 6 (1643)

Alas! our young affections run to waste

LORD BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st 120 (1812) Or "to waist," as a later cynic put it

Talk not of wasted affection, affection never was wasted.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, st. 1. (1847)

Affection is a wyllfull bowyng or enclinyng of a manns hert with loue to a nother man

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr. The Chastyng of Goddes Chyldern, xxii, 61. (1488)

Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. (vā ōw ōpōwīw, nō vā ōwī vā vāt.)

New Testament: Colossians, iii, 2 (c. A. D. 59)

The Vulgate is, "Quae sursum sunt sapite, non quae super terram"

<sup>1</sup> The moment we indulge our affections, the earth is metamorphosed; there is no winter and no night; all tragedies, all ennui, vanish—all duties even.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship. (1841)

Heraclitus looked upon the affections as dense and colored mists. In the fog of good and evil affections it is hard for man to walk forward in a straight line.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect. (1841)

<sup>2</sup> Affection, like melancholy, magnifies trifles.

LEIGH HUNT, Table-Talk: Magnifying Trifles.

<sup>3</sup> As the rolling stone gathers no moss, so the roving heart gathers no affections.

ANNA JAMESON, Studies: Sternberg's Novels. (1854)

<sup>4</sup> When affection speaks Truth is not always there.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Old Law. Act iv, sc. 2. (1656) See also under EPITAPH.

<sup>5</sup> Happy is he the palace of whose affection is founded upon virtue, walled with riches, glazed with beauty, and roofed with honour.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchyridion. Cent. ii. No. 94. (1640)

<sup>6</sup> My affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act iv, Ch. 1, l. 211. (1600)

Affection is my captain, and he leadeth; And when his gaudy banner is display'd, The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 271. (1594)

Nothing can affection's course control, Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 500

Affection
Mistress of passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes or loathes.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv 1, 50. (1597)

Keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 34. (1600)

His salt and most hidden loose affection.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 1, 245. (1605)

Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 17 (1606)

<sup>7</sup> Entire affection hateth nicer hands.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto viii, st. 40. (1590)

Most wretched man,

That to affections does the bridle lend!
In their beginning they are weak and wan,
But soone through suff'rance growe to fearful end.

EDMUND SPENSER, Faerie Queene, ii, iv, 34.

<sup>8</sup> Affections ben foure, Joye, Hope, Drede and Sorowe.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., De Proprietatibus Rerum, iii, vi, 53. (1398)

AFRICA

<sup>9</sup> Always Libya brings something new. (del φέπει τι διπλὴν καιρόν.)

ARISTOTLE, Historia Animalium. Bk. viii, ch. 28, sec. 7. (c. 340 B.C.) Sometimes given as κακόν, "Always Libya brings something evil," of which the Latin, as cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 9, is, "Semper affert Libya mali quippiam." Libya was often used to indicate Africa.

It is commonly said among the Greeks that "Africa always offers something new." (Unde etiam vulgare Græciæ dictum "semper aliquid novi Africam adferre.")

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. viii, sec. 42. (c. A. D. 70)

Always Africa brings something new. (Semper Africa novi aliquid apportat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vii, No. 10.

(1523) This is the proverbial form, deriving from Aristotle and Livy. Another is, "Ex Africa semper aliquid novi" (From Africa always something new).

You know well enough how it is said, that Africa always is productive of some new thing. (Comme assez scauez que Africque aporte tousiours quelque chose de nouveau.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 16. (1534)

Africa is still in the habit of producing new and monstrous things. (Africque est coustumièrè tousiours choses produire nouuells & monstrueuses.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1552)

France, which as Africk produceth always something New.

JAMES HOWELL, Instructions for Forreine Travel, iii, 22. (1642)

<sup>10</sup> I hold thee fast, Africa. (Teneo te, Africa.)

JULIUS CAESAR, when he fell on landing in Africa. (46 B.C.) See SUTTONIUS, Lives of the Caesars: Julius. Sec. 59.

By the splendor of God, I have taken seizin of my kingdom: the earth of England is in my two hands.

WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, as he slipped and fell when landing at Pevensey, England. 28 Sept., 1066. See FREEMAN, Norman Conquest. Vol. iii, ch. 15

<sup>11</sup> They gazed upon the sea ten thousand years and never built a ship.

THOMAS DIXON, JR., The Clansman. Last chapter. (1905) Referring to the Negroes of Africa

<sup>12</sup> A foudre for the world and worldings base!
I speak of Africa and golden joys.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 3, 102. (1598)
The Arabs say, "He who has drunk of African waters will drink again."

AGE

1 The nigher Death's day, the more should old men play. (ὡς τῷ γέροντι μᾶλλον | πρέπει τὸ τερπνὰ παίζειν | ὅσῃ πῆλιν τὰ Μοῖρῃς.)

ANACREON, Odes, Ode vii, l. 9. (c. 550 B.C.)
I love to see old men merry. (φιλῶ γέροντα τερπνόν.)

ANACREON (?), Odes, Ode xxxix, l. 1.

2 Never do good to an old man. (μήποτε εὖ ἐρθεῖν γέροντα.)

ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 14. (c. 330 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb, and Aristotle points out that "proverbs are, as it were, evidence; for example, if one man advises another not to make a friend of an old man, he can appeal to the proverb, 'Never do good to an old man.'"

3 For something I have not lost I am searching.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 152a (c. 450) Age walks with bent figure.

Age naturally maketh them crooked and stooping towards the ground, to the end they may thine to returne from whence they came.

STEFAN GUZZO, Civile Conversation, Bk. ii, p. 174. (1574) Pettie, tr.

And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 226 (1608)

4 Age will not be defied.

BACON, Essays: Of Regiment of Health (1612)

I am too old, and the seas are too long, for me to double the Cape of Good Hope.

FRANCIS BACON, Memorial of Access. (1620)

5 Many grow old before they arrive at age.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudoxia Epidemica, iv, 12, 217 (1646)

6 Ah, that I might strip off again this old age!
(ἀ πόρρω ἴνα γῆρας αἰθεῖ τόδ' ἐκδύοιμι.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments, Frag. 106. (c. 250 B.C.)

7 Though you should live to be older than the itch. (Aunque viváis más años que sarna.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. i, ch. 12. (1605)

The proverb is "Viejo como la sarna." In Castilian sarna means the itch, but in Biscayan it signifies old age, hence the saying

As old as the Itch.

GEORGE FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 722. (1732)

Nye as owle as Adam and Eve.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 82. (c. 1579)

As old as Adam.

UNKNOWN, Roxburgh Ballads, iii, 578. (1662)

"As old as Methuselah" is a similar proverb.

As old as Aldgate.

DANIEL DEFOE, Tour Thro' Great Britain, ii, 153. (1725) "Aldgate," says Defoe, "was very ancient and decay'd, so that as old as Aldgate was a city proverb for many years." Many other English place names are used in a similar way: "As old as Calehill," "As old as Charing Cross," "As old as Eggerton," "As old as Glastonbury tor," "As old as Pandon Gate," "As old as Paul's steeple," etc.

As old as the hills.

SCOTT, The Monastery, Ch. 9. (1820) DICKENS, David Copperfield, Ch. 15. (1850)

I am as old as my tongue, and a little older than my teeth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i. (1738)

He was born with Noah in the ark.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, No. 688. (1817)

Old enough to lie without doors.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678) See also under ANTIQUITY.

8 And on the ground, which is my modres gate.
I knokke with my staf, bothe erly and late.
And seye "leve moder. leet me in!"

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's Tale, l. 729. (c. 1386)

An old man's staff is the rapper of death's door.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, No. 915. (1640) RAY, p. 19. (1670) FULLER, No. 4690 (1732)

9 No one is so old as to think he cannot live one more year. (Nemo est tam senex qui se annum non putet posse vivere.)

CICERO, De Senectute, Ch. 7, sec. 24. (44 B.C.)
The Latin quoted by ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 135. (1629)

No man is so old that it is improper for him to hope for another day of existence. And one day, mind you, is a stage on life's journey (Deinde nemo tam senex est, ut inprobe unum diem speret. Unus autem dies gradus vitae est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium, Epis. xii, sec. 6. (c. A.D. 64)

As Cicero saith, no man is so old and aged, that he perswadeth not him selfe that he may liue a whole yeare.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, A Treatise Against Dying, p. 14 (1577)

There is no man so decrepit, whilst he has Methuselah before him, who does not think he has still twenty years of life in his body. (N'est homme si decrepite, tant qu'il veoid Mathusalem devant, qui ne pense avoir encores vingt ans dans le corps.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

Hee seems to verifie the proverbe: There is none so desperately old, but he hopes to live one yeare longer.

RICHARD BRATHWATT, Whimsies, p. 45. (1631)

For never any man was yet so old

But hoped his life one winter more might hold.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Old Age, Pt. i, l. 135. (1668)

None so old that he hopes not for a year of life

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 353. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3653. (1732)

Yet ye hope and hope, and fancy that he who has lived today may live tomorrow.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Dr. Taylor, 12 April, 1784. See BOSWELL, Life.

No one is so old that he doesn't count on living another year; no one so young that he cannot die today.

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 328. (1856) A German proverb.

1 An old man is twice a child. (δὲς παῖς ὁ γέρον.)

CRATINUS, Fragments. Frag. 5. 16. (c. 450 B.C.) Old people are twice children. (δὲς παῖδες οἱ γέροντες.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 1417. (423 B.C.)

MENANDER, The Widow. Frag. 517K. (c. 300 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 36, who gives the Latin, "Bis pueri senes," and refers to instances of the proverb's use by Plato, Sophocles, Aristotle, Euripides, Lucian, and others. Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Olde folke are twyse chyldren. or double chyldren."

Once a man reaches the witless stage, without senses or mentality, they say that he has grown a child again. (Senex quom extemplo est, iam nec sentit nec sapit, aiunt solere eum rulum repuerascere.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 295. (c. 200 B.C.)

To old age a sense of childishness inheres. (Seni puerilis sensus inhaeret.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv. No. 18. (c. 175 B.C.)

Once a man, twice a child.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, 42. (c. 550)

She mighte helpe hir-self no-thing.

But turned ageyn unto childhede.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 398. (c. 1365)

Old men are not improperly called Twice-Children. (παλίμπαῖδας)

ERASMUS, Moriei Encomium. Sec. 9. (1511)

Kynge David beyng in his second chyldehode, for al old men are wise chyldren, as the Prouerb is, Senex bis puer. An Olde manne, twyse a chylde.

HUGH LATIMER, Second Sermon before Edward VI. (1549)

Olde men, (sayd he) like my selfe, are twice children, and drunkards are twice children.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv. p. 155. (1574) Young, tr.

That which we call "Becoming a child again." (Ce que nous disons, "Retomber en enfantillage")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1580)

Old folks are twice children.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) Works, li, 50

Old men are twice children.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health, p. 182. (1588) RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers, iii, 6. (1632)

They say an old man is twice a child.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, li, 2, 403. (1600)

Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 3, 19. (1605)

Two boys, an old man twice a boy.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 3, 57. (1609)

Though the prouerbe be, once a man and twice a child.

WYE SALTONSTALL, Picturas Loquentes, sig. B9. (1631)

S. John died in his second childhood.

JOHN JACKSON, The True Evangelical Temper, ii, 113. (1641)

Native air may prove a cordial to patients, as mothers' milk to (and old men are twice) children.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Berks. Vol. i, p. 129. (1662)

Old men are said to be a second time children

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sport, p. 389. (1707)

The Germans say, "Alte Leute werden wieder Kinder" (Old folks will again become children).

Lady Macadam; in whom the saying was verified that old folk are twice bairns, for . . . she was as play-rife as a very lassie at her sampler

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 16. (1821)

Fast verging to a state of second childhood

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 39. (1833)

2 In the middle of the journey of our life. (Nel mezzo del cammin di nostra vita.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto i, l. 1. (c. 1300)

Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 108. (1598)

On his bold visage middle age

Had slightly press'd its signet sage.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 21. (1810)

Age has now

Stamped with its signet that ingenuous brow

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life. Sec. 16. (1819)

He is a little smooth on the tooth, as the saying is, in the matter of years

DAMON RUNYON, The Brighter Side. (3 March, 1941) Referring to George Jean Nathan

3 The age at which every one should lower sails and gather in his ropes. (Etade ove ciascun dovrebbe ' calar le vele e raccogliere le sarte.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 80. (c. 1300)

It is time to be old. To take in sail.

R. W. EMERSON, Terminus (1867)

4 Age is like love, it cannot be hid.

THOMAS DEKKER, Old Fortunatus. Act ii, sc. 1. (1600)

5 And Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died: his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated. (Non caligavit oculus eius, nec dentes illius moti sunt.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxiv, 7. (c. 650 B.C.)

I'm old, in sooth, but I can outdrink youth. (ὦ γέρον μὲν εἰμι, | πρὶν πλὺν δὲ πίνω.)

ANACREON (?), Odes. Ode xlvii, l. 1. (c. 550 B.C.)

His leaf also shall not wither. (Folium eius non defluet.)

Old Testament: Psalms, l, 3. (c. 350 B.C.)

Our nature here is not unlike our wine;

Some sorts when old continue brisk and fine.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Old Age. Pt. III, l. 245. (1642)

As for age, what that's worth depends on the quality of the liquor.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Bk.ii, ch.21. (1859)

<sup>1</sup> An old man's jaws are his staff. (ἀνδρὸς γέροντος ἡ γνάθος ἰακτὴρ πλά.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, viii, 28. (c. A. D. 125)

Age must keepe a straight dyot or els a sickly life.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 276. (1580)

He wrongs not an old man that steals his supper from him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 313. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia No. 2420. (1732) Because old men usually eat too much.

He that steals the old man's supper does him no wrong.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737

You do no harm when you steal his supper from an old man. (No le quiere mal, quien le hurta al viejo lo que ha de cenar)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 285 (1856)

He is a friend who steals an old man's meal

J. F. MONTAGUE, Broadway Stomach, p. 226 (1940)

<sup>2</sup> Miss not the discourse of the elders. (Ne despicias narrationem presbyterorum sapientium.)

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, viii, 9. (c. 190 B.C.) What an elder says all take for advice. (Quod senior loquitur omnes consilium putant.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No 606 (c.43 B.C.)

Oft from shrivelled skin comes useful counsel

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol St 134 (c. 900)

If you wish good advice, consult an old man

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1670)

The counsels of old age give light without heat, like the winter sun. (Les conseils de la vieillesse éclairaient sans échauffer, comme le soleil de l'hiver.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 159. (1746)

Many a man that cudden't direct ye to th' dhrug store on th' corner whin he was thirty will get a respectful hearin' whin age has further impaired his mind.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Old Age. (1901)

<sup>3</sup> Few envy the consideration enjoyed by the oldest inhabitant.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age. (1870)

Nobody wants th' respect that youth pays to age.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Old Age. (1901)

<sup>4</sup> I loathe the men who would prolong their lives

By foods and drinks and charms of magic art, Perverting nature's course to ward off death;

They ought, when they but cumber up the ground,

Get hence and die, and clear the way for youth.

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 1109. (c. 421 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 110C.

When once your powers are passed, why wish your life to last? (Ubi non sis qui fueris, non esse cur velis vivere.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. 3, sec. 4. (46 B.C.) Quoted as an old saying.

<sup>5</sup> Sir, you shall taste my anno domini.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem, Act. i, sc. 1. (1707)

The ills the flesh is heir to! Anno domini, anno domini.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 11. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> He [Bion] compareth the age of man vnto the foure seasons of the yeare: the tyme that he groweth, is like the Spring: the tyme of his strength, is the Sommer: the tyme that he begynneth to be wise, is like the Haruest, and his age is like wynter, which finisheth al things.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites. fo. 69 (1578)

Diogenes Laertius does not record this as one of Bion's sayings, but the comparison between man's life and the seasons of the year has been used so frequently by poets and moralists that it has become proverbial.

He that is not handsome at twenty, nor strong at thirty, nor rich at forty, nor wise at fifty will never be handsome, strong, rich or wise.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 351 (1640)

He that's not handsome at 20, strong at 30, wise at 40, rich at 50, will never be handsome, strong, wise, or rich.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 2287 (1732)

The French say, "Qui n'a point de sens à trente ans n'en aura jamais" (He who has no sense at thirty will never have any).

At twenty man is a peacock, at thirty a lion, at forty a camel, at fifty a serpent, at sixty a dog, at seventy an ape, at eighty nothing at all (A los veinte años será pavon, á los trienta leon á los cuarenta camello, á los cincuenta serpiente, á los sesenta perro, á los setenta mona, y á los ochenta nada.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 276. (1647)

In Maxim 298 Gracian says, "At twenty the will rules, at thirty the intellect, at forty the judgment."

At 20 years of age the will reigns; at 30 the wit; at 40 the judgment.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741

<sup>7</sup> 'Tis late ere an old Man comes to know he is old.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5089. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> Buried in a good old age. (Sepultus in senectute bona.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xv, 15. (c. 550 B.C.)

He died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour. (Mortuus est in senectute bona, plenus dierum, et divitiis, et gloria.)

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xxix, 28. (c. 400 B. C.) He died full of years and honors, as illustrious for those he refused as for those he accepted. (Ille quidem plenus annis abiit, plenus honoribus, illis etiam, quos recusavit.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 98) Referring to Virginius Rufus.

He who dies without being corrupted enjoys a good old age. (Ssü erh pu wang 'ché sheu.)

LAO-TSE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 33. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

1 Old and well stricken in age. (Senes, pro-vectaeque aetatis.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xviii, 11. (c. 550 B. C.) Usually quoted, "Well stricken in years."

2 The three-legged one, whose back is broken and whose head looks down upon the ground. (ὃς ἐπὶ τριποδὶ, βροτῶ λαοί, | οὐ τ' ἐπὶ ῥῆτα ἔαγε, κάρη δ' εἰς οὐδ' ἀπ' αἶται.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 533. (c. 800 B. C.) An allusion to the old man walking with a staff, the "third leg" of the riddle of the Sphinx. See under RIDDLE.

Age goeth its way on triple feet. (ἐν τριποδῶν . . . τριποδός.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 79. (458 B. C.) Two are better than three.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 152a. (c. 450) Two legs better than three—youth better than age.

On his last legs. MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1. (1656)

3 On the threshold of old age. (ἐπὶ ᾗρας οὐδ' ᾗ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 60. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated in bk. xxiv, l. 487, and twice in the Odyssey. Cited by PHILO, De Somniis, ii, 148, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 46, who gives the Latin, "Limen senectae" A proverbial phrase.

4 A green old age is his, men say. (ὁμογέροντα δὲ μὴ φασ' ἕμεναι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 791. (c. 850 B. C.) Pope renders it (l. 929), "A green old age, unconscious of decays."

His old age was still fresh and green. (Cruda deo viridisque senectus.)

VIRGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 304. (19 B. C.) Referring to Charon who, in Greek mythology, ferried the dead across the Styx. Caesar used the same phrase in describing the Britons preparing to give battle to the Romans at the foot of the Grampians.

Though I be hoor, I fare as dooth a tree
That blosmeth er that fruyt y-woxen be;
A blosmy tree nis neither drye ne deed.
I fele me nowher hoor but on myn heed.
Myn herte and alle my limes been as grene
As laurer thurgh the yeer is for to sene.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 217 (c. 1388)

His locks were gray, yet was his courage green.
(Mostra in fresco vigor chione canute.)

TASSO, Gerusalemme Liberata. Canto i, st. 53. (1581)

Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 3, 47. (1600)
In their green Old-age.

THOMAS JOHNSON, tr., Purey's Works, i, v, 5. (1634)

His hair just grizzled, As in green old age.

JOHN DRYDEN, Oedipus. Act iii, sc. 1. (1678)

His green old age seemed to be the result of health and benevolence.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 14 (1766)

You are old, Father William, the young man cried,

The few locks which are left you are grey;
You are hale, Father William, a hearty old man.
Now tell me the reason, I pray.

In the days of my youth, Father William replied.
I remember'd that youth would fly fast,
And abused not my health and my vigour at first,
That I never might need them at last.

ROBERT SOUTHY, The Old Man's Comforts. (1797)

He is yet in green and vigorous senility

CHARLES LAMB, Essays: The Benchers of the Inner Temple. (1821)

In youth his habits had been temperate, and his temperance had its proper reward, a singularly green and vigorous old age

MACAULAY, History of England Ch. 14. (1855)

5 Nay, and thou too, old man, in former days wast as we hear, happy. (καὶ σὺ, γέρον, τὸ πρὶν μὲν ἀνέοικεν δαβλιὸν εἶναι.)

HOMER, Iliad Bk. xxiv, l. 543 (c. 850 B. C.)
How rare to find old age and happiness in one!
(Rarum est felix idemque senex)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 643 (c. 60 A. D.)

6 Do you grow gentler and better as old age creeps on? (Lenior et melior fis, accedente senectæ?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 211. (c. 15 B. C.)

7 The ancient and honourable, he is the head.
(Longaevis et honorabilis, ipse est caput.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, ix, 15. (c. 725 B. C.)
"Eild should hae honour," as the Scots say, or "Old age is honorable."

Grave and reverend seniors. (Homines veteres et senes.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 6 (c. A. D. 85.)

8 When he dies for age, you may quake for fear.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 357. (1721)
Intimating that you are not much younger.

Why, my Lord, when I die for age, she may quake for fear.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
When I die of age, I know of some that will quake for fear.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 123. (1762)

1 Good wishes are all an old man has to offer to his country or his friends.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Thomas Law, 1811.

Tranquillity is the summum bonum of old age.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Mark Hill, 1820.

2 It is unjust to claim the privileges of age, and retain the playthings of childhood.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 8 Sept., 1750.

3 In the decline of life, shame and grief are of short duration.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 4. (1759)

We grow with the years more fragile in body, but morally stouter, and can throw off the chill of a bad conscience almost at once.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts (1931)

4 While we drink, and call for garlands, for perfumes and for maidens, old age is creeping on us unperceived. (Dum bibimus, dum sarta unguenta puellas | poscimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 128. (c. A. D. 120)

Age has crept upon thee unperceived. (Obrepsit non intellecta senectus.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 34, l. 3. (a. A. D. 170)

For Age, with stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch

THOMAS VAUX, The Aged Lover Renounceth Love. (c. 1550) Quoted by SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v. 1, 79.

On us both did haggish age steal on

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, I. 2, 29. (1602)

Old age comes on apace to ravage all the clime
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel, Bk. I, st. 25. (1771)

5 We hope to grow old, and we fear old age; that is to say, we love life and flee death. (L'on espère de vieillir, et l'on craint la vieillesse; c'est-à-dire l'on aime la vie, et l'on fuit la mort.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Caractères: de l'Homme. (1688)

Every man desires to live long; but no man would be old.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

All would live long, but none would be old

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749

6 Age loves to give good precepts to console itself for being no longer able to give bad examples. (Les vieillards aiment à donner de bons préceptes, pour se consoler de n'être plus en état de donner de mauvais exemples.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 93. (1665)

7 In growing old, one grows more foolish and more wise. (En vieillissant, on devient plus fou et plus sage.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 210. (1665)
Both Folly and Wisdom come upon us with Years.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1009. (1732)

8 The most dangerous folly in elderly people who have once been attractive is to forget that they are so no longer. (Le plus dangereux ridicule des vieilles personnes qui ont été aimables, c'est d'oublier qu'elles ne le sont plus.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 408. (1665)
The sprightliness that increases with advancing years is not far removed from madness. (La vivacité qui augmente en vieillissant ne va pas loin de la folie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 416.
No longer veal at my age. (Plus de veaux à mon âge.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. I. (1668)

The fable of mutton that thinks itself lamb

A. B. FROST, caption of picture, showing two old people rolling disastrously down hill. (1895)

Old Mack's down with a case of Indian Summer.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Ransom of Mack. (1907)

He had become enveloped in the Indian Summer of the soul.

O. HENRY, The Indian Summer of Dry Valley Johnson. (1907)

The Dangerous Age. (Den Farlige Alder.)

KARIN MICHAELIS Title of novel published in 1911. From the theme of the book, "the dangerous age" became a proverbial phrase for that period in the life of man or woman when, finding themselves slipping into middle age, they feel that they should have some sexual adventures before it is too late

9 Few people know how to be old. (Peu de gens savent être vieux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 423. (1665)
To know how to grow old is the masterpiece of wisdom, and one of the most difficult chapters in the great art of life (Savoir comment devenir vieux c'est le chef-d'œuvre de la sagesse et l'un des chapitres les plus difficiles du grand art de la vie.)

HENRI AMTEL, Journal Intime, 21 Sept., 1874.

10 Things become old through excess of vigour.

LAO-TSEI, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue) Sec. 30. (c. 550 B. C.) Old. tr.

11 To outlive Tithonus. (ὄνειπὸν τὸν Τίθωνος ἥνω.)

LUCIAN, Dialogues of the Dead, vii, 1. (c. A. D. 170) Tithonus was made immortal by Zeus at the request of Eos, the dawn goddess, but she neglected to obtain eternal youth for him, and so he became an old shrivelled creature, little more than a voice. "An old man but voice and shadow," as Euripides wrote (Melanippe, frag. 180.) In Tennyson's Tithonus, "this grey shadow, once a man," laments his "cruel immortality."

To live to the phoenix' age. (φοίνικος ἔτη βιοῦν.)

LUCIAN, Hermotimus. Sec. 53. (c. A. D. 170)

The phoenix was supposed to be born again and again out of its own ashes.

He outlives the crows. (ὕπερ τὰς κορώνας μεβιωκώς.)

JULIUS POLLUX, Onomasticon, ii, 16. (c. A. D.

180) There are many other Greek proverbial phrases for extreme old age, among them, "Living beyond the spindle "[of the Fates], which Lucian uses, and "Living beyond the register," cited by SUIDAS, xiv, 13. Lucian has also, "Beyond the thread" [of life].

1 Age requireth rather a harde snaffle, then a pleasaunt bit, and is sooner allured to wickedness then childhoode.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 147 (1579)

2 It would be a good thing to be old, if only we marched toward amendment. (Il feroit bel estre vieil, si nous ne marchions que vers amendement.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

The heart never grows better by age; I fear rather worse; always harder. A young liar will be an old one; and a young knave will only be a greater knave as he grows older

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 May, 1750

Many foxes grow gray, but few grow good

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749

Men become old but they never become good

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i. (1892)

3 A fond old man is often as full of words as a woman.

SIR THOMAS MORE, English Works, p. 1169 (c. 1530)

A good old man, sir; he will be talking.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 36. (1598)

Talking is a disease of age.

JONSON, Explorata: Homeri Ulysses. (1616)

Narrative old age.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 291. (1709)

Talking age.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 14. (1770)

An old man never wants a tale to tell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 24. (1732)

The world was far gone in its anecdotage.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Preface. (1848) Curiosities of Literature was by Disraeli's father, Isaac D'Israeli, as the name was originally spelled. His grandfather, an Italian Jew, assumed the name D'Israeli, "a name never borne before, or since, by any other family, in order that their race might be for ever recognized." "Anecdotage" (suggested by anecdote and dotage) is attributed to John Wilkes, but no use of it by him has been discovered.

When a man fell into his anecdotage it was a sign for him to retire from the world.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 28. (1870)

When the teeth fall out the tongue wags loose.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 379. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

4 Age decays nature, perfects art.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes to the University. (1613)

5 Be mindful of old age, which is to come. (Venturae memores iam nunc estote senectae.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 59. (c. 1 B. C.)

6 The downhill path of declining age. (Iter declivē senectae.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 227. (c. A. D. 7)

Life is most delightful when it is on the downward slope. (Iucundissima est aetas devexa iam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 5. (a. A. D. 64)

Going downhill no one is old.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

7 If he live, he shall have age. (S'il vit il aura de l'age.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1532)

Neither marble nor porphyry escapes old age and decay. (Il n'est le Marbre ne le Porphyre, qui n'ayt sa vieillesse & decadence)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 28. (1545)

8 Of the five happinesses, long life is the greatest. (Wu fu chih chung shou wei hsien)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 837. (1875) The Five Happinesses, as given in The Book of History, are: Long life, wealth, health, the cultivation of virtue, and a natural death.

Age lacks kindness, as dry weather dew.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1238

9 Disgraceful and ridiculous is an old man learning his alphabet. (Turpis et ridicula res est elementarius senex.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 3, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 60)

What a stupid thing is an old man learning his A B C's! (La sottise chose qu'un vieillard abecedaire!)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1580)

The Head gray, and no Brains yet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4587. (1732)

10 I confess that I am old; Age is unnecessary. SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 156. (1605)

I am declined into the vale of years.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 265. (1605)

11 Nobody loves life like an old man. (τοις ἔφ' ἂν γὰρ οὐδεὶς ὥς ὁ γηράστων ἐφά.)

SOPHOCLES, Acrisius. Frag. 63. (c. 450 B. C.)

12 One touch will send an old man to his rest. (σμιρὰ παλαιὰ σώματ' ἐνδύει θάψῃ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 961. (c. 409 B. C.)

Every tryflyng toie age cannot laugh at.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

The old man is like a candle before the wind.
(Lao jên 'ko pi fêng 'chien chu.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)

At eighty a man is a hoar-frost upon the tiles.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1249. (1875)

1

A man is as old as his arteries.

THOMAS SYDENHAM, attr. (c. 1675) The aphorism is also said to have been coined by Pierre Cabanis, a French physiologist. It was a favorite saying of Rudolph Virchow, the German pathologist, and was also frequently used by Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, who attributed it to "an eminent French physiologist," probably Cabanis. A modernization, perhaps, of Alfred d'Houdetot's, "On a l'âge de son cœur" (One is as old as one's heart).

O wherefore our age be revealing?

Leave that to the registry books!

A man is as old as he's feeling.

A woman as old as she looks

MORTIMER COLLINS, How Old Are You? (1855)

Age . . . is a matter of feeling, not of years

G. W. CURTIS, Prue and I Ch. 6. (1857)

A man is as young as his feeling.

A woman as young as she looks;

Don't eagles live longer than rooks?

UNKNOWN, Westminster Gazette, 27 Nov. 1895

A woman is as old as she looks to a man that likes to look at her.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Old Age. (1901)

The adage that a man is as old as he feels, and a woman as old as she looks, may be said to contain much inherent truth

UNKNOWN, Illustrated London News, 25 May, 1907. The Italians say, "Gli uomini hanno gli anni ch' e' sentono, e le donne quelli che mostrano" (Men have as many years as they feel, women as many as they show).

You are always as young as you feel.

R. L. GAYL, Old World Essays, p. 243. (1921)

They used to say that a woman is as old as she looks and a man is as old as he feels. I believe that a person is as old as his habits.

GELETT BURGESS, Look Eleven Years Younger, p. 231 (1937)

2

You have the old age of an eagle, as the saying is. (Visa verost, quod dici solet, | aquilae senectus.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 520. (163 B.C.) A proverb derived from the old Greek, 'Αερόν γῆρας, κοπιῶν νεότης (The old age of an eagle is better than the youth of a sparrow). It has two meanings. As used by Terence, it means an active and hearty old age. As used by others, it refers to an old man who lives chiefly on drink, since it was believed that the eagle, when old, was unable to eat any solid food because its upper mandible grew so long and so hooked that it could open its mouth only enough to drink the blood of its victims. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 56.

The old age of a horse. (ἵππου γῆρας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Old Men in Public Affairs. Sec. 785D. (c. A.D. 95) Quoted as a proverb. Plutarch is arguing that men who retire from public affairs, and busy themselves in the fields measuring corn or collecting wool (wool-gathering) will bring upon themselves "the old age of a horse."

An old man's end is to keep sheep.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

The state of our agricultural people appears in such proverbs as . . . "An old man's end is to keep sheep."

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, i, 441.

It is at most the life of a cabbage.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams. (1822) Of decrepit old age.

3

We men wax old and wrinkled sooner than one may spit. (ἄνθρωποι δύνανται.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxix, l. 27. (c. 270 B.C.)

Age sets more wrinkles in our minds than on our foreheads. (Elle nous attache plus de rides en l'esprit qu'au visage.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1593)

Age withers only the outside.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 74. (1940)

4

I shall bring his old age with sorrow unto the grave.

Apocrypha: Tobit, iii, 10. (c. 200 B.C.)

5

When an old man will not drink, look for him in another world.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 298. (1666)

When an old man will not drink, go to see him in another world.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

When an old man will not drink, you may safely promise him a visit in the next world.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5548. (1732)

6

The soul's dark cottage, batter'd and decay'd.
Lets in new light through chinks that Time hath made.

EDMUND WALLER, Old Age. (1645)

Drawing near to death, . . . her soul saw a glimpse of happiness through the chinks of her sickness-broken body.

THOMAS FULLER, Life of Monica, i, 2. (1662)

To vanish in the chinks that Time has made

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Paestum, l. 59. (c. 1820)

7

I'm old enough and ugly enough to take care of myself.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Satanella. Ch. 10. (1872)

My experience is that as soon as people are old enough to know better, they don't know anything at all.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act. ii. (1892)

<sup>1</sup> Honorable age is not that which standeth in length of time, nor that is measured by number of years. But wisdom is the gray hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, iv, 8, 9. (c. 100 B. C.)

Olde age is not to bee respected or revered for the number of their yeeres, but chiefly for the merite of their good conditions and vertue: and thereuppon it is sayde, that to bee hoare headed. is a signe of yeeres, not of knowledge.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 172. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As the Canker soonest enteth into the white Rose, so corruption doth easiest creepe into the white head.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 231 (1580)

As ye hearb Moly hath a floure as white as snow, and a roote as blacke as incke: so age hath a white head, showing pietie, but a black hart, swelling with mischiefe.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England, p. 231.

<sup>2</sup> An eg of one houre old, bread of one day a goat of one moneth, wine of six moneths, flesh of a yeare, fish of ten yeares, a wife of twentie yeares, a friend among a hundred. are the best of all number.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 253. (1623)

An egg of an hour's laying, bread of a daies, flesh of one year's growth, fish of ten, a woman of fifteen, and a friend of a hundred years standing.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 181. (1666)

Give me yesterday's Bread, this day's Fish, and last year's Cyder.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744

<sup>3</sup> Men drop so fast, ere life's mid stage we tread Few know so many friends alive, as dead

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame Sat. v, l. 97 (1725)

As life runs on, the road grows strange

With faces new, and near the end

The milestones into headstones change,

Neath every one a friend

J. R. LOWELL, Sixty-Eighth Birthday. (1887)

The days grow shorter, the nights grow longer

The headstones thicken along the way

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Interlude. (1902)

<sup>4</sup> An old man in a house is a good omen in a house.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 15 (c. 1000) Quoted by RAY, Proverbs, 403. (1678)

Also "An old woman in the house." etc

An old man in the house is a good sign.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744

II—Age In Man

Twenty-One, see under Youth

<sup>5</sup> Thirty:

Till thirty . . . people should dress in a way that is most likely to procure the love of the opposite sex.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Dress. (1764)

No man,

Till thirty, should perceive there's a plain woman.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 3. (1820)

Men and women at thirty . . . have lost all spring and vivacity.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: The Tragic. (1844)

The man who has reached thirty feels at times as if he had come out of a great battle. Comrade after comrade has fallen; his own life seems to have been charmed. . . . Illness is felt to be a cruel interruption.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 3. (1863)

The knell of my thirtieth year has sounded

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 12. (1888)

<sup>6</sup> Through life's road, so dim and dirty, I have dragged to three-and-thirty;

What have these years left to me?

Nothing, except thirty-three.

LORD BYRON, Diary. 22 Jan., 1821. See MOORE, Life of Byron. Vol. ii, p. 414.

I am thirty-three—the age of the good sans-culotte Jesus; an age fatal to revolutionists.

CAMILLE DESMOULINS, when asked his age by the French Revolutionary Tribunal, 3 April, 1794. He was guillotined two days later. Sans-culotte, without breeches, was the popular name for the Revolutionaries, presumably because they had discarded knee-breeches—culottes—for pantaloons. See Ap-ercus sur Camille Desmoulins. CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. vi, ch. 2

<sup>7</sup> Too old for youth,—too young, at thirty-five, To herd with boys, or hoard with good

three-score,—

I wonder people should be left alive;

But since they are, that epoch is a bore.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 2. (1820)

One backward look—the last—the last!

One silent tear—for youth is past!

N. P. WILLIS, Thirty-Five. (1835)

After thirty-five the strength of the intellectual powers begins to decline.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, The Ages of Life. (1851)

After thirty-five a man begins to have thoughts about women; before that age he has feelings

AUSTIN O'MALLEY, Epigram (a. 1932)

<sup>8</sup> My days are in the yellow leaf;

The flowers and fruits of love are gone;

The worm, the canker and the grief

Are mine alone.

LORD BYRON, On This Day I Complete My Thirty-Sixth Year. (1824)

<sup>9</sup> One's thirty-eighth year is an evil and dangerous year, bringing many evils and great sicknesses.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 787. (1521)

- 1
Forty:
If a man reach forty and yet be disliked by his fellows, he will be so to the end.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Vol. ix, bk. xvii, ch. 26. (c. 500 B.C.)
At forty I attained to an unperturbed mind.
MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii. (c. 300 B.C.)
I am resolved to grow fat and look young till forty.
JOHN DRYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act iii, sc. 1. (1668)
FAIR FAT AND FORTY, see under FATNESS.
Every man at forty is a fool or a physician.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 234. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1428. (1738) See under DOCTOR.
Men over forty are no judges of a book written in the new spirit.
R. W. EMERSON, The Man of Letters. (1863)
His forty years . . . matched the twenties and thirties of other men.
GEORGE MEREDITH, The Tragic Comedians. Ch. 16. (1880)
Then you know a boy is an ass,
Then you know the worth of a lass,
Once you have come to forty year.
W. M. THACKERAY, The Age of Wisdom. (1840)
- 2
On passing his fortieth year, any man of the slightest power of mind . . . will hardly fail to show some trace of misanthropy.
ARTHUR SCHOENHAUER, The Ages of Life. (1851)
Every man over forty is a scoundrel.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)
- 3
A fool at forty is a fool indeed.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 281. (1728)
At thirty man suspects himself a fool,
Knows it at forty, and reforms his plan;
At fifty chides his infamous delay, . . .
Resolves; and re-resolves; then dies the same.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. i, l. 417. (1742)
He who at fifty is a fool,
Is far too stubborn grown for school.
NATHANIEL COTTON, Slander. (a. 1788)
- 4
Today is my forty-third birthday. I have thus long passed the peak of life where the waters divide.
ESAIAS TEGNER, Letter to F. M. Franzen, 13 Nov., 1825.
- 5
Fifty:
At fifty one can no longer love.
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, to Gaspard Gourgaud, at St. Helena, 7 April, 1817.
At fifty years, 'tis said, afflicted citizens lose their sick headaches.
R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude. (1870)
After a man is fifty, you can fool him by saying he is smart, but you can't fool him by saying he is pretty.
E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)
- Ah, what shall I be at fifty
Should Nature keep me alive?
ALFRED TENNYSON, Maud, l. vi, 31. (1855)
- 6
Sixty:
Would that by no disease, no cares oppress.
I in my sixtieth year were laid to rest.
MIMNERMUS, Couplet. (c. 600 B.C.)
Surely a wiser wish were thus expressed,
At eighty years let me be laid to rest.
SOLON, Fragments. Frag. 20, Bergk. (c. 600 B.C.) Amending the couplet by Mimnermus.
See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon, sec. 60.
- 7
Threescore, I think, is pretty high;
'Twas time in conscience he should die.
SWIFT, A Satirical Elegy on the Death of a Late Famous General. (1722) Referring to the Duke of Marlborough.
What Tutor shall we find for a Child of sixty Years old?
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5523. (1732)
At sixty, labor ought to be over.
THOMAS PAINE, The Rights of Man. (1791)
Every year sees a man less easy to save. At sixty all missionary effort is hopeless; it takes burning at the stake.
JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Levana. Ch. 1. (1807)
Spring still makes Spring in the mind,
When sixty years are told.
R. W. EMERSON, The World-Soul. (1847)
At sixty man learns how to value home.
LORD LYTTON, Walpole. Act ii. (1869)
Chaucer, at Woodstock, with the nightingales.
At sixty wrote the Canterbury Tales.
LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus. (1875)
- 8
It might be a good thing if all were peacefully chloroformed at sixty.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Fixed Period. (1881)
The uselessness of men above sixty years of age
WILLIAM OSLER, Address, Johns Hopkins University, 22 Feb., 1905. This statement, together with Osler's jesting quotation from Trollope, as given above, caused him to be headlined throughout the country as an advocate of chloroform after sixty. See CUSHING, Life of Osler, i, 29.
- After a man passes sixty, his mischief is mainly in his head.
E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926)
- 9
One is past being lucky at our age.
LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, To Marshall Villeroi, after the Battle of Ramillies, 23 May, 1706.
Louis was then 68 and Villeroi 62.
- 10
Seventy:
Past my next milestone waits my seventieth year.
I mount no longer when the trumpets call:
My battle-harness idles on the wall.
The spider's castle, camping-ground of dust,
Not without dints, and all in front, I trust.
J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis: Postscript, 1887.

1 The days of our years are threescore years and ten. (Dies annorum nostrorum in ipsis, septuaginta anni.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xc, 10. (c. 350 B.C.)

But Genesis, vi, 3, declares, "His days shall be an hundred and twenty years." In Genesis it is the Lord speaking; in the Psalms, Moses.

To be seventy years old is like climbing the Alps.

LONGFELLOW, Letter to G. W. Childs, 13 March, 1877.

To be seventy years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.

O. W. HOLMES, Letter to Julia Ward Howe, on her seventieth birthday, 27 May, 1889.

2 The still contentedness of seventy years.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, ii, 600. (1814)

3 My diseases are an asthma and a dropsy, and what is less curable, seventy-five.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to W. G. Hamilton, 20 Oct., 1784.

Nobody grows stronger at seventy-five.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Hannah More, 21 Aug., 1792.

At seventy-seven it is time to be in earnest.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1786) See BOSWELL, v, 288.

4 Eighty:

Toothless eighty.

EBENEZER ELIOT, Poems, p. 225. (1835)

5 My eightieth year warns me to pack up my baggage. (Annus octogesimus admonet me. ut sarcinas conligam.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. i, sec. 1. (c. 50 B.C.)

III—Age In Women

6 By candle-light nobody would have taken you for above five-and-twenty.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1760)

She may very well pass for forty-three

In the dusk, with a light behind her.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury (1875)

Forty-two in the daylight, thirty-five in the lamplight, and twenty-five or what you will in a blond wig and the spotlight.

DOROTHY L. SAYERS, In the Teeth of the Evidence, p. 211. (1940)

7 A lady of a "certain age," which means Certainly aged.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 69. (1818)

She was not old, nor young, nor at the years Which certain people call a "certain age."

BYRON, Beppo. St. 22. (1818)

8 But wel I wot, thou wilt answer and seye: "Lo! olde Griseld list to ryme and pleye!"

CHAUCER (?), Lenvoy de Chaucer a Scogan, l. 34, (c. 1393)

The cat became blind yet still was hankering after mice.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 429. (1817)

9 But trewely, I can not telle hir age.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. v. l. 826, (c. 1380)

10 As the clear light is upon the holy candlestick; so is the beauty of the face in ripe age. (Lucerna splendens super candelabrum sanctum, et species faciei super aetatem stabilem.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxvi, 17. (c. 190 B.C.)

As a white candle in a holy place,

So is the beauty of an aged face.

JOSEPH CAMPBELL, The Old Woman. (1920)

11 An old woman would dance. (Anus saltat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 11. (1523) "When an old woman dances, there is sport" A similar one is, "An old woman dancing makes a lot of dust" (Anus subsultans multum excitat pulveris). There are many proverbs deriding "mutton that thinks itself lamb": "Anus bacchatur" (acting like a Bacchante); "Anus cothonissat" (lecher-ing); "Anus hircum olet," and "Anus hircissans" (playing the lecherous goat); all of which are noted by Erasmus.

He is teaching an old woman to dance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1813)

12 There is hardly such a thing to be found as an old woman who is not a good woman.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to a Young Man, 25 June, 1745.

13 Your face shows your years. (Facies tua computat annos.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 199. (c. A.D. 120)

A man need not look in your mouth to know how old you are

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 280. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 188 (1670)

14 The hell of women is old age. (L'enfer des femmes, c'est la vieillesse.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 562. (1675) Referring to the celebrated courtesan, Ninon de Lenclos, who died in 1706 at the age of 90. La Rochefoucauld is said to have been one of her lovers.

15 'Tis worse to rouse an old woman than a dog. (χειρόν ἐπελθεῖν γράβη ἢ κύρα.)

MENANDER, Fragment. Frag. 258. (c. 300 B.C.)

There were many proverbial phrases among the Greeks for old women: ZENORIUS, Adagia, li, 98, has γράβη σίφιφος (moth-eaten old woman); SUIDAS, Lexikon, v, 2, has γράβη χορεύου (dancing old woman) and γράβη κωθύριζομεναι (drunken old woman).

The sportive old woman is Death's darling toy. (Anus cum ludit morti delicias facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 30. (c. 43 B.C.) The Germans say, "Wo der Teufel nicht hinkommen kann, schicht er ein altes Weib" (Where the devil can't go, he sends an old woman). A variant is, "Where the devil can't go, he sends his grandmother." The Arabs say, "What it takes the devil a year to do, an old woman does in an hour"; the Moroccans, "When a woman grows old, there is nothing left in her but poison."

<sup>1</sup> An aged dame may dye her locks of gray,
But not make straight the back which time has bent.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vi, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

<sup>2</sup> Even in the afternoon of her best days.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 7, 186. (1592)

By the sharp tooth of cankering eld defaced.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress. St. 16. (1742)

<sup>3</sup> She has quite lost the blue on the plum.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i. (1738)

<sup>4</sup> She's no chicken; she's on the wrong side of thirty, if she's a day.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i. (1738)

Ladies, stock and tend your hive,

Trifle not at thirty-five,

For, how'er we boast and strive,

Life declines from thirty-five.

He that ever hopes to thrive

Must begin by thirty-five

SAMUEL JOHNSON, To Hester Thrale on Her Thirty-fifth Birthday. (1776)

At the age of forty, . . . her fire may be covered with ashes, but it is not extinguished

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Lady . . . 13 Jan. 1716

If truth in spite of manners must be told,
Why really fifty-five is something old

THOMAS PARSELL, To an Old Beauty. (1722)

There are three classes into which all the women past seventy that ever I knew were to be divided (1) that dear old soul; (2) that old woman, (3) that old witch.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 7 July, 1831

IV—Age: Its Compensations

<sup>5</sup> How beautiful to grey hairs is judgment.
(Quam speciosa veteranis sapientia.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxv, 4. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

The age of discretion.

HARRIET MARTINEAU, Demerara, i, 4. (1832)

<sup>6</sup> You must live long in order to see much. (Es menester vivir mucho para ver mucho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 32, 52. (1615)

Those that live longest will see most.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 139. (1940) Repeated on p. 229.

<sup>7</sup> For out of olde felde, as men seith,
Cometh al this newe corn fro yeer to yeer.

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 22. (c. 1382)

The older the crab-tree the more crabs it bears, says the proverb.

RICHARD WHATLEY, Annotations on Bacon's Essays, p. 42. (1856)

<sup>8</sup> Old age lacks the heavy banquet, the loaded table, and the oft-filled cup; therefore it also lacks drunkenness, indigestion, and loss of sleep. (Caret epulis exstructisque mensis et frequentibus poculis. Caret ergo etiam vinulentia et cruditate et insomniis.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 13, sec. 44. (c. 44 B.C.)

I am profoundly grateful to old age, which has increased my eagerness for conversation and taken away that for food and drink. (Habeoque senectuti magnam gratiam, quae mihi sermonis aviditatem auxit, potionis et cibi sustulit.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 14, sec. 46.

Light heart, light foot, light food, and slumber light.

These lights shall light us to old age's gate.

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, When In the Woods I Wander All Alone. (1813)

<sup>9</sup> [Age] has weathered the perilous capes and shoals in the sea whereon we sail. . . . At every stage we lose a foe.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age (1870)

<sup>10</sup> Not everything connected with old age is bad. (οὐχ ἅπαντα τῷ γῆρα κατὰ πρόσωπον.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 528. (c. 440 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 73C.

Age is a crown of glory when it is adorned with righteousness.

ROBERT GREENE, The Mirrour of Modestie (1584)

<sup>11</sup> Bion that Philosopher saith, that Age is the last port of rest, the end of all miserie, the haven of lyfe, the fullyllyng of all pylgrim-ages, an honorable thing, and desired of al.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Frutes, fo. 69. (1578)

<sup>12</sup> A man bowed with age, and wise with untold wisdom. (ὁς δὴ γῆρας αὐτὸς ἔην καὶ μύρια ἤνῃ.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ii, l. 16. (c. 850 B.C.)

'Tis fitting that even the aged should learn wisdom. (καλὸν δὲ καὶ γέροντα μαθήσασθαι σοφά.)

ARISTOTELIS, Fragments, No. 224. Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Florilegium, iii, 29, 24

Old age takes from the man of intellect no qualities save those which are useless to wisdom. (La vieillesse n'ôte à l'homme d'esprit que des qualités inutiles à la sagesse.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 87. (1810)

The essence of age is intellect.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age (1870)

The older the wiser.

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 267. (1639) RAY, 126. (1670) On p. 84, Clarke varies it to

"The older the worse, like my old shoes."

Contrary to the proverb of older and wiser, the more ancient they grow, the more fools they are

WHITE-KENNETT, tr., Erasmus' Praise of Folly (1683) The French say, "En vieillissant on devient plus fou et plus sage" (In growing old one becomes more foolish and more wise). NO FOOL LIKE AN OLD FOOL, see under FOOL.

The man of wisdom is the man of years.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. v, l. 773. (1742)

1 With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding. (In antiquis est sapientia, et in multo tempore prudentia.)

Old Testament: Job, xii, 12. (c. 350 B.C.)

Multitude of years should teach wisdom. (An-norum multitudo doceret sapientiam.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxii, 7.

We grow wiser as we grow old. (Aetate sapimus rectius.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 832. (160 B.C.)

As we grow older we grow more knowing (Aetate prudentiores reddimur.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 57. (1523)

Even if there be no wisdom, is there no old age?

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 38. (c. 450)

As sooth is sayd, elde hath greet advantage;

In elde is bothe wisdom and usage;

Men may the olde at-tenne [out-run], and noght at-rede [surpass in council].

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale. l. 1589. (c. 1386) An adaptation from the Proverbs of Alfred (c. 1250). "One may out-ride the old man better than out-wit."

The book seith, that "in old men is the sapience and in long tyme the prudence."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 21.

As you are old and reverend, you should be wise.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 261. (1605)

2

The old is better. (ὁ παλαιὸς χρηστός ἐστίν.)

New Testament: Luke, v, 39. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Vetus melius est."

As olde wood is best to burne; old horse to ride; old bookes to reade; and old wine to drinke: so are old friends alwayes most trusty to use.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 19. (1589)

Olde wood for fewell; an olde horse for easy riding: wine of a yere olde; olde friendes, and olde bookes.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits, etc., 4. (1594)

Alonso of Aragon was wont to say in commendation of age, that age appears to be best in four things,—old wood best to burn, old wine to drink, old friends to trust, and old authors to read.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 97. (1600)

Quoted also by MELCHIOR, Floresta Española, ii, 1, 20. (1700). and by SCOTT, The Antiquary, ch. 6. (1816)

Is not old wine wholesomest, old pippins tooth-somest, old wood burn brightest, old linen wash whitest? Old soldiers, sweetheart, are surest, and old lovers are soundest.

THOMAS DEKKER, Westward Ho! Act ii, sc. 2. (1603)

Old wine and an old friend are good provisions.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 142. (1640)

Pesce, oglio & amico vecchio. Old fish, old oil and an old friend are the best.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 41. (1678) The Spanish form is, "Aceite, y vino, y amigo antiguo" (Oil, wine and friends improve with age).

The French say, "Vieilles amours et vieux tisons s'allument en toutes saisons" (Old loves and old brands kindle at all seasons).

I love everything that's old: old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act i, sc. 1. (1773)

I always give a preference to old wine, old fiddles, old friends, and, in short, anything old.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 1.

(1815) There are many variants, such as, "Old ovens are soonest hot," and "Old shoes are easiest."

3

Old age has some things at least that are not to be despised: experience comes with riper years. (Seris venit usus ab annis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 29. (A.D. 7)

The crown of the aged is their much experience. (Corona senum multa peritia.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xxv, 6. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Age is full of prouision, of sapience, of experience, and of studye. (Eta come è piena di prouisione, di sapientia, di esperienza, e di studio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 69. (1578)

4

Let us cherish and love old age, for it is full of pleasure. . . . The best morsel is reserved to the last. (Conplectamur illam et amemus; plena est voluptatis. . . . Quod in se iucundissimum omnis voluptas habet, in finem sui differt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 64)

The daintiest last, to make the end more sweet

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 68. (1595)

The setting sun, and music at the close,

As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 12.

The last best, like to gude wives' daughters.

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs (1670)

Grow old along with me!

The best is yet to be,

The last of life, for which the first was made

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Esra. (1864)

Like that rare draught at Cana's marriage feast
Life's best wine is the last.

FRANCES POPE, The End of the Road. (c. 1875)

5

Ever as I grow older I learn more and more (γῆράσκω δ' αἰεὶ πολλὰ διδασκόμενος.)

SOLOON, Apothegms. (c. 600 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 31.

It is always in season for the old to learn. (καλὸν δὲ καὶ γέροντα μαθάνειν σφόδρ.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 396N. (c. 475 B.C.)

We are never too old to be instructed.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World

Let. 123. (1762) A more modern jingle runs,

"Never too old to learn, Never too late to turn."

1 Old age and the wear of time teach many things. (γῆρας διδάσκει πολλὰ καὶ χρόνου τριβή.)
 SOPHOCLES, Tyro. Frag. 586. (c. 450 B.C.)

2 Old men view best at a distance, with the eyes of understanding, as well as with those of nature.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1727)
 Observation is an old man's memory.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

3 The touch of flame—the illuminating fire—the loftiest look at last . . .

The calmer sight—the golden setting, clear and broad: . . .

The points of view, the situations whence we scan, . . .

The lights indeed from them—old age's lambent peaks.

WALT WHITMAN, Old Age's Lambent Peaks. (1889)

V—Age: Its Penalties

4 Old age is, so to speak, the harbor of all ills. (τὸ γῆρας ἔλεγετο ὄμιον εἶναι τῶν κακῶν.)

ANTIPHANES, Fragment. (c. 360 B.C.) BION, Maxim. (c. 300 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, iv. 48.

Old age is an illness in itself. (Ipsa senectus morbus est.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 575. (161 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi. 37

Old age is an incurable disease. (Senectus insana-bilis morbus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, sec. 28 (a. d. 64)

You have heard the old proverb, "age breeds aches."

SIR JOHN BARINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax, ii. (1596)

Old age itself is a disease.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Sed Seculi Morbus. (1640)

Old age is sickness enough of itself.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 33. (1672)

Old men are only walking hospitals.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Art of Poetry. (1680)

Old age seems the only disease; all others run into this one.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)

Old age is a malady of which one dies. (Das Alter ist ein Krankheit daran man sterben muss.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 302. (1856) A German proverb

8 When men wish for old age for themselves, what else do they wish for but lengthened infirmity?

ST. AUGUSTINE, Of the Catechizing of the Unlearned. (c. 400)

9 Remember Age, and thou canst not be proud. For Age pulls down the Pride of every man.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Affectionate Shepherd. St. 31. (1594)

7 Just as old age is creeping on apace, . . .

They [our children] kindly leave us, though not quite alone,

But in good company—the gout or stone.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 59. (1818)

Fear old age, for it does not come alone. (Metue senectam, non enim sola advenit.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 222.

(1869) From the Greek, φοβού τὸ γῆρας οὐ γὰρ ἔρχεται μόνον.

Old age never comes without a long cortège of griefs and infirmities. (La vieillesse ne vient pas sans un long cortège de douleurs et d'infirmités.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, Le Procureur de Judée. (1892)

Ol' age niver comes alone.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Old Age. (1901) Dunne goes on to say that a lot of poor relations, such as rheumatism and gout, always come with it

8 Age and wedlock tame man and beast.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

Marriage and want of sleep tames both man and beast.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 231. (1616)

Age and wedlock bring a man to his nightcap.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 279. (1639)

On p. 328, Clarke has, "Wedding and ill wintering tame both man and beast." Also

RAY, 47. (1670) FULLER, No. 778. (1732)

Age and wedlock we all desire and repent of.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 780. (1732)

9 I feel age like an icicle down my back.

DYSON CARTER, Night of Flame, p. 154. (1943)

10 He who lives a long life, must needs go through many evils. (El que larga vida vive mucho mal ha de pasar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32. (1615)

Our trials grow with our years. (Mit den Jahren steigern sich die Prüfungen.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

To an old man, every day is a new evil. (Hombre viejo, cada día un malo nuevo.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, l. 285 (1856)

11 Old age makes me sour. (Amariorem enim me senectus facit.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiv, epis. 21. (44 B.C.)

"Why should I wear a mask before men's eyes?" Is not old age itself a mask ugly enough? ("Quid est autem, cur ego personatus ambulem?" Parumne foeda persona est ipsius senectutis?)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xv, epis. 1. (44 B.C.)

12 When folks grow old they are not set by.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 280. (1639)

An old man is a bed full of bones.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 648. (1732)

Nature abhors the old.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series, Circles. (1841)

- 1 But age is froward, uneasy, scrutinous,
Hard to be pleased, and parsimonious.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Old Age. Pt. iii, l. 235.
(1642)
- 2 Age, death's twilight.
JOHN DONNE, Satires. Sat. iii. (c. 1631)
- 3 Lo, Poverty, to fill the band,
That numbs the soul with icy hand,
And slow-consuming Age.
THOMAS GRAY, On a Distant Prospect of Eton College. St. 9. (1742)
- The slow dull sinking into withered age.
EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. iv. (1879)
- 4 These olde folk have alwey colde.
GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 411. (c. 1365)
- I am bouth oulde and coulde.
UNKNOWN, Chester Plays, i. 98. (1327)
- He is old and cold and ill to lie by.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 160. (1721)
"Spoken by a young maid, when jeer'd with an old man." A somewhat similar one from the Berkeley MSS, iii. 30, is, "A head that's white To maids brings no delight."
- Not so old, nor yet so cold—you know the rest
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 5 Age will steal on thee and ash devour thy bloom. (κατ' οὐν λήσεις γηράσα καὶ σὺν το ὥριον τέφρῃ κάψει.)
HERODES, Mimes. No. i, l. 37. (c. A. D. 100) As the ash on a torch creeps over the ember.
The flour is goon, ther is na-more to telle,
The bren, as I best can, now moste I selle
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 477 (c. 1388)
Years steal
Fire from the mind as vigour from the limb
And life's enchanted cup but sparkles near the brim.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 8. (1820)
- 6 Evil old age presseth hard upon thee. (ἀλάσσε γήρας τείρει θυμολιον.)
HOMER, Iliad Bk. iv. l. 315. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated several times, as in xxiii. 623. with unimportant variations
Heavy old age has come upon him (χαλεπὸν δ' ἐπὶ γήρας ἰκάσκει.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 196. (c. 850 B. C.)
Old age, thou enemy of mortal frames. (ὦ γήρας, ἐχθρὸν σωμάτων ἀθροσπίνων.)
MENANDER. Frag. 552K. (c. 300 B. C.)
O burdensome old age! (ὦ γήρας βαρὺ.)
MENANDER. Frag. 555K. (c. 300 B. C.)
Old age is a bad thing, a bad piece of freight (Aetas mala est; mers mala ergost.)
PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 758. (c. 200 B. C.)
A variation of the Latin proverb, "Grave senectus est hominibus pondus" (Old age is a heavy burden to men).
Rotten old age. (Cariosa senectus.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. i, No. xii, l. 29. (c. 13 B. C.)

- With what incessant and excessive woes old age abounds! (Sed quam continuis et quantis longa senectus | plena malis!)
- JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 190. (c. A. D. 120)
Old age more to be feared than death. (Morte magis metuenda senectus.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 45.
What a thing is age! Death without death's quiet.
W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Epicurus, Leontion, and Ternissa. (1824)
- 7 Their ears are stopped with years. (τὰ ὦτα ὑπὸ τῶν ἐτῶν.)
LUCIAN, Cataplus. Sec. 5. (c. A. D. 170)
Old churches have dim windows. (Alte Kirchen haben dunkle Glaeser.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 302.
A German proverb
The failing eye and ear, the slower limbs,
Whose briefer name is Age.
SIR LEWIS MORRIS, Hades. Bk. i, l. 50. (1877)
- 8 Age brings you grief. (Te aetas male habet.)
PACUVIUS, Periboea. Frag. 302. (c. 160 B. C.)
Life protracted is protracted woe
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 258. (1749)
- 9 He that is old lieth down in misery every day.
The eyes are small, the ears are deaf.
The bones are painful throughout the body;
good turneth into evil All taste departeth.
These things doeth old age for mankind being evil in all things.
PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. Par. 1. (c. 3550 B. C.)
Prise Papyrus. Gunn, tr
- 10 Never did old monkey make a pretty lip.
(Onques vieil cinge ne fait belle moue.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, Prologue (1545)
- 11 I have lived long enough, my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 3, 24. (1606)
That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet 73 (1609)
My days are in the yellow leaf.
LORD BYRON, On This Day I Complete My Thirty-sixth Year (1824)
- I am in the Sheer and Yeller leaf.
ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWN), The Crisis. (1860)
- I have fallen into the sere and yellow.
NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 281. (1940)
- 12 Old age brings this one vice to mankind, that we all think too much of money. (Solum unum hoc vitium adfert senectus hominibus: adtentiores sumus ad rem omnes, quam sat est.)
TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 833. (160 B. C.)
It's a fault common to us all that in old age we think too much of money. (Vitium commune omniunſt, | quod nimium ad rem in ſenecta attenti ſumus.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 953.

O Greed! that younger grows as I wax old!

BHARTRIHARI, Epigrams. No. 45. (c. A. D. 625)

My fader, as ye knowen wel, pardee,

Is old, and elde is ful of coveityſe.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv.
l. 1368. (c. 1380)

In olde age wee covetouſly carke for coine.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 41. (1576)

Covetouſneſs is a vice appropriated as it may ſeem to old men, according to this old ſaying:
Cum omnia vitia ſeneſcunt, ſola avaritia juvenefcit: "When all vices wax old, covetous-neſs alone waxeth young."

THOMAS BECON, A New Catechiſm, p. 373.
(1560)

A man can no more ſeparate age and covetous-neſs than a' can part young limbs and lechery.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 256. (1598)

That diſeaſe

Of which all old men ſicken—avarice.

MIDDLETON, The Roaring Girl. Act i, ſc. 1.
(1611)

When all ſins elſe be old is avarice young.

RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Peché. (1611)

When all ſins grow old, covetouſneſs is young.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 19

(1640) The French ſay, "Quand tous péchés ſont vieux, l'avarice eſt encore jeune"

The older the more covetouſ

GEORGE FULLER, Church-Hiſtory of Britain
Bk. iv, ſec 3. (1655)

Generally Money lies neareſt them that are near-eſt their Graves

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No.
216 (1718)

A good old-gentlemanly vice, . . . avarice

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, ſt 216. (1818)

Avarice is the vice of declining years.

GEORGE BANCRFT, Hiſtory of the United States. Ch. 17. (1834)

Avarice is a paſſion compatible with old age

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Ralph the Heir. Ch. 1
(1870)

1

Old veſſels muſt leak.

TORRIANO, Piazza Univerſale, p. 163. (1666)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3729. (1732)

2

Age ſteals away all things, even the mind
(Omnia fert ætas, animum quoque.)

VERGIL, Ecloques. Ecl. ix, l. 51 (37 B.C.) Another Latin aphoriſm runs, "Omnia fert ætas ſecum, auferit omnia ſecum" (Age brings all things with it and takes all things away with it).

White hair blunteth wit. (τὰ λευκὰ τῶν τριχῶν ἀπαμβλύνει τὸν νοῦν.)

HERODES, Mimes. No. i, l. 67. (c. A. D. 100)

When the age is in, the wit is out.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii,
5, 37. (1598) A play upon the proverb,
"When the wine is in, the wit is out." See under WINE.

Mental, like facial, defects increaſe with age.
(Les défauts de l'eſprit augmentent en vieilliffant, comme ceux du viſage.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 112. (1665)

3 Disease and bitter eld ſucceed. (Subeunt morbi triſtiſque ſenectus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 67. (29 B.C.)

There dwelleth pale diſeaſe and bitter eld. (Pal-lentesque habitant Morbi triſtiſque Senectus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 275. (19 B.C.)

4

How fooliſh was my hope and vain

That age would conquer ſin.

CHARLES WESLEY, In Advancing Age. (1772)

VI—Age and Love

5

Lilies white look beſt 'mid roſes. (τὰ λευκὰ | ρόδοις κρίνα πλακέντα.)

ANACREON, Odes: To a Lady With an Old
Mun's Love-Gift. Ode li. l. 7. (c. 550 B.C.)

6

Old age has diſgraces of its own: do not add to them the ſhame of vice. (πολλὰ ἔχοντι τῷ γῆρας τὰ αἰσχρὰ μὴ προſτίθει τὴν ἀπὸ τῆς κακίας αισχύνην.)

MARCUS CATO, Apothegm. (c. 175 B.C.) See
PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix.

Diſgraceful is love in an old man. (Turpe ſenilis amor)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 4. (c. 13 B.C.)

How degrading is folly in old age!

SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninim
(Choice of Pearl). No. 51. (c. 1050)

7

Aphrodite with old men is wroth. (ἡ Ἀφροδίτη τοῖς γέρονσιν ἐχθεται.)

EURIPIDES, Aeolus. Frag. 23. Nauck. (c. 420
B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 766A

The Germans ſay, "Liebschaften taugen ſur das Alter nicht" (Love doesn't do for age)

Old age bids Venus take her leave for ever
(ἀλλ' ἡ τὸ γῆρας τὴν Κίπριν χαιρεῖν ἐά.)

EURIPIDES, Aeolus. Fr. 23. Nauck. (c. 420 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 285B.

8

Old Boys have their Playthings as well as young Ones: the Difference is only in the Price.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752

9

When age is jocund, it makes ſport for death.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 619
(1640)

Old age is a tyrant who forbids, upon pain of death, all the pleaſures of youth. (La vieillesse eſt un tyran qui défend, ſur peine de la vie, tous les plaiſirs de la jeuneſſe.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 461. (1665)

Old men, when they marry young women, make much of death.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 4. (1748)

An old man, like a ſpider, can never make love without beating his own death watch.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 259: (1820)

<sup>1</sup> Sluggying in bed with hir is woorse than watchyng.

I promise you an olde sacke axeth much patchyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

<sup>2</sup> Tamed by declining years. (Vergentibus annis in senium.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 129. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>3</sup> Olde men are not vnylike vnto olde Trees whose barks seemeth to be sound, when their bodies are rotten.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 231. (1580)

<sup>4</sup> There could not be anything more wretched than an old man in love, except another old man in love. (ἔρεος γέρον ἐρώων.)

MENANDER, The Coppersmiths. Frag. 509K. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> To love is natural in a young man, a shame in an old one. (Amare iuveni fructus est, crimen seni.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 29. (c. 43 B. C.)

Youth is the proper time for love, And age is virtue's season.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Corinna. (1712)

Who early loves, though young, is wise— Who old, though grey, a fool.

COWPER, Upon a Venerable Rival. (1798)

<sup>6</sup> Heaven forbid! I have fled from them as from a harsh and cruel master. (Di meliora! ego vero istinc sicut a domino agresti ac furioso profugi.)

SOPHOCLES, when asked if he indulged in the delights of love in his old age. (c. 450 B. C.) See CICERO, De Senectute, xiv, 47. "O glorious boon of age," Cicero adds, "if it does indeed free us from youth's most vicious fault!"

Certainly old age has a great sense of calm and freedom; when the passions relax their hold, then, as Sophocles says, you have escaped from the control not of one master, but of many.

PLATO, Republic. Bk. i, sec. 329. (c. 375 B. C.)

The seas are quiet when the winds give o'er; So calm are we when passions are no more.

EDMUND WALLER, Old Age. (1645)

<sup>7</sup> Cold are the passions when old. (Frigidus in Venerem senior.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 97. (29 B. C.) Another Latin proverb is "Arescit gramen veniente autumnus" (The grass withers as autumn comes on).

At your age,

The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble. And waits upon the judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 68. (1600)

All the passions are extinguished with old age. (Toutes les passions s'éteignent avec l'âge.)

VOLTAIRE, Stances ou Quatrains. In place of those of Pibrac. (c. 1750)

Not till the fire is dying in the grate, Look we for any kinship with the stars.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 4. (1862)

<sup>8</sup> When an ancient gentleman marries, it is his best excuse that he wants a nurse.

WALPOLE, Letter to Mary Berry, 30 Sept., 1789.

VII—Age and Youth

<sup>9</sup> Age is more just than youth. (γῆρας γὰρ ἤβης δαίτιν ἐδικαιώτερον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 228, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) STOBÆUS, Florilegium, iv, 50, 7.

In the old there is no taste, in the young no insight.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 89b. (c. 450)

Youth is a crown of roses; old age a crown of willows.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 152a.

An old man dotes on his old wife and a boy on a girl. (Cascus cascām et pupus pupam deamēt.)

ERASMUS, Moriæ Encomium. Sec. 18. (1511)

Age is a sickness, and Youth is an ambush

JOHN DONNE, Devotions. Sec. 7. (1624)

Youth changes its tastes by the ardor of its blood, age preserves its tastes by habit. (La jeunesse change ses goûts par l'ardeur du sang et la vieillesse conserve les siens par l'accoutumance.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 109. (1665)

Young men soon give, and soon forget, affronts; Old age is slow in both.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 5. (1712)

Children cry for Nuts and Apples, and old Men for Gold and Silver.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1096. (1732)

Youth is pert and positive, Age modest and doubting: So Ears of Corn when young and light, stand bold upright, but hang their heads when weighty, full, and ripe.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751

Young men have more virtue than old men. they have more generous sentiments.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 21 July, 1763

Youth supplies us with colors, age with canvas H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 26 Jan., 1852.

In youth, we clothe ourselves with rainbows, and go as brave as the zodiac. In age, we put out another sort of perspiration,—gout, fever, rheumatism, caprice, doubt, fretting and avarice.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

The young have aspirations that never come to pass, the old have reminiscences of what never happened.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald at the Carlton (1904)

Old men in impotence can beget New wars to kill the lusty young.

ARTHUR DAVIDSON FICKE, Youth and Age. (1926)

Youth is full of vitamins. Age is full of germs GELETT BURGESS, Look Eleven Years Younger. p. 23. (1937)

When the waitress puts the dinner on the table, the old men look at the dinner. The young men look at the waitress.

BURGESS, Look Eleven Years Younger, p. 174.

That's the old and the young of it.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act ii. (1923)

1 Men are like the herbs of the field—while some are sprouting, others are withering.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 54b. (c. 450)

Blessed is the old age which redeems our youth.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 53b.

2 A Man that is Young in Yeares, may be Old in Houtes, if he have lost no Time.

BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age. (1612)

A Man may be young in Years, and yet old in Hours.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 296. (1732)

OLD HEADS ON YOUNG SHOULDERS, see under HEAD.

3 If thou hast gathered nothing in thy youth, how canst thou have anything in thine age? (ἐν νεότητι οὐ συναγιοχας, και πως ἂν εὔποις ἐν τῷ γῆρα σου;)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxv, 3. (c. 190 B.C.) Quoted Abboth N, ch. 24, p. 78. The Vulgate is, "Quae in iuventute tua non congregasti, quomodo in senectute tua invenies?" The Latin proverb is, "Senem iuventus pigra mendicium creat" (A slothful youth produces an old age of beggary).

While strength and years permit, endure labor; soon bent old age will come with silent foot. (Dum vires annique sinunt, tolerate labores: iam veniet tacito curva senecta pede.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk ii, l. 669. (c. 1 B.C.)

Young man idel, and ald man dill [sorrowful]

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 27238. (c. 1295)

Young men should make their preparations, the old should enjoy them, wise men say. (Le jeune doit faire ses apprests; le viel, en jouir, disent les sages.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1580)

An idle youth, a needy age. (Jeunesse oiseuse, vieillesse disetteuse.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Fr.-Eng. Dictionary: Jeunesse. (1611) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

(1640) Similarly, "Jeunesse parasseuse, vieillesse pouilleuse" (A lazy youth, a lousy age).

If youth knew what age would crave, it would both get and save.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 160. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6085. (1732)

Young, we save for old age; old, we save for death. (Jeune, on conserve pour la vieillesse; vieux, on épargne pour la mort.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Biens de Fortune. (1687)

A young Man negligent, an old Man necessitous.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 489. (1732)

A young Prodigal, an old Beggar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 490.

How happy he who crowns in shades like these, A youth of labour with an age of ease.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 99. (1770)

A paraphrase of the proverb, "Diligent youth makes easy age."

He who is idle in his youth will work in his old age. (Qui este oisif en sa jeunesse, travaillera en sa vieillesse.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 184. (1814)

The Germans say, "Junge Faulenzer (or Spieler), alter Bettler" (A young idler, or gambler, an old beggar); or "Abends wird der Faule fleissig" (In the evening the idler begins to be busy).

An idle youth, a laborious age. (A moncedad ociosa, vejez trabajosa.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 262. (1856)

A young man idle, an old man needy.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 485. (1940)

4 Become old early if you wish to stay old long.

(Mature fieri senem, si diu velis senex esse.)

CATO THE CENSOR, De Re Rustica. (c. 170 B.C.)

As quoted by CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 10. sec. 32. Cicero says, "Nec enim umquam sum assensus veteri illi laudatoque proverbio, quod monet mature fieri senem, si diu velis senex esse. Ego vero me minus diu senem esse malle quam esse senem ante quam essem" (I have never assented to that ancient and much-quoted proverb, which warns "Become old early if you would stay old long." For my part, I would rather not be old so long than to be old before my time). Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 59, in the form, "Mature fias senex, si diu velis esse senex," and with the explanation that the proverb means that anyone wishing to enjoy a long and healthy age must grow old young by putting away the dissipations of youth, whether of lust, or of drinking or of a turbulent life. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 10, with the rendering, "Become an olde manne betyme yf thou wyll be an olde man longe." and the comment, "This prouerbe in englyshe is thus: Begynne betyme for to be sage, yf thou wyll leade longe olde age." Quoted by POYTHORE VERGIL, Adagia, p. 67 and by MONTAIGNE, Essays, ii, 10.

He that will be an old man long, must bee an old man soone.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. C1. (1583)

He that would be well old, must be old betimes

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 373

(1640) WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 39. (1672)

A young man old maketh an old man young

ROBERT CODRINGTON, Proverbs. (c. 1660)

A Man at Sixteen will prove a Child at Sixty

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 273. (1732)

They who would be young when they are old must be old when they are young.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 34. (1670)

Ray also gives the forms, "Old young and old long," and "Old be or young die."

There is an old proverb, "old yong, yong old."

RICHARD CROMWELL, Letter. (1691) See The English Historical Review, xiii, 109.

It was prettily said, "He that would be long an old man must begin early to be one."

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 153. (1711)

Be old betimes, that thou may'st long be so.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 854. (1732)

An old young man will be a young old man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

1 When you, grown old, blame what folk do or say,

Think what you did in your own youthful day.

(Multorum cum facta senex et dicta reprehendis, fac tibi succurrant iuvenis quae feceris ipse.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 16. (c. 175 B.C.)

2 And though your grene youthe floure as yit, In crepeth age alwey, as stille as stoon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale, l. 64. (c. 1388)

Gras-tyme is doon, my fodder is now forage

CHAUCER, The Reeve's Prologue, l. 14

3 Rashness is a quality of the budding-time of youth, prudence of the harvest-time of old age. (Temeritas est florentis aetatis, prudentia senescentis.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. vi, sec. 20 (44 B.C.)

From thoughtless youth to ruminating age.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 24. (1782)

Old the proverb, old, but true;—

Age should think, and Youth should do

D'ARCY THOMPSON, Sales Attici (1864)

Youth is the time for the adventures of the body, but age for the triumphs of the mind

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, On Reading Shakespeare, p. 36 (1938)

4 An intemperate youth brings to old age a worn-out body. (Intemperans adulescentia effetum corpus tradit senectuti.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. ix, sec. 29. (44 B.C.)

The Latin proverb, cited by BLAND, Proverbs, i. 52, is, "Quae peccamus iuvenes, ea luimus senes" (Our youthful sins plague our old age).

Misgovernit youth makis gowsty [dreary] age

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Works, iii, 309. (c. 1520)

Youth riotously led, breedeth a loathsome old age.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health: Dedication. (1588)

Rackless youth makes a goustie age.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86 (c. 1505)

Young men's knocks old men feel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 38. (1670)

Most men employ the first part of their lives making the other part miserable. (La plupart des hommes emploient la première partie de leur vie à rendre l'autre misérable.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. (1687)

Rackless youth makes rueful age.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 284. (1721)

Our youth only lays up sighs for age.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 194. (1725)

Young men's frolics old men feel. My devilish gout!

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

The excesses of our youth are drafts upon our old age, payable with interest about thirty years after date.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 76. (1820)

5 The disappointment of Manhood succeeds to the delusion of Youth; let us hope that the heritage of Old Age is not despair.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. viii, ch. 4. (1824)

Youth is a blunder; Manhood a struggle; Old Age a regret.

DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1844)

What Youth deemed crystal, Age finds out was dew

Morn set a-sparkle, but which noon quick dried

ROBERT BROWNING, Jochanan Hakkadosh, l. 302. (1883)

ILLUSIONS OF YOUTH, see under YOUTH.

6 Better is a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king. (Melior est puer pauper et sapiens, rege sene et stulto.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 13. (c. 250 B.C.)

The old age of an eagle is better than the youth of a sparrow. (ἀετός γῆρας, ἀσπίδου νεότης.)

ZENOBIOUS, Adagia, ii, 38. (c. A.D. 130)

The old age of a lion is better than the youth of a fawn. (γῆρας λέοντος κρείσσον ἀρμυῖν νεότης.)

STORAEUS, Florilegium, ii, v, 14. (c. A.D. 400)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 99, with the Latin, "Senecta leonis, praestantior hinnulorum [ass] iuventa." The locus classicus of all proverbs pointing out that strength and power, even when old, are better than weakness, even when young.

The frog is wiser than the tadpole. (Rana gyrina sapientior)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 34. (1523)

An old wise man's shadow is better than a young buzzard's sword.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

It is better to be a young June-bug than an old bird of paradise.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar (1893)

7 If youth but knew, if old age but could. (Si jeunesse sçavoit, si vieillesse pouvoit.)

HENRI ESTIENNE, Les Prémices. Epigram 191 (1594) GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. Sometimes rendered, "If youth but knew, could age but do."

If youth knew what to do, and age could do what it knows, no man would ever be poorer.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Jeunesse. (1611)

f the young man would, and the old man could, here would be nothing undone. (Se il giovane apesse, se il vecchio potesse, e' non c' è cosa che non si facesse.)

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Would. (1736)
An Italian proverb.

Youth, through not knowing, age, through not being able, lose everything. (El mozo, per no saber, El viejo, por no poder Dejan las cosas perder.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 262.
(1856) A Spanish proverb.

1
If we could be twice young and twice old we could correct all our mistakes in that second life. (εἰ δ' ἦμεν νέοι | δις καὶ γέροντες, εἰ τις ἐξημέραται, | διπλοῦ βίου τεχόντες ἔξωθοίμεθ' ἄν.)

EURIPIDES, The Suppliants, l. 1084 (c. 421 B.C.)

2
Youth and age will never agree.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112.
(c. 1595) HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19.
(1659) MERITON, A York-shire Dialogue, p. 85. (1697)

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together.

Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;

Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short,

Youth is nimble, age is lame;

Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.

Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee.

SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 157 (c. 1599)

3
A man is like an apple, that is not ripe, but sowre, but being ripe, becommeth sweete: so a man beyng young, is furious and sowre, and wyl not bende: but, being olde, is sweet, & humble toward al

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 69. (1578)

4
A young trooper should have an old horse.

THOMAS FETTER, Gnomologia, No. 493. (1732)

5
Young men think old men fools, but old men know the young men are.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis, sig. 02.
(1577) CHAPMAN, All Fools, vi. l. (1605)

Wise was the saying of Doctor Medcalf, "You young men do think us old men to be fools; but we old men do know that you young men are fools."

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 307. (1605)
The "Doctor Medcalf" in question is conjectural; perhaps Dr. Robert Metcalfe, fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

The Dutch say, "Young fools fancy that old fools rave, but old fools have forgotten more than young fools know."

Such a quarrel hath ther alwaies bin betwene the traue and the cradle, that he yat is young thinketh the olde man fond, and the olde knoweth the young man to be a foole.

JOHN LYLE, Euphues (Arber), p. 241. (1580)

Children will say that old folke dote, and are fooles; but old ones know that children are so.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 88. (1642)

Ay, ay, Jack, you young men think us fools; but we old men know you are.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler, No. 132. (1710)

You think us old fellows are fools; but we old fellows know young fellows are fools.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i. (1738)

Young folks think old folks to be fools, but old folks know young folks to be fools.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast, Act v, sc. 2. (1787)

Young folks always think old folks fools, they say . . . Old folks know young ones to be so.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh, Ch. 30. (1850)

6
We should be inclined to pay more attention to the wisdom of the old, if they showed greater indulgence to the follies of the young.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, No. 306

7
From the old ox the young one learns to plough. (A bovi maiori discit arare minor.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 1 (1869) "The young cock crows as he hears the old one." "As the old birds sing, the young ones twitter."

8
Old men, when they scorn young, make much of death.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, No. 599. (1640)

9
Ye be yong enough to mende, I agree it, But I am (quoth she) too old to see it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

YOU CAN'T TEACH AN OLD DOG, see under DOG

10
The hearts of the young are unstable, but an old man, in whatsoever he undertaketh looketh both before and after. (αἰεὶ δ' ἀπλοτέρων ἀνδρῶν φρένες περιθεοῦται | οἷς δ' ὁ γέρον μετῆσιν, ἅμα πρόσω καὶ ὀπίσω | λεισσεύ.)

HOMER, Iliad Bk. iii, l. 108 (c. 850 B.C.)

11
I [Nestor] will abide among the charioteers and urge them on by counsel, for that is the office of age; the young must fight in the ranks. (τό γὰρ γέρας ἐστὶ γερόντων, | αἰχμας δ' αἰχμασσοῖσι νεώτεροι.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. iv, l. 322. (c. 850 B.C.)

The deeds of the young, the counsels of the middle-aged, and the prayers of the old. (ἔργα νέων, βούλαι δὲ μέσων, εὐχαι δὲ γερόντων.)

HESIOD, Fragments, Frag. 19. (c. 800 B.C.)
Loeb Classical Lib., Hesiod, p. 278. Quoted by HYPERIDES, Speech Against Autocles, (c. 350 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 2, who gives the Latin, "Facta juvenum, consilia mediocrium, vota senum."

Youth longs and manhood strives, but age remembers.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Iron Gate. (1879) An echo, perhaps, of the French proverb, "La jeunesse vit d'espérance, la vieillesse de souvenir" (Youth lives on hope, old age on remembrance).

1 And now we are aged and gray, Maggie,
The trials of life nearly done,
Let us sing of the days that are gone, Maggie,
When you and I were young.
GEORGE W. JOHNSON, When You and I were Young. (1866)

2 Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions. (Prophetabunt filii vestri, et filiae vestrae: senes vestri somnia somniabunt, et iuvenes vestri visiones vide-bunt.)

Old Testament: Joel, ii, 28. (c. 350 B.C.)

Also New Testament: John, ii, 17.

Thy wife hath dream'd, thy mother hath had visions.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 3, 63.
(1601)

The young men's vision, and the old men's dream!

JOHN DRYDEN, Abalom and Achitophel. Pt
i, l. 238. (1681)

3 I hope our young men will not grow into such dodgers as these old men are.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Letters. No. 250 (1890)

4 Young men differ in various ways, but old men all look alike. (Plurima sunt iuvenum discrimina, . . . una senum facies.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 196. (C. A. D. 120)

5 Age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress,
And as the evening twilight fades away
The sky is filled with stars, invisible by day.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 256. (1874)

6 Judging from the stubble. (ἀπὸ τῆς καλᾶμης.)
LUCIAN, Alexander. Ch. 5. (C. A. D. 170) Lucian is saying that Alexander had been a very handsome boy, "as could be seen from the stubble."

The stubble shows what the harvest was. (ἐκ καλᾶμης θῆλός ἐστιν ὁ ταπεινός σάχυν.)

EUSTATHIUS, Commentary on Homer. (c. 1185)

As the proverb is, That by the morning it maye bee gathered, how all the day will prove after.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 46. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I conceiue a good hope, that in his age he will be wise, for that in his youth I perceiued him wittie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 197. (1597)

A thorn unless at birth it prick,
Will hardly ever pierce to th' quick.

(Si l'espine non picque quand nai,

A pene que picque jamais.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 57. (1580) Quoting an old French proverb of the Dauphiné.

He is arguing that the youth shows the man

Youth, what man's age is like to be, doth show;
We may our ends by our beginnings know.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On Prudence, l. 225. (1650)
What little Hans didn't learn, big Hans doesn't know. (Was Hānschen nicht lernt, wird Hans nicht kennen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 324
(1856) A German proverb.

CHILD IS FATHER TO THE MAN, see under CHILD.
Wher age is past grauity ther youth is past grace.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 151. (1579)
Age alway ought to be a myrrour for youth, for where olde age is impudent, there certeinly youth must needes be shamelesse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His Ephoebus, p. 151.
Is this . . . the part of crabbed age, to delude credulous youth?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 230

To measure the firy flames of youth, by the dead coales of age.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Admetus and Alceste, p. 138. (1576) FLAMING YOUTH, see
YOUTH.

The passions of youth are scarcely worse foes to happiness than the apathy of old age. (Les passions de la jeunesse ne sont guère plus op-posées au salut que la tiédeur des vieilles gens.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 341. (1665)

8 Where the old are shameless, there will also the young be very impudent. (ὅπου ἀναισχυντοὶσι γέροντες, ἀνάγκη καὶ νέους ἐταῦθα εἶναι ἀναιδεστάτους.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. v, sec. 729C. (c. 345 B.C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 272C.

Where the older age sins, the younger learns but ill. (Ubi peccat aetas maior, male discit minor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 703. (c. 43 B.C.)

Where old age is faultie, youth can learn no goodness.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca S-I p. 145. (1633)

Where old age is evil, youth can learn no good.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

9 Youth is meant to obey and old age to rule.
(πειθαρχικὸν γὰρ ἡ νεότης ἡγεμονικὸν δὲ τὸ γῆρας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Old Men in Public Affairs. Sec. 789E. (c. A. D. 95)

Rule youth well, and eild will rule the sell

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (c.

1595) KELLY (1721) modernizes it, "Rule youth well, and age will rule it self," and adds, "Youth is rash and headstrong, but age sober and steadfast."

10 It is vain to ask for youth again when age has come. (Frustra cum ad senectam ventum est, repetas adulescentiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 215. (c. 43 B.C.)

11 Old and tough, young and tender.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1678)

1
Leave frolics to the young; put away thy pastimes when thou art old.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vi, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)
Not so elastic bends the yellow corn
As the young blade before the breeze of morn.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vi, Apologue 5.
The hermit's life must be chosen in youth: age cannot quit its corner.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 104.

At seventeen years, many their fortunes seek.
But at fourscore, it is too late a week.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 3, 73. (1600)

2
Joy befits the young, a serious face the old.
(Laetitia iuvenem, frons decet tristis senem.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 453 (c. A. D. 60)

A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act iv, sc. 7, l. 78. (1600)
Frost is as proper for winter, as flowers for spring. Gravity becomes the ancient.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Time-serving. (1642)

Nothing's more playful than a young Cat, nor more grave than an old One.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 3680. (1732)

3
His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellow'd, but his judgement ripe

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 69 (1594)

OLD HEAD ON YOUNG SHOULDERS, see under HEAD

4
In the days of my youth I remembered my God,
And He hath not forgotten my age.

SOUTHEY, The Old Man's Comforts. (1797)

5
Hateful are the old folk to the young. (Odiosa haec est aetas adulescentulis.)

TERENCE, Heccyra, l. 619. (165 B.C.)

The conversation of the old and young ends generally with contempt or pity on either side

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 13 Nov., 1750

6
The tragedy of old age is not that one is old, but that one is young.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

Young men want to be faithful and are not, old men want to be faithless and cannot.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray

7
It is a common prouerbe younge saynt olde deuyll.

UNKNOWN, Dives et Pauper, fo. 34. (1493)

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Of yung sanctis growis auld feyndis.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Merle & Nychtingal, l. 35. (c. 1530)

An angelic boyhood becomes a satanic old age. (Angelicus iuvenis aensibus satanicus in annis.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia (1531) Erasmus was the first of many to characterize this as "a proverb invented by Satan." Quoted by LYNDE-SAY, Three Estatis, l. 233. (1535)

Of a young Hermit an old Devil. (De ieune Hermite vieil Diable.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 64. (1548)

The old prouerb, "Young saints, old deuils" is . . . the deuil's own inuention.

HUGH LATIMER, Seventh Sermon on the Lord's Prayer. (1552)

Fie upon such as say, young saints, olde deuils. it is no doubt a deuillish and damnable saying

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) Grosart, in his edition of Greene, remarks that this is "a long-lived lie, slander, and sneer combined."

That Prouerb inuented by the Diuell that younge Saints proue old Diuels.

S. PRICE, Ephesus Warning, p. 73 (1616)

Young saints will prove but old deuils . . . But such were never right bred. Such as prove falling stars never were aught but meteors.

SAMUEL WARD, Sermons, p. 81. (1636)

David began to be good betimes, a young Saint, and yet crossed that pestilent Proverb, was no old devil.

THOMAS FULLER, Sermons, iv, 4. (1655)

There's no Sinner like a young Saint.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover, Act i, sc. 2. (1677)

A wild Colt may become a sober Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 463 (1732)

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66, has "A raggit cowte [colt] aft maks a noble aiver [horse]."

Wanton Kitlins may make sober old Cats.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 5415. HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 97, gives the Scottish form, "Wanton kitlins mak douce cats," and on p. 66, "Royet [wild] lads mak sober men."

Vices of youth are varnished over by the saying that there must be a time for "sowing wild oats," and that "wildest colts make the best horses"

WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Letter i. (1829)

They say . . . "young hypocrite, old devil"

Thomas Wright, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 146. (1846) There is a whole series of proverbs built around "Young saint, old devil" Here are a few of them from FULLER'S Gnomologia (1732): "A young prodigal, an old mumper"; "A young whore, an old saint"; "A young servingman, an old beggar"; "Of a young angel an old devil" The last is also common to French and German: "De jeune angelot, vieux diable"; "Jung ein Engel, alt ein Teufel." The German series is unusually long, and the development has been worked out as follows: "Young angel, old devil" (Jung Engel, alt Teufel), 13th century; "Young knights, old beggars" (Junge Ritter, alte Bettler), 16th century; "Young soldiers, old beggars" (Junge Soldaten, alte Bettler), 17th century; "Young whore, old procurer" (Junge Hure, alte Kupplerin). See TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 16, where the German sequence is given.

1
Who that in youth no vertew usythe,
In age all honowre hym refusythe.
UNKNOWN, Prouerbes of Wysdom, p. 9. (c. 1450)

2
What is learned in youth is remembered in old age. (Jung gewohnt, alt getan.)

UNKNOWN. An old and widely known German proverb, probably the model of a whole group: "Rejoiced at in youth, repented in age" (Jung erfreut, alt gereut); "Married in youth, repented in age" (Jung gefreut, alt gereut), or "Wed in youth, bewailed in age" (Jung gefreit, alt geklalt).

VIII—Age: The Age

3
Each age has its pleasures, its wit, its manners. (Chaque âge a ses plaisirs, son esprit, et ses mœurs.)

NICOLAS BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Chant iii, l. 374. (1674)

Every age has its pleasures. (Chaque âge a ses plaisirs.)

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 142. (1941) Referring here to the ages of men and women.

4
Oh, this age! how tasteless and ill-bred it is! (O saeculum insapiens et infacetum!)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xliii, l. 8 (c. 57 B.C.)
What has this unfeeling age of ours left untried? What wickedness has it shunned? (Quid nos dura refugimus aetas? Quid intactum nefasti liquimus?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 35, l. 34 (23 B.C.)
O miserable age!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 11 (1590)
The age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 150 (1600)
We live in an age in which superfluous ideas abound and essential ideas are lacking (Nous vivons dans un siècle où les idées superflues surabondent, et qui n'a pas les idées nécessaires.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 243. (1810)
The age of great men is going; the epoch of the ant-hill, of life in multiplicity, is beginning (Le temps des grandes hommes passe; l'époque de la fourmière, de la vie multiple arrive.)

AMIEL, Journal Intime 6 Sept., 1851
This Age will serve to make a very pretty farce for the next.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains Vol. ii, p. 175 (1900)

6
We live in an iron age. (Nos vero ferrei.)
CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 6. (56 B.C.)
It is not love but booty that this iron age applauds. (Ferrea non venerem sed praedam saecula laudant.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies, Bk. ii, eleg. iii, l. 35. (19 B.C.) And another moralist warns, "We must not look for a golden life in an iron age."

Golden was that first age. (Aurea prima sata est aetas.) Then spring was everlasting, . . . streams of milk and streams of sweet nectar flowed, and yellow honey was distilled from the verdant oak. . . . Then the silver race came in . . . Next after this and third in order came the brazen race, of sterner disposition. . . . The age of hard iron came at last. (De duro est ultima ferro.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 89. (A.D. 7)
A pewter age,--mixed metal, silver-washed;
An age of scum, spooned off the richer past
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 160 (1857)

This is the age of whitewash.

O. HENRY, The Door of Unrest. (1911)
Those are the clichés of the decade. It was Babbits and the machine age in the twenties

EDWIN LANHAM, Banner at Daybreak. (1937)

The "machine age" began about 1920; its end is not in sight.

6
The frigid theories of a generalising age.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby Bk. ix, ch. 7 (1844)

7
The Times are a masquerade of the Eternities; trivial to the dull; tokens of noble and majestic agents to the wise; the receptacle in which the Past leaves its history; the quarry out of which the genius of to-day is building up the Future

R. W. EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Lecture on the Times. (1841)

Every Age, like every human body, has its own distemper. Other times have had war, or famine . . . as their antagonism . . . Our torment is Unbelief, the Uncertainty as to what we ought to do . . . I think men never loved life less. I question if care and doubt ever wrote their names so legibly on the faces of any population

R. W. EMERSON, Lecture on the Times

8
What age was not dull? When was not the majority wicked? or what progress was ever made by society?

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 85 (1860)

The illusion that times that were are better than those that are, has probably pervaded all ages

HORACE GREELEY, The American Conflict. Ch. 1, p. 21 (1866) See also under ANTIQUITY

9
End of the Century. (Fin de Siècle.)

F. DE JOUVENOT and H. MICARD Title of comedy. (1888) A cliché of the eighteen-nineties

10
The centuries are not for us (Les siècles ne sont pas à nous.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Letter, to his brother, Joseph, King of Naples, 2 Sept., 1806
"Neither you nor I know what is to befall us in two, three, or four years," Napoleon wrote, and urged his brother to build an impregnable fortress at Castellamare, near Naples, as an asylum where he could "defy the rigors of Fortune, and await the return of her favor." See THIERS, Consulate and Empire. Bk. xxv

1 I have known this age, and what its moral standards are. (Novi ego hoc saeculum moribus quibus siet.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 284. (c. 200 B.C.)

2 Now is come the last age of the song of Cumae; the great line of the centuries begins anew. Now the Virgin returns. (Magnus ab integro saeculorum nascitur ordo.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. iv, l. 4. (37 B.C.) The Sibyl of Cumae had prophesied a new circuit of the ages after the Age of Iron had passed. The Virgin is Astraea or Justice, last of the immortals to leave the earth.

IX—The Golden Age

3 Amid untroubled peace, the Golden Age springs to a second birth. (Aurea secunda cum pace renascitur aetas.)

TITUS CALPURNIUS SICUTUS, Eclagues. Ecl. i, l. 42 (c. A.D. 60)

Lo, a golden age begins (En aurea nascitur aetas.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 51. (c. A.D. 395)

The golden age is before, not behind us.

R. W. EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures. Resources. (c. 1870) Quoting Saint-Simon.

4 Oh golden age, when learning was sought for farre and neare: when wyt was exercised, and policie practised, and vertue honoured

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 61. (1578)

5 The golden age never was the present age

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 196 (1732)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750

She began . . . to contemplate the past as a golden age . . . and to look upon the present as a period of steel

R. D. BLACKMORE, Mary Ancreley ch 44. (1880)

6 With bronze he dimmed the lustre of the Golden Age (Inquinavit aere tempus aureum)

HORACE, Epodes. No. xvi, l. 64 (c. 20 B.C.)

7 Now truly is the age of gold; by gold comes many an honor, by gold is affection gained. (Aurea sunt vere nunc saecula: plurimus auro venit honos: auro conciliatur amor.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 277. (c. 1 B.C.)

The age of gold was the age when gold did not rule. (L'âge d'or était l'âge où l'or ne régnait pas.)

ADRIEN DE LÉZAY-MARÉZIA, Essais sur la Nature Champêtre. (1787)

The golden age only comes to men when they have, if only for a moment, forgotten gold

G. K. CHESTERTON, (New York Times Magazine), 3 May, 1931.)

8 When they would praise an epoch as the best, they call it the "Golden Age." (Denique quod optimum videri volunt saeculum, aureum appellant.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epist. cxv, sec. 14. (a. 64 A.D.)

I would with such perfection govern, sir,
To excel the golden age.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 1, 168. (1610)

9 The lament for a golden age is only a lament for golden men.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 5 April, 1841.

10 They called a parliament (as though the golden worlde shuld come agayne).

WILLIAM TINDALE, The Practyse of Prelates, sig. B2. (1530)

The golden worlde being gone.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 101. (1574) Pettie, tr.

[They] fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 1, 125. (1600)

11 Under his reign were the golden ages men tell of. (Aurea quae perhibent illo sub rege fuere saecula.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 324. (19 B.C.) Referring to Saturn.

Who knows not of the Golden Age of the care-free king? (Aurea securi quis nescit saecula regis?)

UNKNOWN, Aetna, l. 9. (c. A.D. 60) The "care-free king" was Saturn.

Those first times, which Poets call the Golden Age
JOHN DRYDEN, Albion and Albanus: Preface (1685)

The Golden Age. An ideal age (originally the first age of the world) of perfection and happiness . . . In Kenneth Grahame's story, The Golden Age (1895), it is childhood.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Golden (1941) The myth is found in the cosmogony of many peoples, Eastern as well as Western

AGREEMENT

12 Two cats and a mouse, two wives in one house, two dogs and a bone, never agree in one.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 548 (1855) The French say, "Deux chiens ne s'accordent point à un os" (Two dogs never agree over one bone). See under DOG.

13 These things agree well together. A cutpurse, and a purse full of money, a runner and a playne waye, good fellowship and myrth, an Asse and a Myller, an host and a glutton, a fayre woman and gorgeous apparell, an obstinate woman and a good cudgell, disobedient chyl dren and a whippe, a theefe and a gylbet, a good scollar and his booke, Lent and Fish-mongers.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 25. (1578)

14 We find scarcely any persons of good sense save those who agree with us. (Nous ne trouvons guère de gens de bon sens que ceux qui sont de notre avis.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 347. (1665)

"My idea of an agreeable person," said Hugo Bohun, "is a person who agrees with me."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 41. (1870)

1 If you want to play a trick on me, put your flutes more in accord. (Mettez pour me jouer vos flûtes mieux d'accord.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Etourdi ou Les Contre-temps Act i, sc. 4. (1653) Make your flutes agree; adjust your differences.

2 He bound them fast in harmony. (Concordia pace ligavit.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 25. (A. D. 7) Referring to God.

Separated by place, peace has bound them together in harmony. (Dissociata locis, concordia pace ligavit.)

UNKNOWN. Motto of the British exhibition of 1851. Founded upon Ovid.

Harmony seldom makes a headline.

SILAS BENT, Strange Bedfellows, p. 179. (1928)

3 Disagreement makes agreement more precious. (Discordia fit carior concordia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 154. (c. 43 B.C.) Duff renders this, "Harmony is the sweeter for a quarrel." See also DISCORD; LOVE: LOVERS' QUARRELS.

4 If he says no, I say no; if he says yes, I say yes. (Negat quis: nego; ait, aio.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 252. (161 B.C.)

What that he seith, I holde it ferme and stable; I seye the same, or elles thing semblable

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 255. (c. 1388) Referring to "lords of heigh estat."

5 He said "And how!" with shocking emphasis.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 154 (1940)

6 Ah, don't say that you agree with me. When people agree with me I always feel that I must be wrong.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. Pt. ii. Lady Windermere's Fan Act ii. (1892)

ILL AGREEMENT BETTER THAN FAT JUDGMENT, see under LAW.

II—Agreement: Proverbial Comparisons

7 They tune like bells, and want but hanging.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 186. (1629)

They agree like bells, they want nothing but hanging.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1670)

MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4948. (1732)

They are like Bells; every one is a several Note.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4954. (1732)

8 The Lords Supper and your peevish, popish private masse doe agree together . . . as the common prouerbe is, like harpe and harrow, or like the hare and the hound.

THOMAS BECON, The Displaying of the Popish

Masse (1637), p. 299. (1563) Things entirely different, though their names alliterate.

Agreeing like harpe and harrowe.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 24. (1589)

These things hang together like harp and harrow, as they say.

THOMAS GATAKER, Transubstantiation, p. 203. (1624)

They agree like harpe and harrow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 94. (1639)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 147. (1678)

9 To agree like dog and cat. (Amy comme chien et chat.)

CHARLES DE BOUELLES, Proverbiorum Vulgarium. (1531)

Lyke dogge and catte these two did then agree.

THOMAS DRANT, tr., Horace's Satires, sig. D7. (1566)

He that compareth our instruments, with those that were vsed in ancient times, shall see them agree like Dogges and Cattes.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse (Arber), p. 27. (1579)

They agree together like cats and dogs.

THOMAS DRAXF, Bibliotheca, p. 30. (1616)

Like cat and dog they still agree'd;

Each small offence did anger breed.

UNKNOWN, Pepysian Garland (Rollins), p. 301 (1629)

In the days of yore, when men and their wives agreed like dog and cat in the house together.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables (1738), cccxxviii, 460. (1692)

They like cat and dog agree.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser i, fab xii, l. 33 (1727)

They agree like Dogs and Cats coupled

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 4949 (1732)

You and your wife will lead a cat-and-dog life

UNKNOWN, Folk-Lore Record, l. 13 (1878)

They live like cats and dogs.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 27. (1882)

10 They two agreed like two cats in a gutter.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

11 The Preachers of England begin to strike and agree like the Clocks of England.

THOMAS NASHE, Pasquill's Return (1589) Works (Grosart), i, 111.

They agree like the cloks of London. I find this among both the French and Italian proverbs for an instance of disagreement.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 325. (1678)

It was perhaps some sarcastic Italian, and perhaps, horologer, who, to describe the disagreement of persons, proverbied our nation—"They agree like the clocks of London."

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1823)

12 They agree like pickpockets in a fair.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1813)

AGRICULTURE, see Farming

AGUE

- 1 No man dies of an ague, or without it.
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 455. (1629)
- 2 He is arrested by the Bailie of the Marshland.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, ii, 447.
(1662) "Clapt on the back with an ague,"
Fuller adds.
When a man was stricken down by the ague it was said of him, "he is arrested by the bailiff of Marshland."
SAMUEL SMILES, Lives of the Engineers, i, 15.
(1874)
The Fenmen . . . counted little of the ague which attacked them, and was called 'the Bailiff of the Marshland.'
MANDELL CREIGHTON, The Story of Some English Shires, p. 379. (1897)
- 3 Autumnal agues are long or mortal.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 154.
(1640)
- 4 A quartan ague kills the old and cures the young.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)
A quartan ague kills old men, and heals young
JOHN RAY, English Proverb, p. 40. (1670)
Quartan agues kill old Men, and cure young.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3991. (1732)
- 5 An ague in the spring is physic for a king.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 20 (1659) RAY,
p. 32 (1670) FULLER, No. 6249. (1732)
"That is, if it comes off well," Ray adds.
"It is not thought to go off kindly unless it ends in a sweat." The French say, "De grande maladie vient on en grande santé" (From a great illness one comes to great health)
- 6 I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague (ardore).
Old Testament: Leviticus, xxvi, 16 (c. 570 B.C.)
- 7 He that hath the fit of an Ague vpon him, hath no lust to talke but to tumble.
JOHN LILLY, Euphues and his England (Arber),
p. 351 (1580)
- 8 Agues come on horseback, but go away on foot.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1678)
- 9 The Covent Garden ague. A Barnwell ague.
A Kentish ague.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1678)
Venereal disease.
He hath fed too freely on a Neapolitan basket.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1886. (1732)
Ray lists also the following as euphemisms for venereal disease: "He has been at Haddam." "He is pepper'd." "He is not pepper-proof." "He has got the new consumption."
"He has got a blow over the nose with a French cowl-staff." "He is Frenchified"

AID, see Help

AIM

See also Purpose

- 10 He struck at Tib; but down fell Tim.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2029. (1732)
"He shot at the pigeon and killed the crow "
Miss'd his man—but gain'd his aim.
LORD BYRON, The Waltz, l. 22. (1813) The Germans say, "Zielen ist nicht genug, es gilt Treffen" (To aim is not enough, we must hit).
If you had not aimed at the partridge, you had not missed the snipe.
MICHAEL DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, ii,
108. (1846)
- 11 One cannot take true aim at things too high.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3742. (1732)
- 12 Unless the aim be single it cannot succeed
KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk.
ii. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr. Quoted as a saying of the philosopher Chu.
- 13 A prudent man . . . will do as prudent archers, who, when the place they wish to hit is too far off, knowing how far their bow will carry, aim at a spot much higher than the one they wish to hit, not in order to reach that height with their arrow, but by help of this high aim to hit the spot they wish to.
MACHIARELLI, The Prince Ch. 6. (1513)
Who shootes at the mid-day Sunne, though he be sure he shall never hit the marke; yet as sure he is he shall shoote higher, than who aymes but at a bush.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, ii, 6. 184. (1590)
An amplification, perhaps, of the Greek proverb, dapōr ἄλγε, καὶ μέσση ἔστις (Seize what is highest, and you will possess what is below).
My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 3. 65. (1593)
He shoots higher that threatens the Moon, than he that aims at a Tree.
GEORGE HERBERT, A Priest to the Temple: Author to Reader. (1632)
It is wise to aim high so as to hit your mark, but not so high that you miss your mission. (Es destreza asastar algo más alto para ajustar el tiro, pero no tanto que sea desatino)
BALASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim
194. (1647)
He that aims at the sky, shoots higher than he that means only to hit a tree.
WILLIAM GURNAUL, *The Christian in Compleat
Armor*, i, 365. (1655)
It is best for great men to shoot over, and for lesser men to shoot short.
LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 285.
Aiming for the highest, we may reach the centre, while, aiming at the centre, we should reach only the lowest.
KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk.
ii. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

He will shoot higher that shoots at the moon, than he that shoots at the midding, though he never hit the mark.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 136. (1721)
Look to a gown of gold and you will at least get a sleeve of it.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet, Let. ii. (1824)
Referred to as "my father's proverb."

SMILES, Self-Help, p. 385, gives a slightly different form, "Pluck at a gown of gold and you may get a sleeve o't."

We aim above the mark to hit the mark.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)

The Skillful Bowman and the Man of Action

Aim high, allowing for the Earth's Attraction.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 68. (1924)

1
Is there any target at which you aim? (Est aliquid quo tendis, et in quod derigis arcum?)

PERSIUS, Satires, No. iii, l. 60. (c. A. D. 58) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 45, who gives the derived proverb, "To cast a dart without aim" (Nullo scopo iaculari).

2
Pursue worthy aims. (τὰ σπουδαία μελέτα.)

OLON, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) See Diogenes Laertius, i, 60.

AIR

3
They must both have change of air.

WILKIE COLLINS, Woman in White, p. 292. (1860)

4
As the plover doth of aire, I live

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, Bk. iii, l. 33. (1393)

The chameleon Love can feed on the air

SHAKESPEARE, Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 181. (1594) In Hamlet (iii, 2, 100) Shakespeare has, "Of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed"

Like a chameleon, he can live by air

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 361. (1629) PETER PINDAR (Lyric Odes, v) has, "Chameleon-like, they fed on air"

A man cannot live by the air

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1670)

The chameleon, who is said to feed upon nothing but air, has of all animals the nimblest tongue.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects (1714)

5
The king would go abroad to take the ayre.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto, p. 45. (1588)

Say I am rid abroad to take the air

MASSINGER, The Duke of Milan, iii, 2 (1623)

6
I consider the future character of our Republic as in the air.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, iv, 186 (1797)

These expressions . . . were, so to speak, in the air.

F. W. FARRAR, St. Paul, i, 642. (1879)

7
Hot air has thawed out many a cold reception.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book. (1906)

Best thing to melt ice is hot air.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 100 (1941)

8
I grow, I live, I snuff the air.

NU, Papyrus: Book of the Dead, Ch. liv, l. 4. (c. 4000 B. C.) Repeated in the later Papyrus of Ani.

9
The air hath got into my deadly wounds.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 6, 27. (1590)

Shakespeare gives further proof of his belief in the old superstition of the deadliness of air, when he says, (Othello, v, 1, 104), "What! look you pale? O, bear him out o' the air."

The air whereby we live, is death to the diseased or wounded man.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Cephalus and Procris, p. 185. (1576) The proverb, "Ill air slays sooner than the sword" is of older origin, however, for it dates back to the anonymous Ratis Raving (i, 167) of c. 1450 "Than sonar slais ill air na suord."

10
Vanished before their eyes into thin air. (In tenuem ex oculis evanuit auram)

VERGIL, Aeneid, Bk. ix, l. 658. (19 B. C.)

Melted into air, into thin air.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 150 (1610)

Her bright visions vanished into thin air.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws (Ch. 6. (1843)

[They] appeared to have disappeared into thin air.

HUIBERT FOOTNER, Death of a Saboteur, p. 202 (1943)

ALE

See also Beer, Drinking, Wine

11
The liquor [ale] is the Englishman's ancientest and wholesomest drink, and serveth many for meat and cloth too.

RICHARD CAREW, The Survey of Cornwall, p. 189. (1602)

In this short sentence "ale," is all included
Meat, drink, and cloth.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1612)

Were't not for this barley broth

(Which is meat, drinke, and cloth).

UNKNOWN, The Roxburghe Ballads, ii, 588 (c. 1620)

Like them that find meat, drink, and cloth in ale
DRYDEN, Almanzor and Almahide: Prologue (1670)

Oh, the rare virtues of this barley broth!

To rich and poor it's meat and drink and cloth

MARCHANT, Praise of Ale, p. 403. (1697)

My ale is meat, drink, and cloth; it will make a cat speak and a wise man dumb.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. ii. (1738)

Sheer ale supports him under everything. It is meat, drink, and cloth, bed, board, and washing

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering, Ch. 39. (1815)

- 1
If that I mysspeke or seye,
Wyte it the ale of Southwerk, I you preye.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Prologue, l. 31. (c. 1386)
- The nappy strong Ale of Southwirke
Keeps many a Gossip fra the Kirke.
RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Comments Upon Chaucer's Tales, p. 6. (1665)
- Lemster bread and Weabley Ale . . . are growne into a common proverbe.
PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr. Camden's Britannia, 620. (1610)
- Lempster bread and Weobley beer
None can come near.
JAMES BROME, Travels Over England, Scotland and Wales, p. 102. (1700)
- Derby ale and London beer.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 258. (1670)
- 2
Mine host was full of ale and history.
RICHARD CORBET, Poems. (a. 1635)
- Truth be in his ale, as history.
EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixote, p. 195. (1654)
- You know the old proverb—ale and history
SIR GEORGE ETHERIGE, The Man of Mode. Act. i. (1676)
- 3
I have fed purely upon ale; I have eat my ale, drank my ale, and I always sleep upon ale
GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act. i. sc. 1 (1706)
- 4
Every one hath a Penny for the new Alehouse
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No 1445 (1732)
The Irish say, "The third generation is never seen in an ale-house"
- 5
Leat vs be trudgeing.
Where some noppie ale is, and softe sweete ludgeing.
JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i. ch. 11 (1546)
- 6
Cobblers and tinkers are the best ale-drinkers
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 17. (1650) RAY,
English Proverbs, p. 5; FULLER, Gnomologia.
No. 6229
- 7
Ale-sellers should not be tale-tellers
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (1721)
- 8
Then to the Spicy Nut-brown Ale.
JOHN MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 100 (1632)
- Merry swains who quaff the nut-brown ale.
And sing enamour'd of the nut-brown maid
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i. l. 390
(1771)
- 9
A Rechabite poor Will must live.
And drink of Adam's ale.
MATTHEW PRIOR, The Wandering Pilgrim.
(1707)
- A cup of cold Adam from the next purling brook.
THOMAS BROWN, Works Vol. iv, p. 11. (1760)
- Adam's ale, about the only gift that has descended undefiled from the Garden of Eden!
EMERY A. STORRS, Adam's Ale. (1875)

- 10
Fair chieve [prosper] good ale, it makes many folks speak as they think.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 93. (1678)
Quoted by BICKERDYKE, Curiosities of Ale and Beer, p. 404, as "the old proverb." "Fair chieve" is used in the sense of "Good speed."
- 11
I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 2, 13. (1599)
- A quart of ale is a dish for a king.
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 3, 8. (1610)
- 12
Open your mouth: here is that which will give language to you. cat.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 86. (1611)
- Who is it but loues good liquor? 'Twill make a catte speake.
UNKNOWN, Shirburn Ballads, p. 93. (c. 1612)
- Ale that will make a cat speak
NICHOLAS BRETON, A Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters. (1637)
- Old liquor able to make a cat speak, and a wise man dumb.
UNKNOWN, Antidote Against Melancholy, p.
126. (1661)
- Ale that would make a cat speak
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1678)
- My ale will make a cat speak, and a wise man dumb.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
- 13
She brews good ale—and thereof comes the proverb.
"Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale."
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
iii, 1, 304. (1594)
- "I will not say blessing on their hearts," said he;
"though I must own they drank good ale"
WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock Ch. 19 (1826)
- 14
Such ale as he hath brued, let hym drinke hym self.
RICHARD TAVERNER, Translation of Erasmus, fo. 49. (1550) See also under RETRIBUTION
- 15
I know a draught off mery-go-downe [ale]
UNKNOWN, Songs and Carols, p. 92. (c. 1470)
- Out she brought hir by and by a draught of merrie go downe.
ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses.
Bk. v, l. 556. (1567)
- 16
Bryng us in no befe, for ther is many bonys.
But bryng us in good ale, for that goth downe at onys.
Bryng us in no eggys, for ther is many schelles.
But bryng us in good ale, and gyfe us nothyng ellys.
UNKNOWN, Bring Us in Good Ale. (c. 1410)
- This, the earliest known form of this old drinking song, has been preserved by Thomas Wright in his Songs and Carols from a Manuscript of the Fifteenth Century, published by the Percy Society.

He that buys Land, buys many Stones,
He that buys Flesh, buys many Bones,
He that buys Eggs, buys many Shells,
But he that buys Ale, buys nothing else.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 211. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6422. (1732)

CAKES AND ALE, see under CAKE.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT

<sup>1</sup> Verily, if I were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes. (ἀλλὰ μὴν ἐγώ, εἰ μὴ Ἀλέξανδρος ἦμην. Διογένης ἀν ἡμην.)

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, Remark, to his followers, as he turned away from a visit to Diogenes at Corinth, 335 B. C. He had asked Diogenes, who was lying in the sun, and who did not rise when Alexander approached, if there was anything he could do for him, and Diogenes had answered curtly, "Yes, stand a little out of my sun." (μικρον ἀπο τοῦ ἡλίου μεράσθη.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander, ch. 14, sec. 3. It is from Plutarch's narrative that most of the phrases associated with Alexander are derived: "Yes, if I could have kings for my contestants," he replied, when, as a boy, he was asked if he would be willing to contend in the footrace at the Olympic games; "There will be nothing left for me to conquer," when news of Philip's many victories was brought to him; "I will not steal a victory," when advised to surprise the Persian host by falling upon it in the night; "So would I, were I Parmenio," when Parmenio said, "If I were Alexander, I would accept the offer which Darius makes, to divide his empire with you and to be your friend and ally hereafter," and to explain his refusal, Alexander added, "Heaven cannot support two suns, nor earth two masters." See under RIVALRY. He also said, when abused by some of his followers, "It is the lot of a king to confer favors and be ill-spoken of thereafter," and when asked why, when trying capital cases, he covered one of his ears with his hand while the accuser was speaking, he explained, "I wish to keep one ear free and unprejudiced for the accused." "O Athenians, can ye possibly believe what perils I am undergoing to win glory in your eyes?" he cried while fording the river Hydaspes, in his campaign against Porus (326 B. C.); and, of course, his famous lament, cited below, that he had only one world to conquer.

<sup>2</sup> One globe is all too little for the youth of Pella. (Unus Pellaeo iuveni non sufficit orbis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 168. (A. A. D. 120)

Alexander the Great was born at Pella. 356 B. C.; died at Babylon, 323 B. C.

Alexander wept when he heard Anaxarchus [who accompanied Alexander to India] discourse about an infinite number of worlds, and when his friend inquired what ailed him, "Is it not worthy of tears," he said, "that, when the number of worlds is infinite, we have not yet become lords of a single one?" ("οὐκ ἄξιόν," ἔφη, "δαρύνειν, εἰ κόσμων ὄντων ἀπείρων ἐνός οὐδέπω κύριος γεγονάμεν;" )

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Tranquillity of Mind Sec. 466D. (C. A. D. 95)

This saying may be verified, Alexander seemeth great to the worlde, but the worlde seemeth small to Alexander.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 206. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>3</sup> How big was Alexander, Pa,
That people call him great?
Was he, like old Goliath, tall?
His spear a hundred weight?
Was he so tall that he could stand
Like some tall steeple high;
And while his feet were on the ground,
His hands could touch the sky?

O no, my child: about as large
As I or Uncle James.

'T was not his stature made him great,
But greatness of his name.

UNKNOWN, The Child's Inquiry. See MCGURFEY, Third Reader, p. 69. (1837)

And is that Alexander, pa?
And why is he called great?

O. HENRY, Hostages to Mornus. (1908)

<sup>4</sup> If Alexander wishes to be a god, let him set up as a god. (εἰ Ἀλέξανδρος βούλεται εἶναι θεός, θεός ἐστώ.)

UNKNOWN, Lacedaemonian Edict on Alexander's Claim to Divinity. (C. 326 B. C.)

Alexander suffering this madness to enter into his head, thought it not enough to be a man and a king, and to have the title of great: but he would on Gods name, be called the sonne of Jupiter. . . . Whereof his mother complained, saying, Hee woulde bring her into disgrace with Juno, for making her a Cucqueane.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 81. (1574) Pettie, tr.

ALLEY

<sup>5</sup> Such Men . . . are good but in their own Alley.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1612)
Such men "that hath studied Men, more than Bookes"

It isn't up my alley at all.

MARGARET CARPENTER, Experiment Perilous. p. 192. (1943)

<sup>6</sup> He despises me, I suppose, because I live in an alley: tell him his soul lives in an alley.

BEN JONSON (attr), referring to James I. (c. 1620) See LEIGH HUNT, Essays: Coaches

Of all the girls that are so smart,
There's none like pretty Sally;
She is the darling of my heart,
And she lives in our alley.

HENRY CARLY, Sally in Our Alley. (c. 1713)

here is a Gulph where thousands fell, . . . narrow Sound, though deep as Hell, hange-Ally is the dreadfull Name.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Bubble, l. 138. (1720) xchange Alley was the seat of the gambling ver.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Book of Days, i, 146. (1863)

ALMOST

Almost was never hanged.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 3. (1639) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1670) The Germans say, "Beinahe bringt keine Mücke um" (Almost never killed a fly); the Danes, "Naerved slaar ingen Mand ihel" (Almost kills no man), and "Naer heilper mangen Mand" (All but saves many a man).

Almost and well nigh saves many a lie.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 106. (1639) approve the plain country by-word, "Almost and very nigh, Have saved many a lie."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), i, 82. (1662) Almost and very nigh saves many a lie. The signification of this word almost having some attitude, men are apt to stretch it to cover untruths.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1670) Almost, and hard by, Saves many a Lie.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 6188. (1732) Almost and very near have been great liars. F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 99. (1902)

ALMS

See also Charity

4 It was the man, and not his character, that I pitied (οὐ τὸν τρόπον, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἠλέησα.)

ARISTOTLE, when reproached with having given alms to a bad man. (c. 330 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, sec. 17. In sec. 21, Laertius gives the saying in another form, οὐ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ ἔδοξα, ἀλλὰ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ (It was not the man that I assisted, but humanity).

5 Even the beggar who lives on alms should himself bestow alms.

Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 7b. (c. 450)

How can the hungry belly bestow alms?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)

6 Is it not a proverbial saying in Jerusalem, "Salt your money with alms"?

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 66b. (c. 450) "Salt money by diminishing it" is the literal translation. In other words, the more one gives, the more one will have to give. The proverb is a play upon the words hasser, diminution, and hesed, benevolence.

Alms are the salt of riches.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p.

96. (1852) Commenting, "the true antiseptic, that which will prevent them from themselves corrupting, and from corrupting those that have them."

7 Alms delivereth from death.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 156b. (c. 450) Paraphrasing Proverbs, x, 2, "Righteousness delivereth from death." The many places in which the Talmud praises almsgiving show how closely the Jews ranked it with righteousness.

Better is the alms-giver than the bringer of sacrifices.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 49b.

8 Water will quench a flaming fire; and alms maketh an atonement for sins. (Ignem ardentem extinguit aqua, et elemosyna resistit peccatis.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 30. (c. 190 B.C.)

Aelmyse ure synna lig adwaesete.

AELEFRIC, Homilies, ii, 106. (c. 975) In Old English Homilies, ser. i, p. 37, the form is "Elmesse acwencheth tha sunne."

Alms fordoth alle wickednes. And quenchyth synne and makyth hyt les.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 7079. (1303) The short form of the proverb is "Alms quencheth sin."

9 Be not behindhand in almsgiving.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 10. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

10 Alms never make poor. Or thus,

Great Alms-giving lessens no man's living
Giving much to the poor, doth enrich a man's store.

It takes much from the account, to which his sin doth amount.

It adds to the glory both of soul and body

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. Nos. 191-195. (1640) The second line is quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757.

Giving alms never lessens the stock

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Alms. (1736)

Alms-giving never made any man poor, nor robbery rich, nor prosperity wise.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 309 (1855) The Spanish form is "El dar limosna nunca mengua la bolsa" (Almsgiving never lightens the purse), a proverb which is used also by the Danes. The French say, "Donner l'aumône n'appauvrit personne." (To give alms impoverishes nobody). They have another proverb, dating from the 15th century. "Il ne perd pas son aumône qui à son porceau le donne" (He does not lose his alms who gives it to his pig).

11 Be not too lauish in giuing almes, the charitie of this Country. is, God helpe thee.

JOHN LELY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 230. (1580)

He that hath a good memory, giveth few alms.
 THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Devon, i, 408. (1662) This is a Welsh proverb, Fuller explains, and means that a man of good memory keeps in mind "what and to whom he hath given before."

Give not you almes hand over head. Do good with discretion.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 75. (1681) See also under HAND.

Give no bounties: make equal laws: secure life and prosperity, and you need not give alms.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

I do not give alms; I am not poor enough for that. (Nein, ich gebe kein Almosen. Dazu bin ich nicht arm genug.)

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra: Introductory. Sec. 2. (1883)

1 When thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth: That thine alms may be in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly. (σοὺ δὲ ποιοῦντος ἐλεημοσύνην ἡ γυνὴ σου ἢ ἀπὸ κρυπτῶν σου τί ποιεῖ ἡ δεξιὰ σου.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 3-4. (C. A. D. 65)

A man transgresses in secret, and the Holy One -blessed be He!—proclaims it openly.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fol. 3a (c. 450)

2 Allah blotteth out usury and causeth alms to bear interest.

MOHAMMED, Koran, ii, 276. (c. 622) Bell, tr. That which ye bestow in alms for the love of God is bread cast upon the waters; it shall return to you doubled

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxx, 39. Naish, tr

3 I had much rather not to live at all, than to live by alms (J'aime bien mieulx ne vivre point que de vivre d'aumône)

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk iii. ch. 5 (1595)

4 The greatest of almsgivers is cowardice

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human Pt. ii. (1878)

5 His alms were money put to interest
 In the other world.

ROBERT SOUTHY, The Alderman's Funeral (c. 1820)

6 If thou hast abundance, give alms accordingly: if thou have but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little.

Apocrypha: Tobit, iv, 8. (c. 200 B.C.)

Give what you have. To some one, it may be better than you dare to think.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Kavanaugh. Ch. 30 (1849)

7 I must be dunned for alms, and do not scramble over hedges and ditches in searching for opportunities of flinging away my money on good works.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Hannah More, 20 Feb., 1790.

ALONE

See also Loneliness, Solitude

8 When is man strong until he feels alone?

ROBERT BROWNING, Colombe's Birthday. (1844)
 The strongest man in the world is he who stands most alone.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act v. (1882)

He travels the fastest who travels alone.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners. (1895) See under CELIBACY.

9 As the saying is, homo solus aut deus, aut daemon: a man, alone, is either a saint or a devil.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy Pt. i, sec. ii, memb. ii, subs. 6. (1621)

10 Let it alone; let it pass. (Laissez faire; laissez passer.)

JEAN BAPTISTE COLBERT, finance minister of Louis XIV of France. (1661) See speech by Lord John Russell, London Times, 2 April, 1840. Attributed also to Gournay Minister of Commerce, 1751. Quoted by Adam Smith, Wealth of Nations.

It's not like you. You're always so laissez-faire

ANNE NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 103 (1943)

11 All we want is to be let alone.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, Inaugural Address, as President of the Confederate States of America 18 Feb., 1861.

All I axes is, let me alone

H. H. BROWNELL, The Old Cove. (1861) Refrain of a set of verses about Jefferson's inaugural.

All we ask now is to be let alone.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island Act iii (1904)

All I want is to be left alone.

A. A. FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 97. (1941)

All I ask is to be left alone.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Empty Tin, p. 31. (1941)

All he wants is peace and quiet and to be let alone

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 105 (1942)

12 Woe to him that is alone when he falleth for he hath not another to help him up. (Va soli.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 10. (c. 250 B.C.)
 Wo be to the lone man, who when he shall fallen downe, shall have none to helpe him up

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk p. 48. (1574) Pettie, tr

The wyse seyth, "wo him that is allone, For, and he falle, he hath noon help to ryse."

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk l. 694. (c. 1380)

13 We walk alone in the world. Friends, such as we desire, are dreams and fables.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Friendship. (1841)

1 And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him. (Non est bonum esse hominem solum; faciamus ei adiutorium simile sibi.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 18. (c. 550 B.C.)

Apocrypha: Tobit, viii, 6. (c. 200 B.C.)

Whan our lord hadde creat Adam our forme-fader, he seyde in this wyse: "it is nat good to been a man allone; make we to him an help semblable to himself."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 15. (c. 1387)

Doth not God say it is not good for man to live alone?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Palace, p. 68. (1576)

"Man was not made to live alone," and I'm sure woman wasn't either.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh. Ch. 51. (1850)

At board, at bed, at work and holiday,
It is not good for man to be alone.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 1082. (1857)

2 "And nobody with me at sea but myself"

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Haunch of Venison, l. 60. Quoted from a letter of Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, to Lady Grosvenor. (1770)

All by my own-alone self.

JORL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 36. (1880)

3 I have trodden the winepress alone. (Torcular calcavi solus.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiii, 3. (c. 725 B.C.)

I must plough my lonely furrow alone.

LORD ROSEBERRY, Letter, 19 July, 1901.

4 You will be sad if you are alone. (Tristis eris si solus eris.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 583. (c. 1 B.C.)

Schiller says, "Bleib nicht allein" (Abide not alone), and adds, "for it was in the desert that Satan came to the Lord of Heaven."

5 You must show him . . . by leaving him severely alone.

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL, Speech at Ennis, 19 Sept., 1880.

6 Better be alone than in ill company.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish. (1670) The French say, "Nous sommes mieux seul qu'avec un sot" (We are better alone than with a fool). See under COMPANY.

7 I am never less alone than when alone. (Nec minus solum, quam cum solus esset.)

SCIPIO AFRICANUS. (c. 200 B.C.) See CICERO, De Officiis, iii, sec. 1.

Scipio said, that he was never less alone, then when he was alone, for that being gotten by him self into some solitarie place, he discoursed many things in his minde.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, l. 49. (1574)

Finding, with Scipio, that he was never less alone than when he was alone.

ROBERT GREENE, The Mirrour of Modestie. (1584) Works, iii, 114.

There is no man alone, because every man is a Microcosm, and carries the whole World about him. Nunquam minus solus quam cum solus, though it be the Apothegme of a wise man, is yet true in the mouth of a fool.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 10. (1643)

Scipio Africanus . . . used to say, That he was never less alone, than when he was alone.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 19. (1669)

It was a saying . . . of Scipio Africanus the Elder . . . that he was never less idle, or alone, than when he most appeared so to be.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Tully's Offices, p. 141. (1680)

A good man is never less alone than when alone, as Themistocles [sic] said.

THOMAS LODGE, The Devil Conjured. (1596)

A wise man is never less alone than when he is alone.

SWIFT, Miscellanies: The Faculties of the Mind. (1722)

I was never less alone than when by myself.

EDWARD GIBBON, Memoirs, i, 117. (1767)

Never less alone than when alone.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 759. (1819)

SCOTT, Black Dwarf, ch. 4. (1816)

8 Quite alone, on your own hook.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Satanella. Ch. 10. (1872)

9 Alone each creature sees the light;

Alone grows into youthful might;

His pains and pleasures are his own;

He journeys toward his death—alone.

UNKNOWN, The Mahabharata, xii, 294, 16. (c. 200 B.C.) Ryder, tr.

ALPHA AND OMEGA, See Beginning and End

ALPS

10 Ah! as a pilgrim who the Alps doth pass, . . . When he some heaps of hills hath overwent, Begins to think on rest, his journey spent.

Till, mounting some tall mountain, he do find More heights before him than he left behind.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Flowers of Sion: Hymn of the Fairest Fair, l. 149. (1623)

So pleas'd at first the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky; . . .

But those attain'd, we tremble to survey

The growing labours of the lengthen'd way;

Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 25. (1711)

A comparison used by ADDISON in The Spectator, by ROUSSEAU in Emile, and by SCOTT in his Life of Napoleon.

Those who are to climb the Alps are not to expect a smooth and even way.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1642)

BEYOND THE ALPS LIES ITALY, see ITALY.

ALTAR

<sup>1</sup> Stronger than a castle is an altar—'tis a shield invulnerable. (κρείσσον δὲ πύργον βωμός, ἀρρηκτον σάκος.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 190. (c. 485 B.C.)

For altars and hearths. (Pro aris et focis.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum, iii, 40, 94. (45 B.C.)

He that serves at the altar, ought to live by the altar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2294. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Farewell, my dear Tom. . . Yours to the altar.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 41. (1635)

[He] leads her to the village altar.

TENNYSON, The Lord of Burleigh, l. 11. (1842)

A FRIEND TO THE ALTAR, see under FRIEND

AMBASSADOR

<sup>3</sup> If I stole 'twas for the good of the state. (ἐγὼ δ' ἔκλεπτον ἐπ' ἀγαθῷ γε τῇ πόλει.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 1226 (424 B.C.)

The rulers of the state may fitly lie for the benefit of the state. (τοῖς ἀρχουσι δὴ τῆς πόλεως . . . προσήκει ψεῦδεσθαι . . . ἐπ' ὠφελείᾳ τῆς πόλεως.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 389B (c. 375 B.C.)

In sec. 459D, Plato repeats the assertion that lying and deception are justified for the good of the state.

The public weal requires that a man should betray, and lie, and massacre. (Le bien public requiert qu'on trahisse, et qu'on mente, et qu'on massacre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1 (1595)

An ambassador is an honest man sent to lie abroad for the good of his country (Legatus est vir bonus peregre missus ad mentiendum Reipublicae causa.)

SIR HENRY WOTTON. This "merriment," as Wotton later called it, was written in the album of his friend, Christopher Fleckamore, of Augsburg, during a visit in 1604 Wotton was then English Ambassador at the Court of Venice, and in 1611, while he still held that position, it was printed in a scurrilous diatribe against James I, written by Casper Scioppius, an Austrian controversialist. Wotton tried to excuse himself by pointing out the double meaning of "lie," but this did not exist in the Latin, and he lost the favor of the King. But he regained it, and was sent back to Venice in 1616. See Dictionary of National Biography; WALTON, Life.

Diplomacy. The patriotic art of lying for one's country.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary (1906)

Diplomacy is to do and say
The nastiest thing in the nicest way.

ISAAC GOLDBERG, The Reflex. (c. 1930)

<sup>4</sup> I always look upon diplomats as the Hebrews of politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Ch. 21. (1844)

There are two purely American phrases connected with diplomacy: "Dollar diplomacy," applied in 1910 to the activities of Philander Knox in securing opportunities for the investment of American capital abroad (see Harper's Weekly, 23 April, 1910, p. 8), and "Shirt-sleeve diplomacy," referring to the visit of an official of the State Department to the Spanish Embassy, just before the beginning of the War with Spain, to inform the Spanish Ambassador that his passports were being sent to him.

<sup>5</sup> Ambassadors are the eye and ear of states (Gli ambasciatori sono l'occhio e l'orecchio degli stati.)

GUICCIARDINI, Storia d'Italia. (1495)

<sup>6</sup> There are a large number of well-meaning ambassadors . . . who belong to what I call the pink-tea type.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Letter to R. H. Davis, 3 Jan., 1905. It was, perhaps, with "pink-tea" ambassadors in mind that Will Rogers said, "The United States never lost a war or won a conference." CARLYLE, Life of Cromwell, quotes Cromwell as saying, "A man-of-war is the best ambassador."

AMBER

<sup>7</sup> The bee lies hid and shines in a tear of the sisters of Phaëton. (Et latet et lucet Phaëthontide condita gutta.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 32 (c. A.D. 90)

While an ant was roaming under the shade of a tree of Phaëton, a gummy drop enfolded the tiny insect. Thus, despised while life remained, it has become precious by its death.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 15 (c. A.D. 90) Phaëton's sisters, after his death, wept for him until they were turned into poplars, and their tears, oozing from their trunks were hardened into amber

We see spiders, flies, or ants entombed and preserved forever in amber, a more than royal tomb.

FRANCIS BACON, Historia Vitae et Mortis (1623) Repeated in BACON's Sylvia Sylvarum, i, 100.

I saw a Flie within a Beade

Of Amber cleanly buried:

The Urne was little, but the room

More rich than Cleopatra's Tomb.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Amber Bead. (1648)

Pretty! in amber to observe the forms

Of hairs, or straws, or dirt, or grubs, or worms!

The things, we know, are neither rich nor rare.

But wonder how the devil they got there.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 169. (1733)

He is a fly in amber; nobody cares about the fly; the only question is, How the devil did it get there?

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 7. (1807) Referring to Canning.

Byron caught him up, and . . . preserved him, like a fly in amber, for future generations to wonder at.

BLACKWELL, Mallet's Northern Antiquities, p. 374. (1847)

Embalmed in amber every pirate lies.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Chinese Nightingale. (1917)

AMBITION

See also Aspiration

1 Ambition raises a secret tumult in the soul; it inflames the mind, and puts it into a violent hurry of thought.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 24 Dec., 1711.

2 Ambition destroys its possessor.

Babylonian Talmud: Yoma, fo. 86a. (c. 450)

3 He wis ouer his heued, the chip falles in his ine.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicles, l. 91 (c. 1300)

It falles in his eghe, That hackes ovre heghe.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs, p. 323. (c. 1310)

Fulofte he heweth up so hihe,

That chippes fallen in his yhe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. I. l. 1918 (c. 1390)

For an old Proverbe it is ledged, he that beweth to hie, with chippes he may lese his sight.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love, i. 279. (c. 1400)

I am ferful aboue myn hed to hewe, lyst froward chippis of presumpcioun sholde blynde myn eyen in then falling doon.

JOHN LYDKATE, Edmund & Tremund, iii. 5 (c. 1433)

This prouerbe precheth to men haute or hye, Hewe not to hye, lest the chips fall in thine iye

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 7 (1546)

Clyme not to hye lest chypys fall yn thyn eie.

HULLS, Common-place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)

Look not too high lest a chip fall in your eye

CLEMENT ROBINSON, A Handfull of Pleasant Delites (Arber), p. 39 (1584) Cited by Ray, Dykes, Fuller, and many others.

Thou art too crank, and crowdest all too high: Beware a chip fall not into thine eye.

GEORGE PRELE, Works, ii. 270. (1580)

He that hewes over hie, the spail will fall into his eye.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (a. 1595)

He that hews above his Height, may have Chips in his Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2164. (1732)

4 Ambition aspires to descend. (Il aspire à descendre.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act I, sc. 2. (1639)

What will not ambition and revenge Descend to?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 168. (1663) Ambition often puts men upon doing the meanest offices.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714) Nothing humbler than ambition, when it is about to climb.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753. Well is it known that ambition can creep as well as soar.

EDMUND BURKE, Letters on a Regicide Peace. No. 3. (1795)

5 Wild Ambition loves to slide, not stand. And Fortune's ice prefers to Virtue's land.

JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 198. (1681) MACAULAY, Essays: Sir William Temple, points out that these lines were borrowed by Dryden from KNOLLES' History of the Turks (1570), where they appear under a portrait of Sultan Mustapha I: "Greatness on goodness loves to slide, not stand, And leaves for Fortune's ice Virtue's firm land."

6 Why at that worst of deities, Ambition, Son, graspest thou? Forbear; she is queen of Wrong.

(τί τῆς κακίστης δαιμόνων ἐπίστα Φιλοτιμία, παῖ: μὴ σὺ γὰρ ἄδικος ἢ θεός.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 531. (c. 420 B.C.)

7 'Tis a laudable Ambition, that aims at being better than his Neighbours.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749. Ambition often spends foolishly what Avarice has wickedly collected.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751

8 Nothing arouses ambition in the heart like the clarion-call of another's fame. (No hay cosa que así solicite ambiciones en el ánimo, como el clarín de la fama ajena.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 75. (1647) The Germans say, "Ehrgeiz macht fleissige Leute" (Ambition makes people diligent).

9 Ambition is the crosse and torment of the ambitious.

STEFANO GUARZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 99. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Ambition, a proud covetousness, or a dry thirst of honour, a great torture of the mind, a pleasant poison.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 11 (1621)

Ambition is the mind's immodesty.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, Gondibert (1651)

Ambition plagues her Proselytes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 788 (1732)

Ambition is but avarice on stilts and masked. W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Brooke and Sidney. (1824)

Ambition. An overmastering desire to be vilified by enemies while living and made ridiculous by friends when dead.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

1 A man without ambition is like a woman without beauty.

FRANK HARRIS, Montes the Matador. (1900)

2 To spread wings too wide for the nest. (Maiore pinna nido extendere.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 20, l. 21. (20 B.C.)
The Germans say, "Weiter hüpfen, als der Graben breit ist" (To jump farther than the width of the ditch).

By seeking too lofty heights on weak wings Icarus gave a name to waters of the sea. (Dum petit infirmis nimium sublimia pennis | Icarus, aequoreas nomine fecit aquas.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. i, l. 89. (c. A.D. 9)

Who too much imbraceth, nothing closeth. (Chi troppo abbraccia, nulla stringe.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself, And falls on the other.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 27. (1606)

He would fain be at the top of the house before the stairs are built.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

He stretches out his hand to touch the sky. (Shen shou mo 'tien.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 179. (1872)

He wants to tick with Big Ben.

ELIZABETH DELEHANTY, Arise from Sleep, p. 130. (1932)

3 Far removed from base ambition. (Prava ambitione procul.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 51. (35 B.C.)

Set free from the burden of unhappy ambition. (Misera ambitione gravique.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 129.

4 Go, madman, and race over the wildest Alps, that you may delight schoolboys, and become a subject for a declamation! (I demens et saevas curre per Alpes, | ut pueris placeas et declamatio fias!)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 166. (c. A.D. 120)

Here runs the mountainous and craggy ridge That tempts ambition.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 57. (1784)

5 The slave has but one master; the ambitious man has as many as there are people useful to his fortune. (L'esclave n'a qu'un maître; l'ambitieux en a autant qu'il y a de gens utiles à sa fortune.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De la Cour. (1688)

The wise man is cured of ambition by ambition. (Le sage guérit de l'ambition par l'ambition.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Mérite Personnel.

6 Who hasn't in his head a little grain of ambition? (Qui n'a dans la tête | Un petit grain d'ambition?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 10. (1678)

Ambition is the growth of ev'ry clime.

WILLIAM BLAKE, King Edward the Third. Sc. 4, l. 2. (1783)

7 The most lofty ambition entirely disappears when it finds its object altogether out of reach. (La plus grande ambition n'en a pas la moindre apparence lorsqu'elle se rencontre dans une impossibilité absolue d'arriver où elle aspire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 91. (1665)

8 One often passes from love to ambition, but one rarely returns from ambition to love. (On passe souvent de l'amour à l'ambition; mais on ne revient guère de l'ambition à l'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 490. (1665)

Love's but the frailty of the mind When 'tis not with ambition join'd.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 12. (1700)

Ambition and love are the wings of great actions. (Lust und Liebe sind die Fittiche | Zu grossen Taten.)

GOETHE, Iphigenie. (1787)

Ambition is the only power that combats love

COLLEY CIBBER, Cæsar in Aegypt. Act i. (1725)

Ambition is no cure for love.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 27. (1805)

If you love, love a moon; if you steal, steal a camel.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 520 (1938) An Egyptian proverb.

9 How vainly men themselves amaze To win the palm, the oak, or bays.

ANDREW MARVEL, The Garden (1651)

10 If the string is long, the kite will fly high

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 328)

11 To climb from the ass to the ox. (Ab asinis ad boves transcendere.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 235 (c. 200 B.C.) To ascend from a low station to a higher one, to get ahead in the world. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, l. vii, 30, together with its opposites, "Ab equis ab asinos," and "Ab asino delapsus."

12 Men would be Angels. Angels would be Gods. POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. I, l. 126 (1733)

13 Though ambition itself is a vice, it is often the parent of virtues. (Licet ipsa vitium sit ambitio, frequenter tamen causa virtutum est.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. I, ch. 2, sec. 22. (c. A.D. 80) Quoted by BEN JONSON, Explorata: Imò Serviles.

Ambition, in a private man a vice,
Is, in a prince, a virtue.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act i,
sc. 2. (1655)

The same ambition can destroy or save,
And makes a patriot as it makes a knave.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 201. (1733)

The trap to the high-born is ambition.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 268. (1670)

Ambition and resentment, worst of counselors, (Cupidine atque ira, pessumis consultori-bus.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 64, sec. 5.
(c. 40 B.C.)

So great will be the frenzy of ambition, that you can see nobody behind you if there is anyone in front of you. (Tantus erit ambitionis furor, ut nemo tibi post te videatur, si aliquis ante te fuerit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucillum. Epis. civ, sec. 10. (c.
A.D. 64) That is, you will think yourself last in the race if you are not the first.

False ambition severs the neck.

JOHN LEWIS BURKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs.
No 406. (1817)

He who opens his heart to ambition closes it to repose. (Chi apre il cuore all' ambizione, il chiude al riposo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 176.
(1856) An Italian proverb.

Discontent follows ambition like a shadow.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street. p.
137. (1940)

Ambition is the last refuge of the failure.

OSCAR WILDE, Phrases and Philosophies for the Use of the Young. (1904)

THE LAST INFIRMITY OF NOBLE MINDS, see under FAME.

AMENDMENT

See also Mend, Repentance

It is a proverb lately sprung up, No man amendeth himself, but every man seeketh to amend other; and all that while nothing is amended

BERNARD GILPIN, Sermon Before Edward VI
(1630), p. 41. (1552)

Let your amendment amende the matter

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

Amendment is Repentance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No 789. (1732)

The French say, "Amendement n'est pas péché" (Amendment is not sin).

In pure painted process—as false as faire—
How ye will amend, whan ye can not apayre [grow worse]?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Some do amend when they cannot appaire

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 47. (1611)

AMERICA

Americans are always moving on.

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star: Prelude, l. 1. (1943)

Here [in America] individuals of all nations are melted in a new race of men. . . . The American is a new man who acts upon new principles.

JEAN DE CRÉVECEUR, Letters from an American Farmer. Letter iii. (1782)

America is God's crucible, the great Melting-Pot where all the races of Europe are melting and re-forming!

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, The Melting-Pot. Act i. (1908)
There is here a great melting-pot in which we must compound a precious metal. That metal is the metal of nationality.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Washington. 19
April, 1915.

American life is a powerful solvent.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Character and Opinion in the United States. (1922)

America is not only the cauldron of Democracy, but the incubator of democratic principles.

MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK, Address, House of Representatives. 18 Feb. 1943.

Then join hand in hand, brave Americans all.
By uniting we stand, by dividing we fall'

JOHN DICKINSON, Liberty Song First published in the Boston Gazette, 18 July, 1768

"United we stand, divided we fall!"

It made and preserves us a nation.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, The Flag of Our Union
(1849)

Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech on Foote's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1850.

I am not a Virginian, but an American.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Continental Congress,
Philadelphia, 5 Sept., 1774.

Thank God, I—I also am an American!

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, Charlestown, Mass.,
17 June, 1843, at Bunker Hill Monument

I was born an American; I live an American; I shall die an American.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, 17 July, 1850.

See America first.

LOUIS W. HILL, Advertising Slogan, for the Great Northern Railway, devised in 1910 while Hill, as president of the road, was promoting the development of Glacier National Park, with an eye to increased passenger traffic.

It was the rule, at this period, for young Americans to make the grand tour of the United States, through Virginia and the Carolinas to Charleston, and sometimes Savannah, before they went abroad. This sensible classical custom was later indicated by the well-known tag, "See America first."

VAN WYCK BROOKS, The Flowering of New England, p. 78, footnote. (1936)

1 I do not think that you can do better than to fix here for a while, till you can become again Americanized.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Joel Barlow, 20 April, 1802.

We go to Europe to be Americanized.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture. (1860)

He was Americanizing in that good lady's hands as fast as she could transform him.

W. D. HOWELLS, A Foregone Conclusion, p. 77. (1875)

2 They are a race of convicts, and ought to be thankful for anything we allow them short of hanging.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. See BOSWELL, Life, 21 March, 1775. Of Americans.

Whatever they [Americans] may be, they will always be colonial.

BENJAMIN DISPAELI, Endymion, Ch. 44 (1880)

They dress alike, they talk alike, they think alike. What sheep!

LORD NORTHCLEIFFE. See PETERSON, Propaganda for War, p. 4.

3 The land of the free and the home of the brave.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY, The Star-Spangled Banner. (13 Sept., 1814)

O. Columbia, the gem of the ocean.

The home of the brave and the free

THOMAS A BECKET, Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean. Probably written in 1843, by Becket, a young English actor then playing at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., for another English actor named David Taylor Shaw. Sung in England by E. L. Davenport under the title, "Britannia, the pride of the ocean." Some authorities assert that the song was sung first in England as "Britannia," and later adapted to American use. Probably sung first in America, though "gem of the ocean" applies much better to the small island of England than to the vast continent of America. See BANKS, Immortal Songs of Camp and Field, p. 77; Notes and Queries, 25 Aug., 1899.

God bless America.

IRVING BERLIN. Title of song introduced to the public on Armistice Day, 11 Nov., 1938, by Kate Smith in a radio broadcast.

All out for America.

JOHN ADAMS. Title of song. (1941)

4 Never sell a bear on the United States.

JUNIUS SPENCER MORGAN, Remark, while in business in London, c. 1866. See Dict. Amer. Biog., xiii, 182. Morgan's advice was couched in the technical language of the London Stock Exchange, and is usually quoted, "Don't sell America short," and attributed to Morgan's son, J. Pierpont Morgan. If the attribution is correct, the younger Morgan was merely translating his father's dictum into the language of Wall Street.

MARK SULLIVAN, Our Times, ii, 318, quotes the saying as "Never be a bear on the United States."

Remember, son, that any man who is a bear on the future of this country will go broke.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN, as quoted by his son in a talk at the Chicago Club, 10 Dec., 1908. Evidently a paraphrase of the elder Morgan

5 You cannot conquer America.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, House of Commons, 18 Nov., 1777.

All the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined, with all the treasure of the earth (our own excepted) in their military chest, with a Bonaparte for a commander, could not by force take a drink from the Ohio or make a track on the Blue Ridge in a trial of a thousand years.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, at Springfield, Ill., 27 Jan., 1837.

6 I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan: very pleasant hast thou been unto me. (Doleo super te frater mi Ionatha decore nimis.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 26. (c. 600 B.C.)

We must consult Brother Jonathan.

GEORGE WASHINGTON (1777) Said to be a frequent remark of his during the American Revolution, referring to his secretary and aide-de-camp, Col. Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut. This story, however, is of late appearance (1846), and not supported by any actual evidence. However it originated, the term seems to have been applied first to New Englanders, and at length, loosely, like Yankee, to Americans generally.

Many of the republican families in East Jersey have lost their daddies and Brother Jonathans. UNKNOWN, Royal Gazette (N.Y.), 5 July, 1780, p. 3/1.

I am not very much alarmed at the . . . furious thunderbolts of Brother Jonathan.

J. T. CALLENDER, Letter to Hamilton (1802)

The Diverting History of John Bull and Brother Jonathan.

JAMES KIRK PAULDING. Title of book (1812)

If you would save your pride from bein' sand-papere'd, risk it not in a dicker with Jonathan.

JOSEPH BILLINGS, Josh Billings on Ice (1878)

7 The American has dwindled into an Odd Fellow—one who may be known by the development of his organ of gregariousness.

H. D. THORP, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

As American as popcorn.

CHARLES SAXBY, Death in the Sun, p. 232 (1940)

In the United States there is more room where nobody is than where anybody is. This is what makes America what it is.

GERTRUDE STEIN, The Geographical History of America. (1936)

8 E. pluribus unus. (From many into one.)

VERGIL (?), Moretum, l. 104. (c. 45 B.C.)

Vergil is describing the blending of many colors into one.

Ex pluribus unum facere. (Out of many to make one.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. iv, ch. 8. (A.D. 397)

E Pluribus Unum. (From many one.)

Proposed 10 Aug., 1776, as the motto for the seal of the United States, by a committee composed of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. Adopted 20 June, 1782.

It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 17 Sept., 1796.

Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural, 4 March, 1801.

I will report all heroism from an American point of view.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok Sec. 6. (1881)

An American way of life

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Speech, accepting Presidential nomination, Philadelphia, Pa., 27 June, 1936

America is one long exhortation.

OSCAR WILDE, Newspaper Interview, during his visit to America in 1882.

Some Americans need hyphens in their names because only part of them has come over

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Washington, D.C., 16 May, 1914.

Hyphenated Americans.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, in Metropolitan Magazine, Oct., 1915

I am exactly as much opposed to English-Americans as to German-Americans. I oppose all kinds of hyphenated Americanism

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, New York, 12 Oct., 1915.

When two flags are hoisted on the same pole, one is always hoisted undermost. The hyphenated American always hoists the American flag undermost.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Fear God and Take Your Own Part. Ch. 5. (1916)

Our whole duty for the present, at any rate, is summed up in the motto: America first WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York City, 20 April, 1915.

A little group of willful men, representing no opinion but their own, have rendered the great Government of the United States helpless and contemptible.

WOODROW WILSON, Statement, 3 March, 1916, referring to a group of eleven senators who, by filibustering tactics, had prevented the passage of a bill authorizing Wilson to arm American merchantmen. "The angriest, least premeditated statement of his career"—BAKER, Woodrow Wilson, Life and Letters, vi, 481

Americanism, which I have coined, . . . is exactly similar in its formation and significance to the word Scotticism.

JOHN WITHERSPOON, The Druid. No. 5. (1781)

And the same, of course, as Britishism, which was coined by Richard Grant White, in an article in the Galaxy for March, 1868. The first use of the word cited in the Oxford English Dictionary is from the Boston Journal, 17 Sept., 1883, "A well arranged handbook of Britishisms, Americanisms, etc." Scotticism goes back to 1717, when Defoe used it (Memoirs of the Church of Scotland, ii, 137), in the sentence, "This is a Scotticism in Speech."

The first class I call Americanisms, by which I understand an use of phrases or terms, or a construction of sentences, . . . different from the use of the same terms . . . in Great Britain.

JOHN WITHERSPOON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 460 (c. 1794)

It was John Witherspoon who coined the word Americanism, and at once the English guardians of the sacred vessels began employing it as a general synonym for vulgarity and barbarism.

H. L. MENCKEN, The American Language, p. 49. (1918)

There can be no fifty-fifty Americanism in this country. There is room here for only 100 per cent Americanism.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Republican Convention, Saratoga, N.Y. (1890) Also in Foes of Our Own Household.

I am a one hundred per cent American!

I am, God damn, I am!

W. W. WOOLLCOTT, I Am a One Hundred Per Cent American. (1920)

No ill luck stirring but what lights upon Uncle Sam's shoulders.

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Troy, N.Y., Post, 7 Sept., 1813. The earliest known use of "Uncle Sam." See Dict. Amer. Eng., iv, 2387/2

Uncle Sam and John Bull.

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Columbia Centinel, Dec 1814.

U S. or Uncle Sam—a cant term in the army for the United States.

UNKNOWN, Niles' Register, 1815.

AMIABILITY

Amiability conceals a multitude of flaws. Beware the ill-tempered fairy.

SADI, Bastan. Ch. vii, Apol. 15. (c. 1257)

Amiability begets riches. ('Ho ch'i shêng ts'ai.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 2670. (1875)

There be two maner of beauties, of the which . . . we must applye amyableness to woman, dignyte to man.

ROBERT WHITTINGTON, tr., Tullyes Offices. Bk. i, p. 58. (1534)

AMUSEMENT

1 Life is full of amusement to an amusing man.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 83. (1887)

Hell is populated with the victims of harmless amusements.

BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, 84.

2 Whoe'er was edified, themselves were not.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 444. (1784)

We are not amused.

QUEEN VICTORIA, Remark, used as a warning whenever the conversation of her entourage seemed to her to be passing the bounds of decorum. It is also said that she used the phrase after watching an imitation of herself at Buckingham Palace in 1889. There are other explanations, none substantiated.

3

If you would rule the world quietly, you must keep it amused.

R. W. EMERSON, New England Reformers (1844) Quoted as the maxim of a tyrant.

4

Spill not the morning (the quintessence of the day) in recreations. . . . Pastime, like wine, is poysen in the morning.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Recreations. Bk. iii, ch. 13 (1642)

5

Amusement is the happiness of those who cannot think.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1717) Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law, Pleas'd with a rattle, tickled with a straw.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 275. (1733) Give 'em but a May-pole . . . 'tis meat, drink, washing, and lodging to 'em.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vii, ch. 38. (1759) I am a great friend to public amusements, for they keep people from vice.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. See BOSWELL, Life, 1772.

6

The cheaper your amusements, the safer.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 18 Nov., 1857.

ANCESTRY

See also Breeding, Heredity, Nobility

7

Birth does not adorn a man. (Non genus virum ornat.)

ACTIUS, Diomedes. Frag. 263, Loeb. (c. 140 B. C.) Good birth is indeed a fine thing, but the glory belongs to one's ancestors. (εὐγένεια καλὸν μὲν, ἀλλὰ προγόνων ἀγαθόν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children. Sec. 5D. (C. A. D. 95)

Birth is ye praise we receive of our auncestours, honestie the renowne we leaue to our successours.

LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 466. (1580)

Then what can birth, or mortal men, bestow, Since floods no higher than their fountains flow?

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath, l. 388. (1695)

Good birth is a very poor dish at table.

H. G. BORN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 365. (1855)

8

A venerable utterance proclaimed of old hath been fashioned among mankind: the prosperity of man, when it hath come full growth, engendereth offspring and dieth not childless, and from his good fortune there springeth up insatiate misery unto his seed.

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 750. (458 B. C.)

Seldom three descents continue good.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath, Her Tale, l. 403. (1695)

The father buys, the son biggs [builds], the grandchild sells, and his son thigs [begs].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 312. (1721)

One hundred years a banner and one hundred years a barrow. (Cent ans bannières et cent ans civières.)

ETIENNE PASQUIER, Récherches sur la France.

(c. 1850) A proverb relating to the changes of fortunes among the noble houses of feudal times.

There's nobbut three generations between clog and clog

Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. vii, p. 472

(1871) Noted as a Lancashire proverb, "implying that, however rich a poor man may eventually become, his great-grandson will certainly fall back to poverty and clogs" A more modern form is, "Clogs to clogs in three generations"

Twice clogs, once boots.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 292. (1875) "The first man wore clogs, and accumulated a 'power o' money'; his rich son spent it; and the third generation took up the clogs again"

Gold mine, gold spoon, gold cure

HORATIO WINSLOW, A Tale of Two American Generations. (c. 1935) "Gold cure" refers to the cure for alcoholism

The stairway of time ever echoes with the wooden shoe going up, the polished boot coming down

CARI SANDBURG, The People, Yes, p. 70 (1946)

The rich cannot remain rich for more than three generations.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444 (1938) A Japanese proverb.

From poverty to riches and back again in three generations.

EDITH HOWIT, Murder's So Permanent, p. 300 (1942)

Three generations from shirtsleeves to shirt-sleeves.

ANDREW CARNEGIE (?). Although this saying has often been attributed to Carnegie, the nearest approach to it in his published writings is a quotation of the Lancashire proverb given above, which Carnegie calls a Yorkshire proverb. See HENDRIX, Life of Andrew Carnegie, ii, 175.

In the architecture of American Society it's just three jumps from the master-bedroom to the dog-house.

ERIC JOHNSTON, Speech, at Founder's Day dinner of Boston University, March, 1944.

See also under GAIN: ILL-GOTTEN GAIN WILL NOT ENRICH THE THIRD HEIR.

1 Let us ascribe merit to our ancestors, for if they had not sinned we should not have come into the world.

Babylonian Talmud: Abodah Zarah, fo. 5a. (c. 450)

As the difference between gold and dust, so is the difference between our generation and that of our fathers.

Palestinian Talmud: Gittin, vi, 7. (c. 400)

The nails of our ancestors are better than the bellies of their descendants.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 9b. (c. 450)

Like the impotent, who glories in the vigor of his father

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, No. 570. (1817) There is another proverb which says: He is the truly noble youth who says, "Behold, I am the man," not he who says, "My father was."

2 So that the branch a goodly verdure flings, I reckon not if an acorn gave it birth.

BYRON, Don Juan Canto xiv, st. 59. (1820)

3 Let men know by your deeds who your ancestors were

S. G. CHAMPEL, Racial Proverbs, p. 438. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

4 A branch of one of your antediluvian families, fellows that the flood could not wash away

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love Act V, sc. 1. (1695) The French say, "Remonter au déluge" (To go back to the deluge)

The Fitzpatricks are so ancient that the best Irish antiquaries affirm that they reckoned many generations before the first man was created

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory, 27 Aug. 1783

I am, in point of fact, . . . of pre-Adamite ancestral descent

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado Act i. (1885)

5 There is no pride like the pride of ancestry. BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke Ch. 6. (1831)

6 Man is descended from a hairy, tailed quadruped, probably arboreal in its habits.

CHARLES DARWIN, The Descent of Man Pt. iii, ch. 21. (1871)

Each has his own tree of ancestors, but at the top of all sits Probably Arboreal

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Pastoral. (1887)

My father was a Creole, his father was a Negro, and his father a monkey; my family, it seems, begins where yours left off

ALEXANDRE DUMAS, when asked, "Who was your father?" (c. 1860) See J. C. YOUNG, A Memoir of Charles Maxne Young

From my Gaulish ancestors I inherit light blue eyes, a narrow head, and clumsiness in fighting. My clothes are as barbarous as theirs. But I do not rub butter in my hair.

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer 1873

7 Ye are sib [kin] to a pudding, ye ar com of a blood.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs p. 113. (c. 1595)

You are come of a blood and so is a pudding.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 368. (1721)

8 Let our fathers and grandfathers be valued for their goodness, ourselves for our own.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

9 My family history begins with me, but yours ends with you. (τὸ μὲν ἐμὸν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ γένος ἀρχεται, τὸ δὲ σὸν ἐν σοὶ παύεται.)

IPHICRATES, famous Athenian general (c. 325 B.C.), when Harmodius, descendant of a long line, twitted him with being a shoemaker's son. See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 187B.

Curtius Rufus seems to me to be descended from himself (Ex se natus.)

EMPEROR TIBERIUS. (c. A.D. 16) See TACITUS, Annals, xi, 21.

I am my own ancestor. (Moi je suis mon ancêtre.)

MARSHAL ANDOCHÉ JUNOT, when Napoleon created him Duc d'Abrantès in 1807, and one of the old régime sneeringly inquired who were his ancestors. The whole reply was, "My word, I know nothing about it; I am my own ancestor" (Ma foi, je n'en sais rien, moi je suis mon ancêtre).

Sire, I am my own Rudolph of Hapsburg.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Retort, to the Emperor of Austria, when the latter urged that he claim descent from a prince prior to his marriage to Maria Louisa. (1810) Rudolph of Hapsburg, elected Emperor of Germany in 1273, was the founder of the Hapsburg dynasty. And to a genealogist who was trying to trace the Bonapartes to a princely source, Napoleon said, "Don't waste your time, my friend; my patent of nobility dates from Montenotte," referring to his first victory, 12 April, 1796.

The loftiest towers rise from the ground (Wan chang kao lou t'sung ti ch'i.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 80 (1875)

10 What do pedigrees avail? (Stemmata quid faciunt?)

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. viii, l. 1. (c. A.D. 120)

On the day of resurrection, they will demand of thee an account, not of thy pedigree, but of thy actions.

SADI, Gulistan, Ch. vii, Apologue 8. (c. 1258)

Search not for a good man's pedigree

THOMAS FULLER, Guernologia, No. 4085. (1732) The Code Napoléon stipulated, "La recherche de la paternité est interdite" (Research into paternity is forbidden)

11 The man who has not anything to boast of but his illustrious ancestors is like a potato.—the only good belonging to him is under ground.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY (?), Characters. (1613)

A degenerate nobleman, or one that is proud of his birth, is like a turnip. There is nothing good of him but what is underground.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Characters: A Degenerate Nobleman. (c. 1660)

A family shouldn't be like a potato vine with the best part underground.

ROSEMARY TAYLOR, Chicken Every Sunday, p. 184. (1943)

1
Be not deluded by ancient masks about the hall. Take thy grandfathers and go. (Nec te decipiant veteres circum atria cerae. Tolle tuos tecum avos!)

OID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 65. (c. 13 B.C.)

A hallful of smoke-begrimed busts does not make a nobleman. (Non facit nobilem atrium plenum fumosis imaginibus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 5. (c. A.D. 64)

The hall which no ancient pictures grace
Is not the home of an ancient race.
(T'ang ch'ien wu ku hua, pu shih chiu jèn chia.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs No. 371. (1875) See also under NOBILITY.

2
Every man has had kings and slaves, barbarians and Greeks among his ancestors. (καὶ βασιλεῖς καὶ δοῦλοι ἡῤῥβαροὶ τε καὶ Ἕλληνες πολλὰκις μὲν οἱ γεγονόσιν ὀψοῦν.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 175A. (c. 390 B.C.)

In great pedigrees there are Governors and Chandlers.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 224. (1640)

The peer and the beggar are often of the same family.

THOMAS PAINE, The Rights of Man. Pt. ii, ch. v. (1791)

3
Such is the stock from which I spring. (Eo sum genere gnatus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 590. (c. 200 B.C.)

4
Sprong of a stone.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Chronicle, (Rolls), l. 6720. (c. 1297)

Als he ware sprongene of a stane,
Thare na mane hym kende.

UNKNOWN, Sir Percival, l. 1043. (c. 1400) To be "sprung of a stone" meant that no ancestry or kinsfolk were known. Clearly a reference to the old myth that men were created out of stones.

Like the truffle, without origin and without descendants.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 565. (1817) The Arabs have always been mystified by this subterranean fungus, and believe that it is produced by thunder and lightning. It is found in the deserts of Syria.

5
Ancestral glory is, as it were, a lamp to posterity. (Maiorum gloria posteris quasi lumen est.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 23. (c. 40 B.C.)

6
We have all had the same number of forefathers. (Omnibus nobis totidem ante nos sunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 64)

Let us thinke of that divine saying, You are the children of Abraham, doe the woorkes of Abraham.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 185. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As he said in Machiavel, omnes eodem patre nati, Adam's sons, conceived all and born in sin.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. 2, mem. 2. (1621)

We are all Adam's sons, silk only distinguisheth us.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Spanish-English, p. 13. (1659)

We are all Adam's Children; but Silk makes the Difference.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5425. (1732)

From yon blue heavens above us bent,

The gardener Adam and his wife

Smile at the claims of long descent.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. St. 7. (1874)

ALL BLOOD IS ALIKE ANCIENT, see under BLOOD

7
He who boasts of his descent, praises the deeds of another. (Qui genus lactat suum, aliena laudat.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 340. (c. A.D. 60)

Who but an ill-starred son would go about praising his sire? (τίς πατρί' αἰρήσει, εἰ μὴ κακοδαίμωνος υἱός;)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aratus Ch. i. (c. A.D. 100)

Quoted as an "ancient proverb," and Plutarch adds that it stops the mouths of those who, worthless themselves, take refuge in the virtues of certain ancestors, whom they are forever praising. Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, i, 19.

In my minde those which extol themselves in woordes and bragge of their birth, rather disgrace themselves then otherwise. . . . Like the mule who being demanded of his birth, and being ashamed to say that hee was an Asses sonne, answered, that hee was a horses cosin.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 196. (1574) Pettie, tr. The Germans say, "Mules boast much that their ancestors were horses" (Maulesel treiben viel Parlaren dass ihre Voreltern Pferde waren).

He stands for fame on his forefathers' feet,
By heraldry prov'd valiant or discreet.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 131. (1725)

Imbecile sons boast of their ancestors. (Wu chih nan erh pa tsu tsung k'ua.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2164. (1875)

8
Look in the chronicles; we came in with Richard Conqueror.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew: Induction, Sc. i, l. 4. (1594)

And tels how first his famous ancestor

Did come in long since with the Conquerour.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Satires, iv, 2. (1598)

Is he not a complete gentleman? his family came in with the Conqueror.

CHAPMAN AND SHIRLEY, The Ball. Act i. (1639)
We came in with the Conqueror.

BROME, English Moor. Act ii. sc. 4. (1659)

The Termagants came in with the Conqueror.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Squire of Alsatia Act iii, sc. 1. (1688)

A good many people say now that their families came here with the Conqueror.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Economic Interpretation of History, ii. 19. (1888)

1
Never unworthy my great ancestors. (Magnorum haud umquam indignus avorum.)

VLIRII, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 649. (19 B. C.)

2
He who serves his country well has no need of ancestors. (Qui sert bien son pays n'a pas besoin d'aïeux.)

VOLTAIRE, Mérope. Act i, sc. 3. (1734)

ANCHOR

3
To pull up the anchor. (Sublatis ancoris excedere.)

CAESAR, Bellum Civile, Bk. i, sec. 31. (c. 52 B. C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii. vi. 17, who also gives, "Ancoras tollere."

4
Drop anchor anywhere and the anchor will drag—that is, if your soul is a limitless, fathomless sea, and not a dogpound

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams (1905)

5
It is wise to let two anchors down from the swift ship during a stormy night. (ἀγαθαὶ δὲ πλοῦντι ἐν χειμαρρίᾳ ἵστασι βούς ἐκ καὶ δύο ἀνεσκαμψάσθαι δι' ἀγέρας.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode vi, l. 100 (c. 472 B. C.) In the Pythian Odes (iv, 25), Pindar speaks of "the brazen anchor, the swift Argo's bridle" (βούς Ἀργαίου χαλκίδον.)

A ship is safer when two cables hold it, and an anxious mother, if she rear twins, has less to dread (Melius duo defendunt retinacula navim, tutius et geminos anxia mater alit.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies Bk. ii, eleg. 22, l. 41 (c. 24 B. C.)

Ships ride not safely on one anchor (πῆς μὲν ἑνὶ ἀγκύρῃσιν οὐκ ἀσφαλὲς ὁρμίσσασθαι.)

HERODAS, Mimes No. i, l. 41 (c. A. D. 100)

Good riding at two anchors, men have tolde,

For if the tone faile, the tother maie holde

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 9 (1546)

It is safe riding at two anchors, a fire divided in twayne burneth slower, a fountaine running into many ryvers is of lesse force.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 116 (1570)

It is best to trust to two anchors (Bonum est duobus niti anchoris.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 41. (1869)

6
At the wyndas they weyzen her ankres

UNKNOWN, Early English Alliterative Poems, p. 101 (c. 1400)

Come to our shyp our ankers ar in wayde.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folyes (1874), i, 108. (1509)

I will streight weie anker, and hoysse vp sayle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

He for whom the sexton has tolled the bell has "weighed anchor."

NOAH BROOKS, An Old Town with a History. Century Magazine, Sept., 1882, p. 707/2.

ANGEL

7
Remember what is above you—a seeing eye and a hearing ear, and that all your deeds are written in a book.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, ii, 1. (c. 450) A saying of Rabbi Judah.

A demon holds a book, in which are written the sins of a particular man; an Angel drops on it from a phial, a tear which the sinner had shed in doing a good action, and his sins are washed out.

ALBERIC, MONK OF MONTE-CASSINO. (c. 1140)

See Edinburgh Review, i, 67.

"He shall not die, by G—," cried my uncle Toby. The Accusing Spirit, which flew up to heaven's chancery with the oath, blushed as he gave it in, and the Recording Angel, as he wrote it down, dropped a tear upon the word and blotted it out forever.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 8. (1760)

But, sad as angels for the good man's sin,

Weep to record, and blush to give it in

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 357. (1799)

8
I want to be an angel.

And with the angels stand,

A crown upon my forehead,

A harp within my hand.

URANIA BAILEY, I Want to Be an Angel. (1850)

9
One may understand like an Angel, and yet be a Devil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3784. (1732)

When the angels appear, the devils vanish

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 23 (1817)

10
And he [the angel] said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he [Jacob] said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me. (Non dimittam te, nisi benedixeris mihi.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxxii, 26. (c. 550 B. C.)

Hold the fleet angel fast until he bless thee

NATHANIEL COTTON, To-morrow, l. 36 (1751)

The Present, the Present is all thou hast

For thy sure possessing;

Like the patriarch's angel hold it fast

Till it gives its blessing.

J. G. WHITTIER, My Soul and I. St. 35. (1836)

11
Not Angles, but Angels! (Non Angli, sed Angeli!)

POPE GREGORY I (c. 595), on seeing some handsome English captives offered for sale in the market-place at Rome. See FREEMAN, Old English History, p. 44.

They answered that they were called Angles. "It is well," he [Gregory] said, "for they have the faces of angels." (Responsum est, quod Angli vocarentur. At ille, "Bene," inquit; "nam et angelicam habent faciem.")

BEDE, Historica Ecclesiastica Gentis Anglorum. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (c. 730)

Not Angles in short, but Angels.

MANNING COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 229. (1942)

1 Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels un-awares. (τῆς φιλοξενίας μὴ ἐπιλανθάνεσθε, διὰ ταύτης γὰρ ἑλθόντες τινες ξενισαυτες ἀγγέλους.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 2. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Et hospitalitatem nolite oblivisci, per hanc enim latuerunt quidam, Angelis hospitio receptis."

It fits the stranger and the poor to wound.

Unbless'd thy hand, if, in this low disguise,

Wander, perhaps, some inmate of the skies.

POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 576 (1726)

If angels are entertained unaware, it is because they have tact.

SPENCER BAYNE, Murder Recalls Van Kill, p. 37. (1939)

2 Why came you angel-wise? 'Tis now five months since you came to this door. (τί σὺ θεὸς πρὸς ἀνθρώπους;)

HERODES, Mimes. No. i, l. 9. (c. A. D. 100)

A. D. Knox, tr. Loeb.

Like angels' visits, short and bright.

JOHN NORRIS, The Parting. (1637)

Visits

Like those of angels, short and far between.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave Pt. ii, l. 586 (1743)

What though my winged hours of bliss have been Like angel-visits, few and far between?

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 377 (1799)

Mr. Campbell, in altering the expression, has spoiled it. "Few" and "far between" are the same thing.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Poets. (1818) Campbell never forgave Hazlitt for the criticism.

3 By every man at birth a Spirit stands, A guide of virtue for life's mysteries.

(ἐκαστὸν δαίμων ἀνδρὶ συμπαραίσταται εὐθὺς γενομένῳ, μυσταγωγὸς τοῦ βίου ἀγαθός.)

MELANDER, Fragments. Kock, iii, 167. (c. 400 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 474B

I guess one angel in another's hell:

The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,

Till my bad angel fire my good one out

SHAKESPEARE, Passionate Pilgrim, l. 26 (1599)

They are (as others suppose) appointed by those higher powers to keep men from their nativity, and to protect or punish them as they see cause; and are called boni et mali Genii by the Romans.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)

4 Look homeward Angel now, and melt with ruth.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 163. (1637) "Look Homeward, Angel" was used by Thomas Wolfe as the title of a novel in 1931.

5 Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels. (Minuisti eum paulominus ab angelis.) Old Testament: Psalms, viii, 5. (c. 400 B. C.)

To be even here but little lower than the angels. FRANK E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 34 (1850)

6 An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 1, 110. (1599)

A ministering angel shall my sister be.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 264. (1600) SCOTT,

Marmion, canto vi, st. 30, has "A ministering angel thou."

The more angel she, And you the blacker devil!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 130 (1605)

An angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 6, 43 (1609)

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 1, 44 (1612)

7 Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 3, 22 (1606)

8 In heaven an angel is nobody in particular.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists (1903)

9 An angel flew through the room (Ein Engel flog durchs Zimmer)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb, alluding to the sudden silence which sometimes falls on a social group. It is widely used, but its origin is uncertain. The Dutch say, "The pastor is going by" (De domine gaat voorbi) with the same meaning.

ON THE SIDE OF THE ANGELS, see under EVOLUTION

ANGER

See also WRATH

10 Anger, 'tis said, is the last thing to grow old. (Θύμων ὀσχάρον λόγος ἐστὶ γῆρας.)

ALCIBADES, Fragments. Frag. 67 (c. 595 B. C.)

Anger has no old age but only death. (Θύμω οὐδὲν γῆρας ἐστὶν ἄλλο πλὴν θανάτου.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 954. (c. 408 B. C.)

Quoted by Scholiast on Sophocles with citation of the similar proverb, Θύμω ὀσχάρον γῆρας αἰεὶ (Anger grows old last of all). This shorter form is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 13, with the Latin, "Ira omnium tardissime senescit." See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, l. 163.

11 Hercules' temper. (Ἡρακλέους ὀργή.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1030 (422 B. C.)

I'll let my pig out. (λύσω τὴν ἐμαυτῆς ὄν.)

ARISTOPHANES, Lysistrata, l. 682. (412 B. C.)

A proverbial phrase, which Rogers renders, "Our wildbeast wrath will break."

You would infuriate a rock. (καὶ γὰρ ἂν πέτρῃ | φύσει σὺ γ' ὀργάνειας.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 334. (c. 409 B. C.)

He has eaten scorpions. (σκορπίους βίβρωκε.)

UNKNOWN. Of one who is easily angered.

1
Anyone can become angry—that is easy, but to be angry with the right person, to the right degree, at the right time, for the right purpose, and in the right way—this is not easy. (οὕτω δὲ καὶ τὸ μὲν ὀργισθῆναι πάντος καὶ ῥᾶδιον.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 2. (335 B. C.)

2
Whenever you get angry, Caesar, do not say or do anything before repeating to yourself the twenty-four letters of the alphabet. (τίτταρα γράμματα διελθεῖν πρὸς ἐαυτόν.)

ATHENODORUS, the Stoic philosopher, to Augustus Caesar (c. 10 B. C.) Athenodorus had been granted leave to return to his home at Tarsus, but when, at his parting audience with the emperor, he made this remark, Augustus seized his hand, saying, "I still have need of your presence here," and detained him a whole year.

When angry count 10 before you speak. If very angry 100.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Charles Clay. (1817) One of Jefferson's ten "canons of conduct."

Take a little time—count five-and-twenty, Tattycottam.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. i, ch. 14. (1857)

When angry, count four; when very angry, swear. MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

3
Be not choleric and thou shalt not sin.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 29b. (c. 450) A medieval Jewish proverb declares: "Anger rusts the intellect so that it cannot discern right from wrong."

Cholericke complexions are soonest incensed to anger, because they abound in heat.

GEORGE PLATTE, Petite Pallace: Curatius and Horatia, p. 166. (1576)

4
He who gives vent to his anger destroys his house.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 102b. (c. 450)

Allas! a thousand folk hath rakel [hasty] ire Fully fordoon, and brought hem in the mire.

Allas! for sorwe I wol my-selven slee!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Manciples Tale, l. 185. (c. 1380)

Act nothing in furious passion; it's putting to sea in a storm.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentium. (1660)

5
Lose not thy temper because of a scorner, So that he use thy mouth as a trap.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), viii, 11. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

6
If a man has anger in his heart, what further enemy need he fear?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 21. (c. A. D. 100)

7
Be angry for a serious cause. (Irascere ob rem gravem.)

CATO (?), Disticha: Prol. No. 30. (c. 175 B. C.)

Anger breeds hate, harmony nourishes love. (Ira odium generat, concordia nutrit amorem.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i. No. 36.

8
Anger makes any coward brave. (Quemlibet ignavum facit indignatio fortem.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

Valour's whetstone, anger.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking-Glass. Act iii, sc. 2. (1638)

Anger edgeth valour.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 178. (1639)

Anger, which is said to be the whetstone of courage.

DAVID HUME, Political Discourses, ii. 31. (1752)

9
Anger is a blind thing: often it prevents our seeing obvious matters, or obscures matters already understood. (τυφλὸν ἔστιν ἡ ὀργή.)

CHRYSIPPUS, On the Failure to Lead a Consistent Life. (c. 250 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 450C.

Anger in fighting doubtful claims eschew:

It bars the mind from seeing what is true.

(Iratu de re incerta contendere noli impedit ira animum, ne possis cernere verum.)

CATO (?), Disticha Bk. ii. No. 4. (c. 175 B. C.)

10
I have heard it often said that he who cannot be angry is no man.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act i, sc. 2. (1604) A variation of the proverb is given in Notes and Queries, vol. 154, p. 27: "Hee that cannot be angry is a foole, but hee that will not be angry is more foole."

Anger is one of the sinews of the soul; he that wants it hath a maimed mind.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Anger. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1642)

11
He who holds back rising anger like a rolling chariot, him I call a real driver; other people are but holding the reins.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 222. (c. A. D. 475)

He hath wit at will that with an angry heart can hold him still.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs. (c. 1595)

12
The angry man never wanted woe.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca S.-I., p. 9. (1633)

The choleric man never wants woe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 538. (1640)

Angry (or hasty) men seldom want woe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)
"Hasty in our language," Ray adds, "is but a more gentle word for angry. Anger indeed makes men hasty, and inconsiderate in their actions. Furor iraque mentem praecipitant."
FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 801. (1732)

Anger and haste hinder good counsel.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 313. (1855) The Germans say, "Zorn thut nicht mit Rath" (Anger has nothing to do with counsel).

1
Beware of vinegar and sweete wine, and of the anger of a peaceable man.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, fo. 30 (1573)
Quoted by D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs.

Take heed of the Vinegar of sweet Wine, and the Anger of Good-nature.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

2
Anger is never without a Reason, but seldom with a good One.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

3
A heady Man, and a Fool, may wear the same Cap.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 212. (1732)

He that is heady, is ruled by a Fool

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2178 (1732)

4
As Fire is kindled by Bellows, so is Anger by Words.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 677. (1732)

Anger is a sworn Enemy.

Anger is the Fever and Frenzy of the Soul.

Anger makes a rich Man hated, and a poor Man scorned.

Anger may glance into the Breast of a wise Man, but rests only in the Bosom of Fools

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 793-9

Two to one in all things, against the angry Man

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5336.

5
Two Things a Man should never be angry at: what he can help, and what he cannot help.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5335 (1732)

Also KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 322. (1721)

6
He who will be angry for any thing, will be angry for nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Anger. (1642)

7
Anger is hard to combat because it is willing to buy revenge with life. (χαλεπὸν φάρμακόν ἐστιν θυμὸν μάχεσθαι, ψυχῆς γὰρ ἀντίδοτον.)

HERACLEITUS, Apothegm. (c. 513 B.C.) As quoted by ARISTOTLE, Politics, v, 9, 18.

8
If she be angry, beshrew her angry heart.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

She stamps like a ewe upon yeaning [lambing].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 344. (1678).

I warrant it put her into the hips.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Your ladyship's absolutely in alt. . . . Yes, in alt: give me leave to tell your ladyship, that you have raised your voice a full octave higher.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, Musical Lady. Act i. (1762) In alt: in the octave above the treble stave beginning with G.

Come, please be a little less in alt.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Camilla. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1796)

Voice risen somewhat into alt.

CARLYLE, Cromwell, iv, 60. (1845)

"Hoity toity!" cries Honour, "Madam is in her airs, I protest!"

FIELDING, Tom Jones Bk vii, ch. 8. (1749)

9
He is at three wordis vp in the house roufe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

I desie thee, said Scoggins wife (and was up in the house top).

UNKNOWN, Scoggins Jest, p. 92. (1626)

At three words he is at the top of the house.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca S.-L., p. 10. (1633)

To be at t' house-top: to be in a great rage.

WILLIAM CARR, Craven Dialect, i, 236. (1828)

10
Anger, sweeter far than trickling honey, waxeth like smoke in the breasts of men. (χολὸς . . . γλυκίων μελιτος.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk xviii, l. 108. (c. 850 B.C.)

[Anger] which sweeter is than honey (from the comb. (ὅς τε πολὺ γλυκίων μελιτος καταλείβουσιν.))

PLATO, Philibus. Sec. 47E. (c. 350 B.C.) Paraphrasing Homer.

11
Anger is a short madness. (Ira furor brevis est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 62. (20 B.C.)
Certain wise men have claimed that anger is temporary madness. (Quidam itaque e sapientibus viris iram dixerunt brevem insaniam.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 2. (c. A.D. 55)

Anger is a short madness, but a long one to him who letteth her have the bridle. (Ira è breve furor, & chin'ol frena | E furor longho, che'l suo possessore.)

PETRARCA, Sonetti Sopra Vari Argomenti. Sonnet vii. (c. 1360) As quoted by FLORIO, First Fruits, fo. 42. The first line is, of course, a quotation from Horace.

They say, my lords, ira furor brevis est.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 2, 28. (1606)

Anger. . . . madness itself—ira furor brevis est.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. i, subs. 9. (1621)

Anger sets the house on fire; . . . it is a short madness.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons. (1650)

He was much in the right whoever it was that first call'd Anger, a short madness.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Seneca's Morals. Ch. 4. (c. 1680)

Fear (which, like anger, is a short madness).

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Hol Ch. 18. (1855)

1 Anger is excited principally by pride.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1 May, 1773.

2 Let him cool in the skin he hat [grew hot] in.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80. (1721)

Let him come to himself, like MacKibbon's crowdy [porridge].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 237. (1721)

Ye'll cool and come to yoursell, like MacGibbon's crowdy, when he set it out at the window-hole.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy, Ch. 25. (1818)

Keep cool: it will be all one a hundred years hence.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne (1850)

A man should study ever to keep cool. He makes his inferiors his superiors by heat.

EMERSON, Lectures: Social Aims. (1860)

3 Vain is anger without strength. (Vana est sine viribus ira.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. i, ch.10. (c. 25 B. C.)

4 That ancient adage, from an angry man, get thee gone but for a while; but from an enemy, for ever.

JAMES MARRE, tr., Celestina, p. 99. (1631)

From a choleric man withdraw a little; from him that says nothing, for ever

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 170 (1640)

5 The size of a man can be measured by the size of a thing that makes him angry.

J. K. MORLEY, Some Things I Believe. (1937)

6 Thou art a God . . . slow to anger. (Deus longanimis.)

Old Testament: Nehemiah, ix, 17. (c. 444 B. C.)

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city. (Melior est patiens viro forti: et qui dominatur animo suo, expugnator urbium.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 32. (c. 350 B. C.)

Who is mighty? He that masters his nature, as it is said: "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

BEN ZOMA, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 2. (c. A. D. 450) Oesterley, tr.

Who is mighty? He who conquers his passions.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, iv, 1. (c. 450) See also under SELF-CONTROL.

Beware of him that is slow to anger: he is angry for something, and will not be pleased for nothing.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanach, 1739.

7 To be in a stew. (In fermento iacet.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 959. (c. 200 B. C.) The Germans say, "Er ist ein wenig heiss gebadet" (He's in too hot a bath).

He has hay on his horns, give him a wide berth! (Faenum habet in cornu: longe fuge!)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 34. (35 B. C.) See under HAY.

His anger is at the edge of his nostrils.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 467.

(1817) Ready to burst out.

So furious that the hair raises one's cap. (Nu fa 'chung kuan.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 194. (1872)

I thought North would blow a fuse.

G. H. COXE, The Glass Triangle, p. 132. (1940)

8 The worst sauce for meat, anger. (ἀρεπεία τὸν δὲ σὺν ἐμβάλειν . . . τὴν ὀργήν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Control of Anger. Sec. 461C. (c. A. D. 95)

9 Thou hast the advantage of the angry when thou keepest silence.

PTAH-HOTEP, Precepts. (c. 2550 B. C.)

Anger restrained is wisdom gained. (Leniter qui saevijunt sapiunt magis.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 408. (190 B. C.)

Never to master one's anger is a mark of intemperance and lack of training. (τὸ γὰρ μηδαμὸς ἀρετὴν ὀργῆς ἀκρίβειαν καὶ ἀκόλαστον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 21. (c. A. D. 10)

Place a curb and drag on your anger. (Pone irae irena modumque.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 88. (c. A. D. 120)

No man hath drunk a better draught than that of anger which he hath swallowed for God's sake.

MOHAMMAD, Sunnah. (c. 630) See Sayings of Muhammad, p. 64.

On asking the sage who may be truly termed a hero, he replied, He who can requite folly with meekness, and subdue his anger.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 92. (c. 1050)

The sages were asked, Which is the most commendable war? That which is waged against our evil desires, was their reply.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim.

No. 204. "Have you also subdued the internal enemy between your ribs?" the sage asked of the conquerors who were boasting of having subdued an enemy (Pirké Aboth, iv, 1.) And Seneca applied the same phrase to Alexander: "Alexander, the conqueror of so many kings and peoples, was himself subdued by anger." (Alexander victor tot regum atque populorum irae succubuit.)

By controlling the anger of a minute, you may avoid the remorse of a lifetime. (Jên té i shih fén, chung shén wu nao mên.)

SELWYN GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 42. (1938) A Chinese proverb

10 With the good man anger is quick to die (Bonum ad virum cito moritur iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 87. (c. 43 B. C.)

Like fragile ice, anger in time passes away. (Ut fragilis glacies, interit ira mora.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 374. (c. 1 B. C.)

Anger dieth quickly with a good man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1670)

Anger is short-liv'd in a good Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 796. (1732)

1
Lose your temper once for all with the man with whom you don't want to lose it often. (Cui nolis saepe irasci irascaris semel.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 127. (c. 43 B. C.)

It is wisdom to lose one's temper late and then once for all. (Prudentis est irascier sero et semel.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 550.

2
A weapon should be taken from, not given to, an angry man. (Eriperetelum non dare irato decet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 184. (c. 43 B. C.)
Most weighty is the anger of an upright man. (Gravissima est probi hominis iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 230.

A wise man grows angry slowly but seriously. (Tarde sed graviter sapiens irascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 695.

A man is outside himself when angry. (Homo extra corpus est suum cum irascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 241.

The angry man takes the (hostile) will for the deed. (Iratus etiam facinus consilium putat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 301.

It is on returning to his senses that the angry man is angry with himself. (Iratus cum ad se rediit sibi tum irascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 311.

An angry man has only accusations to utter. (Iratus nihil non criminis loquitur loco.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 319.

The law sees the angry man, the angry man sees not the law. (Lex videt iratum, iratus legem non videt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 344.

Anger usually forgets the law. (Legem solet obliviscier iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 345.

To be angry with the powerful is to seek danger for oneself. (Potenti irasci sibi periculum est quaerere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 531.

Anger's way is to regard nothing. (Respicere nihil consuevit iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 638.

What can show anger must ever be dreaded. (Semper metuendum quicquid irasci potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 679.

3
Nothing is benefited by delay except anger. (Rei nulli prodest mora nisi iracundiae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 628. (c. 43 B. C.)

The greatest corrective for anger is delay. (Maximum remedium irae mora est.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 29. (c. A. D. 65)

Repeated in Bk. iii, with dilatatio for mora.

Give not reins to your inflamed passions: take time and a little delay; impetuosity manages all things badly.

STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. x, l. 703. (c. A. D. 80)

Delay is the antidote of anger. (Harren ist des Zornes Gegengift.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 324. (1856) A German proverb.

4
The angry man always thinks he can do more than he can. (Semper iratus plus se posse putat quam possit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 643. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis.

He that hath great ire and wrath in himself, he weeneth alway that he may do things that he may not do.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 18. (c. 1387)

5
Angry men make themselves beds of nettles

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 7. (1748)

6
To carry the hand quickly to the sword in anger is to carry the back of the hand to the teeth in regret.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. i, Apologue 4. (c. 1257)

Anger begins with Folly, and ends with Repentance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 792. (1732)

Anger and folly walk cheek by jole, repentance treads on both their heels.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

Take this remark from Richard, poor and lame: What'er 's begun in anger, ends in shame.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

7
When anger swells the heart.

The idly-barking tongue restrain.

(σκιδναίνας ἐν στήθεσιν ὄργας γλώσσαν μαφύλακας πεφύλαχθε.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 137. (c. 610 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 456E. See EDMONDS, Lyra Græca, i. 277

8
Anger is like those ruins which break themselves against what they fall upon. (Ira ruinis simillima, quae super id quod oppressere franguntur.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55)

How much better it is to forsake anger than to wait for anger to forsake you. (Quanto satius est iram relinquere quam ab ira relinquì!)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 27, sec. 4

It is hidden anger that harms. (Ira quae tegitur nocet.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 153. (c. A. D. 60)

9
Anger is a spender—few indulge it without cost. (Ira impendit, paucis gratuita est.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 55)

Anger makes dull men witty, but it keeps them poor.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 4. (1625)

Quoted as a saying of Queen Elizabeth.

Anger raiseth invention, but it overheareth the oven.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. Works, p. 237. (1673)

Anger warms the Invention, but overheats the Oven.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

Anger is an expensive luxury in which only men of a certain income can indulge.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Prue and I. Ch. 6. (1857)

Few men can afford to be angry.

AUGUSTINE BIRKELL, Obiter Dicta: Edmund Burke. (1884)

1 Never anger Made good guard for itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 1, 9. (1606)

Prithce, go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 172.

2 Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iv, 2, 50. (1607)

Every Stroke our Fury strikes, is sure to hit ourselves at last.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 271. (1693)

To be angry is to revenge the faults of others upon ourselves

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1727)

Anger is many times more hurtful, than the Injury that caused it

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 794. (1732)

Anger punishes its self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 799.

3 Anger is like

A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i, 1, 132. (1612)

He that strives not to stem his anger's tide,

Does a wild horse without a bridle ride

COLLEY CIBBER, Love's Last Shift. Act iii, sc. 7. (1696)

A man in a passion rides a mad horse.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749

4 Touch me with noble anger!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 279. (1605)

Anger is a noble infirmity.

MARTIN F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Hatred and Anger. (1839)

5 Don Pedro: I think he be angry indeed.

Claudio: If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 1, 141. (1598) To find a harmless outlet for his anger.

If you be angry, turne the buckle of your girdle behind you.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters. (1603) HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659) D'AVENANT, Play-House to Be Let. Act v. (c. 1663)

If any man take exceptions, let him turn the buckle of his girdle.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

If any man be angry at it,—I am plain, and shall use a homely expression: Let him turn the buckle of his girdle behind him!

OLIVER CROMWELL, Speech, 17 Sept., 1656.

If miss will be angry for nothing, take my counsel, and bid her turn the buckle of her girdle behind her.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Never look grim at me, man—if ye're angry, ye ken how to turn the buckle o' your belt behind you.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 25. (1818)

6 Let's purge this choler without letting blood

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 1, 153 (1595)

What, drunk with choler?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 129. (1597)

Aggravate your choler.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 176. (1598)

Choler is an ill guest.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Chimney-Corner. (1613)

7 Yf thou be angry with me without a cause thou shalt be made at one w'out amendes

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig C2. (c. 1520)

He that will be angry without cause,

Must be at one, without amendes, by sage sawes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

He that crabs [quarrels] without cause, should mease [grow calm] without amends.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)

Be not angry with any without a cause If thou beest, thou must not onely, as the Proverb saith, be appeas'd without amends, but, as our Saviour saith, be in danger of the judgement.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Anger. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1642)

He that is angry without a cause, shall be pleased without amends

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2277. (1732)

8 What vexed and riled him (to use his own expression), was the infernal indifference . . . of Clavering.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 64. (1848)

Thar ain't no sense in gittin' riled.

BRET HARTE, Jim. (1870)

9 Their rage supplies them with weapons. (Furor arma ministrat.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 150. (19 B. C.)

Anger brings back his strength. (Ac vim suscitatur ira.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 454.

Anger makes a weapon. (Telum ira facit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 508.

However weak the hand, anger gives it strength (Quamlibet infirmas adjuvat ira manus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 66. (13 B. C.)

Rage supplies all with arms. When an angry man thirsts for blood anything will serve him for a spear. Fury turns a stick into a cudgel. (Omnibus armatur rabies, pro cuspidē ferri cuncta volant, dum dextra ferox in vulnera saevit. | pro telo geritur quidquid suggesserit ira.)

CLAUDIAN, Rimanti Telum Ira Facit. (c. A.D. 395) "Anger affords a weapon to him who seeks one."

Anger seeks its prey,—
Something to tear with sharp-edged tooth and claw.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i. (1868)

1
Fury and anger carry the mind away. (Furor iraque mentem praecipitant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 316. (19 B.C.)

He that cannot refrayne his ire hath no power ouir his witte.

EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 23. (1477)

When a Man grows angry, his Reason rides out.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5533. (1732)

II—Anger: Proverbial Comparisons

2
He is as angry as a pissemyre.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: The Somnour's Tale, l. 117. (c. 1388)

3
As angrie as an Asse with a squib in his breech.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, French-English Dictionary: Ane. (1611)

4
Madder than a wet hen.

JAKE FAISTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 75. (1938)
She was as mad as a wet hen.

CHRIS HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 127. (1942)

5
As mad as the baiting bull of Stamford.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, li, 268. (1662)

As mad as the baited bull at Stamford.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 714. (1732)
Fuller explains that the proverb arose from the condition made by Earl Warren when he gave the town a meadow for a public park, that they find a mad bull six weeks before Christmas day every year, for the Christmas sports.

6
He's as mad as a cat that's lost a mouse.

O. HENRY (W. S. Porter), The Clarion Call. (1903)

7
So angry it affected my sight. (Ita iracundia obstitit oculis.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 451. (c. 200 B.C.)

8
Mad as a buck.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 72. (1593)

9
As wrath as a wasp.

UNKNOWN, Alexander, l. 738. (c. 1350)

Lorde, as she was testy, Angry as a waspyl

JOHN SHELTON, Elynour Rummyngs, l. 330. (1529)

Nowe mery as a cricket, and by and by Angry as a waspe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

AGONY

10
I do think he piled the agony up a little too high in that last scene.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Diary in America. Ser. i, vol. ii, p. 39. (1839)

They are hard to beat in the way of piling up the agony in the way of strong phrases.

G. O. SHIELDS, S. S. Prentiss, p. 426. (1850)

They think there is no way but 'to pile up the agony,' to intensify the sense of danger.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, We and Our Neighbors, p. 219. (1875)

ANGLING, See Fishing

ANOTHER

11
Roister Doister: If it were an other but thou, it were a knave.

Merrygreeke: Ye are an other yourself, sir.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act iii, sc. 5. (1553)

Greenes Tu Quoque.

JOHN COOKE, Title. (1614) "Tu quoque." Latin for "thou also," or, in English slang, "you're another."

"I did not mean to abuse the cloth; I only said your conclusion was a non sequitur." "You're another," cries the sergeant, "an' you come to that, no more a sequitur than yourself."

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. ix, ch. 6. (1749)

"Sir," said Mr. Tupman, "you're a fellow." "Sir," said Mr. Pickwick, "you're another."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 15. (1836)

No man knows better the effect of the tu quoque form of argument.

LORD LYTTON, Alice. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1838)

ANSWER

See also Question and Answer

12
He maketh an answer worthy of a beating, for its freight is of ill.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. 12, l. 5. (c. 700 B.C.)

13
A violent answer sets weapons of fight in motion; speak therefore with the sweetness of affection.

AMI, Teaching. No. 38. (c. 2000 B.C.) Budge, tr.

A soft answer turneth away wrath. (Responsio mollis frangit iram.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 1. (c. 350 B.C.)

TRENCH (Lessons in Proverbs, p. 134) cites a similar medieval Latin proverb: "Frangitur ira gravis, cum sit responsio suavis" (Broken is anger when one answers softly).

John Wyclif renders the Bible phrase, "A soft answer brekith ire."

The soft word the loud stillketh.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vii, l. 1583. (c. 1390)

A soft answer turneth away rats.

VACHEL LINDRAY, Foolish about Windows. (1925)

<sup>1</sup> I'm a smart guy who chases news . . . and knows all the answers.

J. W. BELLAH, The Bones of Napoleon, p. 245. (1940)

Nobody has all the right answers all the time.

H. I. PHILLIPS, On White or Rye, p. 112. (1941) Quoted as an "old adage."

<sup>2</sup> Answer not before thou hast heard the cause.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 8. (c. 190 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> To "get out of my house," and "what do you want with my wife?" there's no answer. (A "idos de mi casa," y "qué queréis con mi mujer?" no hay responder.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43 (1615)

<sup>4</sup> My appearance seemed to her like an answer to prayer.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 72. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> Burning is no answer. (Brûler n'est pas répondre.)

CAMILLE DESMOULINS, to Robespierre, when the latter proposed to burn the numbers of the moderate journal, Le Vieux Cordelier. (1792) The retort became proverbial.

To bung up a man's eyes ain't the way to enlighten him.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 4. (1843)

<sup>6</sup> Such answer as a man gives, such will he get.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c. 1595)

<sup>7</sup> The shortest answer is doing.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 554. (1640) Gabriel Harvey often quotes the Italian proverb, "Il pensare non importa ma il fare" (Thinking is of no importance but doing).

<sup>8</sup> No reply is best.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267. (1721) Bacon quotes "an obscure fellow" as saying, "Qui replicat, multiplicat" (He who replies, multiplies). The Germans have a proverb, "Keine Antwort ist auch eine Antwort" (No answer is also an answer).

<sup>9</sup> Every man shall kiss his lips that giveth a right answer. (Labia deosculabitur, qui recta verba respondet.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 26. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. iv, 1, 174. A proverbial saying. (1600)

<sup>11</sup> I pause for a reply.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 36. (1599)

But answer came there none.

WALTER SCOTT, The Bridal of Triermain. Canto iii, st. 10. (1813)

That's a blazing strange answer.

DICKENS, A Tale of Two Cities. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1859)

ANT

<sup>12</sup> What, is the breeze in your breech?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act. iv, sc. 6. (1619) Breeze: gadfly.

To have a breeze in his breech. Spoken of one that frisks about, and cannot rest in a place.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)

As a matter of fact, they're full of red ants.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

I'll get the ants out of those moonlit pants.

KAUFMAN AND HART, The Man Who Came to Dinner. Act i. (1939)

Wagner started to have ants in his pants.

CORNELL WOOLRICH, The Bride Wore Black, p. 181. (1940)

He began to move about as if hot-nosed ants were exploring the farthest reaches of his pants.

THORNE SMITH, Passionate Witch, p. 5. (1941)

You have ants in your pants tonight.

ROBERT G. DEAN, Layoff, p. 158. (1942) An American saying, popularized by Hugh S. Johnson in 1939.

<sup>13</sup> Every ant has its spleen. (Cada hormiga tuíene su ira.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 253. (1856) A Spanish proverb: from the old Greek, ἐνταυτὶ καὶ μύμηκει χολή (Even an ant has its spleen), which warns not to despise an enemy, however insignificant. "Even a gnat has its sting" is of similar significance. See under LITTLE THINGS

<sup>14</sup> To the ant, a few drops of rain is a flood

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438 (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>15</sup> The Wise-one gathers her store. (ὁ σοφὸς ἀνὴρ ἀμύεται.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 778. (c. 800 B. C.) "Wise-one" or "Provident One," proverbial for the ant.

The ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer. (Formicæ populus infirmus, qui praeprat in messe cibum sibi.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 25. (c. 400 B. C.)

The sailors who scour every sea, all say that they bear toil with this in view, that when old they may retire into secure ease, once they have piled up their provisions; even as the tiny, hard-working ant (for she is their model) drags all she can with her mouth, and adds it to the heap she is building, because she is not unaware and not heedless of the morrow. (Haud ignara ac non incauta futuri.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, Sat. i, l. 33. (35 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> The ant has taught some of us to dread hunger and cold. (Frigusque famemque | formica tandem quidam expavere magistra.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. vi, l. 360. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>1</sup> Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise. (Vade ad formicam o piger, et considera vias eius, et disce sapientiam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

Go to the ant, thou Sot, and learn more wisdom.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p.190. (1709)

Go to the bee, thou poet, consider her ways and be wise.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii. (1903)

The ant, which for many years served as a model of intelligence and industry in the school-readers, has been proven to be a doddering idiot and a waster of time and effort.

O. HENRY, The Higher Pragmatism. (1909)

<sup>2</sup> 'Twere better for the ant not to have wings.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 16. (c. 1258)
To her hurt the ant got wings. (Por su mal le nacieron alas a la hormiga.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)
If God purposes to destroy an ant, he permits her to grow wings.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 11. (1817) Pride goeth before a fall.

ANTIQUITY

See also Past

<sup>3</sup> It is probable that primitive mankind, whether sprung from the earth [HESIOD, Works and Days, 108; PINDAR, Nemean Odes, vi, 1] or the survivors of some destructive cataclysm [PLATO Laws, 676 ff; TIMAEUS, 22 ff] were just like ordinary foolish people, so that it is absurd that we should abide by their notions.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. ii, ch. 5, sec. 12. (c. 330 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> To speak truly, "Antiquitas saeculi iuventus mundi." These times are the ancient times, when the world is ancient.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i. (1605)

Reason will tell you that old age or antiquity is to be accounted by the farther distance from the beginning.

GEORGE HAKEWILL, An Apologie of the Power of God. (1627)

To Antiquity it self I think nothing due. For if we will reverence the Age, the Present is the Oldest.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan, Conclusion. (1651)

We are the only white-bearded, silver-headed ancients.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 5. (1807)

We are Ancients of the earth,
And in the morning of the times.

TENNYSON, The Day-Dream: Envoi. (1842)

<sup>5</sup> The ancients tell us what is best, but we must learn of the moderns what is fittest.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

<sup>6</sup> Antiquity cannot privilege an Error, nor Novelty prejudice a Truth.

Antiquity is not always a Mark of Verity.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 803-804. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> The shade and color of misty antiquity. (Umbra et color quasi opacae vetustatis.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. x, ch. 3. (c. A. D. 150)

<sup>8</sup> It seems to me much harder to be a modern than an ancient. (Il me semble beaucoup plus difficile d'être un moderne que d'être un ancien.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 233. (1810)

<sup>9</sup> Before Theognis was born. (Priusquam nasceretur Theognis.)

LUCILIUS, Sermones. (c. 140 B. C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, i, 3, 19. A proverbial phrase. Theognis' date was c. 550 B. C. The English equivalent, of course, is "As old as Adam." See under AGE.

This I knew before Theognis' birth. (τούτῃ μὲν ἤδην πρὶν Θεόγνην γέγονεν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Philosophers. Sec. 777C. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted from an unknown comic poet. Kock, iii, 495. A proverbial expression for anything which has been common knowledge for a long time, "Queen Mary's dead," for example.

From the time of Deucalion. (A Deucalione)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. vi, frag. 284. Loeb. (c. 123 B. C.) Deucalion was the Greek Noah, who built himself a boat and saved himself and his wife Pyrrha, when warned by Prometheus that Zeus intended to destroy the human race by a great flood. Hence the phrase means, "Dating from the flood" "Post diluvium" (Subsequent to the flood) is a Latin proverbial phrase, sometimes denoted by the initials, P.D

Hang dignity, it's of the oak (Dignitatis ἄλς τανquam ὀρός.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 19. (59 B. C.) A proverb alluding to a supposed acorn diet before the use of grain was discovered

In the consulship of Plancus (Consule Planco)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 14, l. 28. (23 B. C.)

Horace is saying that his whitening hair softens a spirit prone to strife, and that he would not have brooked such insult when hot with youth, in the consulship of Plancus

In the reign of Saturn. (Saturno rege)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 1 (c. A. D. 120)

More ancient than Chaos and the reign of Saturn. (Antiquior quam chaos et Saturnia tempora.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. viii, No. 40.

(1523) A variation is "Older than Codrus" (Antiquior Codro). Codrus was the last of the legendary kings of Athens. See ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 20.

Jove had not yet grown a beard. (Iove nondum barbato.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 15. (c. A. D. 120)

Before Euclid. (πρὸ Εὐκλείδου.)

LUCIAN, Cataplus. Sec. 5. (c. A. D. 170) "Before Euclid" was a proverbial phrase for antiquity. Euclid was the Athenian archon of 403 B. C., the year in which democracy was restored to Athens.

It is no longer the time when Bertha span. (Ce n'est plus le temps que Berthe filoit.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbs Français, ii, 28. Quoting a proverb of the 16th century. "It is difficult to say with certainty," De Lincy comments, "which queen this proverb refers to." Some authorities say it was Berthe, first wife of King Robert, others that it was the Queen of Rudolph II of Burgundy, who was represented as continually spinning. "Bertha, the Spinner, Queen of Helvetia," says LONGFELLOW in The Courtship of Miles Standish. The Germans say, "Hin ist die Zeit da Bertha spann" (Gone is the time when Bertha span).

It was a mighty while ago.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3. (1598)

In the time of King Wamba. (En tiempo del rey Wamba.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 27. (1605)

A Gothic King of Spain who died about 680.

This was old wisdom when Noah sailed the seas.

J. H. MCCARTHY, If I Were King. Act iii. (1901)

Way back when Hector was a pup.

H. S. KELLER, The Shark-kin Book, p. 173.

(1941) Repeated in his The Bottle with the Green Wax Seal, p. 45. (1942)

He's been here for ages—since Hec. was a pup.

ANNE ROWE, The Little Dog Barked, p. 13 (1942)

This—all this—was in the olden Time long ago.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Haunted Palace. (1845)

The old order passes, thrust out by the new. (Cedit enim rerum novitate extrusa vetustas.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura Bk. iii, l. 964.

(c. 45 B. C.)

The old order changeth, yielding place to new.

TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 408.

(1869) Also The Coming of Arthur, l. 508.

II—Antiquity: The Good Old Times

They that Reverence too much Old Times are but a Scorne to the New.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Innovations. (1597)

To glorify the past and to condemn the present has always been the way of the scholar.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 8. (c. 400 B. C.)

Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? (Ne dicas: Quid putas causae est quod priora tempora meliora fuere quam nunc sunt?)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii. 10. (c. 250

B. C.) Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, 112b.

Praiser of the days past, when he was a boy. (Laudator temporis acti se puero.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 173. (c. 20 B. C.)

You are ever admiring the old and antiquated. (Vetera tantum et antiqua mirari.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 15. (c. A. D. 85)

We extol ancient things, regardless of our own age. (Vetera extollimus, recentium incuriosi.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 88. (c. A. D. 116)

Last year was always better. (Semper superioris anni meliora.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 125) Also cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 92.

Observe old Vellum; he praises former times, as if he'd a mind to sell 'em.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

The "good old times"—all times, when old, are good.

LORD BYRON, The Age of Bronze, l. 1. (1823)

You praise the fortune and manners of the men of old, and yet, if on a sudden some god were for taking you back to those days, you would refuse every time.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 23. (35 B. C.)

To look back to antiquity is one thing; to go back to it is another.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 148. (1820)

Let ancient times delight other folk; I rejoice that I was not born till now. (Prisca iuvent alios: ego me nunc denique natum gratulor.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 121. (c. 1 B. C.)

Praise they that will Times past, I joy to see

My selfe now live: this age best pleaseth me.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Present Time Best Pleaseth. (1648)

He praised the present and abused the past,

Reversing the good custom of old days.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 79. (1818)

He praises al thing that es gan;

Of present thing he praises non.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 3577. (c. 1350)

He . . . preferreth all countries before his owne.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: An Affectate Traveller. (1614)

The idiot who praises, with enthusiastic tone,

All others but this, and every country but his own.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i. (1885)

ANVIL

He was an anvil and then became a hammer.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 539.

The same meaning is expressed by another proverb: "Yesterday beaten, but to-day beater."

The good anvil doesn't fear the hammer. (La buona incudine non teme il martello.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 194. (1856) An Italian proverb.

The anvil is not afraid of the hammer.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch.

21. (1869) The Italians say, "Dura più l'incudine che il martello" (The anvil lasts longer than the hammer); the French, "Il vaut mieux être marteau qu'enclume" (It is better to be the hammer than the anvil)

<sup>1</sup> Men's hammers break, God's anvil stands.

SAMUEL V. COLE, The Unthwarted Plan. (c. 1900) On the Rue de Rivoli in Paris there is a monument to the Huguenots, erected in 1889, showing an anvil and a number of broken hammers, with an inscription, "Hammer away, ye hostile bands; Your hammers break; God's anvil stands."

<sup>2</sup> The noise of the hammer and the anvil is ever in his ears. (Vox mallei innovat aurum eius.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 28. (c. 190 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> When thou art an anuile hould the still,
But being the hammer strike thy fill.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 101. (1591)

When you are an anvil, hold you still; when you are a Hammer, strike your fill.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 340. (1640) Also, D'URFEY, Quixote, iii, 3, 2. (1696) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6075. (1732) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758 The Germans say, "Bist du Amboss, sei geduldig; bist du Hammer, schlage zu"; the Spaniards, "Quando ayunque, sufre; quando mazo, tunde."

<sup>4</sup> He gives one Knock on the Iron, and two on the Anvil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1849. (1732) He giveth one knock on the hoop, and another on the barrel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1813) "That is," Ray explains, "he speaks now to the purpose, now on matters wholly extraneous."

<sup>5</sup> To keep a Custom, you hammer the Anvil still, tho' you have no Iron.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5191. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Thou must, in commanding and winning, or serving and losing, or suffering or triumphing, be either anvil or hammer. (Du musst herrtschen und gewinnen. ! Oder dienen und verlieren, ! Leiden oder triumphiren. ! Amboss oder Hammer sein.)

GOETHE, Der Gross-Cophia. Act ii. (1792)

In this world a man must either be anvil or hammer.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 7. (1839)

<sup>7</sup> Between anvil and hammer. (μεταξὺ τοῦ ἀκμονος καὶ σφύρας.)

ORIGEN, Hexapla. (c. A. D. 250)

Between the hammer and the anvil. (Inter malleum et incudem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chll. i, cent. i, No. 16. (1523)

Giving the Latin of Origen's Greek.

My spirit was betwixt the anville and hammer.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Cc2. (1583)

Between the block and the beetle.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Percevall. (1589)

Earle William being thus set, as it were, betwene the beetle and the block.

SIR JOHN HAYWARD, Lives of the Normans, p. 274. (1613)

Between the Hammer and the anvill.

BACON, Promus. No. 741. (c. 1594) Draxe, Bibliotheca. (1633); FROUDE, Council of Trent, v, 110. (1892)

BETWEEN SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS, see under SCYLLA.

<sup>8</sup> When many strike an anvil, they must strike by measure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

When many strike on an Anvil, they must observe Order.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5561. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> The anvil fears no blows.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 118. (1666) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4395. (1732)

The great anvil doth not fear noise or stroaks.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraeseologia Generalis, p. 102. (1681)

<sup>10</sup> For a hard anveld an hammer of feathers.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 508. (1623)

To a hard anvil, a feather hammer.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 118. (1666)

An iron anvil should have a hammer of feathers.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 76. (1710)

APE

<sup>11</sup> An old ape hath an old eye.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 267. (1639)

BROME, Damoiselle, iii, 2. (1653)

I must beg your pardon a thousand times; but they say, an old ape has an old eye.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i (1753)

<sup>12</sup> He made the person and the people his apes.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 708 (c. 1386)

And thus she maketh Absolon hir ape.

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 203.

Right as him liste, the preest he made his ape.

CHAUCER, The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 760.

<sup>13</sup> An Ape may chance to sit amongst the Doctors.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 580. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> I am afayde my marryage will bee marred, and that I may go lead apes in hell.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poesies. (1575)

I would rather, as they say, have led apes in hell.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Cephalus and Procris, p. 207. (1576)

I will either lead a virgin's life in earth (though I lead Apes in hel) or else follow thee rather then thy gifts.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 75. (1579)

I had rather thou shouldst leade a lyfe to thine own lyking in earthe, then to thy great torments, leade Apes in Hell.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 87.

My second daughter shall not lead apes in Hell.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 282.

I must dance barefoot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her, lead apes in hell.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 33. (1596) "Lead his apes into hell"—Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 44. (1598)

'Tis an old prouerbe, and you know it well,
That women dying maides lead apes in hell.

UNKNOWN, London Prodigal. Act i, sc. 2. (1605)

I'd rather die Maid, and lead apes in Hell,
Than wed an inmate of Silenus' cell.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentlewoman. (1640)

Old maids lead apes in hell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 34. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3714. (1732)

Old maids lead apes there, where the old batchelors are turn'd to apes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

Miss, you may say what you please; but faith you'll never lead apes in hell.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Then may you become a leader of legions of apes in—Hem!

PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iii, sc. 2. (1815)

I'm sadly afraid that she died an old Maid, . . .
So they say she is now leading apes

R. H. BARIHAM, The Ingoldshby Legends: Bloudie Jacke of Shrewsberrie. (1840)

Go, lead your apes to perdition.

H. C. BAILEY, The Apprehensive Dog, p. 50. (1942)

Frenchmen resemble apes, who, climbing up a tree from branch to branch, never cease going till they come to the highest branch, and there show their bare behinds. (Y mont-rent le cul quand elles y sont.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

Quoting a saying of Chancellor Ollivier.

He doth like the ape that the higher he clymbes
the more he shows his ars.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 924. (c. 1594)

The higher the Ape goes, the more he shows his tail.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 747.

(1640) Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p.

57, with the comment, "The higher beggars or base bred persons are advanced, the more they discover the lowness and baseness of their spirits and tempers." Ray has also (p.
205) "As free as an ape is of her tail."

'Tis not till the ape hath mounted the palm tree that she shows her tail so plain.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 52. (1860)

You are like the ape, for the higher he climbs, the more he shows his rump. (Tu fai come la simia, che più va in alto, più mostra il cula.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 153. (1814)

An Italian proverb. The French say, "Plus le singe s'élève, plus il montre son cul pelé [peeled, naked]"; the Germans, "Je höher der Affe steigt, je mehr er den Hintern zeigt."

The most beautiful of apes is ugly compared with the race of men. (πιθήκων ὁ κάλλιστος αἰσχρὸς ἀνθρώπων γένει συμβάλλειν.)

HERACLEITUS. (c. 500 B.C.) As quoted by PLATO, Greater Hippias, 289A.

The most beautiful of apes is ugly. (τῶν πιθήκων εἰςμορφότατος δύσμορφός ἐστιν.)

PLATO (c. 375 B.C.), as quoted by ERASMUS,
Adagia, ii, 5, 54, who gives the Latin, "Simiarum pulcherrima deformis est." TAVERNER includes it in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 39, with the rendering, "The fayreste of Apes is fowle."

Ugly brute as he is, how like us is the ape!
(Simia quam similis turpissima bestia nobis!)

ENNIUS. Fragment. (c. B.C. 200) Quoted by CICERO, De Natura Deorum, i, 35, and by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

Of beasts, it is confessed, the ape
Comes nearest us in human shape;
Like man he imitates each fashion,
And malice is his ruling passion.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Logicians Refuted
(1731)

Apes esteem their young the handsomest in the world. (Cingesses semblent leurs petits Cinges plus beaux que chose du monde.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 32. (1548)
Reminiscent of Aesop's fable of the monkey and her baby. See also under POSSESSIONS.

The ape so long clippeth her young that at last she killeth them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670)

The Ape hugs her Darling till she kills it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4396. (1732)

TO KILL WITH KINDNESS, see under KINDNESS.

Myrrh oil on lentils. (τὸ ἐπὶ τῇ φαλῇ μύρον.)

STRATTIS, Phoenissae. Frag. (c. 400 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, i, 19. Winsted (Loeb) translates it, "Caper sauce on lenten fare."

An ape in purple raiment. (πιθήκος ἐν πορφύρᾳ)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 94. (c. A.D. 125)

An ape is still an ape even though he wears insignia of gold. (πιθήκος ὁ πιθήκος καὶ χρύσεια ἐχῇ σύμβολα.)

LUCIAN (c. A.D. 170) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 11, in retelling the apologue of the ape and the King of Egypt who tried to educate him. The Latin is, "Simia simia est, etiam si aurea gestet insignia," and Erasmus adds that the ornaments of fortune are powerless to change human nature (hominis ingenium). TAVERNER includes the proverb in his Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering: "An ape is an ape although she weare badges of golde." Quoted by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 153, with a page of comment and cognate quotations. A variation is, "An ape's an ape though he wear a gold ring."

Walk like apes in scarlet. (In purpura simiae.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 3. (1511)

An ape is an ape though clad in purple. (Simia est simia, etiamsi purpura vestiatur.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 14. Quoted as "a trite proverb."

Bedecke an Ape with gold and he wyl be an Ape styl. (Adorna una simia d'oro, che sempre sara simia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31 (1578)

A prouerbe olde, hath ofte ben herde and now full true is tryed:

An Ape wyl euer be an Ape, thoughte purple garments hyde.

BARNABY GOOGE, Eglogs, iii, 40. (1563)

It is saide, That a Swoorde is put into a mad mans hand, when an office is bestowed upon a naughty person, who is commonly called an Ape in purple.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 211. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As fine as an ape in purple.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina, p. 7. (1639)

Apes are apes, tho' cloath'd in scarlet.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act v, sc. 3. (1601)

An ape is an ape, a varlet's a varlet,

Though they be clad in silk or scarlet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6391. (1732);

BLAND, Proverbs, i, 153. (1814) The Germans say, "Affen bleiben Affen, wenn man sie auch in Sammet kleidet" (Apes are apes though you clothe them in velvet).

Reynard is still Reynard, tho' he put on a Cowl

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4033. (1732)

Although the monkey clothes herself in silk, she is still a monkey. (Aunque la mona se vista de seda, mona se queda.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 153. (1814)

Though you set a monkey on horseback, his hands and feet will still remain hairy.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 370. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

A goosegirl ermined is a goosegirl still,

And geese will gabble everywhere she goes.

DOROTHY E. REID, Not in Andersen. (1940)

1
Though he endeavour al he can,
An Ape will never be a Man.

GEORGE WITHER, First Lottery. Emb. 14. (1634)

Apes are never more Beasts than when they wear Men's Clothes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 807. (1732)

An Ape is ne'er so like an Ape

As when he wears a Doctor's Cap.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6382. (1732)

BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 310, with "cape" for "cap." (1855) SPURGEON, John Ploughman, ch. 3, with "popish cape" for "Doctor's cap." (1869)

APOLLO

2
Once a yeare laughs wise Apollo.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Barnabee's Journal, iv, 2, 401. (1638) Referring to the Latin saying, "Semel in anno ridet Apollo."

How Sheridan the rogue would sneer,
And swear it does not always follow

That Semel'n anno ridet Apollo.

SWIFT, Stella's Birth-Day, l. 20. (1723)

3
Thus was he served by Apollo. (τὸν δ' ἐξήπαξεν Ἀπόλλων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 443. (c. 850 B.C.) Referring to the saving of Hector by Apollo. A phrase used also by Lucilius.

Thus did Apollo serve me. (Sic me servavit Apollo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 78. (35 B.C.) Apollo was the god who befriended poets.

4
What tune has Apollo played you? (τί σοι δ' Ἀπόλλων κεκιθάρεκεν;)

SOPHOCLES, Locrian Ajax. Frag. 18 (c. 425 B.C.) Truly the great Apollo has given me the art of divination. (Divinare etenim magnus mihi donat Apollo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 60. (35 B.C.)

Another Greek proverbial phrase relating to divination is, ἐν ὀλμῳ κοιμάσθαι (To rest in the hollow seat), the seat from which the Pythia prophesied.

NOT ALWAYS DOES APOLLO BEND HIS BOW, see under Bow.

APOLOGY

See also Excuse

5
No 'polligy ain't gwine ter make h'ar come back whar de biling water hit.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 45. (1880)

6
Apologizing—a very desperate habit—one that is rarely cured. Apology is only egotism wrong side out.

O W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6 (1859)

APPEARANCE

See also Look

7
We should look to the mind, and not to the outward appearance. (ἀφορᾶν οὖν, δεῖ εἰς τὸν νοῦν, καὶ μὴ εἰς τὴν ὄψιν.)

AESOP, Fables: Leopard and Fox. (c. 570 B.C.)

Do not look upon the vessel, but upon that which it contains.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 404. (1678)

8
Personal beauty is a greater recommendation than any letter of introduction. (τὸ κάλλος παρὶς ἐπιστολῶν συστατικώτερον.)

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 330 B.C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, v, 18.

A handsome appearance is a silent recommendation. (Formosa facies muta commendatio est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 199. (c. 43 B.C.) Quoted by Francis Bacon, and included, with other mimes of Publilius, in a small collection called Ornamenta Rationalia.

No slight advantage is a pleasing countenance. (Auxilium non leve vultus habet.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 8, l. 54. (A.D. 13) Whosoever hath a good presence and a good fashion, carries continual letters of recommendation.

ISABELLA OF CASTILE. (c. 1475) As quoted by BACON, Apophthegms. No. 99.

Good looks are a great recommendation in the business of mankind. (La beaulté est une pièce de grande recommandation au commerce des hommes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580) The comeliness of the youth furnished him at once with a letter of recommendation. (Dándole en aquel instante una carta de recomendación su hermosura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 63. (1615) Good looks are good cheap.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 34. (1639) "Good cheap." good bargaining, good trading.

It was a saying of an ancient philosopher, which I find some of our writers have ascribed to Queen Elizabeth, who perhaps might have taken occasion to repeat it, that a good face is a letter of recommendation.

ADDISON, The Spectator, 13 Nov., 1711. The Germans say, "Die Schönheit ist ein guter Empfehlungsbrief" (Beauty is a good letter of introduction); the Dutch, "A smart coat is a good letter of introduction."

Appearance, Sir, bears away the bell, almost in everything.

JOHN GAY, Wife of Bath. Act iv, sc. 1. (1713) A good Presence is Letters of Recommendation.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 170. (1732) An honest good Look covereth many Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 609. (1732) His honest countenance was a good letter of recommendation.

SMOLLETT, Humphrey Clinker, 11 Oct., 1771. To be plain with you, friend, you don't carry in your countenance a letter of recommendation.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 2. (1840) If a good face is a letter of recommendation, a good heart is a letter of credit.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do With It? Bk. ii, ch. 11, title. (1858) Schiller has, "Ein offenes Herz zeigt eine offene Stirn" (An open brow indicates an open heart).

Though you cannot know wine by the barrel, a good appearance is a letter of recommendation.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 3. (1869)

A good face is worth more than gold. (Lien mien chih ch'ien chin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 963. (1875)

1 A man is known by his appearance.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xix, 29. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

2 Allas! what harm doth apparence,
Whan hit is fals in existence!

CHAUCER (?), The Hopse of Fame, Bk. i, l. 265. (c. 1383)

If we respect more the outward shape, then the inward habit, good God, into how many mischiefs do we fall?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 53. (1579)

3 In an ivory scabbard a sword of lead. (ἐν ἐλεφαντίνῳ κολεῷ τὸ μολύβδινον ἔϊφος.)

DIOGENES OF SINOPE (c. 400 B.C.), to whom it is attributed by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 25, with the Latin, "In eburna vagina plumbeus gladius."

In noble trappings march ignoble men. (Ornamento incedunt gnobilid ignobiles.)

LIVIVS ANDRONICUS, Virga. Frag. 3, Loeb. (c. 235 B.C.)

O that such an imposing appearance should have no brain!

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 7. (c. 25 B.C.)

We'll have a swashing and a martial outside.

As many other mannish cowards have.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 3, 122. (1600) He seem'd

For dignity compos'd and high exploit:

But all was false and hollow.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 110. (1667)

He had the air of his own statue erected by national subscription.

TURGENEV. (c. 1860) As quoted by HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4.

Clean glove may hide soiled hand.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 214. (1902)

4 In painting a tiger, one can paint the skin, but it is impossible to paint the bones. ('Hua 'hu 'hua 'pi nan 'huaku.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 185 (1872) One can know a person's appearance, but not his heart.

5 Varnishing hides a Crack.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5346 (1732)

6 Hit look lak sparrer-grass, hit feel lak sparrer-grass, hit tas'e lak sparrer-grass, en I bless ef 'taint sparrer-grass.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 27. (1883)

He says it is murder—wants it to be murder—and dash it all, it is murder.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 190. (1941)

7 The front of a dog, but the heart of a deer. (κυρὸς ὀμμάτων ἔχων, καρδίην δ' ἐλάφοιο.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 225. (c. 850 B.C.)

He was not like a base man to look upon. (οὐ μὲν γάρ τι κακῷ εἰς ὧτα ἴσκει.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 411. (c. 850 B.C.)

O Zeus, why hast thou given unto man
Clear signs to know the counterfeit in gold,
While on man's brow no assay-mark is stamped
Whereby we may discern the villain's heart?

(ὦ Ζεῦ, τί δὴ χρυσοῦ μὲν δὲ κίβδηλος ἦ τεκμήρι' ἀνθρώποισιν ὥπασας σαφῆ, ἀνδρῶν δ' ὅτ' ἔχῃ, τὸν κακὸν διειδέναι, οὐδεὶς χαρακτήρ ἐμπέφυκε σώματι;)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 516. (c. 431 B.C.)

To show a good front rather than a good heart.
(Magisque voltum quam ingenium bonum habere.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 10. (c. 41 B.C.)

Outward, lambren semen we,
Fulle of goodnesse and of pitee,
And inward we, withouten fable,
Ben gredy wolves ravisable.
(Dehors semblons aigneus pitables, Dedenz somes lous ravissables.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 7013,
(c. 1270) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 7013, (c. 1365)

These Panthers which haue a sweete smel, but a deuouring minde.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His Ephoebus (Ar-ber), p. 149. (1579)

A Saint in the Face may be a Fiend at Heart.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1709)

He was outwardly decent and managed to preserve his aquarium, but inside he was impromptu and full of unexpectedness.

O. HENRY, The Octopus Marooned. (1908)

1
He sees the copper under the silver. (Per argentum aes videt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 56. (c. A. D. 60)

He is like a silvered pin, fair without but foul within.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 237. (1678)

SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk, Ch. 18.
(1869)

Like a Collier's Sack; bad without, but worse
within.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3221. (1732)

2
Having a beard and wearing a shabby cloak does not make philosophers. (ὅτε γὰρ φιλοσόφους πωγωνοτρόφαι καὶ τριβυνοφορίαι ποιούσιν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Isis and Osiris. Sec. 352C.
(c. A. D. 95)

The habit doesn't make the hermit. (Li abis ne fait pas l'ermitte.)

RUTEBEUF, Le Frere Denise, l. 1. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 263.

Habit ne maketh monk ne frere.

(La robe ne fait pas le moine.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 11058.

(c. 1270) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 6192, (c. 1365)

The clothinge ne maketh nagt thane monek, ne the armes thane knygt.

LOWENS, Somme des Vices. (1279) As translated by DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyl
(E.E.T.S.), p. 165. (1340)

For habit maketh no monk, ne weringe of gille spurres maketh no knight.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love, vii, 91.

(c. 1387) In SKEAT, Chaucer. Formerly attributed to Chaucer.

The hood does not make the monk. (Cucullus non facit monachum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. (1523) Quoted by SHAKE-SPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 62, and Measure for Measure, v, 1, 257. Another form is, "Non tonsura facit monachum, nec horrida vestitis" (The tonsure does not make the monk, nor the rough clothing).

The habit does not make the monk. (L'habit ne faict point le moine.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Prologe. (1534) A proverb in many languages. The Germans say, "Das Kleid macht keinen Mönch"; the Italians, "L' abito non fa il monaco"; the Spaniards, "El habito no hace al monge."

Seeing (with the olde prouerbe) as the feather makes not the byrde.

GEOFFREY FENTON, Monophylo, sig. T4. (1572)

All that wear Cooles are not Monkes.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto. Works, iv, 289.

(1588) SCOTT (The Abbot, ch. 26) has, "The cowl makes not the monk, neither the cord the friar."

All hoods make not monks.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 1, 23. (1612)

The hood makes not the monke, nor the apparell the man.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, ix, 17. (1617)

A holy habit cleanseth not a foul soul.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 671
(1640)

A broad Hat does not always cover a venerable
Head.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 26. (1732)

3
Musk is known by its perfume, and not by the druggist's label.

SADI, Gulistan. (c. 1258) Cranmer-Byng, tr.

Don't rely too much on labels,

For too often they are fables.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

4
The famous men whom you see strutting about with head in air, have nothing but a gold-leaf prosperity. (Omnium istorum, quos incedere altos vides, bratteata felicitas est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epist. cxv, sec. 9. (c. 64 A. D.)

ALL IS NOT GOLD THAT GLITTERS, see under GOLD

5
O, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,
And with a virtuous vizard hide foul guile!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 2, 27. (1592)

O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? . . .

Was ever book containing such vile matter

So fairly bound?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 2, 73. (1594)

A fair face and a foul heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 88. (1732)

No. 87 is, "A fair face and a foul bargain."

A fine face, but eats vile things.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs,
No. 715. (1817)

A beautiful face and clear sweet eyes can hide a soul as black as pitch.

DAVID FROME, Mr. Pinkerton Lends a Hand. (1936) Another variation is, "A fair skin often covers a crooked mind."

1 Appearance overpowers even the truth. (τὸ δοκεῖν καὶ τὰν ἀλήθειαν βιάται.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 76. (c. 475 B.C.) Appearance wins even if beside the truth. (κρείσσον δὲ τὸ δοκεῖν, κἂν ἀληθείας ἀπῆ.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 236. (c. 410 B.C.)
2 Recognizing by the taste. (ἐκ γευμαῖος γινώσκω.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies. (c. 600 B.C.) DIOGENIANUS, iv, 32.

Telling a lion by his claws. (ἐκ τῶν δυνάων τὸν λέοντα γινώσκειν.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, v, 16. (c. A.D. 125) Telling an Ethiopian by his face. (τὸν Αἰθίοπα ἐκ τῆς δψιος γινώσκω.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb cited by Erasmus. Telling the tree by its fruit. (ἐκ τοῦ καρποῦ οἰνδρον γινώσκω.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, v, 16. (c. A.D. 125) Judging the garment by the hem. (ἐκ τοῦ κρασπιδίου τὸ ἔφασμα γινώσκω.)

LUCIAN. (c. A.D. 170) DIOGENIANUS, v, 16.

3 Many are the thyrsus-bearers, but few the Bacchants. (πολλοὶ τοὶ κρηττοφόροι, παῦροι δὲ τε βάκχοι.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 69C. (c. 375 B.C.) Quoting a famous Greek proverb, which is also included in the Anthology, x, 106 ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 6, gives the Latin, "Multi thyrsigeri, pauci Bacchi." Cited by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, Ch. 6 (1853), with the comment, "Many assume the outward tokens of inspiration, . . . but those whom the god indeed fills with his spirit are few." The thyrsus was a staff which was the attribute of Bacchus.

Not all who have a lute are lute-players. (Non omnes qui habent citharam sunt citharoedi.)

MARCUS VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 3. (c. 35 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 7. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, his rendering being, "All that haue harpes be no harpers," and his comment: "Outwards sygnes many tymes deceyue men. All that haue the gospel bangynge at there gyrdels be no gospellers. . . . We ought not to judge accordynge to the outwarde apperaunce of thynges."

Many are the ox-drivers, but few the ploughmen (Multi qui boves stimulent, pauci aratores.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 86. (c. A.D. 125) Many are the wand-bearers, but few the seers. (πολλοὶ θριοβόλοι, παῦροι δὲ τε μάγντοι ἀνδρες.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 8. (1523) The Latin is, "Plures thriobolos paucos est cernere vates."

There are of those that wear Spanish caps, who have but little of the valor of Spaniards in them.

(Tel est vestu de cappe hespanole, qui en son courage nullement affiert à Hespanc.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Prologue. (1534)

Not every man is a huntsman who can blow the horn. (Non est venator quivis per cornua flator.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 276. (1869) The French say, "Ne sont pas tous chasseurs qui sonnent du cor"; the Germans, "Es sind nicht alle Jäger, die das Horn blasen."

Euery horne blower is not a hunter.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals Dictionary Revised. Sig. E6. (1586)

All are not hunters that blow the horn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 153. (1678)

All are not Turners that are Dish-Throwers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 503. (1732)

Not every one with a blackened face can say, "I am a blacksmith."

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 591. (1817)

There are many skillful apprentices, but few master workmen.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

Many who wear rapiers are afraid of goose quills

H.G BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p 450. (1855)

Not everyone is a saint who goes to church. (N n è santo chiunque va in chiesa.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 209. (1856) An Italian proverb, sometimes given. "Non son tutti santi quelli che vanno in chiesa."

Not all those who study are doctors, nor all those who go to war soldiers. (Ni todos los que estudian son letrados, Ni todos los que van a la guerra soldados.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 247. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

They are not all cooks who carry a long knife (Es sind nicht alle Köche, die lange Messer tragen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 332. (1856) A German proverb, which is also common among the East Indian negroes. Similarly, "Zijn neit alle Vrienden, die hem toelachen" (They are not all friends who laugh with you).

To be a man of the church is not always to be a man of God. (Être homme d'église n'est pas toujours être homme de Dieu.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 370. (1856)

Many meet the gods, but few salute them.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 117. (1853)

The fact which this proverb proclaims, of the great gulf existing between what men profess and what they are, has found utterance in an infinite variety of forms. Thus there is another Greek line, fairly represented by this Latin: "Qui tauros stimulent multi, sed rarus arator" (There are many to goad the oxen, but few to plough), and there is the medieval rhyming verse, "Non est venator quivis per cornua flator" (Not everybody is a hunter who blows a horn); and this

- <sup>1</sup> 'Tis appetite makes dishes, 'tis not cooks.
RICHARD BROME, Demoiselle: Prologue. (c. 1562)
- <sup>2</sup> And so leue with an appetite.
RICHARD BULLEIN, The Government of Health, fo. 37. (1558)
The surest way in feeding is to leaue with an appetite, according to the old saying.
THOMAS COGAN, The Hauen of Health, p. 167. (1588)
Go to your banquet then, but use delight,
So as to rise still with an appetite.
ROBERT HERRICK, Connubii Flores. (1648)
If thou rise with an Appetite, thou art sure never to sit down without one.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 64. (1693)
Who riseth from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 6, 8. (1597)
- <sup>3</sup> No more appetite than a bird. You know—one of those eagles.
NIVEN BUSCH, The Carrington Incident, p. 15. (1941)
- <sup>4</sup> To lose the appetite for food is not a dangerous illness. (Dejar de comer por haber comido. No es enfermedad de peligro.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 234. (1856) A Spanish proverb.
To a good appetite no bread is hard. (A buena gana, no hay pan duro.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 249. A Spanish proverb. A somewhat similar one is, "A pan de quinze dias, hambre de tres semanas" (For bread of fifteen days, hunger of three weeks).
- <sup>5</sup> No purse so fat as to buy back a lost appetite.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438. (1938) A Japanese proverb.
- <sup>6</sup> Wikke appetyt comth ay before seknesse.
CHAUCER (?), Fortune, l. 55. (c. 1379)
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 1, 183. (1607)
- <sup>7</sup> Appetyt flemeth discrecioun.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 78. (c. 1389)
- <sup>8</sup> A waiting appetite kindles many a spite.
A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 107. (1875)
- <sup>9</sup> I find no abhorring in mine appetite.
JOHN DONNE, Devotions. Sec. 10. (1624)
- <sup>10</sup> What one relishes, nourishes.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.
- <sup>11</sup> All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the appetite is not filled. (Omnis labor

- hominis in ore eius: sed anima eius non implebitur.)
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vi, 7. (c. 250 B.C.)
- <sup>12</sup> Nothing more shameless is than appetite.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 216. (c. 850 B.C.)
Worsley, tr. See under BELLY.
- <sup>13</sup> Seek an appetite by sweating. (Tu pulmentaria quaere sudando.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. ii, l. 20. (35 B.C.)
What is earned with hard labor is eaten with pleasure. (Hsin k'u t'ao t'e k'usi 'huo ch'ih.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 86. (1875)
- <sup>14</sup> I have no wish to spoil my appetite. (Perdere nolo famem.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 53. (A.D. 93)
- <sup>15</sup> People that require the most high-seasoned dishes have not the most delicate appetites.
J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails Act, sec. 2. (1815)
- <sup>16</sup> It cannot be a good Constitution, where the Appetite is great and the Digestion is weak.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 164. (1693)
- <sup>17</sup> I cut my throat today with a whetted appetite. (Egomet me hodie iugularem fame.)
PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 581. (c. 200 B.C.)
- <sup>18</sup> Put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite. (Statue cultrum in gutture tuo, si tamen habes in potestate animam tuam.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 2. (c. 250 B.C.)
Let thy appetites be subject to reason. (Appetitus rationi obediunt.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 29, sec. 102. (c. 45 B.C.)
Subdue your appetites, my dears, and you've conquered human nature.
DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 5. (1838)
- <sup>19</sup> Appetite comes with eating, says Angest, but the thirst goes away with drinking. (L'appetit vient en mangeant, disoyt Angest on Mans; la soif s'en va en beuant.)
RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1534) By "Angest" Rabelais referred to Jerome de Hangeste, a scholar who died in 1538. The proverb has been attributed also to Jacques Amyot (c. 1540), who is said to have replied in these words to Henry III, when the king expressed surprise that Amyot should want the abbey of Bellozane after having secured the bishopric of Auxerre. The Italians say, "Mangiando viene l'appetito." "Much would have more."
Meanwhile Master Appetite came. (Ce pendent monsieur l'appetit venoit.)
RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 23. (1534)
Appetite comes to me in eating. (L'appetit me vient en mangeant.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

She would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 144. (1600)
But, as we say in France, the appetite comes in eating.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Dialogues of the Dead, 227. (c. 1721)

Appetite will come to you with eating. (L'appetit viendra en mangeant.)

EUGÈNE SUZ, Les Mystères de Paris, Ch. 1. (1842)

The appetite grows with what it feeds on.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be Too Careful, p. 69. (1942)

The appetite came with eating. The more he had of her, the more he wanted.

STUART CLOETE, Congo Song, Ch. 24. (1943)

1 My appetite always goes to bed with me: also it gets up with me. (Mon appetit se couche avecques moy: . . . aussy avecques moy il se lieue.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 41. (1534)

2 How slight a portion of those banquets of yours, prepared for you by so many hands, do you taste with your pleasure-jaded palate! . . . Poor wretches, do you not know that your appetites are bigger than your bellies? (Infelices, ecquid intellegitis maiorem vos famem habere quam ventrem?)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxix, sec. 22. (a. d. 64)

It is as good to have no eye, as no appetite.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 284. (1580)

Thou art like the Epicure, whose bellye is sooner filled then his eye.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and his England, p. 327

THE EYE IS BIGGER THAN THE BELLY, see under EYE.

3 It is the sign of an over-nice appetite to toy with many dishes; for when they are manifold and varied, they cloy but do not nourish. (Fastidientis stomachi est multa degustare.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

4 Doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 3, 247. (1598)

5 Appetite—a relish bestowed upon the poorer classes, that they may like what they eat, while it is seldom enjoyed by the rich, because they may eat what they like.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet, p. 30. (1830)

6 'Tis not the meat, but 'tis the appetite
Makes eating a delight.

And if I like one dish

More than another, that a pheasant is.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Of Thee, Kind Boy, I Ask No Red and White. (1646)

APPLAUSE

7 Applause is the spur of noble minds, the end and aim of weak ones.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 424. (1820)

8 "'Tis enough if the knights applaud me," as dauntless Arbuscula said scornfully, when the rest of the house hissed her. (Satis est equitem mihi plaudere, ut audax, | contemptis aliis, explosa Arbuscula dixit.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 76. Or. as Christopher Morley renders it: "'I'm satisfied if the carriage trade gives me a hand,' as plucky Arbuscula said, high-hatting the others who hissed her off the stage."

9 Fate cannot rob you of deserved applause

MASSINGER, Bashful Lover. Act i, sc. 2. (1655)

Go on deserving applause, and you will be sure to meet with it.

JEFFERSON, Letter to J. W. Eppes, 1787.

10 From the applause of the people any talent can catch flame. (Plausibus ex populi ingenium quodvis incaluisse potest.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 29. (A. D. 13)

The applause of the crowd makes the head giddy

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 188. (1711)

Oh, popular applause! what heart of man

Is proof against thy sweet seducing charms?

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 481. (1783)

The glorious meed of popular applause.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 82. (1818)

The sickly food Of popular applause.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act iv, l. 1821. (1842)

11 Dare you say that any man will disown the wish to earn the applause of men? (An erit qui velle recusset os populi meruisse?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 41. (c. A. D. 58)

12 Ah me! ah me! this applause has ruined him! (Ei mihi, ei mihi, istaec illum perdidit assentatio.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 411. (c. 190 B. C.)

Unruly murmurs, or ill-timed applause,

Wrong the best speaker, and the justest cause

PORP, tr., The Iliad. Bk. xix, l. 86. (1715)

13 I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 3, 53. (1606)

14 Farewell, and give us your applause. (Valete et plaudite.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 1094. (161 B. C.)

The concluding words of many comedies. Quoted by RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1534)

The phrase with which old tragedies and comedies used to end, "Friends, give us your applause."

(Quo veteres tragoediae comoediacque cluduntur, Plodite.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. i, sec. 52. (c. A. D. 80)

APPLE

<sup>1</sup> He that will not a wife wed,
Must eat a cold apple when he goeth to bed.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health (1612), p. 88. (1588) "Apples," Cogan explains, "are thought to quench the flame of Venus," and quotes the couplet given above. Then he adds, "Though some turn it to a contrary purpose." RAY, English Proverbs, p. 48. (1670)

Ait a happle avore gwain to bed.

An' you'll make the doctor beg his bread.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 238. (1913)

The more popular version runs, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." "As the lover of the doctor's wife said when he urged her to feed her husband apples." In the Arabian Nights story of Prince Ahmed, the prince purchases an apple at Samarcand which cures all diseases.

A grape-fruit in the morning

Will keep your brows from hornings.

FORD MADDOX FORD, Provence, p. 78. (1935)

"As they sing in New York."

A hobby a day keeps the dolldrums away.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, A Pocketful of Wry, p. 111. (1940)

A stanza a day . . . To keep the wolf away.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Public Journal. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> Let us apples swim. (Nos poma natamus.)

FRIEDRICH DEDEKIND, Grobianus. (1549) Used by Martin Luther against an opponent.

How we apples swim!

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 32. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 253. (1678)

The dung swimming in the same stream with the apples, said. We apples swim.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, p. 545.

(1642) The Dutch say, "Wij appelen zwemmen, zei de paardenkeutel" (How we apples swim, said the horse-dung).

Upon a . . . fall of rain, the current carried away a huge heap of apples, together with a dung-hill that lay in the watercourse. . . . As they went thus, the horse-dung would be . . . crying out still, "Alack-a-day! How we apples swim!"

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables, cxxxiv, 150. (1692)

A Ball of new-dropt Horse's Dung,

Mingling with Apples in the Throng,

Said to the Pippin, plump and prim,

See, Brother, how we Apples swim.

SWIFT, Brother Protestants, l. 11. (1733)

While tumbling down the turbid stream,

Lord love us, how we apples swim!

DAVID MALLEY, Tyburn. (1743)

<sup>3</sup> He kept him as the apple of his eye. (Custodi-vit quasi pupillam oculi sui.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxii, 10. (c. 650 B.C.)

Keep . . . my law as the apple of thine eye. (Quasi pupillam oculi tui.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vii, 2. (c. 350 B.C.)

Keep me as the apple of the eye. (Custodi me, ut pupillam oculi.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xvii, 8. (c. 350 B.C.)

I am the apple of their eye. (In oculis sumus.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. vi, epis. 2. (50 B.C.)

We still say "the apple of the eye" when we wish to describe something superlatively precious.

O. HENRY, The Sphinx Apple. (1907)

He may have been the apple of your eye, but to me he was only a cinder.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 122. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> Offer not the Pear to him that gave the Apple.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3702. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> I would rather be in an apple tree than a bad man in distress. (Malo malo malo malo.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 215.

(1869) There is another form, "Mala mali malo mala contulit omnia mundo" (All the evil in the world was brought in by means of an apple). It is one of the rhyming proverbs so popular with the monks of the Middle Ages. It should be noted that nowhere in the Bible is the word "apple" used in connection with this incident--the word is always "fruit," as Milton uses it, Paradise Lost, i, 1. "The Fruit of that Forbidden Tree," although later on (ix, 585) he uses "apples." The Vulgate uses fructu

<sup>6</sup> Don't you think the applesauce they serve over there is execrable?

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Schools and Schools (1909)

I wasn't born yesterday, and I know apple sauce when I hear it.

RING LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926) In Who Dealt, Lardner has, "I know it's all apple sauce. Isn't that a funny expression, 'apple sauce'? Somebody said it in a vaudeville show in Portland the Monday night before we left."

I couldn't swallow the family-lawsuit apple-sauce.

ANNE NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 157. (1943)

<sup>7</sup> He pares his apple that will cleanly feed.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 11. (1633)

<sup>8</sup> The apples on the other side of the wall are the sweetest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
See also under PROHIBITION.

<sup>9</sup> She is lost with an apple, and woon with a nut.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1562)

Woone with a napple and loste with a nutt.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 121. (1573)

If he perceiue thee to be wonne with a Nut, he will imagine that thou wilt be lost with an Apple.

JOHN LYLE, Euphues (Arber) p. 59. (1579)

Marian, thinking that she had lost her lover with a nut, sent him a present of apples to winne him againe.

UNKNOWN, Tinker of Turvey, p. 73. (1630)

He may be gott by an Apple, and lost by a Nutt.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)
He that is won with a Nut, may be lost with an Apple.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2201. (1732)
A similar one is No. 2476: "He's won with a feather, and lost with a straw." That is, easily won is easily lost.

1 Think you no man has given apples to Alcinous? (Alcinoo nullum poma dedisse putas?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, No. 42. (c. A. D. 90)
Alcinous, the mythical king of the Phaeacians, was celebrated for his orchards.

Old Fortune, like sly Farmer Dapple,
Where there's an orchard, flings an apple.

JOHN CLARE, Rural Life, p. 114. (1821)

Giving an apple where there's an orchard.

ANNE E. BAKER, Glossary of Northamptonshire: Orchard. (1854)

Those who have an orchard shall have an apple lent them.

And those who have a horse shall have another sent them.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 590. (1883)

2 No more lyke than an apple to an oyster

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 724. (1532)

Which have learned to make quidlibet ex quodlibet; an apple of an oyster.

JAMES CALFILL, An Answer to John Martiall, p. 99. (1565)

In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.—
As much as an apple doth an oyster.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 2, 101. (1594)

She's as like this as a crab's like an apple.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 5, 15. (1605)

You are no more like . . . than an apple's like an oyster.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 34. (1667)

As like as an apple to an oyster.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)

As like as an Apple is to a Lobster.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 707. (1732)

3 A roted eppel amang the hollen maketh rotie the yzounde yef he is longe ther amang.

DAN MICHEL OF NORTHGATE, Ayenbite of Inwyrt, p. 205. (1340) From the Latin, "Pomum compunctum cito corrumpit sibi iunctum."

A proverb that seith this same word,

"Wel bet is roten appel out of hord
Than that it rotie al the remenaunt."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cokes Tale, l. 41. (c. 1386)

The rotten apple spoils his companions.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

The rotten apple injures its neighbour.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 514. (1855) See also under COMPANY.

Every rotten apple in the basket is an enemy to the rest of the apples.

FANNIE HURST, Hallelujah, p. 22. (1944)

4 Like the pippin blushing high
On the tree-top 'neath the sky,

Where the pickers missed it—nay,

Could not reach it so far away.

(ολον τὸ γλυκύμαλον ἐρεῖσθαι ἀκρῶ ἐπ' ὁσῶ ἀκρον ἐπ' ἀκροτάτῳ, λελάσθοντο δὲ μαλοδρόμῃς, οὐ μὰν ἐκλελάσθοντ', ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐδύναντ' ἐπικεσθαι.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 150. (c. 610 B. C.)

Quoted by SCHOLIAST on HERMOGENES, Kinds of Style, as an example of the style which gives pleasure to all the senses. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 287. D. G. Rossetti paraphrased the stanza, not too successfully.

The fairest apple hangs on the highest bough

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1678)

Reach for the high apples first; you can get the low ones any time.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 488. (1940)

5 Comfort me with apples: for I am sick of love. (Stipate me malis: quia amore languo.)

Old Testament: The Song of Solomon, ii, 5. (c. 900 B. C.) Frequently quoted, recently by ALICE CAMPBELL, Ringed with Fire, p. 51 (1942)

Solomon said, Stay me with apples for I am sick with l'amour.

OGDEN NASH, Let Me Buy This One (1940)

6 Ther [by the Dead Sea] groweth most feyre applis . . . and when thou takest, he fadeth and falleth in to ashes.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., De Proprietatibus Rerum, xiii, 13. (1398)

Painted Sodom-apples faire to the eye,

But being tucht they perish instantly.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Devil, p. 48. (1615)

Those apples of Sodom which dye betwixt the hand and the mouth.

BISHOP EDWARD RAINBOW, Labour Forbidden and Commanded, p. 6. (1634)

As for the Apples of Sodom . . . I neither saw nor heard of any.

HENRY MAUNDRELL, A Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 85. (1703)

The ashes to which the Sodom-apples of illicit love are turned in the end.

W. J. ROLFE, Shakespeare's Sonnets, p. 19 (1905). The apples of Sodom, or Dead Sea fruit, lovely without but ashes within, first described by Josephus, never really existed, or if some were found with a powdery inside it was probably because they had been eaten out by insects. But the phrase has become proverbial for anything found hollow or disappointing.

7 There's plenty of boys that will come hankering and gruvvelling around when you've got an apple, and beg the core off you; but when they've got one, and you beg for the core, and remind them how you give them a core one time, they make a mouth at you.

and say thank you 'most to death, but there ain't a-going to be no core.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer Abroad. Ch. 1. (1894)

1
With a heart that is true,
I'll be waiting for you,
In the shade of the old apple tree.

HARRY WILLIAMS, In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree. (1905)

2
Hit semit me . . . that Venus was verely the fairest,

And I duli . . . demyt hir the appull.

UNKNOWN, The Destruction of Troy. Bk. vi. l. 2434. (c. 1400) Paris speaking.

Throw the apple of dissension among your subjects.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Irene. (1638)

This great and wealthy church constantly formed an apple of discord.

E. A. FREEMAN, The Norman Conquest. Vol. i, ch. 4, p. 195. (1867)

The apple of discord was the golden apple inscribed "For the Fairest" [Detur pulchriori— Let it be given to the fairest], fabled to have been thrown by Eris, the personification of discord, into the assembly of the gods, and contended for [before Paris] by Juno, Minerva, and Venus; whence any subject of disagreement or dissension.

Oxford English Dictionary: Apple.

3
Mani appel is uten grene
briht on beme [tree]
and biter with-innen.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred (South). l. 333. (c. 1275)

Ne every appel that is fair at ye
Ne is nat good, what-so men clappe or crye.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 411. (c. 1386)

Appeles and peres that semen very gode,
Ful ofte tyme are roten by the core.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 43. (c. 1430)

A goodly apple, rotten at the heart.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 3, 102. (1597) The Germans say, "Auch rote Aepfel sind wurmstichig" (Even red apples are wormy), a proverb intimately connected with a quatrain (Schnaderhüpfel) sung as early as 1613: "Es ist kein Apfel so rosenrot, | es steckt ein Kernlein drin; | es war keine Jungfrau nie so schön, | sie trägt einen falschen Sinn" (There is no apple so rosy-red in which is not a little seed; there never was a virgin so beautiful that she did not possess a false mind). See also under APPEARANCE.

4
Betere is appel y-yeue then y-ete.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, 13. (c. 1300)

Better apple given nor eaten.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 20. (c. 1595)

An apple is better given than eaten by a time.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (1721)

"A man may get more favour by giving a thing than using it."

An apple may happen to be better given than eaten.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 581. (1732)

APPLE-CART

5
I've upset the cart (Plaustrum perculi.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 592. (c. 200 B.C.) LUCIAN, Pseudolus, sec. 32, puts it into Greek: δλην τήν ἀμαζαν ἐπισπάσω. (You've upset the whole cart), i.e., You've ruined everything.

If ever I catch his Cart overthrowing, I'll give it one shove.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2674. (1732)

That's upset his apple-cart for him.

R. O. HESLOP, Northumberland Words, p. 16. (1928)

Remember, you upset their apple-cart.

ETHEL WHITE, The Wheel Spins, Ch. 17. (1936)

He's got too much sense to upset his own apple-cart.

LESLIE FORD, Farewell Party. Ch. 1. (1938) See also CARR, Case of the Constant Suicides, p. 294. (1941) CHRISTIE, Evil Under the Sun, p. 15. (1941) DREISER, America Is Worth Saving, p. 212. (1941) etc., etc.

To upset the apple-cart. To upset a plan or intention. [A cliché since] mid. C. 19-20. Originally the apple-cart signified the human body.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Upset. (1941)

APRIL

6
April, that is messenger to May.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to the Man of Law's Prologue, l. 6. (c. 1386)

7
One of love's April fools

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 4. (1693) There is an old French rhyme, "Quand les fèves sont en fleur, | Les fous sont en vigueur" (When the beans are in flower, fools are in full strength), which may explain the origin of "April fool," or "Poisson d'Avril," as the French call it—the ancient notion, not without foundation, that the springtime is especially fruitful in folly.

'Tis a fair Trick, by ancient Rules—

The God has made us April-Fools.

SWIFT, The First of April, l. 57. (1723)

The first Day of April,

You may send a Fool whither you will.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6135 (1732)

On the first of Aprile,

Hunt the gowke another mile.

JOHN DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 41. (1846)

8
Holsom as the Aprile showr fallyng on the herbes newe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Reason and Sensuality, l. 6310. (c. 1430)

When Apprell sylver showers so sweet

Can make May flowers to spryng.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1560)

Sweete April showers Doo spring Maie flowers.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: April's Husbandrie (1573)

The April's in her eyes; it is love's spring,
And these the showers to bring it on.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 2, 43. (1606)

I'll show you how April showers bring May flowers.

LODOWICK BARRY, Ram-Alley. Act v. (1611)

April showers bring forth May flowers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1670)

April Showers bring May Flowers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6126. (1721)

I believe, if showers fall in April, that we shall have flowers in May.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 30. (1821)

March winds and April showers

Bring forth May flowers.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 36 (1846)

The French say, "Mai doit ses fleurs aux pluies d'avril" (May owes her flowers to the showers of April).

April comes in with a hack in his bill,

And sets a flower on every hill.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 41. (1846)

Early hours bring May flowers.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 54. (1941)

1 Till April's dead Change not a thread.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

April and May are the key of all the year.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23 FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 809. (1732)

2 April borrows three days of March, and they are ill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

When April blows his horn [thunders],

It's good both for hay and corn

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670) There are dozens of weather proverbs about April. See INWARDS, Weather Lore, for complete list

3 The uncertain glory of an April day.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 3. 85. (1594)

He's like an Aprill shoure, that wets the stone nine times.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS, iii, 26. (1639) Of an unconstant man.

April weather, Rain and Sunshine both together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

Oh, the lovely fickleness of an April day.

W. H. GIBSON, Pastoral Days: Spring. (1881)

APRON

4 Your words stink of the apron. (οἱ λόγοι σου περιζώματος ὀσπρῶσιν.)

ANTIGONUS, KING OF MACEDONIA (c. 250 B.C.), when Aristodemus, reputed to be the son of a cook, advised him to curtail his expenditures and giving of presents. See PLUTARCH, Sayings of Kings and Commanders, sec.

182D. Hegisippus speaks of "Wearing the apron" (ἐχει περιζώμα), and Dionysius of Halicarnassus (Dinarchus, 1) of "Practising an art with an apron on," i.e. superficially (δοκεῖν ἐκ περιζώματος).

5 He could not submit to be tied to the apron strings even of the best of wives.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. ii, ch 10 (1849) Referring to William of Orange.

Fitzroy wooing her so closely that really he did seem tied to her apron-strings.

READE, A Perilous Secret. Ch. 15. (1883)

I am tied to Hesione's apron-string.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

6 I cannot abide these aperiene husbands: such cotqueanes.

MIDDLETON AND DEKKER, The Roaring Girl. (1611) One that meddles with his wife's business.

7 As wise as her mothers aperiene string.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, 118. (1542)

8 Apron-string tenure is very weak.

NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cobler of Agawam, p. 67. (1647)

To hold by the Apron-strings, i.e. in right of his wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 226. (1678)

ARCADIA

9 I too was born in Arcadia. (Et in Arcadia ego.)

BARTOLOMMEO SCHIDONI (c. 1600), on a painting in the Colonna Collection, Rome; NICOLAS POUSSIN, on a painting in the Louvre, Paris. SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, on his portrait of Mrs. Crewe. Used also as an inscription on tombs, and usually translated, "And I too [the occupant of the tomb] was in Arcadia," or perhaps, "Even in Arcadia there am I [death]." See E. PANOFSKY, Philosophy and History. (1936) Goethe used the German form, "Auch ich war in Arkadien geboren," as the motto of his Travels in Italy (1788); and Jacques Delille the French form, "Moi aussi, je fus pasteur dans l'arcadie," in Les Jardins (1769).

I, too, a shepherd in Arcadia dwelt.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Song. (1817)

10 The Countesse of Pembrokes Arcadia.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY. Title of a prose romance, with a pastoral eclogue at the end of each book, begun in 1580 for the amusement of Sidney's sister, the Countess of Pembroke, but not published until 1590, after his death. Vergil in his Eclogues had sung of Arcadia, a district of the Peloponnesus, as the home of pastoral simplicity, and the word was adopted into English as signifying a place of idea' happiness.

Those golden times,
And those Arcadian scenes that Maro sings,
And Sidney, warbler of poetic prose.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 515. (1784)

1 Both in the flower of youth, Arcadians both, equal in song and ready in response. (Ambo
florentes aetatibus, Arcades ambo, | et cantare pares et respondere parati.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. vii, l. 4. (37 B. C.) That is, both singers, matched to sing together or re-sponsively.

"Arcades ambo," id est—blackguards both.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 93. (1813)
Arcades ambo. Scotchies both.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act iv. (1908)

ARCHER

See also Aim, Arrow, Bow

2 It does not follow that the archer aimed, because the arrow hit.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch.
11. (1642)

3 A good Archer is not known by his Arrows, but his Aim.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 135. (1732)

4 The archer who overshoots the mark is as much at fault as the one who shoots too short.
(L'archer qui oultre-passe le blanc fault, comme celuy qui n'y arrive pas.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 29. (1580)

5 An archier to faile of the butte is no wonder.
EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, 89. (1477)

6 The wise man blames the archer not the arrow for his injury.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 24. (c. 1258)

ARCHITECTURE

See also Building

7 'Tis the last keystone that makes the arch.
BEN JONSON, To Sir E. Sackville. (c. 1637)
The arch never sleeps.

JAMES FERGUSON, History of Indian and Eastern Architecture, p. 210. (1868) Quoting a Hindu aphorism.

8 The architects of their own happiness.

MILTON, Eikonoklastes Sec. 21. (1649)

EVERY ONE THE ARCHITECT OF HIS OWN FORTUNE.
see under FORTUNE.

9 To talk of architecture is a joke
Till you can build a chimney that won't smoke.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas. (1870) Paraphrasing ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1034,
"They send Commissioners before we are inaugurated."

10 Architecture is music in space, as it were a frozen music. (Erstarrte Musik.)

F. W. J. SCHLEIER, Philosophie der Kunst.
p. 576. (1797)

The sight of such a monument is like a continuous and stationary music (La vue d'un tel monument est comme une musique continuelle et fixée.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. iv, ch. 3
(1807)

Architecture is frozen music. (Die Baukunst ist eine erstarrte Musik.)

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann, 23
March, 1829

ARGUMENT

11 I've heard old cunning stagers

Say, fools for arguments use wagers.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 297. (1664)

A Wager is a Fool's Argument.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 452. (1732)

12 Ye conne by argumentes make a place

A myle brood of twenty foot of space.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale,
l. 203. (c. 1386)

13 Use soft words and hard arguments.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 549. (1855)

14 The clearness of a cause is diminished by argument. (Perspicuitas enim argumentatione elevatur.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, ch. iv, sec
9. (45 B. C.). Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 12 with the French, "La dispute affoiblit l'évi-dence" (Argument weakens the evidence)

As things, by making them too thinne and fine are soone broken, so by too much contention, the truth is made intricate and doubtfull.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. i.
p. 93. (1574) Pettie, tr.

15 A knock-down argument; 'tis but a word and a blow.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act i, sc. 1. (1690) What the Latins called "Argumentum baculinum."
argument by club, or force.

There's a nice knock-down argument for you.

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), *Through the
Looking-Glass*. Ch. 6. (1871)

A WORD AND A BLOW, see under WORD.

16 A dogmatical Tone, a pragmatial Pate.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 77. (1732)

Two Sir Positives can scarce meet without a Skirmish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5333.

17 It is ill arguing with the master of thirty legions.

FAVORINUS, yielding to the Emperor Hadrian in an argument, and paraphrasing the Latin proverb, "Cum principe non pugnandum" (Avoid contesting with the powerful). (c.
A. D. 130)

Accounted discretion in him that would not dispute with Adrianus Caesar; excusing himself, That it was reason to yield to him that commanded thirty legions.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, i, iii, 27. (1605)

The philosopher that had shamed himself by weakly disputing with Adrian . . . thus excused himself, . . . "Would you have me contend with him that commands thirty legions?"

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1851), iii, 285. (1629)
'Tis not seasonable to call a Man Traitor that has an Army at his Heels. One with an Army is a Gallant man.

JOHN SEIDEN, Table-Talk: Traitor. (c. 1654)

In arguing, too, the parson own'd his skill.
For e'en though vanquish'd, he could argue still.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 211. (1770)

His conduct still right, with his argument wrong.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 46. (1774)

Be calm in arguing: for fierceness makes
Error a fault, and truth discounties.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 52 (1633)

Well well (quoth he) we are but where we were

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Myself when young did eagerly frequent
Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument
About it and about but evermore

Came out by the same door where in I went.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubāyat. St. 27. (1859)

He argued high, he argued low,
He also argued round about him.

W. S. GILBERT, Sir Macklin. (1869) An argument in a circle (Circulus in probando)
A Latin proverbial phrase.

I never saw an instance of one of two disputants convincing the other by argument. I have seen many, on their getting warm, becoming rude, and shooting one another.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to T. J. Randolph, 1808.

Though we cannot out-vote them, we will out-argue them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. Quoted by BOSWELL, Life (1778)

In arguing, answer your opponent's earnest with jest and his jest with earnest. (σπουδῆν διαφθελεῖν τῶν ἐναντιῶν γέλωτι τὸν δὲ γέλωτα σπουδῇ.)

LEONTINUS GORGIAS, Epigram. (c. 400 B.C.)
Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. iii, ch. 18, sec. 7.

Disputation is the sifter out of the truth.

STEFANO GIUZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 41 (1574) Pettie, tr.

And friendly free discussion, calling forth
From the fair jewel, Truth, its latent ray.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. ii, l. 220. (1734)

A knowing man is hot in arguing for truth's sake; an ignorant man for opinion sake.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Table-Talk. (c. 1610)

See SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Crumms from King James's Table. No. 105.

We may convince others by our arguments;
but we can only persuade them by their own. (On peut convaincre les autres par ses propres raisons; mais on ne les persuade que par les leurs.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 106. (1810)

You have not converted a man because you have silenced him.

JOHN MORLEY, On Compromise, p. 246 (1874)

It takes two to make an argument.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Three I Sing. Act i, sc. 2. (1931) GARDNER, The Case of the Empty Tin, p. 249. (1941).

Specious and fantastic arrangements of words by which a man can prove a horse-chestnut to be a chestnut horse.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Ottawa, Ill., 21 August, 1858.

The last argument of kings. (Le dernier argument des rois.)

LOUIS XV OF FRANCE ordered this phrase engraved on his cannon (c. 1735), but its use as a motto for cannon dates back to 1613. Calderon applied the Spanish phrase, "Ultima razón des reyes," to war (c. 1650). It was ordered removed from French cannon by the National Assembly, 17 Aug., 1790. See BÜCHMANN, Gefügelte Worte, p. 476.

Don't forget your great guns, which are the most respectable arguments of the rights of kings.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to His Brother Prince Henry, 21 April, 1759.

There are no manifestoes like cannon and musketry.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Table-Talk. (c. 1810)

There is no good arguing with the inevitable.
The only argument available with an east wind is to put on your overcoat.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy and Other Addresses: Democracy. (1887) The Latins say, "Adversus solem ne loquitor" (Do not argue against the sun).

There were always two sides to every argument—his and the wrong side.

M. S. MICHEL, The X-ray Murders, p. 51. (1942)
He was one whom in an argument woe ever be-tides,

Because he always thought that there was much to be said on both sides.

OGDEN NASH, The Strange Case of Mr. Pouncefoot's Broad Mind. (1942) See also JUDGMENT: HEAR THE OTHER SIDE.

1 We should not investigate facts by the light of arguments, but arguments by the light of facts.

MYSON, OF CHEN, one of the Seven Sages. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, MYSON. Sec. 3.

2 Who over-refines his argument brings himself to grief. (Chi troppo assottiglia si scavezza.)

PETRARCA, In Vita di Madonna Laura. Canzone xi, l. 48. (c. 1350)

3 Rather with tormentes to be confounded, then with argumentes to be confuted.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 263. (1576)

4 To make the weaker argument the stronger. (τὸν ἥττω λόγον κρείττω ποιῶν.)

PLATO, The Apology of Socrates. Sec. 18B (c. 375 B. C.)

5 Calling Socrates to an argument is calling cavalry into an open plain. (ἰππέας εἰς πεδίου προκαλεῖ.)

PLATO, Theaetetus, Sec. 183D. (c. 390 B. C.) "To challenge cavalry on the open plain" is a proverbial expression for challenging a person to do exactly what he wishes to do. Nothing suits cavalry better than to fight on an open plain.

6 In a heated argument we lose sight of the truth. (Nimium altercando veritas amittitur.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 461 (c. 43 B. C.) The French say, "Par trop débattre le vérité se perd" (By too much disputing truth is lost); the Germans, "Mit viel zanken und disputieren Thut man die Wahrheit leicht verlieren" (With much argument and disputation, one often loses the truth).

In all disputes, so much as there is of passion, so much there is of nothing to the purpose.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici Pt. ii, sec. 3 (1642)

Never maintain an argument with heat and clamour, though you think or know yourself to be in the right.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

Heat is in proportion to the want of true knowledge.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1760)

Of two disputants the warmer is generally in the wrong.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Popular Fallacies. (1826) Lamb argues that "warmth and earnestness are a proof of a man's own convictions."

Iteration, like friction, is likely to generate heat instead of progress.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1860)

7 It is a good argument ad hominem.

THOMAS REID, Letter. Works, i, 81. (c. 1790)

To press a man with consequences drawn from his own principles, or concessions, is already known under the name of argumentum ad hominem.

JOHN LOCKE, Human Understanding, iv, 17, 22. (1690) There are several other proverbial phrases of this sort: "Argumentum ad invidiam," an argument to envy or prejudice; "Argumentum ad verecundiam," an argument to good feeling, or propriety; "Argumentum ad iudicium," an argument to good judgment; "Argumentum ad ignorantiam," an argument to ignorance; "Argumentum ad crumenam," an argument to the money-bag, or to self-interest.

8 Doubtful disputations. (διακρίσεις διαλογισμῶν.)

New Testament: Romans, xiv, 1. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Disceptationibus cogitationum."

It were endless to dispute upon everything that is disputable.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No 184. (1693)

They have begun a Dispute, which the Devil will not let them make an End of.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4963. (1732)

9 It would be argument for a week.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 2, 100. (1596)

Let thy tongue tang arguments of state

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 5, 164; iii, 4, 78. (1599)

10 He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, i, 18 (1595)

In some places he draws the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument

RICHARD PORSON, Letter to George Travis, 1789. Referring to Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.

11 No honest man will argue on every side (ἄνδρα δ' οὐδέν' οἷδ' ἐγὼ | δίκαιον ὅστις ἐξ ἀπαντος εὖ λέγει.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 806 (c. 408 B. C.)

12 I am not arguing with you—I am telling you.

J. McNEILL WHISTLER, The Gentle Art of Making Enemies, p 51. (1890) Quoted

13 It is only the intellectually lost who ever argue.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray (1891)

Arguments are to be avoided; they are always vulgar and often convincing.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act ii (1895)

14 A modesty in delivering our sentiments leaves us a liberty of changing them without blushing.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 127. (1707)

1 Rise quickly from the table and thou wilt avoid disputes.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 17. (c. 1000)

ARISTOCRACY

See also Gentility, Nobility

2 Aristocracy of Feudal Parchment has passed away with a mighty rushing; and now, by a natural course, we arrive at Aristocracy of the Moneybag.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. vii, ch. 7. (1837)

3 In the Greke tunge called Aristocratia, . . . in englishe the rule of men of best disposition.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Governour, p.9. (1531)
Aristocracy is the government of the best choicest men.

THOMAS NORTON, tr., Institution of Christian Religion. (1561)

Aristocracy. . . Government by the best.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets, iii. 41 (1850)

4 There is a natural aristocracy among men. The grounds for this are virtue and talents.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 28 Oct., 1813.

5 Our democracy was from an early period the most aristocratic, and our aristocracy the most democratic in the world.

T. B. MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 1. (1849)

The democrat is a young conservative; the conservative is an old democrat; the aristocrat is the democrat ripe and gone to seed

R. W. EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon. (1850)

Aristokrat: A demokrat with hiz pockets filled

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Comical Lexicon. (1877)

6 Aristocracy is always cruel.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech: Toussaint L'Ouverture. (a. 1863)

ARM

7 They wenten arme in arme yfere into the gardyn.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, ii, 1116. (c. 1380)

Don Leon arm in arm Rogero led.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso, xlvi, 35. (1591)

Walk arm in arm with angels.

RICHARD HOOKER, Sermons, iii, 500. (a. 1600)

Go out together arm-in-armly.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann. (1743)

8 Strech out thine arme no farther then thy sleue wyll retche.

MILES COVERDALE, The Christen State of Matrymony, sig. 13. (1541)

Put thy hand no further then thy sleue will reache.

HUGH LATIMER, Second Sermon before Edward VI (Arber), p. 51. (1549)

My sutes were silke, my talke was all of State, I stretcht beyond the compasse of my sleeve.

ROBERT GREENE, Mourning Garment. (1590)
Works (Huth), ix, 216.

Stretch your arm no further than your sleeve will reach.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 211. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678) MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

Put your hand no farther than your sleeve will reach. That is, spend no more than your estate will bear.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 277. (1721)

Never put out your arm farther than you can easily draw it back again.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 22. (1817)

Dinna try to stretch your arm further than your sleeve will let you.

JOHN GALT, The Provost. Ch. 2. (1822)

I mustn't stretch my arm further than th' coat-sleeve will reach.

WILLIAM WESTALL, The Old Factory. Ch. 21. (1881)

DON'T STRETCH YOUR LEGS, see under LEG.

9 He'd cut off his right arm for her. as the saying goes.

ROBERT G. DEAN, Layoff, p. 131. (1942)

ARMS

10 Arms are of little avail abroad unless there is good counsel at home. (Parvi enim sunt foris arma, nisi est consilium domi.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 22. (45 B.C.)

Courage god knoweth is litle worth abroad, unlesse there bee good counsayle at home. For what worthy exploytes did any captaine ever atchive abroad, but by the advice of counsaylors at home?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 252. (1576)

Arms are weak abroad if there be not counsel at home. (Debiles sont les armes au dehors, si le conseil n'est pas en la maison.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua Bk. i, ch. 19. (1534)

11 Let arms yield to the toga, laurels to eloquence. (Cedant arma togae, concedat laurea linguae.)

CICERO, On His Consulship. (63 B.C.) As quoted by QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae, xi, 1, 24. This is a passage from one of Cicero's poems, and Quintilian observes, "One can only wish that he had shown greater restraint in his poems, which those who love him are never weary of criticising." Cicero repeated the first phrase in In Pisonem, ch. 30, sec. 75 (55 B.C.)

The whole truth, however, is in this verse, against which, I am told, the malicious and envious are wont to rail: "Yield, ye arms to the toga; to civic praises, ye laurels." (Cedant arma togae, concedat laurea laudi.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 77. (c. 45 B.C. This is the line as Cicero himself gives it.

Will you even pursue us with the tiresome refrain, 'Let arms yield to the toga, the laurel to the tongue'? Just as if it were in the toga and not in arms that you did what you boast of. (Etiamne molestissimis verbis insectabere, 'Cedant arma togae, concedat laurea linguae'.)

SALLUST, In Tulliam Ciceronem. Ch. 3, sec. 6 (54 B.C.)

Men sage in mind excel the brave in arms. (Vir prudens animo est melior quam fortis in armis.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 29 (c. A.D. 600)

1 Is there any reason why we should be armed to the teeth?

RICHARD COBDEN, Speeches, p. 12. (1849)

Put an end to these bloated armaments.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 8 May, 1862.

2 The laws permit arms to be taken against an armed foe. (Armaque in armatos sumere iura sinunt.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 492. (c. 1 B.C.)
See also SELF-DEFENSE.

3 We laid down our arms. (Arma deponimus.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 109. (c. A.D. 60)

4 We say, With the spurs one begins to arm himself. (Nous disons que par espons on commence soy armer.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1545)

5 A wise man should try everything before resorting to arms. (Omnia prius experiri, quam armis sapientem decet.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 789. (161 B.C.)

There is little reason in arms. (Nec sat rationis in armis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 314. (19 B.C.)

6 Arms and the man I sing. (Arma virumque cano.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 1. (19 B.C.)

Arms and the Man.

BERNARD SHAW, Title of Play. (1898)

THIRCE IS HE ARMED, see under JUSTICE.

ARMY

See also Soldier

7 An army of deer commanded by a lion is more to be feared than an army of lions commanded by a deer. (φοβερώτερόν ἐστιν ἐλάφον στρατόπεδον ἢ γουμέρον λέοντος ἢ λέοντων ἐλάφου.)

CHABRIAS, a famous Athenian general. (c. 400

ARROGANCE

B.C.) PLUTARCH, Moralia, 187 D. STOBAEUS, Florilegium, liv, 61, attributes the saying to Philip of Macedon.

8 It ain't the guns or armament, or the money they can pay,

It's the close coöperation that makes them win the day;

It ain't the individual, nor the army as a whole,

But the everlastin' teamwork of every bloom-in' soul.

J. MASON KNOX [?], Coöperation. These lines have been attributed to other writers. They were claimed for Mr. Knox in a letter from his wife to the New York Times, 1 Aug., 1920.

9 Briars and thorns flourish where battalions have quartered; bad years follow on the heels of armies. (Shi chi shuo ch'u ching chi shang yen, chi heu' pi' 'yiu hiung nien.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue) Sec. 30. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

10 An army is a crowd which obeys. (Une armée est un peuple qui obéit.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon (c. 1808) See GUILLOU, Napoléon, p. 280.

11 I feel an army in my fist. (Ich fühle eine Armee in meiner Faust.)

SCHILLER, Die Räuber. Act ii, sc. 3. (1777)

12 Terrible as an army with banners. (Terribilis ut castrorum acies ordinata.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, vi, 4. (c. 900 B.C.)

13 The Man who goes into the Army a Coxcomb will come out of it a sort of Publick Nuisance.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 566. (1714)

14 An army, like a serpent, travels on its belly.

UNKNOWN. A saying which has been attributed to Frederick the Great, but which is probably much older.

An army marches on its stomach.

UNKNOWN, Attributed to Napoleon, in Windsor Magazine, 1904, p. 268, but probably a condensation of a long passage. See LAS CASES, Mémorial de Ste-Hélène, Nov., 1816.

THE SOUP MAKES THE SOLDIER, see under SOLDIER.

ARROGANCE

15 Arrogance is not to be borne. (Arrogantia non ferenda.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. iii, cent. x, No. 37. (1523)

16 The boast of arrogance soon turns to shame. (Cito ignominia fit superbi gloria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 109. (c. 43 B.C.)

ARROW

<sup>1</sup> Their arrows hail so densely all the sun is in eclipse. (ὅπῳ δὲ τῶν τοξευμάτων οὐκ ἦν ἰδεῖν τὸν οὐρανόν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1084. (422 B.C.)

Referring to the Spartan reply at Thermopylae when word was brought that the Persian arrows would hide the sun: "That is good news—then we shall fight in the shade." See under FIGHTING.

<sup>2</sup> This is an arrow in Satan's eye.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 38a. (c. 450)

Also, Kiddushin, 30a, 81a.

<sup>3</sup> Let each look out for the arrow. (Cada uno mire por el virote.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 14, 49.

(1615) Covarrubias explains this as a phrase taken from rabbit-shooting with the cross-bow—meaning, let each look for his own arrow, i. e. mind his own business; according to him, virote is a bolt used for shooting small game, not an arrow used in warfare.

<sup>4</sup> Beware of a returning arrow.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438. (1938) See under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>5</sup> Thys arrow comyth never owt of thyn owne bow.

RICHARD HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 129. (c. 1500)

This bolt came never out of your bag.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (1641)

That Bolt never came out of your Quiver.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4334. (1732)

A rendering of the Latin. "Ex tua faretra nunquam venit ista sagitta."

<sup>6</sup> Not always will the bow hit that at which it is aimed. (Nec semper feriet quodcumque minabitur arcus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 350. (c. 20 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> The arrows of the Almighty are within me. (Sagittae Domini in me sunt.)

Old Testament: Job, vi, 4. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Arrows of the Almighty.

OWEN JOHNSON, Title of novel. (1901)

<sup>8</sup> When the arrow is on the string it must go (Chien tsai hsien shang pu tê pu fa.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 98. (1875)

<sup>9</sup> A bolt lost is not a bow broken.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 16. (1821)

<sup>10</sup> I have shot mine arrow over the house, And hurt my brother.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 254. (1600)

I shot an arrow into the air, It fell to earth, I knew not where; . . .

Long, long afterward, in an oak

I found the arrow, still unbroke.

LONGFELLOW, The Arrow and the Song. (1845)

I shot a rocket in the air,

It fell to earth, I knew not where

Until next day, with rage profound,

The man it fell on came around.

TOM MASSON, Enough. (c. 1920)

The arrow shot at random flew better than she knew.

LUCY CORES, Painted for the Kill, p. 203. (1943)

TO DRAW A BOW AT A VENTURE, see under BOW.

ART

See also CUNNING, Painting, Sculpture, Skill

<sup>11</sup> Art is far feeblér than necessity. (τέχνη δ' ἀνάγκης ἀσθενεστέρα μακρῶ.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 514. (c. 470 B.C.)

Betere is liste thene ufel strenthe.

LAYAMON, Brut, ii, 297. (c. 1205) "It was said of yore, better is art than evil strength."

<sup>12</sup> Art. This word has no definition.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>13</sup> All art consists in bringing something into existence. (ἅρτι δὲ τέχνη πάσα περὶ γένεσιν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. vi, ch. 4, sec. 4. (c. 335 B.C.)

Art is power.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1839)

An art is a handicraft in flower.

GEORGE ILES, Jottings. (c. 1918)

Great art is an instant arrested in eternity.

JAMES HUNER, Pathos of Distance, p. 120. (1925)

<sup>14</sup> There is an art even in roasting apples. (Es gehöert Kunst zum Aepfelbraten.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 333

(1856) A German proverb, which the French have made into a jingle: "Même pour faire cuire des pommes, Encore faut-il savoir comme" (Even for cooking apples, one must know how).

<sup>15</sup> Art for art's sake. (L'art pour l'art.)

VICTOR COUSSIN, Sorbonne Lectures. No. 22. (1818)

The well-known formula of art for art's sake . . . has, like other doctrines, a true side to it, and an untrue.

SWINBURNE, Essays and Studies, p. 41. (1872)

My motto is art for art's sake.

BERNARD SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act iii. (1897)

"Art for art's sake." The phrase was coined and used indiscriminately.

FRANCES WINWAR, Oscar Wilde, p. 171. (1940)

<sup>16</sup> Art is a jealous mistress, and if a man have a genius for painting, poetry, music, architecture, or philosophy, he makes a bad husband and an ill provider.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)
Art is an absolute mistress; she will not be coquetted with or slighted.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN. (c. 1870) See American Actors, ch. 10.

1
New arts destroy the old.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)
The arts and inventions of each period are only its costume.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance.

2
Art is the path of the creator to his work.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: The Poet. (1844)
Art is not a thing: it is a way.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (c. 1900)

3
Learne thou an art, and lay it aside, for tyme wil come thou shalt haue neede of it. (Impara vna arte & metti la da parte, che tempo vegnera, che la ti bisognera.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

4
Nobody can further art but the master. Patrons further the artist. (Die Kunst kann niemand fördern als der Meister. Gönner fördern den Künstler.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

5
In art one arrives at an honorable result only through one's tears. He who does not suffer does not believe.

J. A. D. INGRES. (c. 1850) See PACH, Ingres, p. 162.

Drawing is the probity of art.

J. A. D. INGRES. See PACH, Ingres, p. 170.

6
No art is learned without a master. (Nulla ars absque magistro discitur.)

ST. JEROME, Epistles. Epis. CXXV, sec. 15. (A. D. 411)

7
Art hath an enemy called ignorance.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour: Induction, l. 216. (1599)

Art hath no enemy but ignorance.

JOHN TAYLOR, To John Booker. (1644) Quoting the Latin proverb, Ars non habet inimicum nisi ignorantem.

8
As the sun colours flowers so does art colour life.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Pleasures of Life. Ch. 5. (1887)

9
A humble art affords us daily bread. (τὸ τέχνην ἡμᾶς διατρέφει.)

EMPEROR NERO, when astrologers predicted that he would be banished from Rome. (A. D. 68)
He meant that he could earn a living anywhere by singing and playing the lyre. See Suetonius, Lives of the Caesars: Nero. Ch. 40, sec. 2. Nero habitually spoke Greek, the language of culture.

Every country nourishes the arts. (τὸ τέχνην πάντα γαῖα τρέφει.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 33. (1523) The Latin is, "Artem quaevis alit terra." "Art" is used here in the old sense of skill or craftsmanship, as well as in the later sense of science or knowledge, and proficiency in any profession, such as medicine, music, poetry. In other words, a craftsman, a man with a profession or a trade, can make a living anywhere. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 155, with the rendering, "Arte or cunningge euerye cuntry nourysheth." and with the comment, "Cunningge (they say) is no burthen. It neyther can be taken from the by theues, and into what parte of the world so euer thou go, it foloweth the. . . . For this cause amonges the Greakes is arte or cunningge called the porte or hauen of necessitie unto men mortall, that is to saye, ye only refuge in pouertie." A marginal note adds the proverb, "Science the port of nede." There is another Latin form, "Quae prosunt omnibus artes" (The arts which profit all men).

According to the common proverb: Artem quaevis terra alit; that is to say, "A man having an occupation shall be able to live wheresoever he become."

THOMAS BECON, A Newe Catechisme, p. 355. (1560)

But you know the old proverb, "A Man of Art will live anywhere."

NATHAN BAILEY, tr. Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 238. (1725)

He who has learned any art may live in any place (Quien tiene arte, va por toda parte.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 163. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

Nero . . . replied to his censurers by the Greek proverb, "An artist lives every where."

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, i, 429. (1823)

10
If the art is concealed, it succeeds. (Si latet ars, prodest.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 313. (c. 1 B. C.)
Another form is "Ars est celare artem" (Art consists in concealing art). See HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 27. Ovid, of course, refers to the art of seduction.

The height of art is to conceal art. (Prima est ne ars esse videatur.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 80)

It is a chief point of art to dissemble art.

BRIAN MERRANKE, Philotimus, sig. G1. (1583)

I have heard schollers say, that it is arte to con-ceale art.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 11. (1637)

In oratory the greatest art is to hide art.

SWIFT, Faculties of Mind. (1707)

Art must be deluded by Art.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 815. (1732)

To reveal art and conceal the artist is art's aim.
OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

There is nothing more disenchanting to man than to be shown the springs and mechanisms of any art.

R. L. STEVENSON; as quoted by F. A. M. WEBSTER, Old Ebbie: The Double Problem. (1923)

<sup>1</sup> Art counterfeits chance. (Ars casu similis.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 155. (c. 1 B. C.)

That which owes its effect to chance is not an art. (Non est ars, quae ad effectum casu venit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, sec. 3. (a. A. D. 64)

<sup>2</sup> Nothing is more useful to man than those arts which have no utility. (Magis utile nil est | artibus his, quae nil utilitatis habent.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 53. (A. D. 13)

All art is quite useless

OSCAR WILDE, Dorian Gray: Preface. (1891)

<sup>3</sup> So does his art conceal his art. (Ars adeo latet arte sua.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. x, l. 252. (c. A. D. 7)

More matter, with less art.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 95. (1600)

<sup>4</sup> The learned understand the theory of art, the unlearned its pleasure. (Docti rationem artis intelligunt, indocti voluptatem.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. ii, ch 17, sec. 42. (A. D. 80)

That is the root of all art: Adèle a du goût.

MAURICE BARING, Daphne Adeane, p. 218. (1926)

They may not know just what is Art,

But they do know what they like.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Go On, You Scintillate (1940)

I don't know much about umph but I know what I like.

GRACE MOORE, You're Only Human Once, p. 93 (1944)

<sup>5</sup> I care little for those arts which do not teach their teachers virtue. (Parum mihi placeant eas literae quae ad virtutem doctoribus nihil profuerunt.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum Ch. lxxxv, sec. 32. (c. B. C. 40) As quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12. The correct version is, "Parum placebat eas discere," etc. It is Marius speaking and he refers to Greek letters.

<sup>6</sup> All the arts are brothers; each one is a light to the others.

VOLTAIRE, Note to Ode on the Death of the Princess de Barèthe. (c. 1762)

All arts are one.—all branches on one tree;

All fingers, as it were, upon one hand.

W. W. STORY, A Contemporary Criticism. (1847)

<sup>7</sup> Art—which Mr. Whistler always spelt with a capital I.

OSCAR WILDE, Lecture on Art. (1885)

All loved Art in a seemly way

With an earnest soul and a capital A.

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, The V-a-s-e. (c. 1895)

<sup>8</sup> Art never expresses anything but itself.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. (1890)

A work of art is the unique result of a unique temperament. Its beauty comes from the fact that its author is what he is.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man Under Socialism (1891)

II—Art Is Long

<sup>9</sup> The day is short and the work is great.

Babylonian Talmud, Pirké Aboth, ii, 20. (c. 450)

The day is short, the work is long.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 3631. (c. 1400)

The day is short, and the work is much. Ars longa vita brevis.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 414. (1678)

<sup>10</sup> Life is short, the art long, opportunity fleeting, experience treacherous, judgment difficult. (ὁ βίος βραχύς, ἡ δὲ τέχνη μακρὴ.)

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. Sec. i, No. 1. (c. 400 B. C.) Hippocrates is referring to the art of healing.

This is the utterance of the greatest of physicians, that life is short and art long. (Vitam brevem esse, longam artem.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Sec. 1. (c. A. D. 49)

The lyf so short, the craft so long to lerne,

Th'assay so hard, so sharp the conquering.

CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules: Proem, l. 1. (c. 1382)

Lyf is thought short, the peyne is thought longe, experience harde to come bye and judgement dangerous.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 29. (1477) Quoting Hippocrates.

Skill comes so slow, and life so fast doth fly.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum, i. 19. (1590)

Art is long, life short, experiment deceiving.

BRATHWAIT, English Gentleman, p. 74 (1630)

One Science only will one genius fit;

So vast is Art, so narrow human wit.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 60. (1711)

Art is difficult, transient is her reward. (Schwer ist die Kunst, vergänglich ist ihr Preis.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein: Prolog, l. 40. (1799)

O God! art is long, and short is our life. (Ach Gott! die Kunst ist lang; Und kurz ist unser Leben.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1. (1806)

Time is short and art is long. (Die Zeit ist kurz, die Kunst ist lang.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4. BAUDELAIRE, Le Gai-gon, put the phrase into French, "L'Art est long et le Temps est court."

Art is long, and Time is fleeting.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

Ars longa, vita brevis! said Doctor Butts.

R. H. BARRHAM, The Lady Rhodessa. (1840)

So much to know, so little time to learn.

JULIET WHITON, A Pagan's Prayer. (1916)

Art is long, but artists frequently are short.

Poor Richard Jr.'s Almanach, p. 114. (1906)

We are short and Art is long

O. HENRY, Extradited from Bohemia. (1908)
True to our Art, still there are variations,
Art cannot flourish on infrequent rations;
We condescend to work in humbler sort,
For Art is long and money very short.

JOHN REED, The Day in Bohemia. (1913)

1
So many worlds, so much to do,
So little done, such things to be.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. sec. lxxiii. (1833)
"So much to do, so little done" are said to have been the last words of Cecil Rhodes.
(1902)

III—Art and Nature

2
Things perfected by nature are better than those finished by art. (Meliora sunt ea quae natura quam illa quae arte perfecta sunt.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 34, sec.
87. (45 B. C.)

All things are produced either by nature, by fortune, or by art, the greatest and most beautiful by one or other of the first two; the smaller and less perfect by the last. (Toutes choses sont produites ou par la nature, ou par la fortune, ou par l'art: les plus grandes et plus belles, par l'une ou l'autre des deux premières; les moindres et imparfaites, par la dernière.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 30. (1580)

Quoted as a saying of Plato.

In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1374 (1594)

Nature's above art.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 86 (1605)

Over that art

Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes. . . . The art itself is nature

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 90. (1610)

Art does not surpass nature, but only brings it to perfection. (El arte no se aventaja a la naturaleza, sino perfeccionala.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 16 (1615)

Better in every respect are the works of Nature than the adulteries of Art.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly. Sec. 38. (1668)

Art may err, but Nature cannot miss.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 452. (1699)

Nature alone is antique and the oldest Art a mushroom.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1834)

Nature paints the best part of the picture.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Art. (1841)

And in their vaunted works of Art,

The master-stroke is still her part.

EMERSON, Nature. Pt. ii. (c. 1860)

New Art would better Nature's best,

But Nature knows a thing or two.

OWEN SEAMAN, Ars Postera. (1896)

3
Nature is the art of God. (Deus aeternus, arte sua, quae natura est.)

DANTE, De Monarchia. Pt. i, l. 3. (c. 1300)

Nature is God's, art is man's instrument.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 8. (1614)

Nature is not at variance with Art, nor Art with Nature, they being both servants of his Providence. Art is the perfection of Nature. . . . Nature is the Art of God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 16. (1643)

Art is man's nature; nature is God's art.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem. (1839)

Nature is a revelation of God; Art, a revelation of man.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Hyperion, iii, 5. (1839)

Art is Nature made by Man

To Man the interpreter of God.

OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON), The Artist. St. 26. (c. 1867)

4
Aide nature with a little art.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 124. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Arte can breake nature.

THOMAS UNDERDOWNS, Heliodorus. Bk. iii, p. 94. (1587)

Nature scarcely ever gives us the very best; for that we must have recourse to art. (Déjanos comunmente á lo mejor la naturaleza; acojámonos al arte.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 12. (1647)

Art helps Nature, and Experience Art.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 814. (1732)

Nature must give way to Art.

SWIFT, A Love Song, l. 4. (1733)

"Art improves nature," is an old proverb which our forefathers adopted without reflection.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 310. (1827)

Nature is usually wrong.

J. MCNEILL WHISLER, "Ten O'Clock." (1890)

5
Nature moves in circles, Art in straight lines

O. HENRY, Squaring the Circle. (1908)

6
Art is consummate when it seems to be nature. (ἡ τέχνη τελείος, ἥρ' ἂν φέροι εἶναι δοκῇ.)

LONGINUS, De Sublimitate. Ch. xxii, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 100)

7
Art is not nature. Art is nature digested. Art is a sublime excrement.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man, Ch. 7. (1888)

8
All nature is but art.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 289. (1733)

9
Birds sing sweeter without the help of art (Vulcrus nulla dulcius arte canunt.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. ii, l. 14. (c. B. C. 26). Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 30.

He who paints the flower cannot paint its fragrance. (Qui pingit florem, non pingit floris odorem.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 364. (1869)

10
All art is but an imitation of nature. (Omnis ars naturae imitatio est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucillum. Epis. lxxv, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64)

Nature in no case cometh short of art, for the arts are copiers of natural forms. (οὐκ ἔστι χεῖρων οὐδέμῃ φύσιν τέχνης.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xi, sec. 10.

(A. D. 174) The first phrase is quoted, apparently from some unknown poet.

Your art, as far as it can, follows her [Nature] as the scholar does his master. (L'arte vostra quella, quanto puote, segue, come il maestro fa il discente.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xi, l. 103. (c. 1300) Possibly in allusion to Aristotle's phrase, "If Art mimics Nature," in the Physics, ii, 2.

Whoe'er from nature takes a view,
Must copy and improve it too.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto ii. (1809)

ARTIST

1 Who of the gods first taught the artist's craft
Laid on the human race their greatest curse.
(δοῖς τέχνην κατέδειξε πρῶτος τῶν θεῶν, οὗτος μέγιστον εἶρεν ἀνθρώποις κακόν.)

ANTIPIANES, Knaphcus, Frag., l. 1. (c. 335 B. C.)

2 Let each man exercise the art he knows.
(ἑρδοῖ τις ἢν ἕκαστος εἰδείη τέχνην.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1431. (422 B. C.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 41, puts this into Latin: "Quam quisque norit artem, in hac se exerceat." See also under TRADE.

3 Every artist was first an amateur.

R. W. EMERSON, Progress of Culture. (1875)

4 A Man may be an Artist, tho' he have not his Tools about him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 288. (1732)

5 The artist never dies.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg. St. 13. (1844)

His work outlives him,—there's his glory!

T. B. ALDRICH, On an Intaglio Head of Minerva. (1883)

The bust outlasts the throne,

The coin, Tiberius.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Art. (1883)

And it came to pass that after a time the artist was forgotten, but the work lived.

OLIVE SCHREINER, Dreams: The Artist's Secret. (c. 1900)

6 What an artist the world is losing! (Qualis artifex pereo!)

EMPEROR NERO, as he drove a dagger into his throat, rather than be taken alive and tortured. (A. D. 68) See Suetonius, Nero. Sec. 49.

7 Artists are always young.

MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI, Letter to W. H. Channing, Aug., 1842.

Etta: I know all about artists; women to them,
are as the tinders to the flames.

Nancy: There's the Hearst of it!

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1906)

8 People always confuse the man and the artist because chance has united them in the same body. (On confond toujours l'homme et l'artiste sous pretexte que le hasard les a réunis dans le même corps.)

JULES RENARD, Journal. (c. 1896) Referring to Paul Verlaine.

9 Good material often stands idle for want of an artist. (Saepe bona materia cessat sine artifice.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium, Epis. xlvii, 16. (c. A. D. 64)

10 In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, ii, 3, 15. (1608)

11 A great artist can paint a great picture on a small canvas.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, Washington Irving. Ch. 6. (1896)

ASKING

12 You ask for Arcadia. ('Αρκάδιαν μ'αίτεϊς.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. x, epis. 5. (49 B. C.)

Quoting the answer of the Delphian oracle to a Spartan envoy. See HERODOTUS, i, 66. The oracle refused the gift, as too great Winstedt (Loeb) translates the phrase, "You are asking for the moon."

13 He'll not lose it for asking.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, Anglo-Latina, p. 38. (1639)

Many things are lost for want of asking.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 966. (1640)

I see thou wouldst not lose anything for want of asking.

ROBERT HOWARD, The Committee. Act i. (1665)

Lose nothing for asking.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 58. (1670)

The Italians say, "E meglio domandar che errare" (Better to ask than go astray); the Germans, "Besser zweimal fragen denn einmal irgehen" (Better ask twice than go wrong once).

14 "Please, sir, I want some more." . . . "Oliver Twist has asked for more!"

CHARLES DICKENS, Oliver Twist, Ch. 2. (1838)

15 He that cannot ask cannot live.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 20. (1633)

Spare to speak and spare to speed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 133. (1670)

Ray quotes an Italian proverb, "Porco peritoso non mangia pera matura" (The bashful hog eats no ripe pears). The French say, "Jamais n'a bon marché qui ne l'ose demander" (He never gets a bargain who dares not ask for it), or "Qui ne veut parler, ne veut gagner" (He who isn't willing to ask, doesn't wish to gain).

1 Aske that is unreasonable yt thou mayst beare awaye that is reasonable. (Iniquum petendum, ut aequum feras.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 26. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 33. (1550) Taverner adds: "If thou wylte begge an ooke of thy frende, aske twentye or an hundrethe ookes. This crafte our marchaunt men and other that sel what so cuer ware it be, knowe well ynough." Ray gives the Latin form as "Oportet iniquum petas, ut aequum feras."

Ask much to have little.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 324. (1640)

Ask but enough, and you may lower the price as you list.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1678)

Londoner like, ask as much more as you will take

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349.

2 Ask and have, is sometimes dear buying.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. 1755.

The highest price we can pay for anything is to ask for it.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Eschines and Phocion. (1824) The Italians say, "Caro costa quel che con preghi si compra" (What is got by begging costs dear)

I never ask for what I can buy.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905) The Latin proverb is, "Emere malo quam rogare" (I prefer buying to asking) The Germans say, "Kaufen ist wohlfeiler als Bitten" (Buying is cheaper than asking, or What is bought is cheaper than a gift).

3 Ask of God and not of the rich.

HAI GAON, Divan. (c. 1030)

4 You distress me with frequent asking. (Occidis saepe rogando.)

HORACE, Epodes. Epode xiv, l. 5. (c. 20 B.C.)

5 Ask, and it shall be given unto you. (altriare, kai dothoerai umin.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 7. (c. A.D. 65)

Repeated in Luke xi, 9. The Vulgate is, "Petite, et dabitur vobis."

Hee which wil have, must aske, and he which wil enter into the house, must first knocke at the gate.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 84. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Craue and haue.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 191. (c. 1582)

'Tis but ask and have.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

6 I can ask myself hoarse before I get anything. (Usque ad ravim poscam prius quam quicquam detur.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 336. (c. 210 B.C.)

This other proverb, that nothing is for asking.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 196. (1574) Young, tr.

7 A reasonable request ought to be granted. (Impetrare oportet qui aequum postulat.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 724. (c. 200 B.C.)

8 You comply with a request more willingly than with an order. (Roganti melius quam imperanti pareas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 637. (c. 43 B.C.)

9 A good asker needs a good listener.

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1670) The French say, "A bon demandeur bon écouteur" (To a good asker a good listener).

10 He who asks faint-heartedly teaches how to refuse. (Qui timide rogat docet negare.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 593. (c. A.D. 60)

It is an old saying that he which asketh faintly teacheth us to deny him.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 8. (c. 1591)

He prays but faintly and would be denied.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 3, 103. (1595)

He teaches to deny that faintly prays.

FRANCIS QUARLES, A Feast for Wormes. Sec. 7. (1620)

Bold beggars freeze our gifts: thy faint suit breeds her no.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, A Piscatory Eclogue. (1633)

To get thine ends, lay bashfulness aside;

Who feares to aske, doth teach to be deny'd.

ROBERT HERRICK, No Bashfulness in Begging (1648)

Not to ask, is not to be denied.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 242. (1687)

11 Smart: Sir John, will you taste my October? Sir John: My lord, I beg your pardon; but they say, the devil made askers.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii (1738)

12 It is a maxim with me, not to ask what, under similar circumstances, I would not grant.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to the Emperor of Germany, 15 May, 1796.

ASPIRATION

See also Ambition, Purpose

13 Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,

Or what's a heaven for?

ROBERT BROWNING, Andrea del Sarto, l. 96 (1855)

14 He that stays in the Valley, shall never get over the Hill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2314. (1732)

The French say, "Qui reste dans la vallée ne passera jamais la montagne."

15 I drink the wine of aspiration and the drug of illusion. Thus I am never dull.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, The Wine Horn Mountain. (1910)

<sup>1</sup>
The shades of night were falling fast,
As through an Alpine village passed
A youth, who bore, 'mid snow and ice,
A banner with the strange device,
Excelsior!

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Excelsior. (1841)
Nor flood nor torrent shall us stay; excelsior's just a form of hay.

FRANKLIN CHARLES, The Vice Czar Murders,
p. 62. (1941)

<sup>2</sup>
The road to the heavens remains. (Restat iter caeli.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 37. (c. 1 B.C.)
Yet some there be that by due steps aspire
To lay their just hands on that Golden Key
That opes the Palace of Eternity.

MILTON, Comus, l. 12. (1634)
Heaven is not reached at a single bound.
J. G. HOLLAND, Gradatim. (c. 1870)

<sup>3</sup>
Who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, i, 4, 5. (1608)

<sup>4</sup>
The whole duty of life is implied in the question, how to respire and aspire both at once.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 26 Dec., 1841. "There must be respiration as well as aspiration."—
31 Dec., 1840.

<sup>5</sup>
The most difficult of tasks to keep
Heights which the soul is competent to gain.
WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv,
l. 138. (1814)

Man can climb to the highest summits, but he cannot dwell there long.
BERNARD SHAW, Candida. Act iii. (1898)

<sup>6</sup>
Climb high, Climb far,
Your aim the sky, Your goal a star.
UNKNOWN. Inscription on Hopkins Memorial
Steps, Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

ASS

<sup>7</sup>
The ass with the lion's skin. (δρος ἐνδυσάμενος λεοντήν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Ass and the Fox. (c. 570
B.C.) The ass puts on a lion's skin and tries to frighten a fox, but is betrayed by its bray.
I should have stayed quiet in my own skin. (In propria pelle quiescem.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. vi, l. 22. (35 B.C.)
To use a lion's skin to disguise an ape. (ὥποτ' ἢ λεοντῇ πύθηκα ὑποστέλλειν.)

LUCIAN, The Philosopher. Sec. 5. (c. A.D. 170)
Perhaps your mimic roar may deceive strangers, but to me you will always be a donkey. (At mihi, qui quondam, semper asellus eris.)

AVIANUS, Fables. No. v, l. 17. (c. A.D. 400) A rendering of Aesop's Ass in the Lion's Skin.
The Germans say, "Wenn der Esel auch eine Löwenhaut trägt, die Ohren gucken vor" (Even when the ass wears the lion's skin, its ears betray it).

Dwell in your own skin. Keep within your own skin. (Tecum habita. Intra tuam pelliculam te continue.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, Nos. 87 and
92. (1523)

The Ass which put on the Lyons skin (thinking that thereby his maister woulde more respect him) was knowne for an Asse, and used like an Asse.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 197. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Clad in a lion's shaggy hide
An ass spread terror far and wide.
(De la peau du lion l'âne s'étant vêtu Étoit craint partout à la ronde.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'Âne Vêtu de la Peau
du Lion. Bk. v, fab. 21. (1668) Aesop again
The ill-natured world might call him the Ass in the Lion's Skin.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 13. (1711)

He had talked so much of his valour that I had
... rated him as an ass in a lion's skin.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 54. (1748)

<sup>8</sup>
For an ass's shadow. (περί ὄρου σκιάς.)

AESOP, Fables: The Ass and His Shadow. (c.
570 B.C.) Aesop tells how a youth hired an ass one hot summer day to carry him from Athens to Megara, but when the heat of the sun became insufferable, he dismounted to sit in the shadow of the ass. The driver objected, saying that the youth had hired the ass, but not the shadow. While they were disputing, the ass took to his heels and left them to walk back. The story is told in a masterly manner by Wieland in one of his verse-tales. See also PLUTARCH, Moralia, 848A.

Just like the ass's shadow. (τὰ ἄσπ' ὄρου σκιάς.)

SOPHOCLES, Cedalion. Frag. 308. (c. 450 B.C.)
Quoted by SUIDAS, Lexicon. A proverbial phrase used by Aristophanes, Aristotle. Lucian, Demosthenes, and many others, meaning to dispute about something of no importance. Other similar proverbs are "De lana caprina" (To dispute about goat's wool), and "De fumo disceptare" (To argue about smoke).

The ass's shadow. (De asini umbra.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 52
(1523) Erasmus tells the story of the ass's shadow at considerable length, and attributes the proverbial meaning of the phrase to Demosthenes. One day, Demosthenes, observing that the judges before whom he was pleading paid no attention to what he was saying, began to tell them the story of the ass's shadow. Soon they were listening intently, and Demosthenes left the rostrum in disgust, saying, "You are ready enough to listen to a ridiculous story about the shadow of an ass, but not to my pleading for the life of a man."
The proverbial form is, "De asini umbra disceptare."

They were often contending, as the Greek said, for an ass's shadow.

J. A. FROUDE, The Council of Trent, i, 3. (1896)

<sup>1</sup> For fear of the lion, the ass left his burden.
AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. vi, l. 89. (c. 550 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> I'm the ass in the mystery show. (ἐγὼ γοῦν δρος ἄγων μυστήρια.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 159. (405 B. C.)

"The ass bearing the mysteries" (δρος ἄγων μυστήρια) is a proverb for anyone out of his proper place, or for being proud without reason. The fable of the ass in the procession is the source of the saying: An ass was carrying a sacred image in a religious procession and when the people knelt to it, the ass became very much puffed up, thinking they were kneeling to him. The lash of his driver soon brought him to his senses. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 4, with the Latin, "Asinus portans mysteria."

<sup>3</sup> If thy comrade call thee "Ass," put the saddle upon thy back.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450) The criticism of a friend should be heeded. This is amplified in Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, xlv, 7, to, "If one should say, 'Thou hast the ears of an ass,' pay no heed; but if two should say it, then put a halter into thy mouth." COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, renders this, "If one person tell thee thou hast ass's ears, take no notice; should two tell thee so, procure a saddle for thyself." A writer in The British Weekly for 9 April, 1903, puts it this way: "The outsider's judgment is usually safe. It is written in the Talmud, 'If thy friends agree in calling thee an ass, go and get the halter round thee.'"

If all men say that thou art an ass, then bray

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 11. (1633)

When all tell thee thou art an ass, 'tis time for thee to bray.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 1. (1659)

If any say that one of thine ears is the ear of an ass, regard it not: If he say so of them both, procure thyself a bridle.

JOHN RAY, Hebrew Proverbs, p. 396. (1678)

If one, two, or three tell you, you are an Ass, put on a Tail.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2697. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> It is better to look like an ass than to fight with one.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch. 13. (1938) Quoted as a Spanish proverb

<sup>5</sup> Jest with an ass, and he will flap you in the face with his tail.

H.G. Bohn, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 436. (1855)

<sup>6</sup> They said to the asses of the gypsum mill, "The day of resurrection is a terrible day"

"We have nothing to fear," they replied. "We have neither worn saddles nor eaten barley."

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 502.

(1817) Those have most to dread punishment in the other world who lead a life of undeserved enjoyment in this. The idle asses kept merely for pleasure in Cairo have fine saddles and are fed with barley; while the hard-working ass goes with a bare back and gets nothing to eat but straw.

Like the ass's tail, it never grows longer or shorter.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 562. The tail of an ass is said to be as long when it is born as it ever becomes.

<sup>7</sup> Like a gypsy's ass with quicksilver in his ears. (Como asno de gitano, con azogue en los oídos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 31. (1605)

<sup>8</sup> Honey is not for the ass's mouth. (No es la miel para la boca del asno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 52. (1605)

The Germans say, "Der Esel träumt von Disteln" (The ass dreams of thistles); or as the Dutch say, "Geef een' ezel haver, hij loopt tot de distels" (Give an ass oats and he runs after thistles). Ewart's "To the ass's lips a thistle is a lettuce," is a free rendering of "Similem habent labra lactucam," "Like lips, like lettuce," which made Crassus laugh for the only time in his life. See under LIKE-NESS

<sup>9</sup> The fault of the ass should not be laid on the pack saddle. (La culpa del asno no se ha de echar a la albarda.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66. (1615)

The fault of the horse is put on the saddle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 242. (1640)

The Fault of the Ass must not be laid on the Pack-saddle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4519. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> The ass endures the load, but not the overload. (El asno sufre la carga, mas no la sobrecarga.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71. (1615)

The Ass endures his burden, but not more than his burden.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1078. (1640)

<sup>11</sup> What, you ass! must I begin to teach you your letters? For that I shall need not words but a cudgel. (Quid nunc te, asine, litteras doceam? Non opus est verbis, sed fustibus.)

CICERO, In Pisonem. Ch. xxx, sec. 73. (55 B.C.)

A paraphrase of a Greek proverb, "For the ass a beating" (δρου πληγῶν ἄσιος).

<sup>12</sup> Every ass thinks himself worthy to stand with the king's horses.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 254. (1639)

RAY, 58. (1670) FULLER, No. 1405. (1732)

1 He who is an ass and thinks himself a deer,
When he tries to leap the ditch, his error will be clear.

(Chi è somaro, e cervo esser si crede,
Al saltar della fossa tardi sene avvede.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 211.
(1856) An Italian proverb.

Until the Donkey tried to clear

The Fence, he thought himself a Deer.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 48.
(1924)

2 An ass at the lyre [or "at a musicale"]. (δνος λύρας.)

CRATINUS, Fragment. (c. 450 B.C.) Cited by DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 33, and by ERAS-MUS, Adagia, i, iv, 35, with the Latin, "Asinus ad lyram," or "Asinus lyrae auscultator," and explains that the proverb was supplied to unappreciative listeners. MENANDER, The Noise-Shy Man, frag. 527K, quotes the proverb, and also a variation, δνος πρὸς αὐλὸν (An ass with a lute), which is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, i, 47, with the Latin, "Asinus ad tibiam." The complete proverb, as given by PHOTIUS, Lexicon (c. A.D. 875), is, "An ass listened to a lyre, a sow to a trumpet." ME-NANDER refers to it again in The Hated Man,
l. 18. DIOGENIANUS cites another ass proverb, δνος ἐν μύρῳ (An ass in the ointment), which ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 43, puts into Latin,
"Asinus in unguento." ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium (The Praise of Folly), sec. 99, (1511), gives another form, δνος πρὸς τὴν λύραν (Like an ass playing on the lyre), and in sec. 26, has the Latin again.

A bull with the lyre. (βοὺς λύρας.)

MACHON, Fragment. (c. 300 B.C.) As quoted by ATHENAEUS, Sophists at Dinner, sec. 221A.
Asses at the lyre. (δνοι λύρας.)

VARRO, Testamentum (c. 40 B.C.) See AULUS
GELLIUS, iii, 16.

An ass on the tiles. (Asinus in tegulis.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 63. (c. A.D. 60) Of an unheard of or ominous event, but its origin is unknown. So is the origin of another Roman proverbial saying, "Asinus de Aesopi puteo" (An ass from Aesop's pit), of an unwelcome or noisy person.

What has a dog to do with a bathroom? (τί κοῖτον κυὶ καὶ βαλανεῖον.)

LUCIAN, Dialogues of the Dead. (c. A.D. 170)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 39, with the Latin, "Quid commune cani balneo?"
and a page of comment. Francklin, in his translation of Lucian (Works, ii, 109), renders this in the more familiar form, "What, indeed, as the proverb says, has the ass to do with a lyre?" STORAEUS, Florilegium (c. A.D.
400), gives still another form, τί τιφλάω καὶ κατόπτρῳ; (What has a blind man to do with a mirror?). This also is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 54, with the Latin, "Quid caeco cum speculo?" He adds, "Nihil cum fidibus graculo" (No more than a jackdaw has with honesty).

Artow lyke an asse to the harpe? (δνος πρὸς λύραν.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. i, prose 4, l. 3. (A.D. 534) As rendered by Chaucer. (c. 1380) To a person unmoved by music, art, or higher things. Colville, in his translation of Boethius (1556) renders it,
"Art thou no more apt to understand them then an asse to play on the harpe?" which implies another way in which the phrase was used, i.e., as a proverbial symbol for im-possibilities. FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1282
(1732), also uses it in this sense: "Did you ever before hear an Ass play upon a Lute?"

Or artow lyk an asse to the harpe,
That hereth soun, whan men the strenges plye,
But in his minde of that no melodye
May sinken, him to glade, for that he
So dul is of his bestialitee?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l.
731. (c. 1380)

Like a sow playing on a trump.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 232. (1721)
"Spoken when people do a thing ungrace-fully."

Never look like a sow playing upon a trump.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 25. (1818)

What should a Cow do with a Nutmeg?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5502. (1732)

What, would you have an Ass chop Logick?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5527
(1732) Fuller gives some similar ones: "What would you have? a butter'd Faggot?" (No 5525); "What would you have? a Calf with a white Face?" (No. 5526). There are many other variations: "Asini mortes," asinine sayings; "Asini mandibula," the jaws of an ass, of a glutton. All these and others will be found in ERASMUS, Adagia. The French say, "Comme l'âne qui lit la gazette" (Like the ass that reads the paper).

3 When an ass kicks you never tell it, is a maxim which mamma . . . always acts upon
MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Ch. 24. (1834)

4 Don't wash an ass's head with soda [soap].
(Asini caput ne laves nitro.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 39.
(1523) Similarly, "Asinum tondes" (You're shaving an ass) indicates a waste of money and time.

Who washeth an Asses head loseth both labour and sope.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 34. (1578)

Who washeth the Asses eares looseth both his Sope and his labour.

THOMAS LODGE, Euphues Shadow, 53. (1592)

I take small pleasure in washing the asses head
GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 276. (1593)

He that washeth an ass's head loseth both his lye and his labour.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, 155. (1639)

The old proverb, . . . He who washeth an asse's head doth lose both time and sope.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, 28. (1660)

To lather an Asse's Head, is but spoiling of Soap.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.5193.(1732)

To try to wash an ass's face,

Is really labour to misplace;

And loss of time as well as sope.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Expostulatory Odes. No. xiv. (1789)

Simon . . . summed up . . . by the remark that
"Twas waste of soap to lather an ass."

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 23. (1861)

To TEACH AN ASS, see under LABOR LOST.

1 An Ass cover'd with Gold is more respected, than a good Horse with a Pack-Saddle.

An Ass is the gravest Beast, an Owl the gravest Bird.

An Ass must be ty'd, where the Master will have him.

An Ass that carries a Load, is better than a Lyon that devours Men.

An Ass that kicketh against the Wall, receives the Blow himself.

An Ass was never cut out for a Lap-Dog.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 584-592. (1732)

Better strive with an ill Ass, than carry the Wood one's self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 930.

Put not an embroider'd Crupper on an Ass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3984.

Where-ever an Ass falleth, there will he never fall again.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5643.

2 He that makes himself an Ass, must not take it ill if Men ride him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2232.(1732)

He who makes himself an ass will be ridden by everybody. (Wer sich zum Esel macht, auf dem will jedermann reiten.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 310. (1856) A German proverb.

We may make ourselves asses, and then everybody will ride us.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 4. (1869)

3 What good can it do an Ass to be called a Lyon?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5490. (1732) HULME, Proverb Lore, (1902) OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

BETTER THE HEAD OF AN ASS THAN THE TAIL OF A LION, see under HEAD.

4 Many asses have only two legs. (Sunt asini multi solum bino pede fulti.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 424. (1869)

5 I had rather ride on an ass that carries me, than a horse that throws me.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 260. (1640) cited by RAY, p. 2, with the Spanish,

"Mas quero asno que me leve, que cavallo que me derrube."

Better ride an Ass that carries us, than a Horse that throws us.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 920. (1732)

Better an ass that carries us than a horse that throws us.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: The Infallible. (1859)

"Better is an ass that carrieth me than a horse that layeth me on the ground." It is the greatest folly to seek a position to which your abilities are unequal.

J. A. SPENDER, Comments of Bagshot, xiii, 129. (1908)

6 It is good to hold the ass by the bridle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1127. (1650) "And a scoffing fool by his wits end," is sometimes added.

7 'Tis a sorry ass that will not bear his own burden.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

8 The wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons. (Onagri steterunt in rupibus, traxerunt ventum quasi dracones.)

Old Testament, Jeremiah, xiv, 6. (c. 600 B.C.) Sons of the wild jackass

SENATOR GEORGE H. MOSES, Speech, at a dinner of New England manufacturers, at Washington, D.C., 7 Nov., 1929, referring to the group of so-called insurgent Republicans in the Senate.

9 He shall be buried with the burial of an ass. (Sepultura asini sepelietur.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxii, 19. (c. 600 B.C.) Asses die, and Wolves bury them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 821. (1732)

10 The ass invited to a wedding ought to bring wood or water. (Asne convié à nopces eau ou boys y doit apporter.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. i, p. 139. French proverb of the 15th century. De Lincy comments, "That is to say, poor people are invited only to do some service." Perhaps derived from the old Arabic narrative proverb: "They asked the ass, 'Whither?' He answered, 'To fetch wood or water.'"

11 Wilt thou, being keeper of the cash, Like an ass that carries dainties, feed on thistles?

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 423. (1632)

The asse often times carries gold on his back, yet feeds on thistles.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 17. (1660) An asse, though loaded with gold, eats but nettles and thistles.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 15. (1666) The Ass, that carrieth Wine, drinketh Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.4400.(1732)

Even if the ass is laden with gold, he will seek his food among thorns.

MOSES GOLDMAN, Proverbs of the Sages. No. 265. (1911)

1 An ass among apes, as the saying goes. (ὄνος ἐν πιθήκοις τὸ λεγόμενον.)

MENANDER, The Necklace. Frag. 402K. (c. 300 B.C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, ii, 23.

4. An ass among fools who ridicule him. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 23, gives the Latin, "Asinus inter simias," and adds another of his own, "Asinus inter apes," An ass among bees.

2 The donkey-drivers think one thing and the donkeys think another. (Li asniers une chose pense, Et li asnes pense tout el.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux: La Borgoise d'Orliens, l. 104. (c. 1250)

The bay is of one mind, he who saddles him of another. (Uno piensa el bayo, otro quien le ensilla.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 15. (1615)

The ass thinks one thing, and he that rides him another.

JAMES MARBE, tr., Celestina, p. 264 (1631)

The horse thinks one thing, and he that saddles him another.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 389. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1754.

The horse thinks one thing and he that rides him another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670) D'URFEY, Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act iii, sc. 2. (1696)

One thing thinketh the Horse, and another he that saddles him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3799. (1732)

3 Who is there that has not the ears of an ass? (Auriculas asini quis non habet?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 121. (c. A.D. 58)

The ears of the Asse fastened to Midas meane that he easilie understood what every man sayde and did.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, l. 199. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long ears.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 29. (1593)

To the great he is great; to the fool he's a fool: In the world's dreary desert a crystalline pool, Where a lion looks in and a lion appears; But an ass will see only his own ass's ears.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, On Amos Bronson Alcott. (c. 1863) The Latin proverb is, "Ex auribus cognoscitur asinus" (By the ears one knows the ass).

ONE ASS CALLS ANOTHER "LONG-EARS," see under POT.

4 He who cannot beat the ass, beats the saddle. (Qui asinum non potest, stratum caedit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45. (c. A.D. 60) He who cannot find the chief offender, avenges himself upon his relatives.

He that can not beate the Hourse, beateth the saddle.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p. 213. (1572)

Who can not beat the horse, let hym beat the saddle. (Chi non puo batter il cauallo, batta la sella.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Who cannot strike the Ass may strike the Pack-saddle.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 22 (1666)

Since he cannot be reveng'd on the Ass, he falls upon the Pack-saddle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4174. (1732)

5 An ass laden with gold can enter the gates of any city.

PHILIP OF MACEDON. (c. 350 B.C.) See under GOLD.

6 Act the ass's part to get some bran. (Faisoyt de l'asne pour avoir du bren.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

7 An ass is cold even in the summer solstice

JOHN RAY, Hebrew Proverbs, p. 401. (1678)

"Some men are so unhappy that nothing will do them good."

8 He that loves Glasse without G, Take away L, and that is he.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55. (1678)

He that whines for Glass without G, Take away L and that's he.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746

9 An ass, though covered with satin, is still an ass.

SADI, BUSTAN, Ch. iv, Apologue 6. (c. 1257)

Hood an ass with rev'rend purple,

So you can hide his two ambitious ears, And he shall pass for a cathedral doctor.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act i, sc. 2. (1605)

By outward show let's not be cheated; An ass should like an ass be treated.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Packhorse and the Carrier. (1727)

An Ass is but an Ass, tho' laden with Gold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 585. (1732)

AN APE IN PURPLE, see under APE.

10 Your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 64. (1600) The French say, "A dur âne, dur aiguillon" (For the stubborn ass a sharp goad)

An ass pricked must needs trot.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 58. (1629)

A dull Ass near Home needs no Spur.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 83. (1732)

11 This is to make an ass of me.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer Night's Dream. iii, 1, 124. (1595)

My foes tell me plainly I am an ass.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, v. 1, 21. (1600)

"Egregiously an ass."—Othello, ii, 1, 318.

Don't make an ass of yourself.

TROLLOPE, The Belton Estate. Ch. 20. (1865)

1 If an ass had kicked me, would you have thought it proper for me to kick him in return? (εἰ μὲν ὄνος ἐλάκτισεν, ἀντιλακτίσαι τούτου ἡξιώσαι' ἄν.)

SOCRATES, refusing to retaliate when kicked by an impudent youth. (c. 425 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Children Sec. 10C.

If sayde Socrates an Asse had kycked mee, would you also haue mee to kick him againe?

JOHN LYL, Euphues and his Ephoebus (Arber), p. 145. (1579)

If a donkey bray at you, don't bray at him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

If an Ass kick you, will you kick him again; or put him into the Court?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2669. (1732)

He is fool enough himself, who will bray against another ass.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 375 (1855)

Because a Donkey takes a whim

To Bray at You, why Bray at Him?

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 37 (1924)

2 'Tis the ass in the thorns and the lamp in the town-hall. (ἀλλ' ὄνος ἐν ῥάμνῳ τὸ τε λύχνιον ἐν προτείῳ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xxi, l. 36. (c. 270 B.C.)

3 To the rude ass a rude keeper.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 475. (1623)

4 Hast thou seen a black ass? [Then] it was neither black nor white.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 8. (c. 1000) Addressed to a confirmed liar whose very statement is a proof against itself

He who honors them that despise him is like an ass.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 13 Proverbs concerning the ass are very numerous in all literatures. The collections of Greek proverbs show over forty, and ERASMUS in his Adagia cites still more of Semitic and Latin origin. The ass plays a role in thirty of Aesop's fables. It is usually represented as intelligent and faithful, as well as inquisitive, obstinate, wanton and a glutton, and a familiar companion of man.

ASSES SCRATCH EACH OTHER, see under SCRATCHING.

II—The Ass: Its Bray

5 The ass will bray no matter how you beat him. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 485. (1817)

6 The ass that brays most eats least.

RANDALL COTGRAVE, French-English Dict.; Asses. (1611) RAY, Proverbs, p. 3. (1670)

Asses that bray most, eat least.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 822. (1732)

7 Every Ass loves to hear himself bray.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1404 (1732)

The Ass brays, when he pleases.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4399.

An ass may bray a good while before he shakes the stars down.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 50. (1862)

8 'Tis time to cock your hay and corn, When the old donkey blows his horn.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 127. (1893)

Hark! I hear the asses bray;

We shall have some rain to-day.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 127.

9 The most detestable of sounds is the voice of an ass.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iv. Apologue 11. (c. 1258)

10 The Ass . . . for his Voice, there's none disputes

That he's the Nightingale of Brutes.

SWIFT, The Beasts' Confession, l. 21. (1732)

11 The ass knows well in whose face he brays. (Bien sabe el asno en cuya cara rebozna.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 43. (1853) A Spanish proverb.

12 An ass's voice ne'er reached to Heaven.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Ld B. & His Motions. (1802) "A certain and true saying Of animals inclined to braying."

ASTONISHMENT

See also Surprise, Wonder

13 How can these things be? (ὥς τ' ἄρ' τοι τάδε ἐργαί.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 838. (c. 850 B.C.)

Then I looked up at Nye, And he gazed upon me; And he rose with a sigh, And said, "Can this be?"

BRET HARTE, Plain Language from Truthful James. (1870)

14 Amazement sits upon me. (σέβας μ' ἐχει εἰσοφώρτα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 161. (c. 850 B.C.) A phrase frequently repeated.

15 We were dumb with astonishment. (Attonitis admiratione.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 63. (c. A. D. 60)

I am most putrified with astonishment.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 33. (1884)

He was astonished clear down to his corns.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 215. (1889)

16 To drink the wine of astonishment. (Potasti nos vino compunctionis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lx, 3. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> Nothing can satisfy, but what confounds;
Nothing, but what astonishes, is true.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 836. (1742)

ATHEISM

See also Doubt

<sup>2</sup> Great hypocrites are the real atheists. (Magni hypocritae sunt veri atheistae.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, sec. 15. (1605)

Hypocrisy in one Age is generally succeeded by Atheism in another.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 119. (1711)

<sup>3</sup> An atheist-laugh's a poor exchange
For Deity offended!

BURNS, Epistle to a Young Friend. (1786)

<sup>4</sup> There are no atheists in the fox-holes.

REV. WILLIAM THOMAS CUMMINGS, Sermon, on Bataan, Philippine Islands, March, 1942, telling the story of a sergeant who had prayed during a heavy bombing attack by the Japanese. Captured when the Japanese took Bataan. Father Cummings was reported lost in the sinking of a Japanese prison ship by an American submarine, Dec., 1944. See New York Times, 13 April, 1942, p. 3/5; ROMULO, I Saw the Fall of the Philippines, p. 263.

There are no absentees in the fox-holes.

CAPTAIN EDDIE RICKENBACKER, Speech, before N.Y. Legislature, 22 Feb., 1943, paraphrasing Father Cummings, and referring to the high percentage of absenteeism among war-plant workers.

Foxholes are not valid agents for making Christians, for destroying atheism, or for driving men to God.

TRANSPORT CHAPLAIN LEWIS A. MYERS, Article, in The Arkansas Baptist, June, 1945.

<sup>5</sup> Some are atheists only in fair Weather.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4210 (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Sire, I had no need for that hypothesis. (Sire, je n'avait besoin de cette hypothèse.)

PIERRE LAPLACE, to Napoleon (1796), when the latter asked why God was not mentioned in La Mécanique Céleste.

<sup>7</sup> A man cannot become an atheist merely by wishing it. (N'est pas athée qui veut.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon. (c. 1816)

<sup>8</sup> The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. (Dixit insipiens in corde suo: Non est Deus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xiv, 1; lili, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

Atheists . . . are in some respects worse than the Devil: he knows and acknowledgeth a Deity; these say, "There is no God."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 341. (1629)

An Atheist is got one Point beyond the Devil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 593 (1732)

<sup>9</sup> I did it ignorantly in unbelief. (ἀγνοῶν ἐποίησα ἐν ἀπιστίᾳ.)

New Testament: I Timothy, i, 13. (A. D. 62)
The Vulgate is, "Ignorans feci in incredulitate."

The fearful Unbelief is unbelief in yourself.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus: The Everlasting No. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1831)

There is no unbelief;

Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod

And waits to see it push away the clod,

He trusts in God.

LIZZIE YORK CASE, There is No Unbelief. (c. 1860) Often wrongly attributed to Bulwer-Lytton. ALPHONSE KARR pointed out that "Unbelief is a belief, a very exacting religion" (L'incrédulité est une croyance, une religion très exigeante).

<sup>10</sup> By night an atheist half-believes a God.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 176. (1742)

ATHENS

<sup>11</sup> Let us go to Athens. (ἵωμεν εἰς Ἀθήνας.)

ARISTOTLE, Constitution of the Bottiaians. Fr. 485. (c. 350 B. C.) Song of Bottiaean maidens. See PLUTARCH, Theseus, ch. 16; Moralia: Greek Questions. Sec. 299A. "Eamus ad Romam" was no doubt the song of the Italian maidens, just as "We're going to live at Paris" (Nous vivrons à Paris) was the song of Manon and Des Grieux in the first act of Massenet's Manon. The American equivalent is perhaps George Cohan's "Give my regards to Broadway."

<sup>12</sup> I would rather live on a few grains of salt at Athens than enjoy sumptuous fare at Craterus's table. (ἀλλὰ βοῖλομαι ἐν Ἀθήναις ἅλα λίχειν ἢ παρὰ Κρατέρῳ τῆς πολυτελοῦς τραπέζης ἀπολαύειν.)

DIOGENES, to Craterus. (c. 300 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 57. Quoted by PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Gamma, p. 17. Dan Daly brought this up to date (c. 1895) when he said, "I'd rather be a lamp-post in New York than a man anywhere else."

<sup>13</sup> Hail, Athens, thou nurse of Greece! (Salvete, Athenae, quae nutrices Graeciae.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 649. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup> I think our Modern Athens much obliged to me for having established such an extensive manufacture.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel: Introductory Epistle. (1822)

Edinburgh . . . the modern Athens.

JOHN OXENHAM, White Fire. Ch. 2. (1905)

ATLAS

<sup>15</sup> The shoulders of Atlas wherewith he staid up heaven, represent unto us nothing els but the knowledge which he had of the superior world by means of contemplation.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 49. (1574)

Thou art not Atlas for so great a weight.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 1, 36. (1590)

Atlas, we read in antient Song.
Was so exceeding tall and strong,

He bore the skies upon his back,

Just as a Pedlar does his Pack: . . .

Or, when he can no longer stand,

Desires a Friend to lend a Hand. . . .

Great Statesmen are in this Condition,

And Atlas is a politician.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Atlas. (1712) Referring to the Earl of Oxford.

The disencumber'd Atlas of the state.

WILLIAM COWPER, Retirement, l. 394. (1781)

Thomas Nashe in a dedication to Robert Greene's Menaphon (1589) referred to Greene as "The Atlas of Poetrie."

AUDACITY, see Boldness

AUSTRIA

2 Austria is to rule the whole universe. (Austria est imperare orbi universo.)

UNKNOWN, Motto, adopted by Frederick III, Emperor of Germany, when he received the Imperial crown from the Pope, 1452. There is another version, "Austria shall be the last thing in the world" (Austria erit in orbe ultima). The most famous example of political proverbs, often given simply as "A.E.I.O.U." The first form is also in German, "Alles Erdreich ist Oesterreich unterthan."

AUTHOR, see Writer

AUTHORITY

3 Everyone is harsh whose authority is new (ἄπας δὲ τραχὺς ὅστις ἀνὴρ νέον κρατῇ.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 35. (c. 470 B. C.)

None is more severe than he of humble birth when raised to high estate. (Asperius nihil est humili, cum surgit in altum.)

CLAUDIAN, In Eutropium. Bk. i, l. 181 (c. A. D. 400)

After he had mounted, he put his legs in motion

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 135 (1817) To start up his animal. Once established in power, a man begins to tyrannize

4 Authority buries those who assume it.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 86b. (c. 450)

5 Authority without wisdom is like a heavy axe without an edge, fitter to bruise than polish.

ANNE BRADSTREET, Meditations Divine and Moral. (c. 1670)

6 Authority is a Disease and Cure,
Which Men can neither want, nor well endure.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remarks, l. 251. (c. 1680)

7 Authority issuing from one is strong, issuing from two is weak.

WILLIAM DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 281. (1872)

8 Authority can make leather as current as gold.

JOSEPH GLANVILL, The Vanity of Dogmatizing. Ch. 19. (1661)

9 I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh. (καὶ λέγω τούτῳ Πορεύθητι, καὶ πορεύεται, καὶ ἄλλῳ "Ἐρχου, καὶ ἔρχεται.)

New Testament: Matthew, viii, 9. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Et dico huic: Vade, et vadit: et alii Veni, et venit."

10 To exercise authority with cruel claws. (Exercere imperium saevis unguibus.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 31, l. 12. (c. 25 B. C.)

11 The old speech is, Magistracy makes not the man, but discovers what mettell in in him

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 45 (1642)

12 Whoever submitteth his neck to authority, doth it not often happen that he comes to authority himself?

SADI, How to Bring Up a Son. (c. 1250)

13 Drest in a little brief authority.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 118 (1604)

Though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 831. (1610)

14 A good man ever respects authority. (καλὸν τὸν ἐσθλὸν ἀνδρα χρῆ τῶν ἐν τέλει.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1352. (c. 409 B. C.)

15 Authority, not majority. (Autorität, nicht Majorität.)

F. J. STAHL: Speech, in the German Parliament at Erfurt, 11 April. 1850

AUTUMN

16 Fruit-bearing autumn. (Pomifer autumnus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 11. (23 B. C.)

Autumpne cometh ageyne beuy of apples.

CHAUCER, Boethius, iv, 7, 144 (c. 1374)

The teeming autumn, big with rich increase.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets Sonnet xcvi. (1609)

17 Dread autumn, harvest-season of the Goddess of Death. (Autumnusque gravis, Libitinae quaestus acerbae.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 19. (35 B. C.)

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year.

W. C. BRYANT, The Death of the Flowers. (1821)

- 1 In Autumn, the fairest season of the year. (Sub autumnum, cum formosissimus annus.)
 OVID, Artis Amatoriae, Bk. ii, l. 315. (c. 1 B. C.)
 Of fair things the autumn is fair.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
 Some of us call it autumn,
 And others call it God.
 W. H. CARRUTH, Each in His Own Tongue. (c. 1890)

AVARICE

See also Covetousness, Greed, Miser

- 2 To me avarice seems not so much a vice, as a deplorable piece of madness.
 SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 13. (1643)
 No Vice! Like Avarice.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6171. (1732)
 3 Expel avarice from thy heart, and the fetters will be loosened from thy feet.
 J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 249. (1817) Be contented and thou wilt be free.
 4 Avarice, after the description of saint Augustin, is likerousnesse in herte to have earthly thinges.
 CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 63. (c. 1389)
 5 The very suspicion of avarice is to be avoided. (Vitanda tamen suspicio est avaritiae.)
 CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 58. (c. 45 B. C.)
 6 Banish Avarice, mother of crimes. (Scelerum matrem, . . . trudis Avaritiam.)
 CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonia, ii, 111. (A. D. 400) Quintilian says, "Cruditatis mater avaritia est" (Avarice is the mother of cruelty).
 Avarice, sphincter of the heart.
 MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 697. (1737)
 Avarice, the spur of industry.
 DAVID HUME, Of Civil Liberty. (1741)
 7 Pale av'rice may his heart possess,
 The bane of human happiness.
 WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque, 36. (1812)
 8 Dochney lived to an old age, because as th' pote says, "There's nawthin' like avarice to keep a man young."
 FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Making a Will. (1900)
 9 Dream of gold, and wake hungry.
 EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: Avarice. (1852)
 10 Aunt Maggie had a sudden attack of the hedges. . . . She was a hedger from Hedgersville.
 O. HENRY, The Enchanted Profile. (1909)

- 11 Avarice and happiness never saw each other, how then should they become acquainted.
 FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.
 12 Avarice, the root of all evil. (Radix omnium malorum avaritia.)
 ST. JEROME, Epistles. Epis. cxxv, sec. 2. (A. D. 411)
 LOVE OF MONEY ROOT OF EVIL, see under MONEY.
 13 Avarice loses everything in trying to gain everything. (L'avarice perd tout en voulant tout gagner.)
 LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Poule aux Oeufs d'Or. Bk. v, fab. 13. (1668) Girardin calls attention to a similar fable in the Latin poems of Milton: A farmer had an apple tree which bore beautiful fruit, and presented some of it one day to his proprietor. The latter, enchanted, had the tree removed to the court of his house, where it died. "From wishing too much," mourned the proprietor, "I have lost the tree and the fruit."
 14 Avarice is more opposed to economy than liberality is. (L'avarice est plus opposée à l'économie que la libéralité.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 167. (1665)
 Avarice hoards itself poor; charity gives itself rich. (Der Geiz sammlt sich arm, die Milde giebt sich reich.)
 R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 96. (1853) A German proverb.
 15 True it is that avarice is rich, modesty starves. (Verum est aviditas dives, et pauper pudor.)
 PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 1, l. 12. (c. 25 B. C.)
 16 When you reward the avaricious you ask for trouble. (Cum das avaro praemium ut noceat rogas.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 136. (c. 43 B. C.)
 17 The avaricious man is good to none—worst to himself. (In nullum avarus bonus est, in se pessimus.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 273. (c. 43 B. C.)
 Avarice is its own step-mother. (Der Geiz ist seine Selbst-Stiefmutter.)
 CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 317. (1856) A German proverb.
 18 Many things are lacking to poverty, all things to avarice. (Inopiae desunt multa, avaritiae omnia.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 275. (c. 43 B. C.)
 One line of Ovid: Desunt luxuriae multa, avaritiae omnia. Much is wanting to luxury, all to avarice. To which saying I have a mind to add . . . : Poverty wants some, luxury many, avarice all things.
 ABRAHAM COWLEY, Essays, vii, 82. (1668)
 Poverty wants many things, but covetousness all.
 WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 13. (1669)

The poor man wants many things, but the covetous man wants all.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Seneca's Epistles. Epis. ii. (c. 1680)

A poor Man wants some things, a covetous Man all things.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 356. (1732)

Poverty wants some things, luxury many things, avarice all things.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735. The Germans say, "Einem armen Mann mangelt viel, einem Geizigen alles." Similarly, "Der Geizige ist das Ross das Wein führt, und Wasser säuft" (An avaricious man is a horse which is laden with wine, and drinks water).

<sup>1</sup> The avaricious man lacks what he has as much as what he has not. (Tam deest avaro quod habet quam quod non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 694. (c. 43 B.C.) One of the best known lines of Publilius, quoted by Seneca, Quintilian, St. Jerome, and many others. Jerome's order is "Avaro tam deest," etc.

<sup>2</sup> It is a folly to hoard what we are never likely to want. (Estre follie faire reserve de ce dont jamais l'on n'a faulte.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 56. (1548)

<sup>3</sup> Let us be avaricious as the sea. (Soyons avare comme la mer.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer Ch. 3 (1873)

<sup>4</sup> How can the falcon fly to the sky when the stone of avarice is tied to its wing?

SADI, Bastan Ch. 6, Maxim 9. (c. 1257)

The eyes of men are closed by avarice; it is greed which entices both bird and fish to the net.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 3, Apologue 28. (c. 1258)

No well can fill the eye of avarice.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 7, Apologue 19.

<sup>5</sup> Avarice is a wild beast, monstrous and irresistible. (Avaritia belua fera, immanis, intoleranda est.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Epistula. Ch. 8. (c. 50 B.C.)

Avarice destroys honor, integrity, and all other noble qualities. (Avaritia fidem, probitatem ceterasque artis bonas subvertit.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 10. (c. 41 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> To snatch food from a funeral pyre. (E flamma petere cibum.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 491. (161 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, i, 51. There is a difference of opinion as to the meaning of the phrase. Terence uses it in the sense of robbing the dead, "To steal the pennies from the eyes of a corpse," as we would say. Others, however, use it in the sense of venturing on a dangerous undertaking, "To snatch food from the flames," to run a great risk.

<sup>7</sup> See what avarice does. (Vide avaritia quid facit.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 358. (161 B.C.)

TO SKIN A FLINT, see under SKIN.

AXE

<sup>8</sup> A dull axe never loves grindstones.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Royal Truths. (1862)

<sup>9</sup> Here I send thaxe after the helue awaie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1562)

See under HELVE.

Throw the Rope in after the Bucket.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5042. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> The axe is laid unto the root of the trees. (ἡ ἀξίς πρὸς τὴν ρίζαν τῶν δένδρων κεῖται.)

New Testament: Matthew, iii, 10. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Securis ad radicem arborum posita est."

<sup>11</sup> When I see a merchant, over polite to his customers—begging them to taste a little brandy, and throwing half his goods on the counter—thinks I, That man has an axe to grind.

CHARLES MINER, Who'll Turn Grindstone? (1810) Miner's essay, Who'll Turn Grindstone? first appeared in The Luzerne Federalist for 7 Sept., 1810, and was reprinted in the collected Essays from the Desk of Poor Robert the Scribe, at Doylestown, Pa., in July, 1815. Miner (Poor Robert), tells how, as a boy, he was coaxed by a man to turn the grindstone for him while he sharpened his axe. "Tickled with the flattery, like a little fool, I went to work, and bitterly did I rue the day. It was a new axe, and I toiled and tugged, till I was almost tired to death. The school bell rung, and I could not get away; my hands were blistered and it was not half ground. At length, however, the axe was sharpened, and the man turned to me with, 'Now, you little rascal, you've played the truant—scud to school, or you'll rue it.' Alas, thought I, it was hard enough to turn grindstone, this cold day; but now to be called 'little rascal' was too much. It sunk deep in my mind, and often have I thought of it since. When I see a merchant," etc. The Oxford English Dictionary, and other authorities, attribute the origin of the phrase to a story by Benjamin Franklin, but Franklin's story has nothing to do with having an axe to grind in the proverbial sense of having private ends to serve. It concerns a man who wanted his axe ground until the whole surface was as bright as the edge, and a smith agreed to grind it bright for him if he would turn the grindstone. When he grew tired, as he soon did, the smith urged him to go on. "We'll have it bright by and by," he said. "As yet, it's only speckled." "Yes," agreed the man, "but I think I like a speckled axe best." The moral is, "Don't bite off more than you can chew," "Be contented with what you have," or something similar.

 I like to let every feller grind his own axe.
 T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
 Ch. 16. (1843)
 Sea-captains . . . have no private axe to grind.
 WALTER BESANT, Autobiography, vii, 123. (1902)
 Each of them had a prize to win, a goal to kick, an ax to grind, a race to run, a name to carve,
 a crow to pick.
 O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Green Door.
 (1906)
 I've no particular axe to grind.
 AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p.
 236. (1941)
 He has an axe of his own to grind now.
 H. C. BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 19. (1942)

<sup>1</sup>
 He opens the door with an ax.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678) Of means disproportionate to ends.
 The axe goes to the wood from whence it borrowed its helve.
 JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica. No. 1. (1678) "It is used," Ray explains, "against those who are injurious to those from whom they are derived, or from whom they have received their power." FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4401.
 (1732)
 In hewing an axe-shaft, hewing a shaft,
 For a copy you have the axe in your hand.
 UNKNOWN, The Book of Songs (Shiking). Bk.
 xv. There Is a Proper Way for Doing Every- thing. (c. 600 B. C.) Legge, tr.

B

BABBITT

<sup>2</sup>
 His name was George F. Babbitt, and . . .
 he was nimble in the calling of selling houses for more than people could afford to pay.
 SINCLAIR LEWIS, Babbitt, p. 2. (1922) Lewis had the rare distinction of introducing a new word into the language, and for some years "a Babbitt" was used everywhere—like "a Pecksniff," or "a Shylock," or "a Hawkshaw"—as the symbol of a business man who "has traded his ethics and chivalry for a Buick," to quote the radio comedians.
 It is now obsolescent.

BABY

<sup>3</sup>
 But just now bare of the egg-shell. (ἄρι-γοῦρόν ὀστέπαιον.)
 AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 186. (c. 458 B. C.)
<sup>4</sup>
 Dr. Wick was left to hold the baby.
 DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p.
 43. (1942)
 He'd do his damndest he wasn't caught holding the baby.
 H. C. BAILEY, Queen of Spades, p. 157. (1944)
<sup>5</sup>
 They will smell of the baby.
 NICHOLAS BRETON, Courtier and Countryman,
 p. 19. (1618) To be childish.
<sup>6</sup>
 Chinning and embracing, and looking babies
 in one another's eyes.
 NICHOLAS BRETON, Will's Will, p. 44. (1599)
 When none that's jealous spies
 To looke babbies in his eyes.
 RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Di-vell, l. 80 (1615)
 Can ye look babies, sisters, In the young gallants' eyes?
 JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyall Subject, Act iii,
 sc. 2. (1618)

They may kiss and coll, lye and look babies in one another's eyes.
 RICHARD BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. v, subs. 5. (1621)
 She clung about his neck, gave him ten kisses,
 Toyed with his locks, looked babies in his eyes
 THOMAS HEYWOOD, Love's Mistress. (1636)
 Sweeten her again with ogling smiles, look babies in her eyes.
 THOMAS BAKER, The Fine Lady's Aims. Act i,
 sc. 1. (1709)
 To look babies; to gaze at the reflection of one's face in another's eyes.
Oxford English Dictionary: Look. Vol. vi, p.
 425/1. However, the phrase, when the context of the quotations given above is considered, would seem to mean more than that—to look lovingly and also perhaps sugges-tively.
<sup>7</sup>
 An infant . . . is all gut and squall.
 CHARLES BROWN, Letter to John Keats, 21
 Dec., 1820.
<sup>8</sup>
 Love the babe for her that bare it.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 285. (1639)
<sup>9</sup>
 This is my baby, and I'm stuck with it.
 GEORGE HARMON COXE, The Glass Triangle, p. 152. (1940) This is something I'm responsible for.
 That's my baby, and you'll find I'm not afraid to spank it.
 DAVID KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 71
 (1941)
<sup>10</sup>
 Don't wash the inside of a baby's hand, or you'll wash his luck away.
 D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 177.
 (1916) An American negro superstition, current in tidewater Virginia. See Southern Workman, Nov., 1899.

1 It is said that no woman ever produced a baby without the coöperation of a man. (παιδίον μὲν γὰρ οὐδεμία ποτὲ γυνὴ λέγεται ποιῆσαι δίχα κοινωρίας ἀνδρός.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Advice to a Bride, 145D. (C. A. D. 95) Quoting a proverb.

A man passes seed into a womb and goes his way, and anon another cause takes it in hand and works upon it and perfects a baby—what a consummation from what a beginning! (ἐξ οἴου οἴον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. x, sec. 26. (C. A. D. 174)

2 A babe in the house is a well-spring of pleasure.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Education. (1840)

3 Emptying the baby out with the bath. (Das Kind mit dem Bade ausschütten.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

Many young men today throw out the baby with the bath water.

C. E. M. JOAD London Observer, Sayings of the Week.

We are apt to make the usual blunder of emptying the baby out with the bath.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children. (1914)

BABYLON

4 The approach . . . to mighty Babylon.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 23. (1823)
London, Paris, New York have all been called "the modern Babylon."

5 Babylon is fallen, is fallen. (Cecidit, cecidit Babylon.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxi, 9. (c. 900 B. C.)

Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen. (ἔπεσεν, Βαβυλῶν ἡ μεγάλη.)

New Testament: Revelation, xviii, 2. (C. A. D. 60)

All Babylon lies low; Luther destroyed the roof, Calvin the walls, but Socinus the foundations. (Tota iacet Babylon; destruxit lecta Lutherus, Calvinus muros, sed fundamenta Socinus.)

UNKNOWN. A monkish Latin jingle. Socinus was a sixteenth century theologian, whose doctrines neither Protestants nor Catholics would tolerate, and which have long since fallen into obscurity

BACHELOR

See also Celibacy

6 A lewd bachelor makes a jealous husband.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 292. (1855)

7 To look for Marica (Molly) in Ravenna, or the bachelor in Salamanca. (Buscar a Marica por Rávena, o al Bachiller en Salamanca.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1615)
Where every other man is a bachelor. A needle in a haystack.

8 He was the most lusty bachiler
In al this world and eek the beste archer.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 3. (c. 1389) "Bachelor" is here used in its original sense of "bas chevalier," a young knight not old enough to display his own banner; a novice in arms. In the Prologue, l. 80, Chaucer describes the Squire as "A lovyere, and a lusty bacheler."

9 Batcheleres haue often peyne and wo.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 34. (c. 1386)

The unsettled, thoughtless condition of a batchelor.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 18. (1750)

An old bachelor is a poor critter.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Artemus Ward: His Book. (1862)

10 He is so averse to marrying again that he declares a bachelor's couch is the most comfortable in the world. (A ducenda autem uxore sic abhorret, ut libero lectulo neget esse quicquam iucundius.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiv, epis. 13. (44 B. C.)

He declares that there is nothing to be preferred, nothing better than, a bachelor life. (Nil ait esse prius, melius nil caelibe vita.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 88. (20 B. C.)

The French call it, "Le bonheur de celibat."

Commend a wedded life, but keep thyself a bachelor.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Preface. (1659)

It is not for nothing that Don Quixote was a bachelor and Marcus Aurelius married ill.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i. (1881)

11 They [bachelors] live but as a brid or as a beste,

In libertee, and under non areste,
Ther-as a wedded man in his estaat
Liveth a lyf blisful and ordinaat.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 17. (c. 1388)

Though batchelours be the strongest stakes, married men are the best binders in the hedge of the Commonwealth.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Marriage. (1642)

We bachelors laugh and show our teeth, but you married men laugh till your hearts ache.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1166. (1640)

We bachelors grin, but you married men laugh till your hearts ache.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 48. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5433. (1732)

Gay Bachelor: Do you think there is anything in the theory that married men live longer than unmarried ones?

Henspecked Friend (wearily): Oh, I don't know—seems longer.

Life (N. Y.), 19 Nov., 1891. This bit of dialogue occurred under an unsigned drawing of the bachelor and his henpecked friend, and was repeated with minor variations under a more elaborate drawing of a dinner party in the issue of 29 Dec., 1892. The joke soon became part of the stock in trade of every vaudeville team and minstrel show, usually in this form: Interlocutor to End Man: Sam, Can you tell me why married men live longer than bachelors? End Man: They don't live longer—it just seems longer.

A married man gets the money, Hinnissy, but a bachelor man gets th' sleep.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Marriage. (1900)

1 Cock's bones! now again I stand

The jolliest bachelor i' the land.

HENRY VIII OF ENGLAND (attr.). On the Beheading of Anne Boleyn. (1536)

2 Bachelors wives and maides children be well taught.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 304. (1614)

Bachelors' wives, indeed, are finely governed.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Husband. Act i, sc. 1. (1726)

What a pity it is that nobody knows how to manage a wife, but a bachelor.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Jealous Wife. Act iv, sc. 1. (1761)

Bachelors' wives are always the best managed
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 42 (1834) MAIDS' CHILDREN, see under CHILD

3 You'll certainly be soon married; here's two bachelors drinking to you at once.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

4 Bachelor's fare: bread and cheese and kisses.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

5 I had rather keep bachelor's hall in hell than go to board in heaven.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts. (3 March, 1841) Thoreau perhaps got the phrase from some once popular verses (c. 1835) by an obscure Irish writer named John Finley, beginning "Bachelor's Hall! what a quare-lookin' place it is!"

6 Nowadays all the married men live like bachelors, and all the bachelors like married men.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15. (1891)

BACK

7 Sticke to him back and edge.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 26. (1639)
Completely, for good and all.

8 I bore him all the while on my back.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 303. (1639)

I bear him on my back.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 164. (1670)
"That is, I remember his injuries done to me with indignation and grief"

9

A man so long doth toile and swink,
Till under his own charge he sink.

(Tant travaille et tracasse l'homme,
Qu'en fin il se rompt, ou somme.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, French-English Dictionary: Sommer. (1611)

A woman may bear and bear till her back burst.
NATHANIEL FIELD, Amends for Ladies. Act i, sc. 1. (1618)

A man may bear till his back break.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 15. (1639)

Men may bear till their Backs break.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.3397.(1732)

10 Take me upon your Back, and you'll know what I weigh.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.4311.(1732)

11 According to the olde proverbe, That which is good for the head, is euill for the necke and the shoulders.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, A Counterblaste to Tobacco, p. 107. (1604)

That which is good for the back is bad for the head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 58. (1670)

12 His back is broad enough to bear jests.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1670)

I suppose you think my back's broad enough to bear everything.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

13 Back may trust but belly won't.

F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 8. (1855)

Clothes can wait, but hunger cannot.

14 Many Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i. 1. 83. (1613)

My poor father! This loss will break his back

SAMUEL ROWLEY, A New Wonder. Act iv (1633)

15 O for a man who is a man, and, as my neighbor says, has a bone in his back which you cannot pass your hand through.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

BACON

16 Where you think there is bacon, there is no chimney.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Or, "Where there is no hook, be sure there will hang no bacon."

17 He said he'd bring home the bacon, and the honey boy has gone and done it.

"TINY" JOHNSON, mother of Jack Johnson, the pugilist, when the latter defeated James J. Jeffries at Reno, Nevada, 4 July, 1910. It has been attributed also to Bob Armstrong, negro trainer of pugilists. See New York Sun, 20 July, 1933.

This is where I take the bacon home.

PETER CHEYNEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 132.

(1941) On p. 215, "Well, Nicky, have you brought home the bacon?"

He was enjoying the sleep of a man who brings home the bacon.

DAVID DODGE, Death and Taxes, p. 235. (1941)

A good newspaperman always brings home the bacon.

JEAN WEBB, No Match for Murder, p. 104. (1942)

I hear you've brought home the bacon again.

MAX BRAND, Dr. Kildare's Choice, p. 152. (1943)

1 And though thei don hem to Donmowe, but if the deuel help

To folwen after the flicche, fecche thei it neuere.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus ix, l. 168. (1362)

The bacon was nat fet for hem, I trowe,

That som men han in Essex at Dunmowe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 217. (c. 1388) "To eat Dunmow Bacon" was proverbial for conjugal felicity, and derived from a custom instituted in 1111, when any person going to Dunmow, kneeling at the church door, and swearing that for a year and a day he had not quarreled with his wife, could claim a gammon of bacon. From 1244, when the custom was restored, till 1772, when it was discontinued, only eight claimants succeeded in winning the flitch. There is a somewhat similar Spanish proverb, "El tocino del Paraiso el casado no arrepiso" (Bacon of Paradise for the married who repent not).

He may fetch a flitch of bacon from Dunmow.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Essex, i, 498. (1662)

Few married folk peck Dunmow-bacon.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Turtle and Sparrow, 233 (1708)

While I, though I have married been,

So many years, at least sixteen;

Yes, I with honest heart and hand,

Can now the Dunmow Flitch demand.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of a Wife. Canto xxxiv, p. 57. (1821)

Who fetcheth a wife from Dunmow,

Carrieth home two sides of a sow.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

2 In the end we will find out who ate the bacon. (À la fin saura-on qui a mangé l'art.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Bk. ii, p. 200. A proverb of c. 1450. The English equivalent is, "In the end we shall find out who stole the bacon."

3 Cross-eyed men, who look at the vegetables while they take the bacon. (Strabones, qui holera spectant, lardum tollunt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 39. (c. A. D. 60)

4 Let's fly and save our bacon. (Sauluons nous.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 55. (1548) The "Save our bacon" is Motteux.

I go [to church] to save my bacon, as they say, once a month.

APHRA BEHN, The City-Heiress. Act i, sc. 1. (1682)

No tricks shall save your bacon.

HENRY FIELDING, The Author's Farce. Act iii, sc. 3. (1729)

Make him crouch to save his bacon.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Directions for a Birth-day Song, l. 250. (1729)

But as he ran to save his bacon,

By hat and wig he was forsaken.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque, vi, 22. (1812)

I cuts and runs and saves my bacon.

J. S. FARMER, ed., Musa Pedestris. (1829)

I saved my bacon by the merest fluke.

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, The Milan Grill Room, p. 70. (1941)

So far as my mission was concerned, I had saved my bacon.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Twelve Disguises, p. 189. (1942)

5 He loves bacon well that licks the swine-sty door.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

He loves Bacon well, that licks the Sow's Back.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1978.

(1732) Fuller has a series of these: "He loves Mutton well, that eats the Wool." (No. 1979) "He loves roast Meat well, that licks the Spit." (No. 1980)

BAD

See also Good and Evil

6 This man is a bad coin. (πονηρού λήμματος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Plutus, 862, 957. (388 B. C.)

A bold bad man. (Audacem et malum.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 949. (190 B. C.)

7 Most men are bad. (οἱ πλείστοι κακοί.)

BIAS OF PRIENE, Maxim. (c. 560 B. C.) The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi. See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias, i, 87; AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 189. Ausonius Latins the saying, "Plures mali," and has Bias explain, "By 'bad' I meant uncultured men and savages, who disregard right and equity and hallowed customs."

Search out most human traits; you'll find them base. (τὰ πλείοστα φωνῶν ἀλσχροῦ θωράσσει βροτῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment, Frag. 769 Nauck. (c. 425 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 463D, 481F.

We are all bad. (Omnes mali sumus.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 26. (c. A. D. 55)

Some are good, some are middling, the most are bad. (Sunt bona, sunt quaedam mediocria, sunt mala plura.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 16, l. 1. (A. D. 85)

All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet cxxi. (1609)

The mass of men are neither wise nor good.

JOHN JAY, Letter to George Washington, 27 June, 1786.

- 1 Who is bad to his own is bad to himself.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 566. (1855)
- 2 Bad is the best.
WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 77. (1564)
Badde is the best (this English is flatt).
EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: September, l. 105. (1579)
Creating every bad a perfect best.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet cxiv. (1609)
Bad's the best of us.
JOHN FLETCHER, Rollo. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1613)
Where bad's the best, naught must be the choice.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1678)
Where bad's the best, bad must be the Choice.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5635. (1732) CHOICE OF EVILS, see under EVIL.
- 3 No bad man is free. (οὐδ' [φάιλος] ἐλεύθερός ἐστιν.)
EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 100) Usually quoted as the Stoic maxim, πάντες καλοὶ δοῦλοι (All bad men are slaves).
- 4 A bad Thing never dies.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3. (1732)
- 5 You've got to take the bad with the good.
FRANK GRUBER, The Gift Horse, p. 184. (1942)
- 6 As bad as Jeffreys.
JOHN RICHARD WISE, The New Forest. Ch. 16. (1863) "Preserves the memory of one who, instead of being the judge, should have been the hangman"
FROM BAD TO WORSE, see under WORSE.

BAG

See also Sack

- 7 Do you think to pull the bag over my head so easily?
MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act i, sc. 1. (1930)
- 8 We have with us all our bagges and baggages.
JOHN BOURCHIER, LORD BERNERS, Froissart, ii, xxiii, 59. (1525) The phrase is here used in its original sense, denoting all the property of an army as a whole and of the soldiers individually. Shakespeare uses it in the same way in The Winter's Tale, i, 2, 204. "Let in and out the enemy! With bag and baggage."
Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 169. (1600)
"Scrip and scrippage," meaning the purse and its contents, is Shakespeare's phrase, modelled of course on bag and baggage.
So marches he all over England with his bag and baggage.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Tinker. (1613) The tinker's bag, of course, contains his tools, but the baggage referred to is the

- "foule sunne-burnt Queane" who travels with him.
Bag and Baggage, said she, I'm glad you're going.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, ii, 34. (1741)
I wrote to Morritt that I would make a raid on him with bag and baggage, scrip and scrippage about Monday.
WALTER SCOTT, Letters, 20 Sept., 1812.
The king sent them packing bag and baggage.
C. H. SPURGEON, The Treasury of David: Ps. cxix. (1870)
The Turks . . . one and all, bag and baggage, shall, I hope, clear out.
W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, 7 May, 1877, on the occupation of Bulgaria by Turkey. Partridge (Dictionary of Clichés) says it became a stock phrase in the 18th century. "Like so many 'reduplications,' it was generated, in part at least, by a desire to alliterate."
Checked out—gone bag and baggage.
DASHIELL HAMMETT, The Maltese Falcon. Ch. 16. (1930)
- 9 Get down stairs, little bag o' bones.
DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 4. (1838)
I am almost ashamed to punish A bag of skin and bones.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 204. (1848) See also SKIN, THINNESS.
- 10 An empty bag cannot stand upright.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740. See under POVERTY.
- 11 Our English by-word to express such betwixt whom there is apparent odds of strength, "He is able to put him up in a Bagge."
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, ii, 579 (1662)
- 12 He brought the bottome of the bag cleane out.
JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10 (1546)
- 13 She will leave Spain the bag to hold.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. iv, p. 7. (1793) To leave in the lurch.
She gave me the bag to hold, and was smuggling in a corner with a rich old Puritan
WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 7. (1823)
We're going to let you hold the bag.
STALLINGS AND ANDERSON, What Price Glory? Act i, sc. 2. (1924)
When bigger and better bags are made, America will hold them.
CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 195. (1940)
We are forever saving the world and certainly in the last war we were left holding the bag.
THEODORE DREISER, America Is Worth Saving, p. 289. (1941)
Feeling as awkward as most exploited males, left holding the bags.
MARGARET CARPENTER, Experiment Perilous, p. 35. (1943) At a railway station.

<sup>1</sup> Don't you worry. It's all in the bag.
RAYMOND POSTGATE, Verdict of Twelve, p. 173. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> This tinkerly trade, wee giue it the bagge.
UNKNOWN, Common Conditions. (1576) In BRANDL, Quellen, p. 599. To leave without warning.

Upon euery small occasion to geue your maister the bagge.

ROBERT GREENE, A Quip for an Upstart Courtier. (1592) Works (Grosart), xi, 263.

I fear our oares haue geuen us the bag.
DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 2. (1607)

Judas and his bag too are perished, Acts viii, 20. As he gave religion the bag for the world, so the world gave him the bag, and turned him a-begging.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 250. (1629)
Give us both the canvas!

JAMES SHIRLEY, Hide Park. Act i. sc. 1. (1637)
To be dismissed, given the sack. See under SACK. From the practice of journeymen mechanics carrying their tools with them in a canvas bag or sack, whenever they were discharged.

BAKER

<sup>3</sup> Will women's tongues, like bakers' legs, never go straight!

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe, ii, 2. (1607)

He should be a baker by his bow legs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> I feare we parte not yeet, Quoth the baker to the pylorie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 47. (1562)

He take no leave of you, quoth the Baker to the Pillory.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, 11. (1660)
Bakers were often placed in the pillory for short weight. See BAKER'S DOZEN, below

<sup>5</sup> We saw a knot of others, about a baker's dozen in number.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 22. (1693) A baker's dozen is thirteen for twelve. Bakers were often placed in the pillory, or punished even more severely, for short weight, and consequently they added an extra loaf to the dozen, called the "vantage loaf," to avoid all risk. The O.E.D. gives another explanation: that dealers buying their bread from bakers were privileged by law to receive thirteen batches for twelve, the thirteenth batch representing their profit.

I dare say there were a round baker's dozen at least.

HENRY FIELDING, Don Quixote, iii, 7. (1733)

Thirteen of you may go to the dozen well enough.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 323. (1721) Spoken to worthless people.

The pleasant institution of "napa"—the petty gratuity added by the dealer to anything bought—grew the pleasanter, drawn out into Gallicized lagnappe.

CABLE, Creoles of Louisiana. Ch. 16. (1877)

<sup>6</sup> Three dear years will raise a baker's daughter to a portion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

"'Tis not the smallness of the bread, but the knavery of the baker," Ray explains.

BALANCE

<sup>7</sup> The Balance will decide the Matter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4404. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The balance distinguisheth not between gold and lead.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670) The French have a jingle to the same effect: "Faisant son office, la balance, D'or ni de plomb n'a connaissance" (In doing its office, the balance does not distinguish between gold and lead).

<sup>9</sup> Can sore muse and henge in a balaunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr. Fall of Princes, i, 14. (1430)

The cyte henge in balaunce to be deluyered.

UNKNOWN, Melusine. Ch. 31, p. 228. (c. 1500)

A battle was fought which hung equally in the balance.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, tr., Thucydides, i.65. (1881)

BALANCE OF POWER, see under POWER.

WEIGHED IN BALANCE, see under FAILURE.

BALDNESS

<sup>10</sup> Pull hair and hair and you'll make the carle bald.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, 10. (1670) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 134. After the Latin proverb, "Paulatim evellitur, cauda equina" (Little by little pull out the horse's tail)

Hair an' hair maks the carle's head bare.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 239. (1678)

The Danes say, "Eet Haar after andet, gjør Bonden skaldet" (One hair after another makes the bumpkin bald). KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 136, quotes the saying and adds, "An estate may be ruined by small diminutions."

<sup>11</sup> He used to cut his hair, but now his hair has cut him.

THEODORE HOOK, of J. R. Planché. See THOMAS in Nineteenth Century, Dec., 1881.

<sup>12</sup> As incredulous as those, who thinke none balde, till they see his braynes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 267 (1580)

You'll not believe he's bald till you see his brains.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 181. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 163. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6032. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> There is no need to call a hairdresser for your head. A sponge, Phoebus, would do the business better. (Radere te melius spongea, Phoebe, potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 57. (c. A. D. 90)
There is nothing more contemptible than a bald man who pretends to have hair. (Calvo turpius est nihil comato.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 83. (c. A. D. 93)

<sup>2</sup> Ugly is a field without grass, a plant without leaves, or a head without hair. (Turpis sine gramine campus, | et sine fronde frutex, et sine crine caput.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 249. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, ii, 2, 73. (1592)

Time himself is bald and therefore to the world's end will have bald followers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, ii, 2, 108.

A curled pate will grow bald.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V., v, 2, 169. (1599)

<sup>4</sup> As bald as fine weather. (φαλακώτερος εὐδίας.)

SOPHRON, Mimes. No. 13. (c. 450 B. C.) Another proverb for baldness was μὴ Μύκονος (Like a Mykonos). The inhabitants of this island, one of the Cyclades, were said to be all bald.

His heed was ballid, that shoon as eny glas

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 198. (c. 1386)

He was ballid as a cote.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy-Book. Bk. ii, l. 4673. (c. 1415)
What though she be toothlesse, and balde as a coote?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Older than my father, more bald than a coot.

ADLINGTON, tr. Apuleius. Bk. v. (1566)

Left her as bare as a bald coot.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 13. (1604)

I have an old grim sire to my husband, as bald as a coot.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, memb. i, subs. 1. (1621) Bald-coot. Popular name for the coot, from its pure white wide frontal plate, destitute of feathers.—O.E.D.

His head as bald as a bladder of lard.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 15. (1894)

He was bald as an egg.

SELWYN JEPSON, Keep Murder Quiet, p. 15. (1940)

Bald as a balloon.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Tinsley's Bones, p. 167. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> A bare berd wyl sone be shave.

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae, i. 75. (c. 1450)

A bald head is soon shaven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1678)

Bald Heads are soon shaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 836. (1732)

Bald pates be quickly shav'd.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Middlesex Election, ii. (1802)

<sup>6</sup> Yee shull here howe the Tapster made the Pardoner pull Garlik al the longe nyght.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn (E.E.T.S.), p. 5. (c. 1400)

Your pylyd garleke hed.

JOHN SKELTON, Poems Against Garnesche. (a. 1529) Works (Dyce), i, 122.

There got he a knock, and down goes pil-garlick.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

Do you think to make a fool of Pilgarlick?

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Virtuoso. Act ii. (1676)

Here's everybody happy, but poor Pilgarlick.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Busy Body. Act v, sc. 3. (1709)

Poor pilgarlic came home alone.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) An appellation given at first to a "pilled" or bald head, ludicrously likened to a peeled head of garlic.—O.E.D. Afterwards frequently used as a contemptuous way of saying "poor creature."

BALE, see under Evil

BALL

<sup>7</sup> I put in a word now and then to keep the ball up.

JEREMY BENTHAM, To G. Wilson. (1781)

If the Spaniards had not lost two armies lately, we should have kept up the ball for another year.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Dispatches, v. 365. (1809) "To keep the ball rolling" is the modern phrase. Another proverbial phrase is "To be on the ball," from soccer or football. "He certainly has something on the ball" means that he is unusually efficient, the allusion being to the curve given a baseball by a skilful pitcher.

<sup>8</sup> Right now we're behind the eight ball.

E. S. GARDNER, The D. A. Goes to Trial, p. 156. (1940)

You may find yourself behind the eight ball.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 142. (1941)

<sup>9</sup> It concerns you not to be over-hasty herein, not to take the ball before the bound.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, iv, 9. (1625) Referring to marriage.

<sup>10</sup> I've got the ball. (Mea pila est.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 706. (c. 200 B. C.) I've caught it, I've won.

He's blest who bears away the ball.

SADI, Gulistan: Introduction. (c. 1258) A reference to the game of chaugan, in which he who bears off the ball is the winner.

<sup>11</sup> Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 237. (1611)

Thou hast stricken the ball, under the lynce.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. xi. (1562)
Hence [at tennis] came the old proverb, "Thou hast stricken the ball under the line," meaning one has failed in his purpose.

HACKWOOD, Old English Sports, 151. (1907)

Another explanation is that one has not played according to the rules.

<sup>1</sup>
You have the ball before you.

UNKNOWN, Papers on Alterat: Prayer-book, p. 24. (c. 1661)

We have the ball at our feet.

LORD AUCKLAND, Correspondence, p. 416. (c. 1800)

The brilliant young scholar had . . . the ball at his feet.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, From a Cornish Window, p. 126. (1906)

BALLAD

<sup>2</sup>
I knew a very wise man who believed that . . . if a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he need not care who should make the laws of a nation. And we find that most of the ancient legislators thought they could not well reform the manners of any city without the help of a lyric, and sometimes of a dramatic poet.

ANDREW FLETCHER OF SALTOUN, Letter to the Marquis of Montrose. (1704) Works, p. 266.

It is supposed that Fletcher was referring to the Earl of Cromarty, though some commentators have guessed that John Selden was the "very wise man."

Confucius may indeed be said to have anticipated the apothegm.

HERBERT A. GILES, History of Chinese Literature. But, though often attributed to Confucius, the quotation in this form is not found in his works.

Let me write the songs of a nashun and I don't care a cuss who goes to the legislator.

ARTEMUS WARD, In Washington (1863)

Annyhow, as Hogan says, I care not who casts th' votes iv me counthry so long as we can hold th' offices.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Woman Suffrage. (1900)

<sup>3</sup>
I had rather be a kitten and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1, 129. (1597)

BALLOT, see under Voting

BALM

<sup>4</sup>
Is there no balm at Gilead? is there no physician there? (Numquid resina non est in Galad?)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, viii, 22. (c. 600 B. C.)

This is the Geneva version of 1560. It will be noted that the Vulgate does not identify the Hebrew word tsōri with the Latin balsamum, but with resina, resin. Wyclif used "gumme" or "resin," and Coverdale "triacle," treacle, whence the Treacle Bible, of 1568. In time, "balm in Gilead" came to be proverbial for comfort in time of affliction.

BANAGHER

Is there, is there balm in Gilead?

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 15. (1845)

Never fear: we'll find balm in Gilead.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 11. (1849)

Come, come, find some balm in Gilead!

PHOEBE TAYLOR, Deadly Nightshade, p. 62. (1940)

BALONEY

<sup>5</sup>
Salami's salami whether it's in six cuts or five.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Key Largo. Act i. (1939)

A variation of the slang, "No matter how thin you slice it (or how you cut it), it's still baloney."

The big chunk of baloney. . . . Slice him where you like, that's what he still is.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 14. (1942)

<sup>6</sup>
Much of what Mr. Henry Wallace calls his global thinking is, no matter how you slice it, still globaloney.

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE, Speech, House of Representatives, 9 Feb., 1943.

<sup>7</sup>
Nothing doing. That's just baloney. Everybody knows I can't lay bricks.

ALFRED E. SMITH, at the laying of the cornerstone of the New York State Office Building, when asked to pose for a motion picture showing him actually laying a brick. It was a favorite phrase with Mr. Smith, but his secretary states "it is impossible to say exactly when the Governor first used the expression." The correct spelling is, of course, "bologna," from the famous sausage made at Bologna, Italy, and referred to as far back as 1596, when Thomas Nashe (Saffron Walden Works, iii, 162) wrote of something "As big as a Bolognian sawcedge." Its slang meaning is "pretence," or "bluff," or "make-believe."

I am for gold dollars against baloney dollars.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Editorial, New Outlook, Dec., 1933, referring to the devaluation experiments of the F. D. Roosevelt administration.

That's just baloney, of course.

LUCY CORES, Painted for the Kill, p. 202. (1943)

BANAGHER

<sup>8</sup>
"O, by this and by that," says he, "but that bates Bannagher!"

WILLIAM CARLETON, Traits and Stories of the Irish Peasantry: Three Tasks. (1830)

Well, that bangs Banagher!

WILLIAM BLACK, White Heather. Ch. 40. (1885)

This beats Bannagher.

W. B. YEATS, Fairy Tales of the Irish Peasantry, p. 196. (1920)

That bangs Banagher, and Banagher bangs the devil.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 274. (1902) Lean adds, "A writer in the Ulster Journal of Archaeology, i, 306, 1853, refers this to the Cemetery of Banagher, near Dungiven, Co. Derry (all that is left of a church and monastery of the 11th century), the sand of which is used as a charm to bring luck."

Banagher is a village in King's Co., on the Shannon. . . . When anything very unusual or unexpected occurs, the people say, 'Well, that bangs Banagher!'

P. W. JOYCE, English As We Speak It, p. 192. (1910) Nobody knows how Banagher acquired the reputation of being hard to beat; perhaps the phrase is merely the result of a tempting onomatopoeia.

BANK

<sup>1</sup> The factory girls just stoop over and flap their dry goods a second, and you hear the elastic go "pop" as the currency goes down in the ladies' department of the "Old Domestic Lisle-Thread Bank."

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Tempered Wind, (1908)

<sup>2</sup> What the banker sighs for, the meanest clown may have—leisure and a quiet mind.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 18 Jan., 1841. Some unidentified author has defined a banker as "A man who lends you an umbrella when the weather is fair, and takes it away when it rains."

The banks are failing all over the country, but not the sand banks. . . . You may run on them as much as you please. . . . In these banks are my funds deposited, funds of health and enjoyment.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 14 Oct., 1857.

BANKRUPTCY

<sup>3</sup> The mercer of Temple Barre . . . hath laide the key under the doore, and is become bankrupt.

JOHN CHAMBERLAIN, Letters, p. 156. (1602) Ray has it, "To lay the key under the threshold," and SWIFT, Drapier Letters, i, writes, "The shopkeeper . . . must break, and leave the key under the door."

<sup>4</sup> He who desireth to sleep soundly, let him buy the bed of a bankrupt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> To be written up on the boards. (ἔν λευκώμασι γραφῆναι.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb, meaning to be sold up, or become bankrupt.

Ye may fly up to th' roust with Jackson's hens.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus, iv, 2. (1577) Ray puts it, "I'll make him fly up with Jackson's hens." i.e. "I'll ruin him." Darlington (Folk-Speech of S. Cheshire) says "Fly up, to be bankrupt. The full phrase, 'to fly up with Jackson's hens' is more frequently heard." Who Jackson was nobody knows.

He is on the ground.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 52. (1595) He hath swallowed a spider.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 6. (1659) He is bankrupt. RAY, English Proverbs, p. 194. On p. 89, Ray gives a number of euphemisms for bankruptcy: "He is all to pieces," "He is blown up," "He dare not shew his head," "He is marched off," "He is run off his legs," "He has shut up shop-windows." The meaning of all of these is fairly obvious, but nobody knows what the allusion is in "He has swallowed a spider."

Under the bungo o' the moon.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 148. (1917) On the verge of bankruptcy.

BANQUET

See also Feast

<sup>6</sup> He that banquets every Day never makes a good Meal.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2043. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> I hope it will please you to morrowe to close up my stomacke with that Collation or Banquet.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 112. (1574) Pettie, tr.

My banquet is to close our stomachs up.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, v, 2. 9. (1594)

<sup>8</sup> There is no great banquet, but some fares ill. HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 670. (1640)

<sup>9</sup> One, bidding me to a banquet, killed me with silver hunger, serving famished dishes. And in wrath I spoke amid the silver sheen of famine: "Where is the plenty of my earthenware dishes?" (ποῦ μοι χορτασίη δαστρακίνων πιδάκων;)

LUCILIUS, Epigram (c. 140 B. C.) Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 313.

<sup>10</sup> The banquet ends in sodium bicarb.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Ode to the Bath. (1940)

<sup>11</sup> When your crowd of followers applaud you so loudly, Pomponius, it is not you, but your banquet, that is eloquent. (Quod tam grande sophos clamat tibi turba togata, non tu. Pomponi, cena diserta tua est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 48. (c. A. D. 90) A recasting of the proverb, "Parasiticam coenam querit" (He seeks the banquet of a parasite; he cadges for a dinner).

BARABBAS

<sup>12</sup> Now Barabbas was a robber. (ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς ληστής.)

New Testament: John, xviii, 40. (c. A. D. 110)

The Vulgate is, "Erat autem Barabbas latro."

Now Barabbas was a publisher.

THOMAS CAMPBELL. (a. 1344)

It was Thomas Campbell who wrote "Now Barabbas was a publisher," whether in a Bible or otherwise is not authentically recorded, and forwarded it to a friend; but Mr. Murray was not the publisher to whom it referred, nor was Lord Byron, as has been so frequently stated, the author of the joke.

SAMUEL SMILES, Memoirs and Correspondence of John Murray. Vol. i, p. 336. See also WHYTE, Memoir of William Heinemann, p. 44.

The idea [of demanding three fourths of the profits from the sale of his autobiography] distressed General Grant. He thought it placed him in the attitude of a robber—robber of a publisher. I said that if he regarded that as a crime it was because his education was limited.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 173. (1906)

BARBER

See also Shaving

<sup>1</sup> In silence. (σιωπῶν.)

ARCHELAÛS, KING OF MACEDONIA. (c. 400 B. C.)

When a barber asked him how he wished his hair cut. See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Kings, 177A.

It was a witty answer that King Archelaüs gave to the loquacious barber, who as he wrapped his towel around him, asked, "How shall I cut your hair, Sire?" "In silence," said the king. ("πῶς σε κείρω, βασιλεῦ;" "σιωπῶν," ἔφη.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 509A. (c. A. D. 95)

Silently, as the Puritan minister said to the barber who asked him how he would be shaved.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 8. (1853)

<sup>2</sup> And the barber kept on shaving.

JAMES T. FIELDS, The Owl-Critic. (1881)

THE BARBER LEARNS TO SHAVE BY SHAVING FOOLS. see under SHAVING.

<sup>3</sup> A young barber and an old physician.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 32. (1578)

BACON, Promus. No. 581. (c. 1594)

<sup>4</sup> Every barber knows that. (Omnibus notum tonsoribus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 7, l. 3. (35 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Of a thousand shavers, two do not shave so much alike as not to be distinguished.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1777.)

<sup>6</sup> One barber shaves another. (Un barbier rase l'autre.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 118. (1859)

One barber shaves another gratis.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 72. (1902)

<sup>7</sup> Now the old fellow is in the barber's chair, now we have the clippers on him. (Nunc senex est in tostrina, nunc iam cultros attinet.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 266. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks. SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 2, 17. (1602)

COMMON AS A BARBER'S CHAIR, see under COMMONNESS.

BARE

<sup>9</sup> He is als bair as the birk on Yule even.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 58. (c. 1595)

His gentle beggarly kindred . . . keep him as bare as a birch at Christmas.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 21. (1822)

I am as bare as the birch in December.

WALTER SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 6. (1823)

<sup>10</sup> Bare as a sheep that is but newe shorn.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 3262. (c. 1440)

AS RICH AS A SHORN SHEEP, see under RICHES.

<sup>11</sup> As bare as a byrdes breech.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 238/1. (1528)

Bare as birds britch.

MATTHEW STEVENSON, Twelve Moneths, p. 35. (1661)

Bare as a bird's tail.

EDWARD WARD, Satyrical Reflections on Clubs, p. 209. (1709) Cited by PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 29, with the explanation, "Said of a person who has lost everything which he possessed."

<sup>12</sup> I shall make hym as bare as ever was Job.

JEHAN PAISGRAVE, La Langue Françoisse, p. 620. (1530)

Left as bare as Job.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms (1877), p. 236. (1542)

AS POOR AS JOB, see under POVERTY.

<sup>13</sup> Bare as the back of my hand.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 281. (1678)

<sup>14</sup> I wolde I was as bare as the beschope of Chester.

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae (1841), i, 85. (c. 1470) Referring satirically to the wealth of the bishopric.

Bare as the Bishop of Chester.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 9. (1917)

BARGAIN

<sup>15</sup> The second word makes the bargain.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Colours of Good and Evil. Sec. 10. (1597)

Two words to a bargain.

UNKNOWN, Mucedorus, sig. B2. (1598)

There's two words to a bargain ever.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Widow. Act i, sc. 2. (1608) FLETCHER, The Wild-Goose Chase, ii, 3, (1625) VANBRUGH, The Relapse, iii, 3. (1696)

More words than one to a bargain.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 1. (1690)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3465. (1732)

There go two words through to that bargain.

HENRY FIELDING, The Intriguing Chambermaid. Act ii, sc. 3. (1734)

There's two words to that bargain.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

"Hold, hold, Sir," cried Jenkinson, "there are two words to that bargain."

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 31. (1766)

There gang twa folk's votes to the unmaking of a bargain, as to the making of one.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 31. (1822)

Takes two to make a bargain.

MARTIN FLAVIN, Journey in the Dark, p. 79. (1943)

1 Good cheap commodities are notable pick-purses.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Argent (1611)
Cotgrave's rendering of the French proverb.
"Bon marché tire l'argent hors de la bourse"
(A bargain steals money out of the purse).
The French also say, "Le bon marché ruine les acheteurs" (The bargain ruins the buyers), and "Rien n'est cher comme le bon marché" (Nothing is as dear as the bargain). The Italians say, "Il buon mercato vota la borsa"
(A bargain empties the purse). The French add a warning, "On n'a jamais bon marché de mauvaise marchandise" (One never gets a bargain with bad merchandise). See also under CHEAPNESS.

A good bargain is a pick-purse.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 13. (1640)

Good Bargains are Pick-pockets.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1701. (1732)

Many have been ruined by buying good Penny-worths.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3349.

2 Here's the rule for bargains: "Do other men for they would do you." That's the true business precept.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11. (1843)

3 A man may come soon enough to an ill bargain.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 54 (1633)

A Man loseth his Time, that comes early to a bad Bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 286. (1732)

4 Truly a taste invites a purchase. (ὃ γὰρ γεύμα τὴν ὥρην καλεῖ.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 150. (c. 440 B.C.) Way translates the phrase with the proverb, "Wet a bargain with a glass." Odysseus is offering to trade Silenus a skin of wine for some food.

I hate a Dutch bargain that's made in heat of wine.

THOMAS OTWAY, Friendship in Fashion, 16. (1678)

I never lik'd a dry bargain.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 201. (1721)

An echo of the Latin proverb, "Venalia, sine vino, expediri non possunt" (Sales, without wine, cannot be expedited).

5 Bargaines breake the law. (I patti rompono le leggi.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 32. (1578)

6 I shall never turn my Nine-pence into a Noble by this Bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2624. (1732)

When two Fools meet, the Bargain goes off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5679. (1732)

7 Som bargains deere bought, good cheape wold be sold.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

8 Giving gold for bronze. (χρῖσα χαλκίων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 236. (c. 850 B.C.) "And then from Glaucus did Zeus, son of Cronos, take away his wits, seeing he made exchange of armor with Diomedes, son of Tydeus, giving gold for bronze, the worth of an hundred oxen for the worth of nine." Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vi, l. Hence the proverbial "Diomedian swap," or "Diomedian bargain," an exchange where all the benefit is on one side. See also under BARLEYCORN.

For Diomedes's brass arms, of mean device, . . . He gave his own, of gold divinely wrought.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 292. (1715)

9 My old father used to have a saying that "If you make a bad bargain, hug it all the tighter."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Joshua F. Speed, 25 Feb., 1842.

10 There can be no bargain where both be not agreed.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 85. (1579)

11 It's an ill made bargain, where beath parties rue.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 66. (1685)

It's an ill bargain where no man wins.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 182 (1721)

It is a bad Bargain, where both are Losers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2839. (1732)

It is a silly Bargain where no Body gets.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2878. (1732)

12 With a little beating the bargain, we come to a perfect agreement.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 14 Aug., 1667.

13 Bargains made in speede, are commonly repented at leasure.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 192. (1576)

On a good bargain think twice.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 531. (1640)

At a great penny worth, pause a while.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

14 The bargain is not a bargain, or what was not a bargain is a bargain, just as you please.

(Pactum non pactum est, non pactum pactum est, quod vobis lubet.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 260. (c. 210 B.C.)

A bargain is a bargain, and must stand without all exception.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 34. (1560)

A bargain is a bargain.

JOHN LYL, Mother Bombie. Act iii, sc. 3.

(1592) Arden of Feversham, ii, 2. (1592)

L'ESTRANGE, Aesop, 328. (1692) CIBBER, The

Refusal, iii. (1721) BLACKMORE, Perlycross, ch. 11. (1894) etc.

Here lies Thomas Dudley, that trusty old stud—
A bargain's a bargain, and must be made good.

GOVERNOR JONATHAN BELCHER (attr.), Epitaph on Governor Dudley. (1720) The French say.
"Marché conclu est marché conclu."

1
The figure Paradiastole . . . we call the Curry-fauell, as when we make the best of a bad thing.

RICHARD PUTTENHAM, *The Arte of English
Poetrie*, p. 195. (1595)

It is an equal prudence to make the best of a bad game and to manage a good one.

L'ESTRANGE, Seneca's Morals Ch. 16. (c. 1650)

I . . . therefore am resolved to make the best of a bad market.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 14 Aug., 1663 OZELL,

Molière, ii, 142. (1714) KELLY, Scottish Prov- erbs, p. 247. (1721) BICKERSTAFF, Maid of the Mill, iii, 4. (1765)

Make the best of a bad bargain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1670)

ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, ii, 12. (1712) BOS-

WELL, Johnson (1790) SCOTT, Quentin Dur-

ward, ch. 36. (1823) FREEMAN, Norman

Conquest, iv, 17. (1876) etc.

To make the best of a bad bargain. To adapt oneself resignedly (and resourcefully) to adverse circumstances: [a cliché from] mid C. 19-20
Boswell, in 1790, alludes to it as 'the vulgar phrase.'

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Make

2
A good thing is soon snatch't up.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)

A good Thing is soon caught up.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 181 (1732)

The French say. "Belle chose est tôt ravie."

3
'Tis ill luck to go back upon a bargain.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth
Ch. 36. (1861)

4 In the way of bargain, mark ye me.

I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1, 139. (1597)

5
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 104
(1594)

6
Seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 7. (1594)

So clap hands, and a bargain.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 2, 134. (1599)

7
There never was a better bargain driven.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, My True Love Hath My Heart. (c. 1583)

8
A hard bargainer never gets good meat. (οὐδεὶς δυσώμενος χρηστὸν ὀφθαί κρέας.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, xi, 23. (c. 950)

For little more or lesse no debate make.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Bargaining has neither friends nor relations.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

9
Your daughter has married a gentleman:—is not this better than a Smithfield bargain?

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats Act v, sc. 5. (1662)

A "Smithfield bargain" was a roguish bargain; also a marriage of interest, not love.

Our marriage is a perfect Smithfield bargain.

THOMAS BAKER, An Act at Oxford. Act iii, sc.
2. (1704)

The hearts of us women . . . are apt . . . to rise against the notions of bargain and sale,
Smithfield bargains, you Londoners call them

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison,
iii, 434. (1753)

To find myself made a mere Smithfield bargain of at last!

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act v, sc. 1. (1775)

10
A plaine bargain is best, and in bargaines making, fast bind, fast find.

UNKNOWN, Jests of Scoggin. (1565)

A blind bargain.

UNKNOWN, Merrie Tales of the Mad Men of Gottam. No. 13. (1630)

BARK

11
She's the bark but her husband's the bite.

E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Cooks a Goose, p. 78.
(1942)

BARK WORSE THAN BITE, see under DOG

12
If you think to run a rig on me, you have . . .
barked up the wrong tree

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Human Nature, p. 124. (1855) In Crockett's Tour, p.
205, the expression is "barking up the wrong sapling."

They are barking up the wrong tree.

ALBERT B. FALL, remark to Edward B. McLean.
Dec., 1923, referring to the Senators who were trying to run down the facts in the Teapot Dome oil scandal. McLean, afterwards in his testimony, said he remembered the phrase because it was the first time he had ever heard it. See ADAMS, Incredible Era, p. 396

You're barking up the wrong tree, as the saying goes.

EDGAR WALLACE, The India-Rubber Men. Ch. 7.
(c. 1920) Of all clichés, this is the one most common to detective stories. For example,
KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 150.
(1940) LOCKRIDGE, A Pinch of Poison, p. 229

(1941) MARSH, Death and the Dancing Footman, p. 141. (1941) CONNINGTON, No Past is Dead, p. 228. (1942) BARBER AND SCHABLITZ, Drawn Conclusion, p. 189. (1942) COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 96. (1942) GRUBER, The Mighty Blockhead, p. 77. (1942) POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 170. (1942) GARDNER, The Case of the Buried Clock, p. 98. (1943) NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 112. (1943) etc., etc.

You're sniffin' up the wrong tree.

FIELDS AND CHODOROV, My Sister Eileen, Act i. (1940)

We been skinning the bark off the wrong tree.

FITZSIMMONS AND ADAMS, This—Is Murder, p. 235. (1941)

You're barking at the wrong rabbit-hole.

FRANK GRUBER, Simon Lash, p. 178. (1941)

As Hans Korb says, we are getting the bark off the wrong tree.

THEODORA DU'BOIS, The Wild Duck Murders, p. 141. (1943)

1 At every dogs barke, seem not to awake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 56. (1562)

2 We should in that but bark against the moon.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Fortune by Land and Sea. Act i. (1655) See under MOON.

BARLEYCORN

3 [Give] a precious stoane for a barley corne with Aesops cocke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Alexius, p. 257 (1576) An allusion to Fable 98, "Gallus et Gemma." Pettie's only reference to Aesop. A common proverb, found in Guazzo, Lyly, Marlowe, and many others. A barley-corn is a grain of barley.

Prefer not a barlie corne before a pretious Jewell. set not a fading content before a perpetuall honour.

ROBERT GREENE, Euphues His Censure. (1587)

Repeated in Perimedes, 15. (1588)

We catch at barley-grains, whilst pearls stand by despis'd.

FRANCIS QUARIES, Divine Emblems, iii.2. (1635)

As a cock was turning up a dunghill, he spied a diamond. Well (says he to himself) . . . a barley-corn had been worth forty on't.

L'ESTRANGE, Aesop's Fables, i. (1692)

A Barley-corn is better than a Diamond, to a Cock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 7. (1732)

4 A pleasant new ballad . . . of the bloody murder of Sir John Barleycorn.

UNKNOWN, Title, in Pepysian Library. (c. 1620)

Sir John Barley-corn's the strongest knight.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 59. (1670)

John Barleycorn has got a beard

Like any other man.

THOMAS PERCY, Reliques of Ancient English Poetry: John Barleycorn. (1765)

John Barleycorn, Thou king of grain.

ROBERT BURNS, Scotch Drink. (1786) Thirlwall

(Greece, ii, 14. 1836) calls barleycorn "the juice of the vine," but the modern reference is to whiskey distilled from malted barley, as in Ireland and Scotland, with John Barleycorn as its personification. Burns celebrates him a number of times. "John Barleycorn was a hero bold." (John Barleycorn); "Inspiring bold John Barleycorn," (Tum o' Shanter).

BARN

5 You have a Barn for all Grain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5910. (1732)

6 When the barn was full any one might thresh in the haggard [stack-yard].

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Sec. vii, No. 24. (1632)

When the barn's full, you may thresh before the door.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 354. (1731)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5570. (1732)

7 Better a barn filled than a bed.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy, p. 82. (1716)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 856. (1732)

BASE

8 No fault of hers that she couldn't fetch the home plate.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 204 (1889)

It kind of caught us off first base

E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Goes to Trial, p. 192 (1940)

You couldn't get to first base with a dame like that.

JONATHAN LATIMER, The Lady in the Morgue. p. 149. (1936)

You'll never get to first base.

RICHARD SALE, Passing Strange, p. 109. (1942)

In two years he hadn't been able to get to first base.

JOHN AUGUST, The Woman in the Picture, p. 8. (1944) Proverbial phrases derived from the game of baseball.

BASHFULNESS

9 He who is bashful with his cousin gets no boy by her.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 620. (1817)

10 Bashfulness is useless to a needy man. (Verecundia inutilis viro egent.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vii. No. 2. (1523)

Cast away bashfulness where nede constraineth

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 26. (1539)

Poverty has no greater foe than bashfulness.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Bashfulness is an enemy to poverty.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670)

11 Bashfulness is boyish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 843. (1732)

Tho' Modesty be a Virtue, yet Bashfulness is a Vice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5006. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Bashfulness is an ornament to youth, but a reproach to old age. (L'estre honteux, servir d'ornement à la jeunesse; mais de reproche à la vieillesse.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595) Quoting Aristotle.

<sup>2</sup> His bashful mind hinders his good intent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)

BASTARD

<sup>3</sup> Bastard brood is always proud

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Bastard. (1736)

<sup>4</sup> Youe came in by the wyndowe.

ROBERT CROWLEY, Pleasure and Payne, p. 350. (1551) Said of a bastard.

Though he came in at the window, he sets the gates of your honour open.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iii. (1605)

Woe worth the time that ever I gave suck to a child that came in at the window.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Family of Love. Act iv. sc. 3. (1608)

He had her not by 's wife, But by a fish-wench he was kind to, And so she came in at the window

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. i. (1664)

<sup>5</sup> Bastards are often better than true-born sons. (νόθοι τε πολλοὶ γρησίων ἀμεινότες.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 638. (c. 430 B.C.)

There has been much controversy over the derivation of "bastard." THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i. 322, says, "He confuted their etymology who deduced Bastard from the Dutch words boes and art, that is an abject Nature, and verified their deduction deriving it from besteaerd, that is the best disposition." BURN, Justice of the Peace, says it is compounded of base, ignoble, and steert, signifying a start or beginning. O.E.D. says it comes from filz de bast, a pack-saddle child <sup>6</sup> 'Tis a proverb. The child thats borne must be kept.

R. F., Schoole of Slovenrie. (1605)

Yours is the cow, and you shall keep the calfe.

UNKNOWN, Cornu-copie, p. 78. (1612)

He that bulls the cow must keep the calf.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs: Introduction. (1659) Howell says, "In our Common Law there are some Proverbs that carry a kind of authority with them, as that which began in Henry the Fourth's time (c. 1400). He that bulls the cow must keep the calf." There is a Latin proverb which also summarizes a legal dictum: "Bastardus nullius est filius" (A bastard is the son of nobody), whence the shorter "Filius nullius" (Son of nobody, an illegitimate son). "Filius populi" (A son of the people), has the same meaning.

I had the reputation of it indeed [a bastard]; and should have had the cow with the calf.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Sir Anthony Love. Act iv, sc. 2. (1691)

Who bulls the Cow, must keep the Calf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5695. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> If her foot slip and down fall she,
And break her leg above the knee.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act iii, sc. 5. (1618) Have a bastard.

She broke her elbow 'gainst the bed.

ROBERT HEATH, Epigrams, p. 64. (1650)

She hath broken her elbow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 158. (1678)

On p. 151, Ray cites a variation of this proverb with a different meaning, "She hath broken her elbow at the church door," she has been idle ever since her marriage.

She hath broken her leg above the knee.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 256. (1678)

She has sprained her ankle.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Ankle. (1785)

<sup>8</sup> God gave him no Children; but the Devil furnished him with an abundance of Bastards.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1669. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> To stand Moses.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Moses. (1796) Of a man who has another man's bastard fathered upon him and is compelled by the parish to maintain it <sup>10</sup> A bastard i-boren of Belsabubbes Kunne.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text A, passus ii. l. 100. (1362)

Ye be a baby of Belsabubs bowre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1562)

<sup>11</sup> He is the son of a batchelor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1949. (1732)

One of those cheap sons of bachelors.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 10. (1940)

<sup>12</sup> To come home like the Parson's cow with a calf at her foot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 209. (1670)

She is past dying of her first child.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 240. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> No tenth transmitter of a foolish face.

RICHARD SAVAGE, The Bastard. (1728)

<sup>14</sup> We are all bastards;

And that most venerable man which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time: so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 5, 2. (1609)

1 My mother was an honest woman. I didn't come in on the wrong side of the blanket.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, ii, 185. (1771) A gentleman, though on the wrang side of the blanket.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 9. (1815) Used again by SCOTT in The Monastery, ch. 37.

2 Called after the mother, like the kid. (τῆς μητρὸς ὡς αἷξ καλεῖται.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, xiii, 58. (c. 950)

3 Teague made a good Pun by a Brogue in his Speech,

And said: By my Shoul he's a Son of a Beech. JONATHAN SWIFT, A Serious Poem, l. 27. (1724)

The late Opie Read was shut off the air one evening in 1938 while making this pun.

4 He's a backyard relation.

THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 498. (1940) Their cat came over into our yard once.

5 There are no illegitimate children—only illegitimate parents.

JUDGE LEON R. YANKWICH, of the United States District Court for the Southern District of California, Decision, Zipkin vs. Mozon. (June, 1928) The epigram was repeated by that "amiable plagiarist" (as Samuel Hopkins Adams calls him), O. O. McIntyre at a hearing before the New York Legislature at Albany, elicited the excited admiration of Alexander Woollcott as the greatest epigram of the century, and was put into Greer Garson's mouth, without credit, by the writers of a motion-picture script. See ADAMS, A. Woollcott, p. 124.

BAT

6 Bats feel proud in the absence of birds.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 445. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

7 His father's sister had bats in the belfry and was put away.

EDEN PHILPOTTS, Peacock House, p. 219. (1926) Drive those bats out of your belfry.

FEUCHTWANGER, Paris Gazette, p. 491. (1940)

You'll be thinking I've bats in the belfry.

H. C. BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 344. (1942)

The French say, "Avoir une araignée dans le plafond" (To have a spider in the ceiling).

8 He had no revenues but what he got off his own bat.

SYDNEY SMITH, A Fragment on the Irish Roman Catholic Church. (1845) From cricket: the score made by a player's own hits; solely by his own exertions.—O.E.D.

Do you know the meaning of making a score off your own bat?

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, He Knew He Was Right. Ch. 12. (1869)

You make, I suppose, ten pounds a night off your own bat.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 104. (1910)

BATH

9 Hercules' baths. (Ἡράκλεια λουτρά.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 1051. (423 B. C.)

A proverbial phrase for hot baths. According to the legend, Athena made hot baths spring up at Thermopylae for Hercules when he was weary. ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 65, cites the proverb and gives the Latin, "Herculana balnea."

Cursed be the bath that has shown me the rump of him whose face even I hate to see!

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 582. (1817) Accident has thrown me into disagreeable company.

10 Hercules! How cold is this bath of yours!

JUGURTHA, when thrown into a subterranean dungeon, half full of water, after having been captured and taken to Rome, 104 B. C.

Do you think that I, then, am taking pleasure in my bath? (¿Estoi yo en algun deleite, ó baño?)

GUATEMOZIN, last Aztec Emperor of Mexico, Remark to the cacique of Tacuba, as they were both being tortured over a slow fire by the Spaniards under Cortés. (1521) The cacique had groaned in agony, and Guatemozin coldly rebuked him. Cortés had promised protection to the Emperor, but when the latter declared he knew nothing of any hidden Aztec treasure, Cortés delivered him over to his soldiers to work their pleasure on him, entirely without success. Usually rendered, "Am I, then, lying on a bed of roses?" See PRESCOTT, Conquest of Mexico. Bk. vii, ch. 1.

11 In the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 5, 120. (1601)

He had imprudently taken a bath at too high a temperature.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 36. (1837)

12 He is given to singing at the baths. (ἐν βαλανεῖω δὲ ἀσάει.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Characters. No. iv, 14. (319 B. C.)

Many there are who recite their writings in the bath. How pleasantly the vaulted space echoes the voice! That delights the frivolous, who never ask themselves whether what they do is in bad taste or out of season. (Qui scripta foro recitent, sunt multi, quique lavantes.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 75. (35 B. C.)

He was reciting a poem in the bathroom. (Nam in balneo carmen recitabat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 91. (c. A. D. 60)

The man who always likes to hear his own voice in the bathroom. (Illum cui vox sua in balineo placet.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, sec. 2. (a. A. D. 64)

I fly to the hot baths: you buzz in my ear. (In thermas fugio: sonas ad aurem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 44. (c. A. D. 90)

BATTALIONS, BIG, see under God BATTLE

See also Fighting, War

<sup>1</sup> The joys of battle. (Certaminis gaudia.)

ATTILA, At the Battle of Chalons. (A. D. 451)

See JORDANUS OF RAVENNA, De Gestarum Origine. Ch. 39.

Battle's magnificently stern array.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 28. (1816)

<sup>2</sup> All battle is well said to be Misunderstanding.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. iii, bk. 3, ch. 2. (1837)

<sup>3</sup> Tullius seith: that "long apparailing biforn the bataille maketh short victorie."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 35. (c. 1387)

<sup>4</sup> Let us not fight our battles over again. (Acta ne agamus.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ix, epis. 6. (49 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis a hard battle where none escape.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 103. (1639)

It is a hard-fought Field, where none escapes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2861. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> The battle is lost, but there is time to win another.

MARSHAL LOUIS CHARLES DESAIX, to Napoleon, who thought at four o'clock in the afternoon of 14 June, 1800, that the battle of Marengo was lost. Desaix' division saved the day, though, in the advance, he was shot through the heart. Napoleon had him buried at the summit of the St. Bernard Pass, saying, "His tomb shall have the Alps for its pedestal." See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.

My right has been rolled up; my left has been driven back; my center has been crushed. I have ordered an advance from all directions.

GENERAL FERDINAND FOCH, Message, to Marshal Joffre, during the first battle of the Marne, Aug., 1914.

<sup>7</sup> Never battle with a man who has nothing to lose, for then the conflict is unequal.

BALTASAR GRACIAN, The Art of Worldly Wisdom. Sec. 172. (1647)

<sup>8</sup> Life's sovereign moment is a battle won.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret. (1850)

The spice of life is battle.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers. (1887)

<sup>9</sup> Good at the battle cry. (βόην ἀγᾶθόν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 408. (c. 850 B. C.) Frequently repeated.

<sup>10</sup> Victory to turn the tide of battle. (μάχης ἐτεπαλκία νίκη.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 26. (c. 850 B. C.)

He knew the tide of battle was turning. (ἦ μὲν δὴ γίγνωνσκε μάχης ἐτεπαλκία νίκη.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 362. (c. 850 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Posterity, thinned by the crimes of its ancestors, shall hear of those battles. (Audiet pugnas, vitio parentum | rara iuventus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 23. (25 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off. (Ubi audierit buccinam, dicit: Vah, procul odoratur bellum.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxix, 25. (c. 400 B. C.)

Mars approaches, and, approaching, gives the sign of war. (Mars venit, et veniens bellica signa dedit.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. v, l. 550. (c. A. D. 8)

<sup>13</sup> There is nothing so unfortunate as entering lightly into battle, for by so doing we are in danger of losing that which is most precious

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue)

Sec. 69. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

The event of bataille is always doubtfull.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 30. (1576)

<sup>14</sup> The battle ends when the enemy is down.

(Pugna suum finem. cum iacet hostis, habet.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 5, l. 34. (c. A. D. 9)

<sup>15</sup> It snows spears, lead and stones it hails. (Nivit sagittis, plumbo et saxis grandinat.)

PACUVIUS, Paulus. Frag. 3. Loeb. (c. 160 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> There are few die well that die in a battle

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 148. (1599)

<sup>17</sup> Hope for the battle, being ready. (Pugnam sperate parari.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 158. (19 B. C.)

<sup>18</sup> Nothing except a battle lost can be half so melancholy as a battle won

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Despatch. (1815) After the battle of Waterloo. The London Times Literary Supplement, 14 June, 1912, p. 241. on the anniversary of Waterloo, quotes this differently, "I always say that, next to a battle lost, the greatest misery is a battle gained"

Madam, there is nothing so dreadful as a great victory—excepting a great defeat.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Remark, to a lady expressing a passionate wish to see a great victory. It was not original with Wellington however—he had borrowed it from Count D'Argenson. See GRIMM, Mémoires.

BAYARD

<sup>19</sup> The walke of the wofull and his Horse, Bayard-of-ten-toes [shanks' mare].

NICHOLAS BRETON, Good and Badde. (1616)

<sup>1</sup>
Ye been as bolde as is Bayard the blinde,
That blundreth forth, and peril casteth noon;
He is as bold to renne agayn a stoon
As for to goon besydes in the weye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 860 (c. 1389) Bayard was the name of the bright bay magic steed given by Charlemagne to Rinaldo, famous in mediaeval romance; why it came to be taken as a type of blind recklessness has been forgotten.

But ben as bold as Baiard is, the blynde.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy-Booke. Bk. ii, l. 4731. (c. 1412)

And began boldly to run forth as blind Bayard.
WILLIAM CAXTON, History of Troy: Prologue. (c. 1475)

Bec bolde vpon it lyke blynde bayarde.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Confutacyon of Tindale. (1532)

Who so bolde as blynde Bayard is?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)
PETIT, Petite Pallace, p. 263. (1576) BUNYAN, Come to Jesus (1681)

Who is so blind as bold Bayard?

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters. (1609)

As boldly as blind bayard rusheth into the battle
THOMAS JACKSON, The Apostles' Creed, iv, 4. (c. 1630)

Bayard must ever be as bold as blind

NATHANIEL FAIRFAX, Bulk and Selvedge of the World, p. 157. (1674)

<sup>2</sup>
But as Bayard the blinde stede . . .
He goth ther no man will him bidde.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii. l. 44 (1393)

Thou, as blinde Bayarde berkest at the mone.

UNKNOWN, Political Poems, ii, 53. (1401)

I am no blind Bayard, to take a leap in the dark.
WAITER SCOTT, The Talisman. Ch. 17. (1825)

<sup>3</sup>
Ful trewe is that byword, "a man to serueca-bill,

Ledith offt beyard from his owne stabill.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 1383. (c. 1400)

To haue kept Bayard in the stable.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Keepe Bayard in the stable.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 327.
(1605) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 278. (1639)

BEAN

<sup>1</sup>
A glutton for beans. (κναυροπώτ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 41. (424 B.C.)

A devourer of beans. (Fabarum arrosor.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 169. (1814)

Fat from feeding on beans; applied to a person who had accepted a bribe for his vote, a bean being the ballot.

<sup>2</sup>
She had spilled the beans.

JOHN DICKSON CARR, The Man Who Could Not Shudder, p. 227. (1940) Had disclosed

a secret; given the show away. A favorite cliché with writers of detective stories, for example: NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 77, and The Nursing-Home Murder, p. 47 (1941) VIRGINIA PERDUE, The Case of the Grieving Monkey, p. 194. (1941) LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 37. (1941) AGATHA CHRISTIE, Murder in Retrospect, p. 73. (1942) MANNING COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 49. (1942) CAROLYN DAWSON, Remind Me to Forget, p. 18. (1942) ANNE NASH, Said With Flowers, p. 163. (1943), etc., etc.

I am going, as you say in England, to spill the apples.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 25. (1941)

<sup>6</sup>
As though I do not know how many five are. (Saber quantas son cinco.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1605)

Few men know how many blue beans it takes to make five.

JOHN GALT, Lawrie Todd, ii, 1, 42. (1830)

To say of a man that "He knows how many beans make five," is to speak highly of his shrewdness.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases, p. 16. (1894)

<sup>7</sup>
"When parson 'gins the Bible, 'tis time to sow beans," thus runs the ancient proverb

E. G. HAYDEN, Travels Round Our Village, p. 75. (1905) The first chapter of Genesis is read on Septuagesima Sunday, the third Sunday before Lent. For other proverbs about the sowing of beans, see INWARDS, Weather Lore.

<sup>8</sup>
She must syt like a beane in a monkis hood

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

<sup>9</sup>
If pale beans bubble for you in a red earthenware pot, you can often decline the dinners of sumptuous hosts. (Si spumet rubra conchis tibi pallida testa, lautorum cenis saepe negare potes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 7. (c. A. D. 85)

Because you will have such a good dinner at home. In other houses they cook beans, but in mine it's by the potful. (En otras casas cuecen habas, y en la mia, a calderadas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

I get more than my share. A better form is, "En cada casa cuecen." etc.

<sup>10</sup>
Boast that you have found the bean in the cake. (Vantez vous d'avoir trouvé la febre au gasteau.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) A reference to appointing as King of the company on Twelfth-night, the man in whose portion of cake the bean was found.—O.E.D. Afterwards proverbial for hitting the mark, or being lucky.

Cut the cake: who hath the beane shall be kinge.

JOHN NICHOLS, The Progresses of Queen Elizabeth: Speech at Sudely, p. 8. (1592)

Beane's the king of the sport.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 376. (1648)

1 I never met anybody so full of beans.

J. B. PRIESTLEY, The Old Dark House. Ch. 10. (1928) Full of energy.

I'm all right. Full of beans, rarin' to go.

ANNE NASH, Said With Flowers, p. 25. (1943)

2 Abstain from beans. (κνάμων ἀπέχεσθαι.)

PYTHAGORAS, Maxim. (c. 525 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 2, with the Latin, "A fabis abstineto," and the comment that there are a number of interpretations of this maxim, Aristotle saying that the prohibition was due to the fact that a bean resembles the human testicle; Cicero because beans engender gas. However, the same word was used for the lot by which the officials at Athens were chosen (ὁ κνάμω λαχών), and the phrase was eventually taken as a warning to keep out of politics.

From beans withhold your hands. (κνάμων ἀπο χείρας ἐχέσθαι.)

EMPEDOCLES. Frag. 141, Diehls. (c. 400 B.C.)

Pythagoras among vegetables especially recommended the bean, saying that it was both digestible and loosening, and therefore he most frequently made use of it.

ARISTOXENUS, De Pythagora. (c. 330 B.C.)

Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, iv, 11.

Withhold your hands from beans, a hurtful food (κνάμων ἀπο χείρας ἔχειν, ἀνιώντος ἐδεστού.)

CALLIMACHUS. Frag. 128. (c. 250 B.C.)

The Pythagoreans make a point of prohibiting the use of beans, as if thereby the soul and not the belly was filled with wind! (Faba quidem Pythagorei utique abstinere, quasi vero eo cibo mens, non venter, infletur!)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 58. (44 B.C.)

"Abstain from beans" means that a man should keep out of politics, for beans were used in earlier times for voting upon the removal of magistrates from office. (κνάμων ἀπέχεσθαι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 12F. (C. A. D. 95)

Those who have studied the poems of Empedocles say that beans (κνάμους) here refers not to the vegetable but to the testicles, and that Empedocles desired in that verse to keep men not from eating beans, but from excess in vengery.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. iv, ch. 11. (C. A. D. 150)

I eat nothing at all that hath life, but all else save beans. . . . They are naught but seed of man, and if thou open a bean while it is still green, thou wilt see that it resembles in structure the testicle (μορφοῖσιν) of a man. . . . But more than this, the Athenians are wont to choose their magistrates with beans.

LUCIAN, Philosophies for Sale. Sec. 6. (C. A. D. 170)

To abstaine from beanes, that is, not to meddle in ciuile affaires or businesse of the common weale, for in the old times the election of Magistrates was made by the pullyng of beanes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 148. (1579)

Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

I read a Latin proverb, "A fabis abstineto," (for-bear beans); whereof some made a civil interpretation, "Meddle not with matters of state"; because anciently men cast in a bean when they gave their suffrages in public elections.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Leicestershire, ii, 225. (1662)

Keep them to wholesome Food confin'd,

Nor let them taste what causes Wind;

("Tis this the Sage of Samos means, Forbidding his Disciples Beans.)

SWIFT, Strephon and Chloë, l. 123. (1731)

3 Al nes worth a bene.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Chronicle, 497. (1297)
See under WORTH.

I yeve not of his harm a bene.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 6464. (c. 1365)

God helpe me so, I counte hem not a bene.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. v, l. 363. (c. 1380)

This Absolon ne roghte nat a bene.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Milleres Tale, l. 586. (c. 1386)

I recche noght a bene.

CHAUCER, Introduction to the Tale of the Man of Law, l. 94; Prologue to the Nonne Prestes Tale, l. 48.

Al my wyt auayleth nought a bene.

JOHN LYDGATE (?), The Pilgrimage of the Soule, i, 13. (1413)

It doesn't amount to a hill of beans.

NGAIO MARSH, A Man Lay Dead, p. 171. (1942)

4 Euery Beane hath his blacke.

BISHOP MILES SMITH, Sermons, p. 178. (c. 1624)
See also under COMPENSATION.

5 And yet always I stand in great doubt,

Least that the bigger wyll cate the been.

UNKNOWN, Wyndow Edyth: Mery Gestes, p. 89. (1525) Get the prize.

Alwaie the bygger eateth the beane.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

BEAR

6 Oon thenketh the bere, But al another thenketh his ledere.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1453. (c. 1374) A proverb which is varied in a Latin manuscript, No. 394, in the Rylands Library, to "The bereward and the bere thenken not alle on[e]." See also under ASS.

7 To . . . take the beare by the tooth.

ARTHUR DENT, Pathway to Heaven, p. 62. (1601)

As good take a bear by the tooth, of a bold desperate undertaking.

B. E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. B4. (1690)

You dare as well take a Bear by the Tooth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5895. (1732)

You dare as well take a Bear by the Tooth, That is, You dare not attempt it.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Bear. (1736)

When you've got an elephant by the hind leg, and he's trying to run away, it's best to let him run.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Remark, to Charles A. Dana, who was urging him to arrest Jacob Thompson, a Confederate commissioner trying to escape to Europe. Lincoln was shot a few hours later, and this was probably his last aphorism. See MITCHELL, Memoirs of an Editor, p. 35; WILSON, Life of Dana, p. 358. It was with some dismay that he found he had got the lion by the tail and couldn't let go.

MIGNON G. EBERHART, Bermuda Grapevine. Ch. 1. (1938)

We're in the position of having a bear by the tail. E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Goes to Trial, p. 156. (1940)

They saw they had a bear by the tail.

THEODORA DUBOIS, The Body Goes Round and Round, p. 197. (1942)

You think you've got something by the tail, but don't forget the man and the bear.

HOWIE, Murder's So Permanent, p. 208. (1942)

Sure you haven't got the bull by the tail?

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Other Name, p. 260. (1943)

<sup>1</sup> If it were a bear it would bite you.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 4. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 6. (1639)

Cok.: I have been searching my pockets for my snuffbox, and, egad, here it is in my hand. Miss: If it had been a bear, it would have bit you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>2</sup> Tho' the bear be gentle, don't bite him by the nose.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Quixote. Pt. iii, act i, sc. 1. (1696) The Turks say, "Call the bear 'uncle' till you are safe across the bridge."

<sup>3</sup> Ursa caret cauda, non queat esse Leo. The Bear he never can prevail To Lion it for lack of tail. . . . The proverb is applied to such who aspire to what is above their worth to deserve, or power to achieve.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Warwick, iii, 271. (c. 1588)

<sup>4</sup> Bears live in harmony with bears. (Saevis inter se convenit ursis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 164. (c. A. D. 120) See also under BEAST.

Two bears will not bite one another when they meet.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 2, 80. (1598) See also DOG EAT DOG, under DOG; and MAN'S INHUMANITY, under MAN.

<sup>5</sup> To gon at large, but as a bere at stake, To passe his boundis, but if he leve take.

JOHN LYDGATE, Churl & Bird, l. 132. (c. 1430)

With as good will as a beare goth to the stake

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 17. (1546)

I am as loath to goe to it, as a beare is to goe to the stake.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 89. (1591)

If he goes, yet it is as a beare to the stake.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman, sig. D5. (1642)

I should go to church like a bear to the stake.

DANIEL DEFOE, Moll Flanders. (1722)

<sup>6</sup> Cand.: I . . . come to make choice of a mistress. Silena: A ha, are you there with your beares?

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc.3. (1594)

Faith! are you there with your bears? Nay, then, I have brought my hog to a fair market.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc. 3. (1668)

Are you there with your Bears?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 811. (1732)

O ho, Nephew! are you thereabouts with your bears?

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, iii. 335. (1742)

"Ay, man, are you there with your bears?" said the King.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 32. (1822) "Are you there with your bears?"

i.e. Are you there again? Are you at it again? The phrase "is explained by Joe Miller as the exclamation of a man who, not liking a sermon he had heard on Elisha and the bears, went the next Sunday to another church, only to find the same preacher and the same discourse."—O.E.D

<sup>7</sup> The captain was as savage as a bear with a sore head.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 26 (1830)

He's like a bear with a sore head.

S. J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 5. (1922)

<sup>8</sup> Bears when first born are white and shapeless lumps of flesh. . . . which their mother gradually licks into proper shape. (Hi sunt candida informisque caro. . . . Hanc lambendo paulatim figurant.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. viii. sec. 44. (A. D. 77)

And the she-bear brings forth her young formless and without joints, and with her tongue, as with a tool, she moulds into shape their skin.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Affection for Offspring. Sec. 494C. (c. A. D. 95) See AELIAN, ii, 19: ARISTOTLE, 579A.

For he said that as the bear brought forth her young formless and misshapen, and afterwards by licking gave it form and shape, just so the fresh products of his mind were rude in form, but afterwards by working over them he gave them definite form and expression.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xvii, ch. 10. (c. A. D. 150) Of Vergil, who had not been able to polish all of the Aeneid to his liking, and when he saw himself about to die, begged his friends to destroy the poem.

Beres ben brought forth al fowle and trans-formyd and after that by lyckynge of the fader and the moder they ben brought in to their kyndely shap.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Pilgremage of the Soule, iv. xxiv. 70. (1483)

A bear at birth hath neither feet nor hands, skin, hair nor head, but its dam by licking, puts its members into shape. (Vn ours naissant n'a pieds ne mains, peau, poil, ne teste. . . L'ourse à force de leicher la met en perfection des membres.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

Like . . . an unlicked bear-whelp, That carries no impression like the dam.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 2, 161. (1591)

He has not licked his whelp into full shape yet.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widowes Teares. (1612)
Enforced, as a Bear doth her whelps, to bring forth this confused lump, I had not time to lick it into form.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Oh, a most comical sight: a country squire, with the equipage of a wife and two daughters.

But, oh, Gad! two such unlick'd cubs!

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act iv, sc. 8. (1693)

At last it was licked into shape.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, An Exposition of the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England, xxvii, 339. (1699)

So watchful Bruin forms, with plastic care,
Each growing lump, and brings it to a bear.

POPE, The Dunciad, Bk. i, l. 101. (1728)

Unlicked Cubs grow up into good old Bears.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, Letter to Sir William Bowman, 14 Nov., 1854.

I shall have trouble enough in licking her into shape.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, Letters, iii, 132. (1862)

Referring to a young servant. In time, of course, the idea of licking with the tongue developed into licking with a stick. For further uses of the phrase see MONTAIGNE, Essays, ii, 12; DUBARTAS, Devine Weeks and Works, i, 1.

1
He must have iron nails that scratches a Bear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1678)

He must have Iron Nails, that scratcheth with a Bear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1991. (1732)

A man must have, the proverb says,
Good iron nails that scratches with a bear.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Out at Last, (1801)

He must have iron nails who scratches a bear.

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 77. (1828) The Danes say, "Han skal have Fingre af Jern, som Fanden vil flaae" (He must have fingers of iron that will flay the devil).

2
The rugged Russian bear.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 100. (1606)

Make ye no truce with Adam-Zad—the Bear that walks like a Man!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Truce of the Bear. (1898) Referring to Russia.

DON'T SELL THE SKIN TILL YOU HAVE KILLED THE BEAR, see under SKIN.

BEARD

3
Like the goat, you'll mourn for your beard.
(τράγος γένειον ἄρα πενθήσεις σύ γε.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus the Fire-Kindler.

Frag. 117, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Profit by One's Enemies, ii, 86F. Spoken, says Plutarch, by Prometheus to the satyr who wished to kiss fire the first time he saw it. See also EUSTATHIUS on Iliad, 415:7. The saying assumes the existence of a proverb about a goat that burnt his beard.

4
A beard creates lice, not brains. (ὁ πάγων | φθειρών ποιητής, οὐχὶ φρενῶν γέγονεν.)

AMMIANUS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 390), Greek Anthology, xi, 156. The Greeks also said, ἀπο τὰ γένεα σοφός (His wisdom is in his beard).

The Brains don't lie in the Beard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4431. (1732)

'Tis not the Beard makes the Philosopher.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5102.

5
Yes, by God, I wish I'd never worn this beard;
My throat's afire, I'm like to die of thirst.

(νῆ τὸν Δί', ἡ μοι μὴ γένειάν κρείττον ἦν δίψει γάρ, ὡς ἔοικ', ἀφανανθήσομαι)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 145. (c. 393 B.C.) Kipling's Private Mulvaney was echoing this when he said, "Av I didn't shave, I wud be torminted wid an outrajis thurst, for there's nothin' so dhryin' to the throat as a big billy-goat beard waggin' under the chin."

6
The thin-bearded is cunning; the thick-bearded is a fool.

Babylonian Talmud; Sanhedrin, fo. 100b. Also in the so-called second Alphabet of Ben Sira.

Do not ridicule the thin-bearded as long as thou thyself art without a beard.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 601. (1817) See under POT: THE POT CALLS THE KETTLE BLACK.

7
Between Háná and Báná our beards were lost.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 146. (1817) Háná and Báná were the wives of an elderly man. Háná, the old one, plucked out the black hairs to make him look older, while Báná, the young one, plucked out the gray hairs to make him look younger.

8
The soft down of manhood was just springing on his cheek. (ἀρμὸι που κάκεινφ ἐπέτρεχεν ἀνδρὸς ἱούλος.)

CALLIMACHUS, Hecale. Frag. 4. (c. 250 B.C.)

Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down began but to appear.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 92. (1609)

Ere on thy chin the springing beard began
To spread a doubtful down, and promise man.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Ode to the Memory of George Villiers, l. 5. (1707)

1 Whyt was his berd, as is the dayesye.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 334.
(c. 1386)

His beard, all silver white, Wagg'd up and down.
SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1405. (1594)
When his beard became gray, his society became agreeable.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 348. (1818)

2 His berd as any sowe or fox was reed,
And ther-to brood, as though it were a spade.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 554.
(c. 1386)

If thou meete a red man, and a bearded woman, greet them three myle of. (Homo rosso, e femina barbata, tre miglia de lontan la saluta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

The red is wise, the brown trusty,
The pale cnvious, and the black lusty. . . .

To a red man read thy rede,
With a brown man break thy bread,

At a pale man draw thy knife,
From a black man keep thy wife.

ROBERT TOFTE, Blazon of Jealousy, 21. (1615)
He is false by Nature that has a black Head and a red Beard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1915. (1732)

3 I have singed the Spanish king's beard.

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE, Remark, 19 April, 1587, after destroying a fleet of Spanish ships in a bold raid on the harbor of Cadiz. See KNIGHT, Pictorial History of England, iii, 215.

He has singed the beard of the King of Spain.

LONGFELLOW, A Dutch Picture. (1876)

4 The beard will pay for the shaving.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 431. (1830) "When a person is paid for his labour by taking part, or the whole, of that which he is employed about; as cutting bushes, etc."

"The Beard won't pay for the shaving" is a proverbial saying analogous to the French, "Le jeu ne vaut pas la chandelle." (The game isn't worth the candle.)

G. F. JACKSON, Shropshire Word-Book, p. 28.
(1879)

5 Mischievous boys pluck at your beard. (Vel-lunt tibi barbam lascivi pueri.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iii, l. 133. (35 B. C.)
Pluck a Cynic by the beard. (Cynico barbam vellat.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 133. (c. A. D. 58)
Plucking the beard was a sort affront.

Does he offer you his foolish beard to pluck?
(Stolidam praebet tibi vellere barbam?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 28. (c. A. D. 58)

Pulling his beard because he had no heir.

THOMAS HOOD, The Stag-Eyed Lady. (1826)

6 To cultivate a wise man's beard. (Sapientem pascere barbam.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 35. (35 B. C.)

Philosophers even to the beard. (Barbae tenus sapientes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 95.
(1523) A proverb deriving from Vergil's
"Iussit sapientem pascere barbam." Lucian also speaks of the "learned beard," and Martial has a jeer at it, "That isn't a little beard that hangs from your chin." BLAND, Proverbs, i, 60, says, "'He is a wise man, you can see it by his beard,' may be applied ironically to persons of grave and serious manners, who wish to pass themselves off for men of more learning than they possess. As the beard is not completely formed until the age of manhood, it has always been considered an emblem of wisdom."

I could never yet like a Scholar the worse for having a long Beard.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 256. (1709)

It is time to be wise, now you have a beard on your chin. (Il est temps d'être sage, quand on a la barbe au menton.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 60. (1814)

The French have many proverbs about the beard. "Avoir de la barbe au menton" means to be a determined man. Opposed to this is "The beard doesn't make the man" (La barbe ne fait pas l'homme). "To shave off someone's beard" (Faire bien la barbe à quelqu'un) means to defy or humiliate someone, because that was an ancient way of humiliating one's enemy. In the ancient romance of Ogier le Danois, the mother of the hero insults the ambassadors of Charlemagne by having their beards shaved off.

A man of wisdom. (Hombra de barba.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, 60. (1814) A Spanish proverb. The Spaniards also say,
"Let your beard advise you" (Diga barba que haga); "Little beard, little modesty" (A poca barba, poca vergüenza); and "Chins without beards deserve no honor" (Quixadas sin barbas no merecen ser honradas).

7 If you think that to grow a beard is to acquire wisdom, a goat with a fine beard is at once a complete Plato. (Εἰ τὸ τρέφειν πώγωνά δοκεῖς σοφίαν περιποιεῖν, | καὶ τράγος εὐπώγων αἰψ' ὄλος ἐστὶ Πλάτων.)

LUCIAN, Epigram. (c. A. D. 170) See Greek Anthology, xi, 430. There is a Danish proverb,
"If the beard were all, a goat might preach."

A billy-goat beard. (Hirquina barba.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 968. (c. 195 B. C.)

If men be judged wise by their beards and their girth,

Then goats were the wisest of creatures on earth.

JOSEPH SOLOMON DEL MEDICO (?), Epigram.

(c. 1620) See JEWISH ENCYCLOPEDIA, ii, 613.

If that ornamental excrement which groweth beneath the chin be the standard of wisdom, they [goats] carry it from Aristotle himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Wales,
iii, 484. (1662)

If Providence did beards devise,
To prove the wearers of them wise,

A fulsome Goat would then by Nature
Excel each other human Creature.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Collin's Walk, iii, 120. (1690)

1 Only their beards know the schemes of the prudent. (τῶν φρονιμῶν τοὺς σκοποὺς τὰ γέρεα τῶν ἐξείρου.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs,
p. 138. (1831)

2 There is beild [shelter] aneath an auld man's beard.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

3 He hath eaten a horse, and the tail hangs out at his mouth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)

4 Whoever hath a divided beard, the whole world will not prevaile against him.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 400. (1678)

Ray explains, "This Proverb is used of those who are cunning, and such are they thought to be whose beard is divided, which, by their much handling, when they are musing and thoughtful, they are said to divide."

Hoary whiskers and a forky beard.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 38. (1714)

Slight Sir Robert with his watery smile
And educated whisker.

TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 128. (1851)

5 They rode, as the Spanish proverb expresses it, "with the beard on the shoulder."

SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 7. (1823)

6 Beard of formal cut.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 155. (1600)

7 Swithe mury hit is in halle
When the burdes wawen alle!

UNKNOWN, King Alsaunder, l. 1163. (c. 1300)

They remember thys olde sayinge: It is mery in hal,

When berdes wag al.

THOMAS BECON, Fort. Faith: Prologue. (1550)

It is mery in halle, when berds wag all.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii. ch. 7. (1546)

'Tis mery in hall when beards wag all.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 35

(1598) Also, JONSON, Masque of Christmas.

(1616) ADDISON, Spectator, No. 371 (1712)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. (1738) etc.

It is merry in Hall, where beards wagge all, according to that olde right English Prouerbe of our Ancestours.

JOHN WHELFLE, A Treatise of Commerce, p.
58. (1601)

'Twas merry in hall when the beards wagged all.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 38. (1857)

TO PLUCK A LION BY THE BEARD, see under LION

BEAST

8 It is a strange beast that hath neither head nor tail.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 201. (1633)

9 A good Beast will get himself a heat with eating.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 136. (1732)

A mad Beast must have a sober Driver.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 265.

10 The beast that goes always, never wants blows.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 262.

(1640) The Spaniards say, "La bestia que mucho anda, nunca falta quien la taña" (The beast which goes well never wants some one to try him).

11 All beasts of prey are strong, or treacherous.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1021. (1640)

12 Better a beast sold than bought.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

13 Beasts of each kind their fellows spare,
Bear lives in harmony with bear.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 160. (1751)

Brutes never meet in bloody fray,
Nor cut each others' throats, for pay.

GOLDSMITH, The Logicians Refuted. (1767)

One crow never pecks out another's eyes.

F. L. COLLINS, Madame Pompadour of Rou- mania. See Liberty, 8 March, 1941, p. 52. A

Roumanian proverb. See also under BEAR

14 Beasts have not learned to lie. (Mentiri non didicere ferae.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams: De Spectaculis Liber

Epig. 30. (c. A. D. 85)

Many things which are wont to be regarded as goods are granted to animals in fuller measure than to men. They are more fortunate than man, for there is no wickedness, no injury to themselves in their way of living. They enjoy their pleasures and they take them more often and more easily, without any of the fear that results from shame or regret.

SENeca, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, sec. 15 (c.
A. D. 64)

I think I could turn and live with animals, they are so placid and self-contain'd,

Not one is respectable or unhappy over the whole earth.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 32. (1881)

15 The beasts of the field, wanting in reason
(Pecudes ratione carentes.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 25. (c. 13 B. C.)

A beast, that wants discourse of reason.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 150 (1600)

16 A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast. (Novit iustus iumentorum suorum animas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 10. (c. 350 B. C.)

Plutarch says that one of the precepts of Triptolemus, the mythical inventor of the plough, was "Hurt not animals."

He that will not be merciful to his beast, is a beast himself.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. I, ch. 9.
(1642)

BEATING

1 May that come to him which happens to the drum on feast days.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 444 (1817) Much beating.

2 So fight I, not as one that beateth the air. (οὕτως πικτεῖω ὡς οὐκ ἀέρα δέπων.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 26. (A. D. 57) [They] but beate the water, when they stande and beate their heads. . . . As we say in a common prouerbe, to beate the water, Sainte Paule saith to beate the ayre.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons: Timothy. (1579)

To beat the wind, or to make so many flourishes with his weapon.

Encyclopedia Britannica, iii, 488 (1815)

3 Beate often as a stockfyshe is beaten. rotundo

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium: Beate. (1552)

Referring to the beating of the dried fish before cooking.

Beat them as stockfish.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism. Ch. vi. (1560)

I'll turn my mercy out o' doors and make a stockfish of thee.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 2 80 (1612)

Wilt thou resemble the kinde Spaniel, which the more he is beaten the fonder he is, or the foolish Giesse, which wil neuer away?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 109. (1579)

THE MORE YOU BEAT 'EM THE BETTER THEY BE.
see under WOMAN

4 Well beaten cries as much as badly beaten (Aussi bien pleure bien battu comme mal battu.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences (c. 1498)

5 You may beat a horse till he be sad, and a cow till she be mad.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1678)

6 We got a hell of a beating. We got run out of Burma and it is as humiliating as hell.

LIEUT.-GEN. JOSEPH W. STILLWELL, Statement, after his retreat from Burma, May, 1942 See New York Times, 26 May, 1942, p. 1.

7 Bett hym blak and bloo.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries, p. 206. (c. 1460)

Beaten blacke and bloo, suggilatus.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium. (1552)

It would beat my heart blacke and blew.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombe. Act v, sc. 3. (1594)

Mistress Ford is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iv, 5, 116. (1601)

Beaten black and blew by the English.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 22. (1642)

BEAUTY

See also Pretty

I—Beauty: What It Is

8 Beauty is the gift of God. (θεοῦ δῶρον εἶναι εὐμορφίαν.)

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 330 B. C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, v, 19.

Beauty is heaven's gift. (Forma dei munus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 103. (c. 1 B. C.)

Beauty he [Aristotle] declared to be a greater recommendation than any letter of introduction. Others attribute this definition to Diogenes; Aristotle, they say, defined good looks as the gift of God, Socrates as a short-lived reign, Plato as natural superiority, Theophrastus as a mute deception, Theocritus as an evil in an ivory setting, Carneades as a monarchy that needs no body-guard.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 18-19. (C. A. D. 230) See under APPEARANCE.

Socrates saith. beauty is a tyrannie of a short space: Plato saith, it is a priuilege of nature. Theophrastus saith, it is a secret deceit: Theocritus, a delectable dammage: Carneades calleth it a solitary kingdome: Domitius saith that there is nothing more acceptable: Aristotle saith that beauty can not be commended so much as it is worthy: Homer affirmeth, that it is a glorious gift of nature & Ouid cals it a certayne grace of God: take whiche you please.

And which thinke you it is?

I beleeeue that it is but a gyft of God.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 41. (1578) An echo of Diogenes Laertius, but Florio adds Ovid, Homer, and Domitius (Afer), the teacher of Quintilian, to the list.

According to Ovid his opinion, Forma numen habet,

Beutie hath some divinity or Godhead in it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace, p. 166. (1576)

Beauty is eternity gazing at itself in a mirror.

KAHLIL GIBRAN, The Prophet: On Beauty.

9 Beauty. The power by which a woman charms a lover and terrifies a husband.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

10 Beauty is another's good. (τὸ κάλλος ἀλλότριον ἀγαθόν.)

BION, Aphorism. (c. 280 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, iv, 48. A definition which recalls Woodrow Wilson's favorite limerick, ending, "Tis the folks out in front that I jar." In other words, ugliness is the other fellow's bad luck. PLATO, Republic, i, 343C, defines justice as "the other fellow's good," and Thrasymachus cynically adds, "and your own harm." (392B)

Exuberance is Beauty.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Too much beauty, I reckon, is nothing but too much sun.

E. B. BROWNING, Lord Walter's Wife. (1850)

11 Beauty is its own excuse for being.

R. W. EMERSON, The Rhodora. (1846) "Beauty is its own excuse," wrote Whittier, in the dedication to Songs of Labor, and in a note added, "For the idea of this line I am indebted to Emerson."

Everything beautiful impresses us as sufficient to itself.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 26 Oct., 1853.

1

A thing of beauty is a joy for ever.

JOHN KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 1. (1818)

Everything beautiful is lovable. (Omne pulchrum amabile.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 305. (1869)

What is lovely never dies.

T. B. ALDRICH, A Shadow of the Night. (1874)

Beauty seen is never lost.

J. G. WHITTIER, Sunset on the Bearcamp. (1878)

Beauty is the only thing that time cannot harm. Philosophies fall away like sand, and creeds follow one another like the withered leaves of Autumn; but what is beautiful is a joy for all seasons and a possession for all eternity.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance of Art.

Lecture in New York City, 9 Jan., 1882

2

"Beauty is truth, truth beauty,"—that is all Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.

JOHN KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn. (1819)

Beauty is not always truth nor truth beauty.

OGDEN NASH, I'll Take a Bromide, Please (1940)

3

Beauty is engendered of modesty. (αἰδῶς ἄρθος ἐπισκίπτει.)

LYCOPHRONIDES, Aphorisms (c. 260 B. C.) See

ATHENAEUS, xiii, 564A.

4

Beauty, a deceitful bayte with a deadly hooke, and a sweet poyson in a paynted pot.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 77. (1579)

5

Beauty is an evil in an ivory setting (ἐλεφαντίνη ζυμιας.)

THEOCRITUS, Fragment. (c. 270 B. C.) See

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, v, 19.

6

Beauty is a mute deception (σιωπῶσαν ἀπάτην.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Apothegm. (c. 300 B. C.) See

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, v, 19.

Yet is beauty the pleasing trickery that cheateth half the world.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Immortality. (1839)

What's female beauty, but an air divine, Thro' which the mind's all gentle graces shine?

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 150.

(1725) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

7

Beauty is the flower of virtue. (τὸ κάλλος εἶναι τῆς ἀρετῆς ἀνθος εἶναι.)

ZENO, Aphorism. (c. 460 B. C.) See

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, vii, 23.

The ancients called beauty the flowering of virtue.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love. (1841)

II—Beauty: Aphorisms

8

A beautiful girl, though poor indeed, is yet abundantly dowered. (Virgo formosa etsi sit oppido pauper, tamen abunde dotata est.)

APULEIUS, De Magia. Sec. 92. (c. A. D. 165) An English variant is, "Beauty carries its dower in its face."

Shee that is faire hath halfe her portion.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 15. (1633) The French say, "Beau visage, demi-dot."

She, that is born a Beauty, is half married.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4141. (1732)

The Italians say, "Chi nasce bella, nasce maritata" (She who is born beautiful is born married).

The lady of beauteous face needs neither gauds nor turquoise ring.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 33. (c. 1258)

Maydens be they neuer so foolyshe, yet beeynge fayre, they are commonly fortunate: for that men in these dayes, haue more respect to the outward show then the inward substance.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 279. (1580)

A good Face needs no Band, and a bad one deserves none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 147. (1732)

A good face needs no band, and a pretty wench no land.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 288.

(1855) And there is the old nursery rhyme, "What is your fortune, my pretty maid? My face is my fortune, sir, she said."

BEAUTY IS A LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION, see under APPEARANCE

9

Even the autumn of beauty is beautiful. (τῶν καλῶν καὶ τὸ μετόπωρον καλὸν ἐστίν.)

ARCHELAUS, KING OF MACEDON, Aphorism. (c.

400 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Kings, 177B. Cited by ERASMIUS, Adagia, i, iii, 72, with the Latin, "Pulchrorum etiam autumnus pulcher est." Quoted by BACON, Essays: On Beauty.

Euripides would say of persons that were beautiful, and yet in some years, "In fair bodies not only the spring is pleasant, but also the autumn."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 145. (1625)

Of fair things, the Autumn is fair.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 574. (1640)

10

There is no Excellent Beauty that hath not some Strangeness in the Proportion.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty. (1612)

11

The beauty of a woman maketh bright the countenance.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxvi, 22. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Poets praise the beauties of woman: her breasts are pots of gold, her face is compared to the moon, her hips to the forehead of an elephant Yet the beauty of woman does not merit praise.

BHARTRIHARI, Vairāgya Sataka. No. 20. (c. A. D. 100)

Beauty is all very well at first sight; but who ever looks at it when it has been in the house three days?

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iv. (1903)

<sup>1</sup> Fair enough if good enough. (Sat pulchra si sat bona.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 90. (1814)

Quoting a Latin proverb. "Handsome is as handsome does." See under GOODNESS.

<sup>2</sup> An enemy to beauty is a foe to nature.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 311. (1855)

It is a blind man's question to ask, why those things are loved which are beautiful.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 426

<sup>3</sup> And behold there was a very stately palace before him, the name of which was Beautiful.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

The Beautiful! it is beauty seen with the eye of the soul. (Le Beau! c'est la beauté vue avec les yeux de l'âme.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 273. (1810)

It is on our knees that we should study the beautiful.

J. A. D. INGRES. (c. 1850) See PACH, Ingres, p. 162.

<sup>4</sup> Beauty in distress is much the most affecting beauty.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful Pt. iii, sec. 9. (1756)

Beauty's tears are lovelier than her smile.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 180 (1799)

Nor be, what man should ever be,

The friend of Beauty in distress?

LORD BYRON, To Florence (c. 1815)

<sup>5</sup> Health and gaiety foster beauty. (Salud y alegría, hermosura cria.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 221. (1856) A Spanish proverb

<sup>6</sup> Beauty alone may please, not captivate;

If lacking grace, 'tis but a hookless bait.

CAPITO, Epigrams. Bk. v, l. 67. (c. 25 B. C.) See PERRY, tr., Garden of Hellas, p. 105.

Beauty without grace is the hook without the bait.

R. W. EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

(1860) Emerson does not indicate that this is a quotation, but he must have got it from Capito. The French say, "La beauté sans vertu est une fleur sans parfum" (Beauty without virtue is a flower without perfume), or "Beauty without grace is a violet without smell." The Danes say, "Fagerhed uden Tugt, Rose uden Lugt," (Beauty without discipline, a rose without scent).

Outward beauty is not enough. (Non est forma satis.)

PETRONIUS, FRAG. 16, Loeb. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>7</sup> Right as our firste lettre is now an A,

In beautee first so stooed she. makelees.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 171. (c. 1380) "Makeless": matchless.

And she was fair as is the rose in May.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: The Legend of Cleopatra, l. 34. (c. 1385)

She is fair, as is the brighte morwe.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Dido, l. 279.

Ligurus doghter, fairer on to sene

Than is the flour again the brighte sonne.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Phyllis, l. 32.

That Emelye, that fairer was to sene

Than is the lillie upon his stalke grene.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 177. (c. 1386)

She was ful more blisful on to see

Than is the newe pere-jonette tree.

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 61.

Thus muche of hir beautee telle I may,

That she was lyk the brighte morwe of May.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 503.

Fayrer than floure in maye.

JOHN LYDGATE, Lyf of Our Lady, sig. G2. (c. 1440)

<sup>8</sup> And be ye wys, as ye ben fair to see,

Wel in the ring than is the ruby set.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde Bk. ii, l. 584. (c. 1380)

Faire and foolish.

WILLIAM VAUGHAN, Directions for Health

(1600) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1488. (1732)

She never yet was foolish that was fair.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 1, 137. (1605)

Foolish (the proverb says) if fair.

JOHN CLEVELAND, Works, p. 268. (1658)

She is a woman so beautiful that to expect sense from her would be hoggish.

WILLIAM II OF GERMANY, referring to the Countess Goertz. (c. 1900)

<sup>9</sup> She who is born beautiful is born with sorrow for many a man.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) See TEHYI HSEIH, Confucius Said It First, p. 86.

<sup>10</sup> Adornment is that which adorns. (κόσμος γὰρ ἐστὶν τὸ κοσμοῦν.)

CRATES, Apothegm. (c. 325 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 141E.

If she is beautiful, she is overdressed. (Si pulchra est, nimis ornata est.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 290. (c. 220 B. C.)

Its very lack of ornament is an ornament in itself, just as women were thought to have the best scent who used no scent. (Ut mulieres ideo bene olere, quia nihil olebant.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 1. (60 B. C.)

Lack of adornment is said to become some women. (Mulieres esse cunctur nonnullae inornatae.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Ch. 23, sec. 78. (55 B. C.)

How great is the power of beauty unadorned. (Heu quantum per se candida forma valet!)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 29, l. 30. (c. 24 B. C.)

Who seems most hideous when adorned the most (Che quant' era più ornata, era più brutta.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Can. xx, st. 116. (1532)

Those which trim up themselves least, are trimmed up best.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 35. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Nature abhors to borrow from the mart, Simplest fit beauty, fie on drugs and art.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Endymion and Phoebe. (1595)

Beauty when most unclothed is clothed best.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act ii, sc.4. (1631)

In naked beauty more adorn'd,

More lovely than Pandora.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 713. (1663)

Beauty unadorn'd.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt.ii,act iv,sc.2. (1681)

Loveliness

Needs not the foreign aid of ornament.

But is, when unadorned, adorned the most.

JAMES THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 204. (1730)

1 It is not beauty that beguiles men, it is men that beguile themselves. (Sê pu mi jên lèn tzū mi.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 193. (1872)

2 Beauty is no Inheritance.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 15. (1633) RAY. p. 2. (1670) FULLER, No. 951. (1732)

3 He hath made everything beautiful in his time. (Cuncta fecit bona in tempore suo.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 11. (c. 900 B.C.)

I have with Solomon concluded, Every thing is beautifull in his season.

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler. Ch. 5 (1653)

4 'Tis not beauty that witcheth bridegrooms, but nobleness. (οὐ τὸ κάλλος ἀλλ' ἀρεταὶ τερπνοὶ τοὺς ἐννέμετας.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 208. (c. 430 B.C.)

More precious in a woman is a virtuous heart than a face of beauty.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Onna Daigaku (Greater Learning for Women). Sec. 1. (c. 1660)

Too dear I prized a fair enchanting face

Beauty unchaste is beauty in disgrace.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 359. (1725)

Beauty in Women is like the Flowers in the Spring; but Virtue is like the Stars of Heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 949. (1732)

Beauty without Virtue is a Curse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 957.

5 Whatever pleases the heart appears fair to the eye.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. v, Apologue 1. (c. 1258)

Love built on beauty, soone as beauty, dies

JOHN DONNE, Elegies: The Anagram. (c. 1625)

Fair is not fair, but that which pleaseth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

When beauty fires the blood, how love exalts the mind!

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 41. (c. 1690)

Beauty, madame, pleases only the eyes; sweetness

charms the soul. (La beauté, madame, | Ne plait qu'aux yeux; la douceur charme l'âme.)

VOLTAIRE, Nanine. Act i, sc. 1. (1749)

6

Italia! oh Italia! thou who hast

The fatal gift of beauty.

(Italia! Italia! O tu cui feo la sorte, Dono infelice di bellezza.)

VICENZO DA FILICAJA, Italia. (c. 1673) Byron,

tr. Byron incorporates his translation in

Childe Harold, canto iv, sts. 42, 43. Longfellow also translated the sonnet.

Women's beauty, like men's wit, is generally fatal to the owners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Miscellaneous Works. Vol.

ii, p. 101. (c. 1770)

Your fatal gift of beauty forces men to discuss you.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

7

When Women cease to be handsome, they study to be good.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter, 25 June, 1745.

To an unknown young man. The Germans say, "Jedes Weib will lieber schön als fromm sein" (Every woman would rather be beautiful than good)

It is better to be beautiful than to be good, but it is better to be good than to be ugly.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray Ch.

17. (1891)

Women are wacky. Women are vain.

They'd rather be pretty than have a good brain

MARGARET FISHBACK, Lip Service (1940)

8

Beauty may have fair Leaves, yet bitter Fruit. Beauty will buy no Beef.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 955, 956. (1732)

9

I too, was beautiful, and that was my undoing (Schön war ich auch, und das war mein Verderben)

GOETHE, Faust Pt i, sc. 24. (1808)

10

Beauty and folly generally go hand in hand (Tanta suele ser la necedad, cuanto fuere la hermosura.)

BAITASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim 273 (1647)

Beauty and folly are old companions

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

Beauty and folly go often in company

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,

p. 180 (1856) An Italian proverb. The French say, "Beauté et folie vont souvent de compagnie," the Germans, "Beauty and folly are sisters"

11

There is no woman so deformed who hearing herself called bewtiful, believeth it not

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. I.

p. 86 (1574) Pettie, tr.

Tell a Woman she's a Beauty, and the Devil will tell her so ten Times.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 4326. (1732)

1 For the most parte pride and bewtye goe together. . . . The Poet shewd that, saying:

Her bewtie is so evenly matcht with pride,
That pleasing others cleane she set aside.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 10. (1574) Pettie, tr.

2 All things fair fit the fair. (τὰ καλὰ πάντα τῆς καλῆς ἀρμόζει.)

HERODAS, Mimes, vii, 115. (c. A. D. 100)

3 Sweete beauteie with soure beggery, naie I am gone

To the welthy wythered wydow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)

Fayre women without riches fynde more Lovers than Husbannes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 6. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Beautie without riches, goth a begging.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 295. (1580)

A poor beauty finds more lovers than husbands

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 483 (1640)

All heireses are beautiful.

JOHN DRYDEN, King Arthur. Act i, sc. 1. (1691)

No woman can be a beauty without a fortune.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act ii, sc. 2 (1707)

Beauties without Fortunes, have Sweethearts plenty, but Husbans none at all

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 958. (1732)

Beauty is Potent, but Money is more Potent

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 952.

Beauty is potent, but money is omnipotent

H. G. BOHS, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 122 (1855) The French say, "Amour fait moult, argent fait tout" (Love does much, money does all)

4 Godlike Ganymedes, born fairest of mortal men. (ἀρτίθεος Γανυμήδης, ὅς ἐστι καλλίστος γένετο θεῶν ἀνθρώπων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 232. (c. 850 B.C.)

She fair, divinely fair, fit Love for gods

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 489 (1605)

Matchless Ganymed, divinely fair

POPE, tr., The Iliad. xx, 278. (1720)

A daughter of the gods, divinely tall,

And most divinely fair

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 87. (1832)

5 If thou art indeed a mortal, thrice-blessed are thy father and thy mother. . . . But he is blessed in heart above all others, who shall prevail with his gifts of wooing and lead thee to his home. (καίρος δ' αὖ περὶ ἀγῆρι μακάρτατος ἔρχομαι ἄλλων, ὅς ἐκ σ' ἑδραίοισι βρίσας οἰκίδ' ἀγάγηται.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 158. (c. 850 B.C.)

Ulysses to Nausicaa.

Happy the parents of so fair a child;

Happier the man, whom favourable stars

Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv. 5. 39 (1594) Katharina to Vincentio.

6 Thou hast not wits to match thy beauty. (οὐκ ἔρα σοὶ γ' ἐπὶ εἰδεῖ καὶ φρένες ἦσαν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 454. (c. 850 B.C.)

Beautiful and dumb. (Pulchra et fatua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 22. (c. 350 B.C.)

O that beauty should be so brainless! (Quanta species cerebrum non habet!)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 7, l. 2. (25 B.C.)

Rare is the mixture of beauty with wisdom (Raram fecit mixturam cum sapientia forma.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 94, l. 2. (c. A. D. 60)

Princes and fair women—the less they speak the more they say.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373. (1938)

Beautiful but a trifle dumb.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Vol. 2, p. 98. (1941)

7 She's better than she's bonny.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 298. (1721)

This mode of expressing that the worth of a handsome woman outweighs even her beauty has a very Scottish character: "She's better than she's bonny."

DEAN EDWARD RAMSAY, Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character, v. 193. (1857)

She's the loveliest girl in the county, and better than she's bonny.

CHARLES READE, Perilous Secret. Ch. 13. (1833)

8 There are few women whose value survives their beauty. (Il y a peu de femmes dont le mérite dure plus que la beauté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 474. (1665)

It is worth nothing to be young without being beautiful, nor to be beautiful without being young. (Il ne sert de rien d'être jeune sans être belle, ni d'être belle sans être jeune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 497

9 Beute saunz bounte, blessed was hit neuere

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xviii, l. 163. (1362)

Kindness is worth more than beauty. (Bonté vault mieux que beaulté.)

JEAN D'ARRAS, Melusine. (c. 1390) A later French proverb (c. 1498) is, "Beauté sans bonté ne vaut rien" (Beauty without bounty is worth nothing). Another form is, "Goodness and bounty is better than fairness and beauty."

Bounty before beauteie is alway to be preferred

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 175. (1575)

10 When the world speaks of beauty as being beautiful, ugliness is at once defined. (T'ien hia' chié chi 'méi chi wei méi psü wu' 'i.)

LAO-TSE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 2. (c. 550 B.C.) Old. tr.

Commend not a man for his beauty, nor abhor him for his ugliness. (Non laudes virum in specie sua, neque spernas hominem in visu suo.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xi, 2. (c. 190 B.C.)

More sweet from beauty's mouth the onion's fume Than roses from the hand of ugliness.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 6, Apologue 2. (c. 1258)

1 This gallant girle more faire then fortunate, and yet more fortunate then faithful.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 51. (1579)

Rosy faces mostly have poor luck. ('Hung yen to po ming.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 179. (1872)

2 As the Adamant draweth the heaue yron, the Harpe the fleete Dolphin, so beautie allureth the chast minde to loue, and the wisest witte to lust.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 66. (1579)

Ah beautie, such is thy force, that Vulcan courteth Venus, she for comlinessse a Goddessse, he for vglinesse a diuell.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and his England, p. 314.
O how can beautie maister the most strong!

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i.
canto iii. st. 6. (1589)

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade

The eyes of men without an orator

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 29 (1594)

All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 268

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i. 3, 111. (1592)

Ajax may rout a phalanx, but beauty shall en-slave him single-handed

M. F. TUPPER, *Proverbial Philosophy: Of
Beauty* (1839)

3 As neere is Fancie to Beautie, as the pricke to the Rose, as the stalke to the rynde, as the earth to the roote.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 313. (1580)

Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,

Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, ii, 1, 15
(1595)

Beauty, like supreme dominion,

Is but supported by opinion.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

Beauty in things exists merely in the mind which contemplates them.

DAVID HUME, Essays Moral and Political, p. 22.
(1742)

There is no worth nor beauty but in the mind's idea.

T. L. PEACOCK, Nightmare Abbey. Ch. 11. (1818)

Beauty is where it is perceived.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 16 Dec., 1840.

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder.

MRS. MARGARET HUNGERFORD, Molly Bawn. Ch.
12. (1878)

Beauty is altogether in the eye of the beholder.

LEW WALLACE, The Prince of India. Bk. iii, ch
6. (1893)

Appearances are deceptive. A pack-saddle, like beauty, may exist only in the eye of the beholder

O. HENRY, Buried Treasure. (1909)

Loveliness may possibly be in the eye of the individual.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street,
a. 43. (1940)

4 In bed, beauty before goodness. (Au lict, la beaulté avant la bonté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580)

5 Beauty when unused grows old. (Forma . . . nullo exercente senescit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 53. (c. 13 B.C.)

Its use is lacking when a lovely face has none to see it. (Fructus abest, facies cum bona teste caret.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 398. (c. 1 B.C.)

Fair ladies mask'd are roses in their bud.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 295.
(1594)

Beauty is natures covn, must not be hoorded.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 739. (1634)

6 To the hearts of girls dear is their own beauty.
(Virginibus cordi grataque forma sua est.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 32. (c. 1 B.C.)

Even to virgins their beauty is a care and a delight. (Virginibus curae grataque forma sua est.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 624. (c. 1 B.C.)

7 Great is the strife between beauty and modesty. (Lis est cum forma magna pudicitiae.)

OVID, Heroides. Eleg. xvi, l. 290. (c. 10 B.C.)

Rare is the union of beauty and modesty. (Rara est adeo concordia formae atque pudicitiae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 297. (c. A.D. 120)

Rarely do great beauty and great virtue dwell at the same hearth. (Raro admodum forma, insignis, honestasque uno sub lae habitant.)

PETRARCH, De Remedii. Bk. ii. (c. 1350)

It is a matter almost impossible, and sieldom scene, that those two great enemies, bewty and honesty agree together

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii.
p. 10. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As the Poet sayth: "A woman voyd of honesty, can make no brags of bewty"

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 79

How rare a thing it is to match virginittie with beautie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 454. (1580)

Beawtie and honesty seldome agree

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 193. (1591)

There is many a fair thing full false.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595)

8 Don't strain or gnaw at the tight-drawn meshes. (Ne trepidare velis atque artos rodere casses!)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 170. (c. A.D. 58) Dryden's rendering is, "She knows her man, and when you rant and swear, I Can draw you to her with a single hair."

I am hanging on a hair and must ever follow where my mistress chooses to drag me. (ἀπὸ τριχὸς ἡγήθημαι, | δεσπότις ἐνθ' ὁρῶσα, πρὸς μετὰλκόμενος.)

PAULUS SILENTIARIUS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 540)

See Greek Anthology, Bk. v, No. 230. The epigram relates how Doris pulled a hair from her golden head and bound the poet's hands. At first he laughed, thinking he could easily free himself, but found he was held tight, as by a galling iron.

The ringlets of beauty are the fetters of reason, and a snare to the bird of intelligence.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 33. (c. 1258)

Ten teemes of oxen draw much lesse Than doth one haire of Helens tresse.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 183. (1591)

No cord nor cable can so forcibly draw, or hold so fast, as love can do with a twined thread.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. i, subs. 2. (1621)

Beauty draws more than oxen.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 687.

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 948. (1732)

One hair of a woman can draw more than a hundred pair of oxen.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. ii, No. 4. (1637)

Fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare,

And beauty draws us with a single hair.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock, ii, 27. (1712)

From that luckless hour my tyrant fair.

Has led and turn'd me by a single hair

ROBERT BIAN, Anthology, p. 20. (1813)

Not ten yoke of oxen Have the power to draw us Like a woman's hair!

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Saga of King Olaf.

Pt. xvi, st. 23. (1860)

Beauty draws with a single hair if it's blonde enough.

MANNING COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 282. (1942)

1 There is no beauty where there is disorder. (καλὸν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἐν ἀταξίᾳ)

PHILO, De Opificio Mundi. Sec. 28. (c. A. D. 40)

Beauty from order springs

WILLIAM KING, The Art of Cookery, 155 (1708)

2 Whatever is useful shall be for us beautiful. (ταῦτο γὰρ δὴ ἴστω ἡμῖν καλόν, ὃ ἂν χρήσιμον ᾖ.)

PLATO, Greater Hippias. Sec. 295C. (c. 375 B. C.)

The beautiful is as useful as the useful. More so, perhaps. (Le beau est aussi utile que l'utile. . . . Plus peut être.)

VICTOR HUGO, Les Misérables: Fantine. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1862) BETHAM-EDWARDS, Heart of the Vosges: Montauban, quotes Hugo as having written, "Ici-bas le joli c'est le nécessaire" (Here below the beautiful is the useful), probably paraphrasing what he actually wrote.

The beautiful rests on the foundation of the necessary.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: The Poet. (1844)

Beauty rests on necessities. The line of beauty is the line of perfect economy.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty. (1860)

3 Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain. (Fallax gratia, et vana est pulchritudo.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 30. (c. 350 B. C.)

Scandal has ever been the doom of beauty. (Semper formosus fabula poena fuit.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 32, l. 26. (c. 24 B. C.)

In beauty, faults conspicuous grow:

The smallest speck is seen on snow.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Peacock, Turkey and Goose. (1727)

Beauty is the Subject of a Blemish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 954. (1732)

4 She who is over fond of being thought beautiful refuses no one. (Quae vult videri bella nimis, nulli negat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 584. (c. 43 B. C.)

Beauty's elixir vitae, praise.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:

Bk. ii, Prologue. (1862)

5 It is said that scarcely ever shall one see a fair woman who is not also stubborn. (L'on dict bien que à grand peine veit on jamais femme belle, qui aussi ne feust rebelle.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 21. (1532)

An intolerable thing in nature when a beautiful face is lacking to a willing tail. (Chose est en nature intolerable, quant beauté faut à cul de bonne volonté.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 20. (1552)

6 That's the beauty of it; to offend and make up at pleasure.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison

Bk. iii, let. 18. (1754)

7 He that is fair is fair to outward show;

He that is good will soon be fair also.

(ὁ μὲν γὰρ κάλος <εἰς κάλος> ὁσὸν ἴδην πέλει, ὁ δὲ ἀγαθὸς αὐτίκα καὶ κάλος ἐσσεταί.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 58. (c. 630 B. C.)

Quoted by GAIEN, Exhortation to Learning.

8. See EDMONDS, Lvra Graeca, i, 225. There is a somewhat similar Latin proverb, "Non id quod magnum est, pulchrum est, sed id quod pulchrum, magnum" (Not that which is great is beautiful, but that which is beautiful is great). And the Greeks used τὸ καλόν, "The noble, the beautiful," as a proverbial phrase.

I am inclined to agree with the ancient proverb that the beautiful is dear. (τὸ καλὸν φίλον εἶναι.)

PLATO, Lyric. Sec. 216C. (c. 380 B. C.) Jowett renders it, "The good is the beautiful"

Since a thing is good, it is beautiful; if it is beautiful, therefore it is good. (εἰ καὶ γὰρ ἴστω ἀγαθόν, καλόν ἐστιν; ἐστὶ δὲ καλόν; ἀγαθόν ἀρα ἴστω.)

CHRYSIPPUS, On the Morally Beautiful. (c. 230

B. C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, vii,

101, who credits the same sentiment also to

HECATO, On Goods, iii.

The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 184. (1604)

How near to good is what is fair!

BEN JONSON, Love Freed from Ignorance. (1616)

I have always believed that good is only beauty put into practice. (J'ai toujours cru que le bon n'était que le beau mis en action.)

ROUSSEAU, Nouvelle Héloïse. Pt. i, letter 12. (1760)

Beauty is the mark God sets upon virtue.

R. W. EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Beauty. (1849) In his essay on Michael Angelo, Emerson adds, "Beauty is the virtue of the body, as virtue is the beauty of the soul."

What a strange illusion it is to suppose that beauty is goodness.

LEO TOLSTOY, Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 5. (1890) He was brought up with the idea that to be beautiful was to make good.

O. HENRY, Next to Reading Matter. (1909)

1 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters. (Sicut lilium inter spinas, sic amica mea inter filias.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 2. (c. 900 B. C.)

Fairest among women. (Pulcherrima mulierum.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, v, 9.

She was ruddy through the perfection of her beauty. (Ipsa autem roseo colore vultum perfusa.)

Apocrypha: Esther, xv, 5. (c. 175 B. C.)

A surpassing beauty and in the bloom of youth. (Egredia forma atque aetate integra.)

TERENCE, Andria, I. 74. (166 B. C.)

Is she not passing fair?

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 4, 153. (1594)

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 46 (1595)

For her own person, | It beggar'd all description.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 202.

(1606) Of Cleopatra. Another of Shakespeare's phrases which has passed into the language. JONATHAN STAGGE, The Scarlet Circle, p. 214 (1943), for example has, "Their clothes beggared description."

She's all my fancy painted her, sir, that's what she is.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 7. (1841)

As lovely as a dream.

MARK TWAIN, Connecticut Yankee, p. 10. (1889)

The gal's pretty as a straight flush against four aces.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Puckarest Ballerina Murders, p. 99. (1940)

She's easy to look at.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 91. (1941)

2 Beauty takes the place of everything (La beauté tient lieu de tout.)

VAUVENARGES, Réflexions. No. 680. (1746)

3 More winsome is virtue coming in a fair body. (Gratior et pulchro veniens in corpore virtus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 344. (19 B. C.) La Fontaine puts the line into French: "La beauté rend toujours la vertu plus aimable" (Beauty always renders virtue more winsome).

III—Beauty Is but Skin Deep

4 All the carnall beauty of my wife

Is but skin-deep, but to two senses known.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 16. (a. 1613)

Beauty's but skin-deepe.

JOHN DAVIES OF HEREFORD, A Select Second Husband for Sir Thomas Overburie's Wife. St. 13. (1616)

Nor any of our sex ought to think skin-deep beauty as great a blessing, as 'tis an applauded one.

ROBERT BOYLE, The Martyrdom of Theodora, iv, 49. (1677)

Beauty that's only skin deep

Must fade like the gowans of May.

ALLAN RAMSAY, The Gentle Shepherd, iv, ii. (1725)

Beauty is but skin deep, as the saying is.

GEORGE LILLO, Silvia. Act i, sc. 9. (1730)

Beauty is but Skin deep; within is Filth and Pufftrefaction.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 950. (1732)

Beauty is but . . . a mere skin-deep perfection.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela. Bk i, ch. 99. (1740)

The less favoured part of the sex say, that "beauty is but skin deep"; . . . but it is very agreeable, though, for all that.

COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 3. (1829)

I always say beauty is only sin deep.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald's Choir Treat (1904)

5 A very common proverb on the lips of the Midland pessimist is: "Beauty's only skin-deep, but ugly goes to the bone."

A. B. EVANS, Leicestershire Words, p. 101 (1881) There is an old jingle which runs,

"Beauty is but skin deep, ugly lies the bone,
| Beauty dies and fades away, but ugly holds its own."

6 The saying that beauty is but skin deep is a skin deep saying.

HERBERT SPENCER, Personal Beauty. (1863)

7 What is beauty save a little skin, well colored? (Quid forma est, nempe cuticula bene colorata?)

LUDOVICUS VIVES, Works: Introduction. Vol. ii, p. 61. (1555)

Beauty of face is a frail ornament,

A thing belonging only to the skin.

(La beauté du visage est un frêle ornement, . . . Et qui n'est attaché qu'à la simple épiderme.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 19. (1672)

IV—Beauty: Its Transitoriness

8 Beauty is as Summer-Fruits, which are easie to corrupt, and cannot last.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty. (1612)

Beauty is soon blasted.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 953. (1732)

9 Beauty is a fading flower. (Flori decidenti.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 1. (c. 725 B. C.)

Fairest blossoms are soonest hipped with frost

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;

A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly;

A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.
SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, l.
169. (1599)

Beauty's a flower.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 57. (1599)

Beauty is but a flower,
Which wrinkles will devour.
THOMAS NASHE, Summer's Last Will and Testament, l. 600. (1600)

Beauty . . . Whose action is no stronger than a flower.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet lxxv. (1609)

Beauty is but a blossom.
THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 15. (1616)

Beauty's a Blossom.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 947. (1732)

What's beauty?—Call ye that your own,
A flow'r that fades as soon as blown!
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

1
Beautie is such a thing as we commonly preferre before all things, yet it fadeth before we perceiue it to florish.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues and His Ephoebus (Ar-ber), p. 135. (1579)

2
A fragile gift is beauty. (Forma bonum fragile est.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 113. (c. 1 B.C.)

Trust little to treacherous beauty. (Fallaci timide confide figurae.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 143.

3
Beauty faded has no second spring.

AMBROSE PHILLIPS, Pastoral. (1710)

4
Is not beauty but for a day, withering before it flowers? (οὐ κάλλος μὲν ἐφήμερον, πρὶν ἀνθῆσαι παραιρούμενον.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 130. (c. A.D. 40)

5
O Beauty, doubtful boon to mortals, brief gift for but a little time, how swiftly on quick foot, you slip away! (Anceps forma bonum mortalibus | exigui donum breve temporis, | ut velox celeri pede laberis!)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 761. (c. A.D. 60)

Beauty is a fleeting thing. (Res est forma fugax.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 773.

6
Beauty is a short-lived reign. (ὀλιγοχρόνιον τι παρέρχεται.)

SOCRATES, Apothegm. (c. 425 B.C.) See DIOGE-
NES LAERTIUS, v, 19.

Nothing is more pleasing than beauty, but nothing shorter-lived. (Nec gratius quicquam decore nec brevius.)

SUETONIUS, Lives: Domitian. Ch. 18. (A.D. 120)

7
Oh Peter! Beauty's but a Varnish,
Which Time and Accidents will tarnish
SWIFT, Cassius and Peter, l. 51. (1731)

8
The snake sheds its skin and is young, but the Fates grant no respite to beauty. (Serpens
novus exuit annos: | formae non ullam fata dedere moram.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. iv, l. 35. (19 B.C.)

BED

9 Beds to charm away fatigue. (πόνων θελκτικὰ στρωμνῇ.)

AESCHYLUS, The Libation-Bearers, l. 670. (c.
458 B.C.)

My bed shall comfort me. (Consolabitur me lectulus meus.)

(Old Testament: Job, vii, 13. (c. 350 B.C.))

Long living warme in bed is holsome (quoth shee)
While the leg warmeth, the boote harmeth (quoth hee).

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
The Italians say, "El leto è una medicina" (Bed is a medicine); the French, "Le lit est une bonne chose; Si l'on n'y dort, on y repose" (Bed is a good thing; if one doesn't sleep there, one rests).

10
All are nat in bed whiche shall haue yll rest.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folly, i, 13.
(1509)

They be nat all in bedde yet that shall have yvell rest to nyght.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p.
422. (1530)

But take vp in time, or els I protest,
All be not a bedde, that shall haue yll rest.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

11
You rose on the wrong side of the bed today
RICHARD BROME, The Court-Beggar. Act ii
(1653)

You got up on the wrong side this morning.
UNKNOWN, A Marvellous Love Story, i, 167
(1801)

Miss had got out of bed the wrong side.
HENRY KINGSLEY, Silcote of Silcotes. Ch. 11
(1867) See also under OMEN.

Someone got out of bed on the wrong side this morning!

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 32. (1941)

12
There is no economy in going to bed early to save candles if the result is twins.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 358. (1938)

A Chinese proverb—an early confirmation of Mussolini's contention that electric light lowers the birth rate and should not be permitted in peasant homes.

13
Would you have a settled head,

You must early go to bed;

I tell you, and I tell 't again,

You must be in bed at ten.

NICHOLAS CULPEPPER, as quoted by SWIFT,
Letter to Stella, 19 Jan., 1710.

'Tis time for honest folk to be a-bed.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

The people around there seemed to go to bed with the chickens.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 57. (1940)

EARLY TO BED AND EARLY TO RISE, see under RISING.

<sup>1</sup> Last in the bed, best heard.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)

Last in bed to put out the light.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 27. (1902)

<sup>2</sup> Laith to the bed, laith out of the bed.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)

Loth to bed and loth out of it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 237. (1721)

<sup>3</sup> You play manifestly with us the lewd part of Procrustes, the thievish host, which would make his guests' stature equal with his bed's, either by stretching them out, if they were too short, or cutting off their legs, if they were too long.

WILLIAM FULKE, A Defence of the English Version of the Bible, i. (1563)

Thou dost imitate Scyron and Procrustes, who, framing a bed of brass to their own bignes, caused it to be placed as a lodging for all passengers: . . . if he were to long for ye bed, they cut off his legs for catching cold, it was no place for a longis; if to short they racked him at length, it was no pallet for a dwarf.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 325. (1580)

Procrustes shall never be my hero of legislation; with his iron bed, Such was the state-bed of uniformity.

EDMUND BURKE, Observations on the Present State of the Nation. (1769)

<sup>4</sup> How true this saying is: The bed is like a painfull field of battaile and of warre.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 207. (1574) Young, tr.

There's an old saying that it's more fun to bounce in an old bed.

JAMES GUNN, Deadlier than the Male, p. 56 (1942)

<sup>5</sup> Lett them . . . go to there bedd, as themselves shall make it.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 88. (c. 1590)

He that makes his bed ill, lies there.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 342. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1670)

As you make your bed, so you lie down.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 16. (1721)
"According to your conditions you have your bargain." FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 753 (1732)

He that makes his Bed ill, must be contented to lie ill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2233. (1732)
She could not prevent her—'twas no use trying it; Oh no—she has made her own bed, and must lie in it.

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: Aunt Fanny. (1842)

As he has made his bed, so he must lie upon it.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 10. (1857)

You make your bed and you must lie on it.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1865)
See also "Bleak House," ch. 55.

As you make your bed, you must lie on it.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 484. (1872)

"You have made your bed," says the proverb, . . . "lie upon it."

D. C. MURRAY, Joseph's Coat. Ch. 30. (1881)

As thou makest thy bed, so wilt thou sleep.

HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ, With Fire and Sword. Ch. 16. (1890) Curtin, tr.

If you make your bed, you must lie on it, particularly if it's a marriage-bed.

JAMES HILTON, Was It Murder? Ch. 4. (1933)

One can almost hear the formula, "She has made her bed, now let her lie on it."

S. H. ADAMS, Incredible Era, p. 20. (1939)

Adams is describing the attitude of Amos Kling toward his daughter Florence, after her marriage to Warren G. Harding.

As you made your apple-pie bed, so you must lie on it. Or about it, as the case may be.

NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 243. (1940)

A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Comme on fait son lit, on se couche"; the Germans, "Wie man sich bettet, so schläft man"; the Danes, "Som man reder til saa ligger man" The Spanish form is a little different, "Quien mala cama hace, en ella se yace" (He who makes his bed badly must lie on it) See also under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>6</sup> And so to bed. Pray wish us all good rest

HERRICK, Epitaph on Sir Edward Giles (1648)

And so to bed

SAMUEL PEPEY, Diary, 2 Jan., 1659, 22 July, 1660, and elsewhere, "with the connotation of a jocular 'so that's that' or of satisfaction with a pleasant evening or a well-filled day."
—ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés.

<sup>7</sup> Tyl meate fall in your mouth, will ye ly in bed?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

He that lies long abed, his estate feels it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 181. (1640) MURPHY, The Citizen. Act 1, sc. 2. (1763)

He sits up by Moon-shine, and lies abed in Sun-shine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2021. (1732)
Let not the sun look down and say, "Inglorious here he lies."

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758

<sup>8</sup> I must warme bed for him should warme it for mee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

<sup>9</sup> It semeth ye wolde make me go to bed at noone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

I'll go to bed at noon.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 6, 92. (1605)

<sup>1</sup> Alcinous lay down in the inmost chamber of the lofty house, and beside him lay the lady his wife, who had strewn the couch. (Ἀλκίνοος δ' ἄρα λέκτρο μυχῷ δόμου ὑψηλοῖο, | παρ δὲ γυνὴ δέσποινα λέχος πόρπυε καὶ εὐνήν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 346. (c. 850 B.C.)
The characteristic touch with which Homer ends several books of The Odyssey. The French say, "Faute de mieux, on couche avec sa femme" (For want of something better, one sleeps with one's wife), of which the English equivalent is perhaps, "He sought his virtuous couch."

<sup>2</sup> Stretching and yawning leadeth to bed.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)
Stretching and gaunting [yawning] bodes sleep to be wanting.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 293. (1721)
The Yorubas say, "If stretching were wealth, the cat would be rich."

<sup>3</sup> He is strongest in bed. (Hic erit in lecto fortissimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. vi, l. 0 25. (c. A.D. 120)
Ramsay translates this, "He is a valiant mattress-knight."

You rise to play and go to bed to work.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 1, 116. (1605)

<sup>4</sup> They used not onely one boorde but one bed.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 50. (1579)
The Latin phrase is "Mensa et thoro" (From board and bed). The earliest use of the phrase noted by O.E.D. is in the York Manual (c. 1405) where it is included in a form of the marriage service. It means of course lodging and food, the full connubial rights of a wife.

No God shall crown the Board, nor Goddess bless the bed.

DRYDEN, tr., Eclogues of Vergil, iv, 78. (1697)

<sup>5</sup> Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk. (ἔγειρε [καὶ] ἄρον τὸν κράββαττόν σου καὶ περιπάτει.)

New Testament: Mark, ii, 9. (c. A.D. 55)
Christ to the man stricken with palsy. The Vulgate is, "Surge, tolle grabatum tuum, et ambula." See also Matthew, ix, 6; John v, 11.

<sup>6</sup> Woe to them that work evil upon their beds. (Vae qui . . . operamini malum in cubilibus vestris.)

Old Testament: Micah, ii, 1. (c. 725 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> The bed is the best rendezvous of mankind, and the most necessary ornament of a chamber. . . . If the bed should speake all it knowes, it would put many to the blush.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, News from the Bed. (1613)

If a bed would tell all it knows, it would put many to the blush.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2702. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> He is in the cloth-market.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235. (1678)
In bed.

You are but just come out of the cloth-market.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> I would 'twere bed-time. Hal, and all well
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 1, 125. (1597)

Boys to bed, dogs to doors, and maidens to clean up the ashes.

J. THOMAS, Randigal Rhymes, p. 60. (1895)

<sup>10</sup> Go to bed now, being two hours to day.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 303. (1597)

Goes, with the fashionable owls, to bed.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 210. (1725)

Whoever thinks of going to bed before twelve o'clock is a scoundrel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies, ii, 19. (1772)

No civilized person ever goes to bed the same day he gets up.

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, Gallegher (1890)

<sup>11</sup> The lorde lay for to slepe in his naked bed.
UNKNOWN, The Destruction of Troy, l. 13803. (c. 1400)

I in my naked bedde was leyd.

STEPHEN HAWES, The Example of Virtue, i, vii. (1503)

What out-cries pluck me from my naked bed?

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act ii. sc. 5. (1592)

I had never lien in naked bed since I came from Venice.

FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary, i, 242. (1617)

I went for the first time into a naked bed, only my drawers on; and did sleep pretty well.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 7 Sept., 1666.

This young lady went into her naked bed in her cabbin.

THOMAS AMORY, The Life of John Bunce, i, 94. (1756)

What! go to your naked bed in the middle of the ocean!

MRS. MARY GORDON, Life of Brewster, p. 297. (1870)

Naked bed, orig. used with reference to the custom of sleeping entirely naked; in later use denoting the removal of the ordinary wearing apparel.

Oxford English Dictionary: Bed, vii, 10/1.

BEDLAM

<sup>12</sup> If she chaunce to see me at a vew,
Kysse any of my maydes alone, but in sporte.
That taketh she in earnest, after Bedlem sorte

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
Bedlam, the Hospital of St. Mary of Bethlehem, in London, founded as a priory in 1247, and converted into a hospital for lunatics in 1402.

To Bedlam with him! Is the man grown mad?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v, 1, 131. (1590)

What's here? Kent Street, or bedlam broke loose?

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, News from Plymouth. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1635)

I stept into Bedlam, where I saw several poor miserable creatures in chains.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 21 April, 1657.

Babylon in ruins is not so melancholy a spectacle.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 421. (1712)

Our house is a sort of Bedlam, and nothing in order.

UNKNOWN, The Guardian. No. 132. (1713)

All this was a Donnybrook Bedlam.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets, viii, 276. (1850)

1 Lyke Iacke of Bedlem in and out whipping.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams, p. 107. (1562) Jack or Tom of Bedlam, a mad-man.

With a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 2, 148. (1605)

BEE

See also Amber, Honey

2 The bee is little among such as fly; but her fruit is the chief of sweet things (Brevis in volatilibus est apis, et initium dulcoris habet fructus illius.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 3. (c. 190 B.C.)

3 Lyk a bisy bee. with-ouen gyle

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Seconde Nonnes Tale, l. 195. (c. 1389)

How doth the little busy bee

Improve each shining hour,

And gather honey all the day

From ev'ry opening flow'r.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Idleness. (1715)

The busy bee has no time for sorrow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

From Beavers, Bees should learn to mend their ways:

A Bee just Works; a Beaver Works and Plays.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 31. (1924)

BUSY AS A BEE, see under BUSYNESS.

4 For never yet so thikke a swarm of been

Ne fleigh, as Grekes fro him gonne fleen

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde Bk. ii, l. 193. (c. 1380)

A thikke as been fien from an hyve

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 1356

They murmureden as dooth a swarm of been

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Squires Tale, l. 196. (c. 1388)

Folkerling bees with basons.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

It being a proverb, that a swarm of bees in May is worth a cow and a bottle of hay, whereas a swarm in July is not worth a fly.

UNKNOWN, Reformed Commonwealth of Bees, 26. (1655)

A swarm of bees in May is worth a load of hay, But a swarm in July is not worth a fly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1670)

A May's swarm is worth a mare's foal.

WILLIAM LAWSON, A New Orchard and Garden, p. 77. (1676)

A swarm of bees in May Is worth a load of hay,

A swarm of bees in June Is worth a silver spoon;

A swarm of bees in July Is not worth a fly.

London Times, 7 Oct., 1921. Quoted as "an old rhyme."

5 The bee is more honored than other animals, not because she labors, but because she labors for others.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Homilies No. xii. (c. 388)

Mighty po' bee dat don't make mo' honey dan he want.

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

6 A wise bee sips not a fallen flower. ('Hao fêng pu 'tsai lo ti 'hua.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 185. (1872) Said of one whose aims are high

7 Quhat bern thou on bed with heid full of beis?

GAVIN DOUGLAS, Aeneis, Bk. viii, Prologue (1513) Full of cares or fancies.

Their hartes full heauy, their heades be full of bees

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Who so hath suche bees as your maister in hys head?

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act i, sc. 4. (c. 1553)

Ye must perdonne my wyttes, for I tell you plaine,

I have a hive of humble bees swarmynge in my braine.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act i, sc. 1. (1553)

About he flees.

As though his hed wear full of bees.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, p. 55. (1575)

His head is full of bees.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (c. 1595) With a note "of drunkards," a meaning which is repeated in FRANKLIN, Drinker's Dictionary. (1745)

He has a head full of bees!

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair Act i. (1614)

Sure he has a ged-bee in his brain.

APHRA BEHN, The False Count. Act ii, sc. 3. (1682)

8 Where bees are there is honey.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 77. (1633)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5636. (1732) RAY (Proverbs, p. 60) adds, "Where there are industrious persons there is wealth, for the hand of the diligent maketh rich."

He was the bee that made the honey.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 128. (1721)

9 A dead Bee, wil make no hony. (Ape morta, non fa mele.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

A dead bee will make no honey;
But from dead bees it's had for money.
JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. No. 227.
(1611)

When bees are old they yield no honey.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 146. (1633)

A dead bee maketh no honey.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1096. (1640)

Old Bees yield no Honey.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3706. (1732)

1
Good Bees never turn to Drones.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1702. (1732)

2
The Bee, from her Industry in the Summer, eats Honey all the Winter.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4405. (1732)

3
Hit takes a bee fer ter git de sweetness out'n de hoar-houn' blossom.
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

While Honey lies in every Flower, no doubt,
It takes a Bee to get the Honey out.
GUTTERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 13. (1924)

4
Ther is matter of poison to the spider where would be matter of honi to the bee.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 25. (1573)

Ther frequented to his lodging, as well the Spider to sucke poyson of his fine wit, as the Bee to gather Hunny.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 35. (1579)

A flower, where men, like bees and spiders, may Bear poison, or else sweets and wax away.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *Four Plays: The
Triumph of Honour*. (c. 1614)

Where the bee sucks honey, the spider sucks poison
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 123. (1633)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5661. (1732)

The bee and the serpent often sip from the self-same flower. (L'ape e la serpe spesso Suggon l'istesso umore.)
METASTASIO, Morte d'Abele. Pt. i. (c. 1734)

5
Ah woe is me, woe, woe is me,
Alack and welladay!
For pitty, Sir, find out thet Bee,
Which bore my Love away.
I'll seek him in your Bonnet brave.
ROBERT HERRICK, The Mad Maids Song. (1648)

A Scripturest thou proves, as he was,
In whose fool bonnet case a bee was.
SAMUEL COLVIL, Whiggs Supplication. Pt. ii.
49. (1681)

There is a bee in their bonnet.
WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 23. (1821)

I . . . began to question whether Taffy's master might not have had a bee in his bonnet.
DAVID MOIR, The Life of Mansie Waugh. Ch.
24. (1824)

He may have a bee in his bonnet, but he is not a hypocrite.
CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth
Ch. 97. (1860) Reade repeats the phrase in Hard Cash, ch. 40. (1863)

What mare's nest, what bee in the bonnet was this?
S. J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 32. (1922)

Somebody had put a bee in his ear.
KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past,
p. 152. (1940)

It's the old bee still buzzing in the old bonnet.
DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p.
44. (1942)

Don't get that bee in your bonnet, old boy.
AGATHA CHRISTIE, Murder in Retrospect, p. 17.
(1942) O.E.D. explains that "to have a bee in one's bonnet" means to have a fantasy, an eccentric whim, a craze on some point, a
"screw loose." PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés, says it means "to be a crank about something. A bee, so placed, excites and flus-ters a person."

6
A bee was never caught in a shower.
RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, 146. (1893)

For other weather proverbs about bees see INWARDS.

7
That which is not good for the swarm, neither is it good for the bee. (τὸ τῷ σμήρει μὴ σιμώρον οὐδὲ τῇ μελίσση σιμώρει.)
MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vi, sec. 54.
(c. A. D. 174)

No matter how you seem to fatten on a crime, that can never be good for the bee which is bad for the hive.
R. W. EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: The Sovereignty of Ethics (1849)
The proverb is sometimes put the other way:
"What's good for the bee is good for the hive."

8
A bee-line, or, in other words, a straight line
E. A. POE, The Gold-Bug. (1843)

He started off in a bee line, a waving and sinuous line right and left.
H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 30 Sept. 1852

There are ever appearing in the world men who, almost as soon as they are born, take a bee-line to the rack of the inquisition, the axe of the tyrant.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage. (1870)

II—Bee: Its sting

9
Wise Nature has combined in the bee the sweetness of its honey with the sharpness of its sting. (Providencia juntó la naturaleza acudida la dulzura de la miel con lo picante del aguijon en le abeja.)
BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim
54. (1647)

10
They had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails. (Aculei erant in caudis earum.)
New Testament: Revelation, ix, 10. (c. A. D. 90)

Favel farith ryght even as dothe the be;
Hony-mouthed, full of swetnys is she.
But loke behynde and ware ye fro hir stonge
UNKNOWN, Passé Forth, Pilgrime. (c. 1440)

He beginneth in manner of a Scorpion to sting you with his tayle, in speaking yll of you.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 69. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The Bee that hath honey in hir mouth, hath a sting in hir tayle.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 79. (1579)

Who knows not where a wasp does wear his Sting? In his tail.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 214. (1593) The French say, "À la queue git le venin" (The poison lies in the tail).

Youthful lusts and worldly delights . . . carry honey in their mouths, but they have a sting in their tails.

WILLIAM SECKER, Sermons, i, 22. (1660)

Bees that have Honey in their Mouths, have Stings in their Tails.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 959. (1732)

HONEY IS SWEET BUT THE BEE STINGS, see under HONEY.

1 Some say the bee stings: but I say, 'tis the bee's wax.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 88. (1590)

2 Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdued in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc 10, l. 42. (1601) The bee dies when he loses his sting.

3 He is not worthy of the honey-comb
Who shuns the hives because the bees have stings.

UNKNOWN, Locrine. Act iii, sc. 2. (1595) One of the spurious plays attributed to Shakespeare.

BEEF

4 There's nothing picturesque in beef.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xiv. (1812)

5 Waiter! raw beefsteak for the gentleman's eye,—nothing like raw beefsteak for a bruise, sir; cold lamp-post very good, but lamp-post inconvenient.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1836)

6 Oh! the roast beef of England,
And Old England's roast beef.

HENRY FIELDING, The Grub-street Opera. Act iii, sc. 2. (1731)

7 A Sir-loyne of beef was set before Him (so knighted, saith tradition, by this King Henry) [VIII].

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Pt. vi, ch. 2, p. 299. (1655)

Miss Notable: But pray, why is it called a sirloin? Lord Smart: Why you must know, that our king James I., who loved good eating, being invited to dinner by one of his nobles, and seeing a large loin of beef at his table, he drew out his sword, and in a frolic knighted it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

"For its merit, I will knight it and make it Sirloin," is also attributed to Charles II, on being told that a piece of beef which particularly pleased him was called the loin—a humorous invention, for the word is derived from sur-loin, the upper part of the loin.

One fat Sir Loin possesses more sublime
Than all the airy castles built by rhyme.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Bozzy and Piozzi. Pt. ii. (c. 1790)

8 What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 3, 23. (1594)

We had cakes, and powdered beef, and ale.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 29 May, 1662.

9 I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that does harm to my wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 89. (1599)

Sparkish: Beef is man's meat, my lord.

Smart: But, my lord, I say beef is the King of meat.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

BEER

See also Ale

10 Sit not in the beer-house

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. 24, l. 22. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

Give a hand to an old man when he is sated with beer

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live, 25, 8

11 A double glass o' the invariable

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 33. (1836)

12 Lay not a churle vpon a gentleman, drink not beere after wine

LEWIS EVANS, Whithals Dictionary Revised, sig. D7. (1586)

And after to drink beere, nor will nor can
He lay a churle vpon a gentleman.

JOHN TAYLOR, THE WATER-POET, Drinke and Welcome, l. 20. (1637)

I will never put the carle above the gentleman
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 186. (1721)
Refusing to drink ale after claret.

Smart: Will you taste a glass of October? [ale]
Never: No, faith, my lord; I like your wine, and won't put a churl vpon a gentleman.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Wine on beer never fear;

Beer on wine always decline.

(Wein auf bier, das rat' ich dir;

Bier auf Wein, das lass' sein.)

UNKNOWN. An old German jingle. However, there is another one which says, "Bier auf Wein, das schlecht fein" (Beer on wine that tastes fine).

Cider on beer is very good cheer,
But beer upon cider's a rider.

MARCHANT, Praise of Ale, p. 462. (1888)

<sup>1</sup> Malt is above wheate with him.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

What's better than the beer that's made of malt?

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

They may sit in the Chair, that have Malt to sell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4967. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> They who drink beer will think beer.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Sketch Book: Stratford.

(1818) Irving quotes this, without indicating its origin. It has been attributed to Bishop William Warburton, and has been parodied, "They who drink water will think water."

<sup>3</sup> Cannes of beer . . . fil'd with nick and froth.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, The Four Knaves, p. 48. (1600)

Nick and froth built the Pye at Aldgate.

UNKNOWN, New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. H7 "Nick and froth," a proverbial phrase for the tapster's trick of giving excessive froth. As the Germans say, "Schaum ist kein Bier" (Froth is not beer).

<sup>4</sup> Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii. 2, 7 (1598)
"Small beer weak beer; hence fig. trifling matters, small things" OED

By my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii. 2, 12 (1598)

She was a wight, if ever such wight were, . . .

To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii. 1, 159. (1605) "Two such chroniclers of small beer." The Academy, 25 Sept. 1880 Chroniclers of trifles

Col: Give me a glass of small beer, if it be good
Smart: Why, colonel, they say there is no such thing as good small beer, good brown bread, or a good old woman.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. ii. (1738)

Express her self-esteem by the popular phrase, that she did not "think small beer of herself."

THOMAS DE QUINCY, Style. (1840)

She had found that most worried men felt better if she chronicled small beer.

H. C. BAILEY, The Apprehensive Dog, p. 18. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> The employment by hands of boys and girls to fetch beer for them, or in other words to "rush the growler."

UNKNOWN, Article, N.Y. Herald, 29 July, 1888, p. 15/1.

He was one of the first to put down his share of the growler's contents.

H. PALMER, Stories of the Base Ball Field, p. 70. (1890)

At these visits the most frequently used utensil was the "can" or "growler."

OWEN KILDARE, My Mamie Rose, p. 24. (1903)

BEER AND SKITTLES, see under LIRE.

BEGGAR

See also Asking

<sup>6</sup> Vagrant rogues are neuer out of their way.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 120. (1629)

A beggar [is] never out of his way.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine.

Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1650)

Beggars are never out of their Way.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 965. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> It is better to die than to beg. (κρείσσον ἀποθανεῖν ἢ ἐπαίτεῖν.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus).

xl, 28. (c. 190 B. C.) The Vulgate is, "Melius est enim mori quam indigere."

Begging is sweet in the mouth of the shameless, but in his belly there shall burn a fire. (ἐν στόματι ἀναιδοῦς γλυκανθήσεται ἐπαίτησις, καὶ ἐν κοιλίᾳ αὐτοῦ πῦρ καήσεται.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xl, 30. The Vulgate is, "In ore imprudentis condulcabitur inopia, et in ventre eius ignis ardebit."

It is better to die in indigence than to expose one's wants to another.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 3, Apologue 3. (c. 1258)

<sup>8</sup> Beggar, one who has relied on the assistance of his friends.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>9</sup> Small invitation will serve a beggar.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 487. (1855)

<sup>10</sup> He begs like a cripple at a cross.

JOHN BRADY, Clavis Calendaria, i, 334. (1812)

Quoted as an old saying still in common use

He begged like a cripple at a cross, very urgently

F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, 40. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> In the ende thei go home . . . by beggars barne.

WILLIAM BUTLER, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 78. (1564)

Walking home by Beggars Bush for a penance

ROBERT GREENE, A Quip for an Upstart Courtier. (1592)

They have danc'd a galliard at beggars'-bush.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. (1599)

"This is the way to Beggar's-bush." It is spoken of those who use dissolute and improvident courses, which tend to poverty; Beggar's-bush being a tree notoriously known, on the left hand of the London road. King James having heard . . . how Sir Francis [Bacon] had prodigiously rewarded a mean man. . . . "Sir Francis," said he, "you will quickly come to Beggar's-bush; and I may even go along with you, if both be so bountiful."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Hunts, ii, 98. (1662)

<sup>12</sup> When Cerberus and Mr. Profane met, they were presently as great as beggars.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Holy War, p. 260. (1682)

As friendly, as intimate.

<sup>1</sup> A beggar's scrip is never filled. (πτωχοῦ πῆρα οὐ πῖμπληρη.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragment. (c. 250 B.C.) As quoted by ZENODOTUS and by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 24, who gives the Latin, "Mendici pera non impletur." The Germans say, "Bettelsack ist bodenlos" (Beggars' bags are bottomless).

Beggars' scrips are always empty. (πτωχῶν οὐλαὶ δὲί κεραί.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, xii, 32. An old Greek proverb also quoted by Zenobius.

It would make a beggar beat his bag.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 228. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> Maugree thyn heed, thou most for indigence Or stele, or begge, or borwe thy despenche!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to the Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 104. (c.1386)

Thou wilt beg or steale, er thou dye.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>3</sup> I prefer to earn what I get rather than to beg for it. (Emere malo, quam rogare.)

CICERO, In Verrem. Pt. i. (70 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 20. The proverb was used by many Latin writers—Seneca, Apuleius, Plautus. There is another one: "He pays no small price for a thing who gets it by entreaty" (Neque enim levi mercede emit, qui precatur). See under ASKING.

I had leuer bye than begge.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 19. (1539)

<sup>4</sup> Sue a beggar, and get a louse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina, p. 72. (1639) EDMUND GAYTON, Festivious Notes on Don Quixote, p. 83. (1654)

Goe to law with a beggar, thou shalt gett a lowse

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659)

A beggar pays a benefit with a louse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 10. (1732)

Marry a beggar, and get a louse for your togher

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 245. (1721)

A similar Scottish one is, "Gie a beggar a bed, and he'll repay you wi' a louse."

Sue a Beggar, and catch a Louse.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 127. (1709) "What can be more ridiculous," asks

Dykes, "than to sue a Beggar, when the action must needs cost more than he is worth? What can we have of a Cat, but the Skin? What of a Beggar, but Disappointment and Discredit?"

Sue a flea and catch a bite.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 378. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>5</sup> One beggar is enough at a door.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 187. (1639)

<sup>6</sup> You'll scratch a beggar one day before you die.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 209. (1639)

You'll scratch a Beggar before you die.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6035. (1732)

You'll scratch a beggarman's back yet.

P.W. JOYCE, English as We Speak, p. 194. (1910)

<sup>7</sup> A beggar's life is for a king.

FRANCIS DAVISON, Song. (1602) Another song in the Poetical Rapsody, signed only A.W., has the line, "None but beggars live at ease."

A real beggar is indeed the true and only king. (Der wahre Bettler ist Doch einzig und allein der wahre König.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act ii, sc. 9. (1779)

Beggars, beggars, are the happy folk;

They love one another. Long live beggars!

(Les gueux, les gueux, Sont les gens heureux; Ils s'aiment entre eux. Vivent les gueux!)

BÉRANGER, Les Gueux. (1815)

KING AND BEGGAR, see under KING.

<sup>8</sup> Much ado to bring beggars to the stocks.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 14. (1633)

Much ado to bring beggars to stocks; and when they come there, they'll not put in their legs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 60. (1670)

<sup>9</sup> Euen the vulgar would begge him for a foole.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 187. (1591)

Ile beg him for a fool.

JOHN LELY, Mother Bombe. Act i, sc. 1 (1592)

You are my guardian, best beg me for a fool now.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsy. Act ii, sc. 2. (1653)

<sup>10</sup> Living I was naked, dead behold my cloak (Nudus eram vivus, mortuus ecce tegor.)

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Tombs (1642) Quoted as a beggar's epitaph.

<sup>11</sup> Say, mister, have yer got a dime?

O. HENRY, The Diamond of Kali (1911)

Brother, can you spare a dime?

E. Y. HARBURG. Title and refrain of song (1932) An oft-heard petition at the depth of the depression in the United States, 1932-3 Montaigne notes that a form of begging in Italy was, "Fate ben per voi" (Do me some good for your own sake).

<sup>12</sup> Beggar is jealous of beggar. (πτωχὸς πτωχῷ φθονεῖ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 26 (c. 800 B.C.)

See also under TRADE. The Latin is, "Etiam mendicis mendico invidet."

On begger is wo that anothir in-to the towne goth.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS., 52. (c. 1350)

One begger byddeth wo that another by the dore shuld go.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 9. (1539)

One foole cannot indure the sight of another, and one beggar is woe that another by the doore should goe.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, p. 47. (1608)

The Germans say, "Dem einen Hund ist es leid wenn der andere in die Küche geht" (One dog growls when the other goes into the kitchen).

1
Of trouth ye beg at a wrong mans dur,
There is nothyng more vayne, as your selfe tell can,

Than to beg a breeche of a bare arst man.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
He . . . claps his dish at the wrong man's door.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
ii, sc. 7. (1596)

Beg from beggars and you'll never be rich.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 62. (1721)

If you have to beg, knock at the large gates only.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 19.
(1817) Ask assistance only from those who can help you.

2
Nay (quoth I) be they wynnners or loosers, Folke saie alwaie, beggars should be no choosers.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Beggars, you know, must bee no choosers

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 73. (1579)

My lord, says I, beggars must not be choosers.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, Journey to London. Act
iii. (c. 1726) See also SCOTT, Familiar Letters, ii, 62. (1819) READE, Hard Cash, ch. 23.
(1863) STEVENSON, Master of Ballantrae,
ch. 3. (1889)

Beggars and Borrowers must be no Chusers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 961. (1732)

The French say, "Il ne choisit pas qui emprunte" (He who borrows does not choose).

Beggars mustn't be choosers.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 15. (1857)

Beggars can't be choosers.

JOSEPH SHEARING, Blanche Fury, p. 76. (1939)

WILLIAM IRISH, Phantom Lady, p. 238.

(1942) The French say, "Faute de souliers, on va nu-pieds" (When slippers are lacking, one goes barefoot)

3
Shameful crauyng (quoth he) must haue shameful naie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1562)

A shameless beggar must have a shameful denial.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 37. (1639)

A good asker should have a good naysay.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (c. 1595)

Shameless craving must have shameful nay.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1670)

A sturdy beggar should have a stout naysayer.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 21. (1721)

A shameless Beggar must have a short Denial.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 392. (1732)

4
He makes a beggar first that first relieves him.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Royal King and the Loyal Subject. (1637)

5
The petition of an empty hand is dangerous.
(Vacuae manus temeraria petitio est.)

JOHN OF SALISBURY, Polycraticus, v, 10. (1476)

6
He's a proud beggar that makes his own alms.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 152. (1721)

7
A prowde hert in a beggers brest.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 56. (c. 1430)
See under HEART.

8
I am ashamed always to be begging for the same thing. (Pudet et metuo semperque eademque precari.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 15, l. 29. (A. D. 13)

9
A beggar is safe in risking anything. (Inops audacia tuta est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 119. (c. A. D. 60)

The beggar maie syng before the theefe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

See under POVERTY.

Beggars fear no Rebellion.

Beggars can never be Bankrupts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 962-3. (1732)

10
The horseleach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give. (Sanguisugae duae sunt filiae. di-centes: Affe, Affe.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 15. (c. 350 B. C.)

These two wicked instruments, who, with the two "daughters of the horse leech," were always crying. Give, give.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Staffordshire, iii, 133. (1662)

The morning attendants of the Duke of Buckingham—all genuine descendants of the daughter of the horse-leech, whose cry is "Give, give."

WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 38. (1823)

11
Better to die a beggar than live a beggar.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 888. (1732) See also under AVARICE.

12
Beggars breed and rich men feed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 60. (1670)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 75 (1721), with the comment, "Poor people's children find support in the service of the rich."

13
It is better to be a beggar than a fool.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1813)

Better a bright beggar than a muddy millionaire.

A. R. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. See
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Proverbs, ii, 327. (1872)

14
Trash and trumpery is the highway to beggary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 211. (1678)

Trash and Trumpery Is the Way to Beggary.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6091. (1732)

15
She loves the poor well, but cannot abide beggars.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678)

16
The touchstone discerns what is gold, and the beggar knows who is stingy.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 7, Apol. 19. (c. 1258)

17
Beggary is valiant.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 59. (1590)

Being rich, my virtue then shall be
To say there is no vice but beggary.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 595. (1596)

<sup>1</sup>
To beg does not degrade a noble mind. (οὐδὲν κακίον πτωχός, εἰ καλῶς φρονεῖ.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment. No. 752. (c. 400 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 21 B.

<sup>2</sup>
Thys grete nombur of sturdy beggarys therby schold utturly taken away.

THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, p. 176. (c. 1538) A sturdy beggar was "an able-bodied man begging without cause, and often with violence."—O.E.D.

The Heroes appear only like sturdy Beggars.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 48. (1711)

He's an absent-minded beggar, and his weaknesses are great.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar. (1899) Of the British soldier.

<sup>3</sup>
As for begging, it is safer to beg than to take.
but it is finer to take than to beg.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man Under Social ism. (1891)

<sup>4</sup>
He's like the blind beggars of Bolonia, a man must give 'um a halfpenny to sing, and twopence to hold their tongues.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act ii, sc. 4. (1662)

Art thou related to the bagpiper of Bujalance, who asked a maravedi for playing, and ten for leaving off?

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act
i, sc. 2. (1840)

That peculiarly humorous one, . . . "The piper of Bujalance, (who got) one maravedi to strike up and ten to leave off."

JOHN ORMSBY, Don Quixote, ii, 4. (1885)

<sup>5</sup>
What think ye as the Prouerb goes that beggars haue no lice?

ROBERT WILSON THE ELDER, Cobblers Prophecy, l. 836. (1594)

I care not to be the louse of a lazar.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 1, 72.
(1601)

A Louse is a Beggar's companion.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

II—Beggars on Horseback

<sup>6</sup>
Play with a slave, he will show thee his arse.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 37.
(1817) Low people become insolent if admitted to familiarity.

<sup>7</sup>
When a man who has never mounted a donkey gets one to ride, he kills it.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 357.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

When a slave mounts a camel he wants to ride on both humps.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 518. An Egyptian proverb.

<sup>8</sup>
Give a slave a rod, and he'll beat his master.

JOHN Ciarke, Paroemiologia, p. 193. (1639)

Give a clown your finger, and he'll take your whole hand.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670) The Spanish form is, "Al villano dadle el pie, y tomarse ha la mano" (Give a clown your foot, and he'll take your hand).

Gifts make Beggars bold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1651. (1732)

<sup>9</sup>
Set a foole on a stoole, either he wyl sing, or play with his foot. (Metti il matto sul buncho, ó gioca di piede, ó di canto.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 32. (1578)

<sup>10</sup>
As the Prouerbe in Englande is, Set a Knaue on horsebacke, and you shall see him shoulder a Knight.

BARNABY GOOGE, tr., Foure Bookes of Husbandry, p. 47. (1477)

Ride tantivy to the devil, like a beggar on horseback. (Monter dessus, comme Herbault sus pauvres gens.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv. ch. 52. (1548)
Motteux, tr.

Set a beggar on horsback and hee will never alight.

GEORGE PETTIE, *Petite Pallace: Minos and
Pasiphae*, p. 221. (1576)

Set a begger on horsebacke, and they say he will neuer light

ROBERT GREENE, Orpharion. (1599)

Set a begger on horseback, and he will gallop.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 330. (1605)

Set a beggar on horsebacke, and he wil runne his horse out of breath

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 163. (1616)

Such beggars

Once set o' horseback, you have heard, will ride—
How far, you had best to look to.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.
Act iv, sc. 2. (1616)

Nothing so intolerable as a fortunate fool. . . .
Asperius nihil est humili, cum surgit in altum:
set a begger on horseback and he will ride a gallop.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 2. (1621) Quoting Claudian, In Eutropium, l. 181.

There is an old prouerbe, that oft hath been try'd.
Set a beggar on horse-back, to th' gallows heel ride.

UNKNOWN, A Pepysian Garland, p. 241 (1626)

A beggar mounted on the back of honour rides post to the devil.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 116. (1629)

Set a beggar on horse-back, he'll ride to the devil.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1670)

Ray quotes Claudian's "Asperius nihil est humili cum in altum" (Nothing is harsher than a humble man raised to a height), the French, "Il n'est orgueil que de pauvre en-richi" (There is no pride like an enriched beggar's), and the Italian, "Il villan nobilitado non conosce il parentado" (The clown ennobled does not know his kindred). There is a Latin proverb which puts it the other way, "Mendico ne parentes quidem amici sunt" (To a beggar not even his own parents are friends). Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 51.

There is no pride like that of a Beggar set on Horseback who makes nothing of riding over his Quondam-Friends, and trampling his former Acquaintances, or Benefactors, under Foot.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1709) Such is the sad effect of wealth—rank pride—Mount but a beggar, how the rogue will ride.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Epistle to Lord Lonsdale. (1782)

"Set a beggar on horseback an' he'll ride to the deevil." . . . Another o' the same kind—"Reck comes aye doun again, however high it flees."

ALEXANDER LEIGHTON, Tales of the Borders, iii, 335. (1837) The French say, "Mets un rustre en selle, et il partira au galop" (Put a boor in the saddle and he departs at a gallop); the Germans, "Wenn ein Bettler auf's Pferd kömmt, so kann ihm kein Teufel mehr voreilen" (When a beggar gets on horseback, the devil cannot outride him); the Spaniards, "Quando el villano está en el mulo, ni conoce á Dios, ni al mundo" (When a clown is on a mule, he remembers neither God nor the world)

1 When one is on horseback, he knows all things. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 980. (1640)

A man well mounted is ever cholerick.

(GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1023

2 The adage must be verified,
That beggars mounted run their horse to death.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, i, 4, 127. (1591)

BEGINNING

See also Start

3 From the beginning. (ἀπὸ βαλβιδωρ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 1159. (424 B. C.) "Ab initio" is the Latin.

From the very hearth, as the phrase goes (ἀπὸ ἑστίας.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 846. (422 B. C.) PLATO, Euthyphro. Sec. 3A. (c. 375 B. C.) At festivals, the first libations were poured to Hestia, the goddess of the hearth, and hence the phrase "From the hearth" became a proverb for making a good beginning.

I am merely sweating at the foot of the steep. (Clivo sudamus in imo.)

OVID, Heroides. No. xx, l. 41. (c. B. C. 10) I have scarcely made a beginning. Ovid is writing a love letter, and warns the lady that he has still a thousand wiles, and intends to try them all if necessary. The Germans say, "Da stehen die Ochsen am Berge," (Here stand the oxen at the foot of the mountain).

Let us begin at the hearthstone, as the saying is. (πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ὡς περ ἀπ' ἐστίας ἀρχάμενοι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Having Many Friends, 93E. (C. A. D. 95)

He that climbs a ladder must begin at the first round.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 7, (1821)

My way is to begin with the beginning.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 7. (1818)

"Where shall I begin, please your Majesty?" he asked. "Begin at the beginning," the King said, very gravely, "and go on till you come to the end: then stop."

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 12. (1865)

4 To the beginner belongs the merit, even though the successor surpass him.

J. L. BUCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 494.

(1817) There is a similar Greek proverb of unknown origin, συγγνώμη πρωτοπειρά (Allowance is to be made for him who first attempts a thing).

But she wept first, her tears excited mine;

"The merit," I cried, "belongs to the predecessor."

IBN MALEK IBN E'RAKAA, of Damascus (c 750)

5 In this matter of governments everything depends upon the beginning. (En esto de los gobiernos todo es comenzar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

6 Every thing, a ginning hath it nede.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 671. (c. 1380)

Euery thing must haue a begynnyng.

BOORDE, Dyetary of Helth, p. 240. (1542)

Everything hath a beginning.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Supposes. Act v, sc. 5. (1566)

All things have a beginning

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Glasse of Government. Act ii, sc. 3. (1575) The Italians say, "Ogni cosa vuol principio."

Nothing so true As all things have beginning

JAMES SHIRLEY, Love Tricks: Prologue. (1631)

All things have a beginning (God excepted).

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (c. 1595)

There must be a beginning to everything.

MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 31. (1840)

7 The beginnings of all things are small (Om-nium enim rerum principia parva sunt.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 21, sec. 58. (c. 45 B. C.) See also under TRIFLES

8 Before beginning, prepare carefully. (Prius quam aggrediare, adhibenda est praeparatio diligens.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 21, sec. 73. (c. 45 B. C.) Before you begin, consider. (Antequam incipias, consulto.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 70. (1523)

Whilst we deliberate how to begin, it is already too late to begin. (Dum deliberamus quando incipiendum sit, incipere iam serum est.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutiones Oratoriae. Bk. xii, ch. 6, sec. 3. (C. A. D. 80)

I do not know how to begin.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters, lxxx, 132. (c. 1762)

<sup>1</sup> Resist beginnings; too late is the medicine prepared when the disease has gained strength by long delay.

(Principiis obsta; sero medicina paratur, Cum mala per longas convaluere moras.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 91. (c. 1 B.C.)

Quoted by George Pettie in his introductory letter to his Petite Pullace. (1576)

We must be watchful, especially in the beginning of temptation. . . . Whence a certain man said, Withstand the beginning: after remedies come too late. (Unde quidam dixit: Principiis obsta: sero medicina paratur.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 13. (c. 1420)

Resist beginnings: this maxim closely followed would preserve us from almost all our misfortunes. (Principiis obsta, cette maxime bien suivie nous préserverait de presque toutes nos catastrophes.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 23 Feb., 1870.

Beware beginnings.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 259. (1639)

<sup>2</sup> The greatest distress is to endure the first beginning. (Et labor est unus tempora prima pati.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 234. (c. 1 B.C.)

Euery begynnynge is harde and of greate diffy-culte.

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Householdiers, sig. A8. (1537)

Each goodly thing is hardest to begin.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene Bk. i, canto x. st. 6. (1589)

The beginning is always difficult (Wan shih ch'i t'ou nan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs No. 81. (1875) The Germans say, "Aller Anfang ist schwer."

THE FIRST STEP THAT COSTS, see under STEP.

<sup>3</sup> All things in their beginning are good for something.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Things are always at their best in their beginning. (Les choses valent toujours mieux dans leur source.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales. Let. 2. (1656) Or, according to the German proverb, quoted by Goethe, "Aller Anfang ist heiter" (Every beginning is cheerful).

<sup>4</sup> Beginning pottery with a wine-jar. (ἐν πλῴῳ ἢ κεραμείᾳ γυρομένη.)

PLATO, Laches. Sec. 187B. (c. 375 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb, meaning to begin with a difficult thing instead of an easy one. See also Gorgias, 514E.

As if fresh from the stocks. (ὅλος ἐκ δούλου.)

PLATO, Timaeus. Sec. 81B. (c. 375 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> Beware of beginning what you may later repent. (Cave quicquam incipias quod paeniteat postea.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 125. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Eating and scratching wants but a beginning
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>7</sup> Mend the first break, kill the first snake, And conquer everything you undertake.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 485. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> Soonest begun soonest over.

ANTONY TROLLOPE, Golden Lion Ch. 20. (1872)

<sup>9</sup> All glory comes from daring to begin.

EUGENE F. WARE, John Brown (1895)

II—Well Begun Is Half Done

<sup>10</sup> Whatever you are about, begin it good as a whole is a task's first half (Incipe, quidquid agas: pro toto est prima operis pars.)

ACSONIUS, Technopaegnon, vii, 5. (c. A.D. 300)

To begin an affair is to have it half finished (El comenzar las cosas es tenerlas medio acabadas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote Pt. ii, ch. 41. (1605)

Another Spanish form is, "A good beginning is half the battle."

Getting out well, is a Quarter of the Journey.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No 1648. (1732)

A beard well lathered is half shaved

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 106. (1902)

Well begun is half—but only half—ended

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Acts, i, 176. (1908)

<sup>11</sup> The beginning, as the saying goes, is the half of every work. (ἀρχὴ γὰρ λέγεται μὲρ ἡμισυ παντός [ἐν ταῖς παροιμίαις] ἔργου.)

PLATO, Lysis Bk. vi, sec. 753E. (c. 345 B.C.)

In sec. 775E, Plato adds: "The Beginning that sits enshrined as a goddess among mortals is the Saviour of all, provided she receives the honor due her from each one who approaches." He indicates that he is quoting a phrase already proverbial, but its author is not known. It has been attributed to both Pythagoras and Hesiod, but has not been found in the writings of either. See the quotation from Rabelais below as to what Hesiod really wrote.

The beginning, as the proverb says, is half the whole, so that a bad start does as much harm as all the later mistakes put together (ἡ δ' ἀρχὴ λέγεται ἡμισυ εἶναι παντός.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 3, sec. 2. (c. 330 B.C.) The proverb is also quoted by ARISTOTLE in Nicomachean Ethics, i, 7, 23. He has accomplished half who has made a beginning; dare to be wise; begin! (Dimidium facti qui coepit habet; sapere aude; incipe!)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 40. (20 B.C.)

Erasmus cites this in slightly different form, "Dimidium facti, qui bene coepit, habet"

(He has accomplished half who begins well). In his Colloquia, Erasmus cites still another form, "Christus bene coepta secundet" (May Christ further things which are well begun). The beginning is half the whole. (ἀρχὴ ἡμισυ πάντος.)

PHILO, Quis Rerum Divinarum Heres? Sec. 116. (c. A. D. 40) This is the final form of the proverb in Greek, and is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 39, who gives the Latin, "Principium dimidium totius."

As Hesiod saith, A good beginning of anything is the half of it; or, Well begun is half done, according to the old proverb. (Selon le dict de Hesiod, d'une chascune chose le commencement est la moytié du tout: & selon le prouerbe commun, à l'enfourner on faict les pains cornuz.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1548) Although the proverb is often attributed to Hesiod, he did not say "The beginning is half the whole," but "The half is more than the whole" (δὲ μᾶλλον ἡμισυ πάντος). See Works and Days, l. 40. Nicolas Udall, in his translation of Erasmus (No. 17), also ascribed the saying to Hesiod, after criticising Diogenes Laertius for attributing it to Socrates.

Hence grew the common place of extolling the beginning of every thing, Dimidium qui bene coepta habet

BACON, Colours of Good and Evil, 153. (1597)

A work well entered is truly said to be half done DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman, ix, 256. (1642)

Well begun, is half done.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1670) Also in many other collections. A proverb in all languages. The Italians say, "Chi ben comincia ha la metà dell' opra finito"; the Spaniards, "Buen principio la mitad es hecho"; the French, "Il est bien avancé qui a bien commence," "Heureux commencement est la moitié de l'œuvre," "A moitié fait qui commence bien," or "Affaire bien enfilée, est à demi terminée"; the Germans, "Wohl begonnen, halb gewonnen," or "Frisch begonnen, halb gewonnen," "Gewagt ist halb gewonnen," "Frisch gewagt ist halb gewonnen," or "Wohl angefangen, ist halb gethan."

Only engage, and then the mind grows heated.

Begin, and then the work will be completed.

GOETHE, Faust: Prelude at the Theatre. (1806)

John Anster, tr.

A work well begun is half ended.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 304. (1855)

III—Beginning and Ending

1 Speed in beginning may mean delay in ending. (σπευδόντες τε γὰρ σχολαίτερον ἀπολίσσασθε.)

ARCHIDAMUS, Speech to the Spartans, at the outbreak of the Peloponnesian War, 431 B. C. See THUCYDIDES, i, 84.

2 The end of every matter does not appear at its beginning. (μὴ ἀμα ἀρχῇ πᾶν τέλος καταφαίνεται.)

ARTABANUS, to Xerxes, before the battle of Thermopylae. (480 B. C.) As related by Herodotus, vii, 51.

Not always does the end of the race agree with the beginning. (Non eodem cursu respondent ultima primis.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 18. (c. 175 B. C.) It's a long road from the inception of a thing to its realization. (Le chemin est long du projet à la chose.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 8. (1664)

3 The wise man, before beginning an action, looks carefully to the end.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 99. (c. A. D. 100)

A fool beholdeth only the beginning of his works, but a wise man taketh heed to the end.

UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures, ccvii. (1535) CONSIDER THE END, see under END.

4 He who commences many things finishes but few.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 399. (1855) An Italian proverb.

5 With the end at the beginning, like Homer. (ἑστέρον πρότερον Ὀμηρικώς.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 16. (c. 50 B. C.) I was not a little amazed to see them strike the yron which I thought colde, and to make an ende before I could heere a beginning.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: Euphues Glasse for Europe, p. 466. (1580)

You always end ere you begin.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 31. (1591)

6 Neither head nor feet. (Nec caput, nec pedes.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares, vii, 31. (c. 50 B. C.) Neither beginning nor end.

7 That never ends ill which begins in God's name.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 109. (1639)

8 Well to begin, and not to end so were base.

THOMAS DEKKER, If It Be Not Good, The Devil Is in It. Act i. (1612)

Good to begin well, better to end well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670)

That which began best can't end worst.

ROBERT BROWNING, Apparent Failure (1864)

9 Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof. (Melior est finis orationis, quam principium.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 8. (c. 250 B. C.) To a bad beginning a good ending. (Re gesta pessume gestam probe.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 592. (c. 194 B. C.) Often a bad beginning leads to a beautiful friendship. (Saepe malo principio magna familiaritas conflata.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 874. (161 B. C.)

A bad end from a good beginning. (Bonis initiis malos eventus.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 11. (c. 41 B. C.)

All bad examples of anything came originally from good beginnings. (Omnia mala exempla ex rebus bonis orta sunt.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catalinae. Ch. 51, sec. 27.

Ful sharp beginning breketh ofte at ende.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 791. (c. 1380)

God woot, of thing ful ofte looth bigonne
Cometh ende good.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1234. (c. 1380)

A bad beginning sometimes makes a good ending.
(Debile principium melior fortuna sequetur.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

A hard beginnyng makth a good endyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

Tourne his yll begynnyng to a good ende.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1562)

Cloudy mornynge turne to cleere after noones.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1562)

A hard beginning hath a good ending.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870) p. 302. (1605)

Evil beginning hours may end in good.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of Malta. Act ii, sc. 5. (c. 1613)

1
Better it is to remedy the begynnynges then the endes. (Satius est initiis mederi, quam fini.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 40. (1508)
Taverner, tr., fo. 10. (1550) Taverner adds,
"Stoppe a disease (sayeth the poete Ouide) while it is in the commynge." Also PERSIUS,
Satires, iii, 63. See under DISEASE.

2
From a bad beginning comes a bad ending.
(κακὴ ἀρ' ἀρχῇ γίνεται κακὸν τέλος.)

EURIPIDES, Aeolus. Frag. 32. (c. 413 B.C.)

The Book of Decrees seith: "selden or with greet payne been causes y-brought to good ends whanne they been baddely bigonne."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 37. (c. 1387)

For hyt ys oft sene, all euell bygynnyng hathe a foule endyng.

UNKNOWN, Mirk's Festival, p. 120. (c. 1400)

Ther gynnyng cursid hadde a wengable fyn.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. viii, l. 2241.
(c. 1440)

A thing ill begun, will come to a worse end.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 47. (1574) Pettie, tr.

An untoward beginning, hath ever an unlucky ending.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 71.

Commonly there commeth an yll ende where there was a naughtie beginning.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 385. (1580)

Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 179. (1601)

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 2, 55. (1606)

Ill comes from ill,

And as a thing begins, so ends it still.

WILLIAM MORRIS, *The Earthly Paradise: The
Stealing of the Coif*, l. 140. (1868)

Bad beginnings, bad endings. (Foedum inceptu, foedum exitu.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 130

(1869) Quoting Livy. "Quod initio vitiosum est non potest tractu temporis convalescere" (What is wrong in its beginnings cannot be remedied by the passage of time), was a maxim of Roman law. Or, as Goethe put it, (Sprüche in Prosa), "If you miss the first buttonhole, you will not succeed in buttoning up your coat."

3
When you reach the end of your career, just take down the sign "Goal" and look at the other side of it. You will find "Beginning Point" there. It has been reversed while you were going around the track.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Sociology in Serge and Straw. (1910) The Germans say "An-fang und Ende reichen einander die Hände"
(Beginning and end shake hands together)

4
When you are building a house, do not leave it unfinished. (μηδὲ δόμον ποτὶν ἀνεπίεστον καταλείπειν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 746. (c. 800 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 26

The steadfast man who begins a task strives to finish it. (Vir constans quicquid coepit complere laborat.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B.C.) See
Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628

I am beginning; my undertakings I'll finish. (Ego incipio; conata exequar.)

ACCIUS, Atrius. Frag. 167. Loeb. (c. 140 B.C.)

Sertorius finishes nothing, but he begins every thing. (Rem peragit nullam Sertorius, inchoat omnes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 79 (c. A.D. 90)

Keen in commencing, negligent in concluding (Acribus initiis, incurioso fine)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 17. (c. A.D. 116)

Whan thou shalt begynne eny werke, pray god of helpe to bringe yt to a good conclusion

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 37. (1477)

Let him that beginneth the song make an end

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 12. (1633)

Better never to begin than never to make an end

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 51

Better ne'er hae begun nor ne'er end it.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 232. (1678)

Better uncommenced than unfinished (Besser unbegonnen, als unvollendet.)

CHARLES CAHILL, Six Miles Proverbs, p. 354

(1856) A German proverb. The French say,
"Qui commence et ne parfait sa peine perd"
(He who begins a thing and does not finish it loses his labor); or "Il n'a pas fait qui commence" (He has not finished who has begun).

Don't start nothin yuh can't finish!

EUGENE O'NEILL, Anna Christie. Act I. (1921)

5
From the egg to the apples. (Ab ovo usque ad mala.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iii, l. 6. (35 B.C.)

Referring to the first and last dish of a dinner. The Roman dinner usually opened with the gustatio or promulsis, supposed to whet the appetite, in which eggs played a part, and fruit was served as dessert. The phrase is the equivalent of the modern "from soup to nuts." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 86. The French say, "Entre la poire et le fromage."

The stem and stern, as the Greek proverb goes. (Prora et puppis, ut Graecorum proverbium est.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. xvi, epis. 24, sec. 1. (44 B.C.) The Alpha and Omega. The Greek is πρῶτα καὶ πρῶτα.

From baldhead to baldhead. (A calvo ad calvum.)

SETOXIUS, De Vita Caesarum: Caligula. Ch. xxvii, sec. 2. (120 A.D.) When cattle became too costly to feed to the wild animals, Caligula selected criminals to be devoured. The criminals would be lined up, each with the charges against him tied around his neck. One day there was a bald-headed man at each end of the line, and Caligula, without looking at the charges, said "From baldhead to bald head," and motioned that they all be led away to the arena. The saying became a proverb.

I am both the prow and the stern (Prora et puppis), i.e. the beginning and the end.

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 17. (1511)

In poste pace we past from potage to cheese

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

From th' eggs to th' apples

JOHN CLARKE, Purportologia, p. 3. (1639)

I see Nuts to soup

KATHARINE BRUSH, You Go Your Way. Ch. 1. (1941) They were eating a dinner backwards

You began better than you end. (Coepisti melius quam desinis.)

OXID, Herodes. Epis. ix, l. 23. (c. 10 B.C.)

Thu bignne bettere thenne thu ende.

UNKNOWN, Trinity College Homilies, 55 (c. 1200)

It is commonly scene, that a sinfull lyte, is rewarded with a sodene death, and a sweet beginning with a sower end.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 185. (1579)

Tiger's head and snake's tail

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 183. (1872)

2 When, for any deed, a beginning hath been shown by God, straight indeed is the path for pursuing virtue, and fairer is its end. (θεοῦ δε δεικνύοντος ἀρχὰν ἡ δόξα ἐν πράξει εὐθὺς ἀπὸ ἀρχῆς ἀρετῶν λαβεῖν | τελευτᾷ τε καλλίστη.)

PINDAR, Dance-Songs. Frag. 108 (c. 480 B.C.)

3 New beginnings spring from the end. (Alia initia e fine.)

Pliny the Elder, Naturalis Historia. Bk. ix, ch. 65. (A.D. 77)

4 It is much easier to begin than to finish. (Incipere multo est quam impetrare facilius.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 974. (c. 194 B.C.)

That which is easily begun is not always lightly ended.

ROBERT GREENE, Debate Betweene Follie and Love. (1584) Works, iv, 198.

A light beginning, a heavy ending.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 196. (1593)

It is easy to set a cask rolling. (Dolium volvitur.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 89. (1869) Easy to start something, but sometimes difficult to stop it.

Anybody can start something.

J. A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 21. (1928)

It's easy enough to start something, but it takes real guts to finish it.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Design for Murder, p. 13. (1941)

5 Everything has a beginning, growth, and consummation. (Habent enim omnia initium, incrementum, summam.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. v, ch. 10, sec. 71. (c. A.D. 80)

He was the beginning, middle, and end of all. (Summum, medium, et ultimum.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 98. (1511)

All thyngs hath a begynnyng.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)

6 The end may be inferred from the beginning, as in the common saying, "I cannot expect a purple-striped toga, when I see that the beginning of the web is black"; or the beginning may be argued from the end. (Ex initiis summa colligitur. . . . et contra.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. v, ch. 10, sec. 71. (c. A.D. 80) Or, as an English proverb puts it, "What begins with tow won't end with silk."

Such beginnyng such ende, we all daie see.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Such a Beginning, such an Ending.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4274. (1732)

There is a good old saying, . . . As you begin the year, you'll surely end it.

DAVID GARRICK, Cymon: Prologue. (1767)

7 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord. (ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ Ἄλφα καὶ τὸ Ὠ, λέγει Κύριος.)

New Testament: Revelation, i, 8. (c. A.D. 90) The Vulgate is, "Ego sum α, et ω, principium, et finis, dicit Dominus Deus." Alpha and Omega are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet: alpha, beta, the first two letters.

He deserves if not the first place, certainly the second. (Si non Alpha, certe Beta.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 116. (1511)

Alpha and Omega, the beginning, and yet without beginning: the ende and yet euerlasting.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 164. (1579)

The alpha and omega of science.

SIR JOHN HERSCHEL, Studies in Natural Philosophy, p. 114. (1830)

This Siege of Dresden is the alpha to whatever omegas there may be.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, viii, 19, 5. (1865)

God is alpha and omega in the great world.

QUARLES, Enchyridion. Cent. ii, No. 28. (1640)

The Ay and Izzard of a tour to the Virginia Springs.

P. H. NICKLIN, Virginia Springs, p. 19. (1835)

Izzard, from Zed, old name for the letter Z.

I know 'em from Alired to Omaha.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Ransom of Mack. (1907)

It was bad luck from A to Izzard.

O. HENRY, Phoebe. (1909)

They want everything checked from A to Izzard.

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 212. (1941)

1 All beginnings must have an end. (Orta omnia intereunt.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch. 5. (c. 46 B. C.)

Whatever begins, also ends. (Quicquid coepit et desinit.)

SENECA, Ad Polybium. Sec. 1. (c. A. D. 65)

Everything dies that is born; or Everything ends that has a beginning. (Deficit omne quod nascitur.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutiones Oratoriae. Bk. v, ch. 10, sec. 79. (c. A. D. 80)

2 That is the true beginning of our end.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 111. (1596)

I see the beginning of my end.

MASSINGER AND DEKKER, The Virgin Martyr Act iii, sc. 2. (1622)

It seems to me, Sire, to be the beginning of the end. (C'est le commencement de la fin.)

TALLEYRAND, to Napoleon, after his disastrous defeat at the battle of Leipzig, in 1813, not during the hundred days, as some authorities allege. See LOCKHART, Life of Napoleon, ii, 205. Fournier asserts that Talleyrand culled many of his epigrams from a collection of anecdotes for jesters and after-dinner speakers called L'Improvisateur Français, and that he was quick to claim the parentage of any fatherless bon mot he encountered. The attribution of this one to him has been questioned.

This is not the end. It is not even the beginning of the end. But it is, perhaps, the end of the beginning.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, at Lord Mayor's dinner, Mansion House, London, 10 Nov., 1942.

3 If one begins each task in proper way,
So is it likely will the ending be.

(Ἔργον δὲ πᾶντος ἢν τις ἀρχήται καλῶς, καὶ τὰς τελευτὰς εὐκλὸς ἐσθ' οὕτως ἔχειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 747. (c. 450 B. C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 16A.

Would not this be that best beginning which would naturally and proverbially lead to the best end?

PLATO, Republic. Bk. v, sec. 453A. (c. 375 B. C.)

God beginnyng maketh god endyng, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, ii. (c. 1320)

But in proverbe I have herd seye

That who that wel his werk begynneth

The rather a good ende he wynneth.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis: Prologue, l. 86. (c. 1390)

The Begynnyng of the werke yf it be goode geueth hope to the endyng.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers. (1477)

Of a good begunyng comth good end.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Good to begin well, better to end well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1678)

Good onset bodes good end!

J. W. WARTER, Last of the Old Squires, p. 48 (1854) The French say, "De bonne commencement bonne fin" (Of a good beginning a good end); or "Le bon commencement attrait la bonne fin."

4 For qua bigin wil ani thing
He aght to thinc on the ending.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 4379. (c. 1300)

Er thu do eny thing, thenk one the ending.

UNKNOWN, Royal MS, 8 E, xvii f, 107a. (c. 1350)

Wel seyn they, that defenden every wight to assaye any thing of whiche he is in doute, whether he may parfourne it or no.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Meibius, Sec. 24. (c. 1386)

A wise Man begins in the end; a Fool ends in the beginning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 471. (1732)

That which the fool does in the end, the wise man does at the beginning.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs Ch. 5. (1855)

It's a fool's trick . . . to put off what you must do at last.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake ch. 5 (1866)

BEHAVIOR

See also Manners

5 We could learn modesty from the cat, honesty from the ant, chastity from the dove, and good manners from the cock.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 100b. (c. 450)

6 For behaviour, men learn it, as they take diseases, one of another.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1605)

7 We must suit our behaviour to the occasion
(Cual el tiempo, tal el tieno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 50, 55 (1615) Tiento means tact, and the proverb might be rendered, "We must adapt ourselves by tact to all circumstances"

8 "And how did little Tim behave?" asked Mrs. Cratchit. "As good as gold," said Bob
DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 3. (1843)

Gentle Jane was good as gold,
She always did as she was told.
She never spoke when her mouth was full,
Or caught blue-bottles their legs to pull.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act ii. (1881)

1 Behavior is a mirror in which every one shows his image. (Das Betragen ist ein Spiegel in welchem jeder sein Bild zeigt.)

GOETHE, Die Wahlverwandtschaften (Elective Affinities). Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1809)

2 As you behave toward others expect that others will behave toward you. (Ab altero expectes, alteri quod feceris.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 2. (1869)

3 Whoever is a wolf behaves as a wolf. (Quiconque est loup agisse en loup.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Loup Devenu Berger. Bk. iii, fab. 3. (1668)

4 As hende [well-behaved] as hounde is in kychyne

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B. Passus v, l. 261. (1377)

5 Let your ideas be round and your conduct square.

MENCIUS, Discourses. (c. 300 B. C.) See BROWN, Wisdom of the Chinese, p. 77.

Bad conduct soils the finest ornament more than filth (Pulchrum ornatum turpes mores peius ceno collinunt.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus. Act v, sc. 2, l. 53 (c. 200 B. C.) To guarantee our conduct we should have to guarantee our fortune. (Il faudrait pouvoir répondre de sa fortune, pour pouvoir répondre de ce que l'on fera.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 574. (1665) Nothing is more adroit than irreproachable conduct

MADAME DE MAINTENON, Maxims. (c. 1685) The maxim which governed her life We may give Advice, but we cannot give Conduct.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751. The way to good conduct is never too late. (Sera nunquam est ad bonos mores via.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 405 (1869) Quoting Seneca. The precursor of "It is never too late to mend."

Conduct is three-fourths of our life and its largest concern.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma. Ch. I, sec. 3. (1873)

No conduct is hated by all.

MR. JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Opinion, Peck vs. Tribune Company, 1909.

Conduct lies in masterful administration of the unforeseen.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Testament of Beauty. Bk. i, l. 6. (1930)

6 Behaviour is of infinite advantage or prejudice to a man.

WILLIAM PITT, Letters to His Nephew, v. 32. (1754)

7 Adam . . . was upon his good behaviour.

WILLIAM SHERLOCK, A Practical Discourse Concerning Death, Pt. i, sec. 1. (1689)

Put himself upon his good behaviour.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 47. (1820) "During good behavior" (Quando se bene gesserit), occurs in Statutes 12 and 13, William III, ii, 3.

Good behavior is the last refuge of mediocrity.

Meditations in Wall Street, p. 135. (1940)

8 Things which are unbecoming are unsafe. (Intuta quae indecora.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, ch. 33. (c. A. D. 109)

9 Behaviorism.

J. B. WATSON, Psychology from the Standpoint of the Behaviorist. (1919) It was Watson who introduced the theory.

II—Behavior: Some Rules

See also Prudence: Prudential Proverbs

10 Act so as to elicit the best in others and thereby in thyself.

FELIX ADLER, Supreme Ethical Rule, as quoted by HARAS, Morals for Moderns, p. 71.

11 Be not sweet, lest they swallow thee up. Be not bitter, lest they spit thee out.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. x. l. 148. (c. 550 B. C.) Be not all sugar, or the world will swallow thee; nor yet all wormwood, or the world will spit thee out.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 58. (1853) A Persian proverb.

12 Sit not whilst another man stands, if he be older than thyself.

ANI, Teaching. No. 28. (c. 2000 B. C.) Budge, tr.

13 Condemn no poor man, mock no simple man, which proud fools . . . love to do; but find fault with yourself and with none other.

ROGER ASCHAM, Advice to Lord Warwick's Servant. (c. 1560)

14 Six hundred and thirteen commandments were given to Moses. King David came and reduced them to eleven (Psalms, xv). The prophet Isaiah further reduced them to six (Isaiah xxxiii). Micah (vi, 8) reduced them to three: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God.

Babylonian Talmud: Makkoth, fo. 23b. 24a (c. 450) Amos placed them all upon one principle (v, 4), "See ye me, and ye shall live," and the prophet Habakkuk (ii, 4) added, "The just shall live by his faith." Attributed to Rabbi Simlai.

15 Be kind toward relatives and liberal to inferiors; hate evil, love the good; obey princes, honor the wise; treat enemies with firmness, venerable men with respect, women with shrewdness. The man who frames his life after these precepts prospers in the world.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 22. (c. A. D. 100)

1 Think in the morning. Act in the noon. Eat in the evening. Sleep in the night.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

2 Eat whatever you like, but dress as others do.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 533.

(1817) Do as you please at home, but behave conventionally in public.

Let me only be excused from thy bad smells; I do not want thy perfumes.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 546. A speech in the closet from a husband to a wife. "Leave off rudeness; I require no civilities."

3 Set not thy foot to make the blind to fall, Nor wilfully offend thy weaker brother: Nor wound the dead with thy tongue's bitter gall,

Neither rejoice thou in the fall of other.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. i. sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4. (1621) A footnote states this is from "Pybrac in his Quadrant 37."

4 Say not all that you know; embrace not all that you read; believe not all that you hear; do not all that you can. (Sage nicht Alles was du weisst; Wisse nicht Alles was du liest; Glaube nicht Alles was du hörst; Thue nicht Alles was du kannst.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 301.

(1856) A German proverb.

Don't believe everything you hear, nor tell all that you know. (Non creder ciò che tu odi, E non dir ciò che tu sai.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 188. Italian

Don't tell all that you know, or judge all that you see, if you wish to live in peace. (Cuanto sabes no diras, Cuanto vees no juzgaras, Si quieres vivir en paz.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 243. Spanish.

Do not all you can; spend not all you have; believe not all you hear; and tell not all you know.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 344. (1855)

5 Study first propriety.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Of Propriety. (1871)

6 O prince, desyre to be honourable,
Cherish thy folk and hate extorcoun! . . .
Dred God, do law, love trouthe and worthinesse,

And wed thy folk agein to stedfastnesse.

CHAUCER, Lak of Stedfastnesse, l. 22. (c. 1380)

7 Never seem wiser, nor more learned, than the people you are with.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

Abhor a knave and pity a fool in your heart, but let neither of them unnecessarily see that you do so.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Dec., 1748.

You must embrace the man you hate, if you cannot be justified in knocking him down.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

8 Hear and see and say the best.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 102. (1639)

9 I never refuse. I never contradict. I sometimes forget.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Explaining his success in dealing with Queen Victoria. (1877)

10 Fear less, hope more; eat less, chew more; whine less, breathe more; talk less, say more; hate less, love more, and all good things are yours.

LORD FISHER. Quoted in Records, 25 Nov., 1919.

11 Keepe thyne eares from other mens secrets, thine eyes from other mens writings, thine hands from other mens purses.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 24. (1578)

Neither eyes on letters, nor hands in coffers.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 290. (1640)

Nor eye in a letter, nor hand in a purse, nor ear in the secret of another.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

12 Socrates dyd teache to his scollars three things, the first was, to be silent in speache, the seconde, to be shamefaste in the face; the third, to be wise in hart.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 66 (1578)

Three good rules for euery man Rule thyne owne wyl, temper thy tongue, refrayne thyne owne belly.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 75.

13 Let us preserve in things essential unity, in things not essential liberty, in both charity. (Servemus in necessariis unitatem, in non necessariis libertatem, in utrisque caritatem.)

GREGORY FRANCKE, Consideratio Theologica.

(1628) Sometimes attributed in shorter form to one Rupertus Meldinius, of whom nothing is certainly known, but who is supposed to have been a contemporary of Francke—perhaps even the same person. The shorter version is, "In necessariis unitas, in dubiis libertas, in omnibus caritas."

14 Be studious in your profession, and you will be learned. Be industrious and frugal, and you will be rich. Be sober and temperate, and you will be healthy. Be in general virtuous, and you will be happy. At least, you will, by such conduct, stand the best chance for such consequences.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to John Allyn. (1768)

1 To God we owe fear and love; to our neighbours justice and character; to our selves prudence and sobriety.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

Be civil to all; sociable to many; familiar with few; Friend to one; enemy to none.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

He that would live in peace and at ease, Must not speak all he knows, nor judge all he sees.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

Think of three Things, whence you came, where you are going, and to whom you must account.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

Be at War with your Vices, at Peace with your Neighbours, and let every New-Year find you a better Man.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

Be not niggardly of what costs thee nothing, as courtesy, counsel, and countenance.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

Search others for their virtues, thyself for thy vices.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

2 Neither trust, nor contend, nor lay wagers, nor lend.

And you'll have peace to your lives end.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Neither trust nor contend,

Nor lay wagers nor lend,

You'll be esteemed in the end.

(Ni fiez, ni porfiez,

Ni apuestes, ni prestes,

Y viviras entre las gentes.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. I, p. 150 (1814)

3 Be all things to all men. (Saber hacerse á todos.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim 77 (1647) See under ADAPTABILITY.

4 The rule of Epictete, who sayd, that in companie wee must yeelde humbly too our Superiour, perswade gently with our inferiour, and agree quietly with our equall.

STEFANO GUARZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii. p. 164 (1574) Pettie, tr.

To be humble to superiors is duty, to equals courtesy, to inferiors nobleness.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

5 Give and take, live and let live, that's the word.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 27. (1843)

6 I desire not the lowest; I am incapable of the highest; I keep quiet. (Imum nolo; summum nequeo; quiesco.)

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Motto, on his vicarage. Hawsted, Suffolk, England. (c. 1601)

Tar-baby ain't sayin' nuthin', en br'er Fox, he lay low.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Legends of the Old Plantation. Ch. xii. (1902)

7 Four precepts: to break off customs; to shake off spirits ill-disposed; to meditate on youth; to do nothing against one's genius.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 25 Oct., 1836.

8 To think the worst of others, and to do the best we can ourselves, is a safe rule, but a hard one to practise.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 240 (1823)

Walk groundly, talk profoundly, drink roundly, sleep soundly.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 446. (1869)

9 My little code of living—to be always decent and right in your home town.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Best-Seller. (1909)

The advice of Lord Chesterfield, "Wear a black coat and hold your tongue," he believed in without having heard.

O. HENRY, The Caliph and the Cad (1911)

10 Go not for every grief to the Physician, nor for every quarrel to the Lawyer, nor for every thirst to the pot.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 292. (1640)

Don't go to the doctor with every distemper, nor to the lawyer with every quarrel, nor to the pot for every thirst.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737

11 I am never to act otherwise than so that I could also will that my maxim should become a universal law. (Ich soll niemals anders verfahren, als so, dass ich auch wollen könne, meine Maxime solle ein allgemeines Gesetz werden.)

IMMANUEL KANT, Grundlegung zur Metaphysik der Sitten. Abschnitt I. (1780) This is Kant's so-called "categorical imperative," as translated by T. K. Abbott, Kant's Theory of Ethics, p. 18. It has been more freely rendered, "Make the maxim of thy conduct such that it might become a universal law." HABAS, Morals for Moderns, p. 71, renders it, "So act that you can will that everybody shall follow the principle of your action."

12 Do the right, and thou shalt continue upon earth. Make the weeper to cease his plaint. Fleece not the widow. Drive no man away from the property of his father.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xii. (c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr.

13 Acting without design, occupying oneself without making a business of it, finding the great in what is small and the many in the few, repaying injury with kindness, effecting difficult things while they are easy, and managing great things in their beginnings: this is the method of Tao.

LAO-TSEI, The Simple Way. (Old, tr.) The religion called Taoism claims Lao-tsze as its founder. (c. 600 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> Take no quarelle, thynk mekyl and say nought.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, 155. (c. 1430)
Think much, speak little, and write less.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 200. (1666)

<sup>2</sup> Let not thy eye go beyond thy eare, nor thy tongue so farre as thy feete.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 307 (1580)

<sup>3</sup> Be not dilatory in doing, nor confused in conversation, nor vague in thought; . . . leave thyself leisure in thy life. (μήτε ἐν ταῖς πράξεσιν ἐπισύρειν μήτε ἐν ταῖς ὁμιλίαις φέρειν μήτε ἐν ταῖς φαντασίαις ἀλᾶσθαι . . . μήτε ἐν τῷ βίῳ δσχολεῖσθαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations Bk. viii, sec. 51. (C. A. D. 174)

Blot out vain pomp; check impulse; quench appetite; keep reason under its own control.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 7.

<sup>4</sup> If not seemly, do it not; if not true, say it not. (εἰ μὴ καθήκει, μὴ πράξῃς· εἰ μὴ ἀληθές ἐστι, μὴ εἴπῃς.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. xii, sec. 17. (C. A. D. 174)

If thou wouldst not be known to do anything, never do it.

EMERSON, Essays: Spiritual Laws. (1841)

Heed how thou livest. Do no act by day
Which from the night shall drive thy peace away
J. G. WHITTIER, Conduct. (1881)

<sup>5</sup> Undertake coldly, but pursue hotly. (Entreprenez froidement, mais poursuivez ardemment.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk. iii, ch. 10 (1595)
Quoting Bias.

<sup>6</sup> Teach me, like thee, in various nature wise,
To fall with dignity, with temper rise:
Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe;
Correct with spirit, eloquent with ease,
Intent to reason, or polite to please.

POPE, An Essay on Man Epis. iv, l. 377. (1733)

<sup>7</sup> Do what you like. (Fay ce que voudras.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 57. (1534) The one rule of the Thelemites. "In all their rule," says Rabelais, "and strictest tie of their order, there was but one clause to be observed. 'Do what you like.'"

<sup>8</sup> Rule lust, temper tongue, and bridle the belly.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1678)

<sup>9</sup> He that sweareth tyll no man trust him;
He that lyeth tyll no man beleeve him;

He that boroweth tyll no man will lende him;
Let him go where no man knoweth him.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture, 107. (c. 1530)
FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 104. (1578)

<sup>10</sup> Behave yoursel' before folk;
Whate'er ye do, when out o' view,
Be cautious aye before folk.

ALEXANDER RODGER, Behave Yoursel' Before Folk. (1821)

<sup>11</sup> Thou to the courteous humble be, as dust;
If he oppose thee, fill his eyes with mud;
A soft file will not cleanse deep-seated rust:
Then use not gentle language with the rude.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 81. (C. 1258)

<sup>12</sup> Seek swiftness from the ship, protection from the shield, cuts from the sword, and kisses from the maiden.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 82 (c. 900)

<sup>13</sup> Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well Act i, sc. 1, l. 73 (1602)

Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act iii, sc. 4, l. 99 (1605)
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee:

Corruption wins not more than honesty
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 443 (1612)

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act I sc 4, l. 131 (1605)
Proclaim not all thou knowest, all thou owest, all thou hast, nor all thou can'st

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739

<sup>14</sup> Live your life, do your work, then take your hat

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday (1849)

<sup>15</sup> Do on hill as you would in hall.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 28. (1852) Behave in solitude as you would in a crowd

<sup>16</sup> Then bless thy secret growth, nor catch
At noise, but thrive unseen and dumb;

Keep clean, bear fruit, earn life, and watch
Till the white-wing'd Reapers come!

HENRY VAUGHAN, The Seed Growing Secretly.
(1650)

1
Do all the good you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can,
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

JOHN WESLEY, Rules of Conduct. (c. 1770)
Perhaps an expansion of a proverbial stanza sometimes used on tombstones. Adopted by the Rev. Dwight L. Moody as his motto.

2
Yf thou wylte leve in peas and reste,
Here, and see, and sey the beste.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Good Counsel, I. 52.
(c. 1450)

If you will stil liue at ease, heare and see, and hold your pease.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 101. (1591)

Hee that will live in peace and rest,
Must heare and see and say the best.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, 69. (1611)
Cited by CAMDEN, Remains, p. 323 (1605).
and by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130 (1670).
with the French proverb, "Oy, voy, & te tais, si tu veux vivre en paix" (Hear, see, and hold your peace, if you wish to live in peace)

He that means to live at rest,

Must hear and see, and say the best.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs,
p. 143 (1710)

He that will leave in Peace and Rest,
Must hear and see; and speak the best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6182. (1732)

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant,
p. 410 (1796)

3
Drink what is clear,
And eat what is new,
Conceal what you hear,
And speak what is true.

UNKNOWN, The Cold Water Cure (c. 1700)

BELIEF

See also Conviction, Faith

4
A belief is not true because it is useful. (Une croyance utile n'est pas pour cela une vérité.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 15 Nov., 1876

5
Strong beliefs win strong men, and then make them stronger.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Physics and Politics, p. 76
(1876)

6
What he wishes to believe, that each man believes, (ὃ γὰρ βούλεται, τοῦθ' ἕκαστος καὶ οἶεται.)

DEMOSTHENES, Third Olynthiac sec. 19. (349 B.C.)

Men freely believe what they wish [to believe].
(Libenter homines id quod volunt credunt.)

CÆSAR, De Bello Gallico. Bk. iii. sec. 18. (c. 52 B.C.)

We are tardy in believing when belief brings hurt
(Tarde, quæ credita laedunt, | credimus.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ii. l. 9. (c. 10 B.C.)

What the wretched overmuch desire, that they easily believe. (Quod nimis miseri volunt | hoc facile credunt.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 313. (c. A.D. 60)

How lightly is every man enclined to his owne desyr.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 31. (c. 1387)

It is a proverb used long ago.

We soone beleewe the thing we would have so.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. i,
st. 56. (1591)

We soone beleewe that we would haue.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 191. (1616)

Man prefers to believe what he prefers to be true.

FRANCIS BACON, Aphorisms. No. 49. (1625)

With how much ease believe we what we wish!

JOHN DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv. sc. 1. (1677)

Everybody easily believes whatever he fears or desires. (Chacun croit fort aisément ! Ce qu'il craint et ce qu'il désire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xi, fab. 6 (1678)

We are apt to believe what we wish for.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5426 (1732)

What ardently we wish, we soon believe.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l
1311. (1744)

7
A man lives by believing something; not by debating and arguing about many things.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship,
Ch. 5. (1840)

8
If you'll believe in me, I'll believe in you.

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), *Through the
Looking-Glass*. Ch. 7. (1871)

9
Believe nothing rashly. (Nihil temere credi-deris.)

CATO (?), Collectio Distichorum: Prologus. No.
24 (c. 175 B.C.) Two similar Latin proverbs are, "Nil credam et omnia cavebo" (I will believe nothing, and be on my guard against all things), and "Nec cui de te plusquam tibi credas" (Do not believe anyone about yourself more than yourself). Still others are,
"What has always, everywhere and by everybody been believed" (Quod semper, quod ubique, at quod ab omnibus); "Tomorrow we will believe, not today at all" (Cras credemus, hodie nihil)

10
One does not have to believe everything one hears (Credere omnia vide ne non sit necesse.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 13. sec. 31.
(44 B.C.)

Of money, wit, virtue, believe one-fourth of what you hear.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 466. (1855)

Believe only half of what you see and nothing of what you hear.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, A Woman's Thoughts, p.
194. (1858) Quoted as "a cynical saying."

Believe a' ye hear, an' ye may eat a' ye see.

HISLOR, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 55. (1862)

1 The wise man loves to believe nothing; the simple man to believe all things. The latter is credulous to others, the former to himself. (Credere nil sapiens amat, omnia credere simplex; | scilicet his aliis credulus ille sibi.)

W. G. COLE, Credula Simplicitas. (c. 1853)

Benham says this was set up as an exercise at Rugby.

The more one knows, the less one believes. (Chi più sa, meno crede.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 208. (1856) An Italian proverb.

About 999 in 1000 believe everything; the other one believes nothing—except that it is a good thing for human society that the 999 believe everything.

MICHAEL J. DEE, Conclusions. Ch. 5. (1917)

2 Each man's belief is right in his own eyes.

WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 283. (1782)

3 We are born believing. A man bears beliefs, as a tree bears apples.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)

4 Believe that you have it, and you have it. (Credo quod habes, et habes.)

ERASMUS, Letter to Thomas More. (c. 1500)

Believe well, and have well, men say.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 568. (1732)

5 He does not believe, that does not live according to his Belief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1838. (1732)

That, which is easily done, is soon believed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4379. (1732)

6 He that believes all, misseeth; he that believeth nothing, hits not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 366. (1640)

He who believes everybody is at fault; he who believes nobody is equally so. (Quien a todos cree, yerra; quien a ninguno, no acierta).

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 239. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

7 We believe as much as we can. We would believe everything if we only could.

WILLIAM JAMES, The Principles of Psychology, ii, 299. (1889)

8 What is it men cannot be made to believe!

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to R. H. Lee. (1786)

9 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. (μακάριοι οἱ μὴ ἰδόντες καὶ πιστεύσαντες.)

New Testament: John, xx, 29. (c. A. D. 110)

The Vulgate is, "Beati qui non viderunt, et crediderunt." Hence the proverbial "doubting Thomas," because Thomas would not believe until he had seen—until, indeed, he had thrust his fingers into the wound in Jesus' side.

10 Somewhat costive of belief.

BEN JONSON, The Alchemist. Act ii, sc. 1. (1610)

Though dead to the faith that assured me of God, I mourn to the end the delights of belief.

(Quoique mort à la foi qui m'assurait de Dieu Je regrette toujours la volupté de croire.)

CHARLES M. GUERIN, Quoique Mort. (c. 1850)

Believing hath a core of unbelieving.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Songs of Seeking. (c. 1866)

A believer is a songless bird in a cage.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, Chicago, 21 Dec. 1873.

11 Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. (εἰ δύνῃ, πάντα δυνατόν τῷ πιστεύοντι.)

New Testament: Mark, ix, 23. (c. A. D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Si potes credere, omnia possibilia sunt credenti."

12 I will not believe it until I have read it. (Non credam nisi legero.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 73. (A. D. 103)

13 It is easier to believe than to doubt.

E. D. MARTIN, The Meaning of a Liberal Education, Ch. 5. (1926)

14 O belief! how much you block our way! (O cuider! combien tu nous empêches.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

15 Believe! No storm harms a man who believes. (Credite! credenti nulla procella nocet.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 11, l. 22. (c. 13 B. C.)

16 Do not believe hastily. (Nec cito credideris.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 653. (c. 1 B. C.)

Quick believers need broad shoulders.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 40. (1640)

17 This is to broad to be believed.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 198. (1576)

18 It is equally an error to believe all men or no man. (Utrumque enim vitium est, et omnibus credere et nulli.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilius. Epis. iii. (c. A. D. 65)

We must not believe all men, saith the precept, since every man may say all things. (Il ne fault pas croire à chascun, dit le précepte, parce que chascun peult dire toutes choses.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

19 A thing that nobody believes cannot be proved too often.

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act iii. (1897)

20 Men credit most easily the things which they do not understand. They believe most easily things which are obscure. (Maiorem fidem homines adhibent iis, quae non intelligunt.

... Cupidine ingenii humani libentius obscura credendi.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, ch. 22. (c. A. D. 104)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 11.

There is nothing believed so firmly as that of which one knows the least. (N'est rien creu si fermement que ce qu'on scait le moins.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 31. (1580) Montaigne adds (bk. iii, ch. 11). "Men are most apt to believe what they least understand." See also under IGNORANCE.

1 To believe what is past belief. (Etsi incredibilis credere.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 624. (163 B. C.)

Dead is the Son of God; that can be believed precisely because it is absurd. (Mortuus est Dei Filius; prorsus credibile, quia ineptum est.)

TERTULLIAN, De Carne Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (c. A. D. 200) It is from this sentence that Tertullian's so-called "rule of faith" was evolved. The proverb is given in various forms, "Credo quia impossibile" (I believe it because it is impossible), "Credo quia absurdum" (I believe it because it is absurd), "Certum est quia impossibile est" (It is certain because it is impossible).

It is believable because unbelievable (Ideo credendum quod incredibile.)

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy (1621) Paraphrasing Tertullian.

I can answer all the objections of Satan, with that odd resolution I learned of Tertullian. Certum est, quia impossibile est.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 9 (1642)

I can believe anything provided it is incredible

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

2 What man believes, God believes.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday (1849)

TO BELIEVE THE WORST, see under WORST.

BELL

3 A bell may have a crack, though invisible; take the clapper and strike, and you shall soon perceive it.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 73. (1629)

A cracked Bell can never sound well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 287 (1732)

Campana cascada, nunca sana A cracked bell is never sound

JOHN COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, 77. (1823)

4 He who rings the bell is quite safe. (A buen salvo está el que repica.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 31, 36, 43 (1615) I. e. the alarm bell; the ringer is out of harm's way.

He is out of gunshot, that rings the bell to the battle.

JAMES MARRE, tr., Celestina. Act xi. (1631)

5 He rong hem out a proces lyk a belle.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1615. (c. 1380)

Ringe it out as round as gooth a belle.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Prologue of the Pardoners Tale, l. 3. (c. 1387)

6 Lat see which of yew shal bere the belle To speke of love a-right.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 198. (c. 1380) To bear the bell: to take first place, to have the foremost rank. A reference to the bell worn by the bell-wether of a flock.

Of bewte and of boldnes I bere evermore the belle.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, p. 161. (1468) Of all prowde knaues thow beryst the belle.

JOHN SKELTON, Works, i, 127. (1529)

For beauty and stature she beareth the bell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546) So vices brag, but vertue beares the bell.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Glasse of Government Act iii, sc. 6 (1575)

For pure white the Lilly bears the bell

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Affectionate Shepherd, ii, 39. (1594)

In clothes, cheap handsomness doth bear the bell

HERBERT, The Church Porch. St. 32. (1633)

True merchants, they carry away the bell from all other nations

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader (1621) To carry away the bell: to carry off the prize.

E'en her merchants bore the bell

In eating and in drinking well.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto six. (1812)

Venice the bell from every city bore.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. Sec. 10. (1817)

7 He is like a Bell, that will go for everyone that pulls it.

GEORGE FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1923 (1732)

They are like Bells, every one in a several Note.

GEORGE FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4954. (1732)

TO AGREE LIKE BELLS, see under AGREEMENT.

8 If you love not the noise of the Bells, why do you pull the Ropes?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 2767. (1732)

He who cannot bear the clapper, should not pull the bell.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 10. (1875)

9 The Curfew tolls the knell of parting day.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard (1750)

Curfew must not ring to-night

ROSE HARTWICK THORPE, Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night. (1870) Mrs. Thorpe later changed "must" to "shall" in signed quotations from the poem.

10 Bells, the music nighest bordering upon heaven.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: New Year's Eve. (1823)

Bells are Music's laughter.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Marriage. (1827)

Men yt reade much, and worke litel, are as belles, the which do sound to cal others, and they themselves neuer enter into the church.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, The Diall of Princes, fo. 138. (1557)

They are like our bells, which can call the people together to the service of God, but cannot perform any service to God.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 117. (c. 1591)

Bells call others, but themselves enter not into the Church.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 573. (1640)
The Bell sends others to Church, but itself never minds the Sermon.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. 1754.

The bells call men to church, but never go themselves. (Die Glocken läuten anderen zur Kirche, kommen aber selbst nicht hinein.)

CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 318. (1856) A German proverb. The French say,

"Les cloches appellent à l'église, mais n'y entrent pas."

A bell never rings by accident. (Numquam temere tinnit tintinnabulum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 1004. (c. 194 B.C.)
Somebody has to ring it.

A town without bells is like a blind man without a staff, an ass without a crupper, and a cow without cymbals. (Vne ville sans cloches est comme vn aueugle sans baston, vn asne sans crochiere, & vne vache sans cymbales.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1534)

To fear the loss of the bell more than the loss of the steeple.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)

Fear not the loss of the bell more than the loss of the steeple.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p.7. (1855)

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 166. (1600)

The bell invites me.

Hear it not, Duncan; for it is the knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 1, 62. (1606)

Any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in Mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions Upon Emergent Occasions. No. xvii. (1624) Works (1839). iii, 575.

For Whom the Bell Tolls.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY. Title of novel. (1940)

How, how chimes the passing bell!

There's no music to a knell.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Passing Bell. (1646)

When thou dost hear a toll or knell,

Then think upon thy passing-bell.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

I call the living; I mourn the dead; I break the lightning. (Vivos voco; mortuos plango; fulgura frango.)

SCHILLER, The Bell: Motto. (c. 1795) The inscription on the great bell of Schaffhausen minster, which Schiller copied. There is a longer form: "Funera plango, fulgura frango, sabbato pango; | Excito lentos, dissipo ventos, paco cruentos" (I toll for funerals, I break the lightning, I announce the Sabbath; I wake the lazy, I dissipate the winds, I pacify the quarrelsome).

When the bell begins to toll,

Lord have mercy on the soul.

JOHN BRAND, Popular Antiquities, ii, 205. (1813)

The prisoner comes to meet his doom; . . .

The funeral bell begins to toll—

May heaven have mercy on his soul.

W. S. GILBERT, The Yeomen of the Guard. Act i. (1888)

They went and told the sexton, and

The sexton tolled the bell.

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Nelly Brown. (1839)

The ringing of the church bell is a much more melodious sound than any that is heard within the church.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 2 Jan., 1842.

The church bells that really matter ring inside of you.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 97. (1939)

BELL, BOOK AND CANDLE, see under CURSE.

BELLY

See also Stomach

It once happened that all the other members of a man mutinied against the stomach, which they accused as the only idle, uncontributing part of the whole body, while the rest were put to hardships and expense of much labor to supply and minister to its appetites.

MENENNIUS AGRIPPA, recounting an old fable.

(c. 500 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Coriolanus. WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 273.

tells the story at some length, and says that it was related by Pope Adrian IV to John Salisbury, when the latter asked, "Since you are a Father, why do you expect pensions from your children?"

I say, whatever you maintain

Of Alma in the heart or brain,

The plainest man alive may tell ye

Her seat of empire is the belly.

From hence she sends out those supplies

Which make us either stout or wise;

The strength of every other member

Is founded on your belly-timber.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 196. (1709)

The belly is a pot difficult to fill: it scorches up a man's virtue; it is like a thief who steals one's purse.

BAHRTRIARI, Vaidgya Sataka. No. 116. (c. A. D. 100)

<sup>1</sup> Where the belly is concerned, wisdom vanishes.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 418. (1817)

<sup>2</sup> It is difficult, my fellow citizens, to argue with the belly, since it has no ears. (χαλεπὸν μὲν ἐστίν, ὧ πολλοῖται, πρὸς γαστέρα λέγειν ὦτα οὐκ ἔχουσαν.)

MARCUS CATO, when the Roman citizens were insisting upon an unseasonable distribution of corn. (c. 190 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato, viii, 1. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 84, with the Latin, "Venter non habet aures." Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 47, with the comment, "When the belyes matter is in hands, honest reasons be nat admtyttd nor herde." Erasmus also cites the form, "Venter auribus caret," and still another is, "Venter famelicus auriculis caret."

The belly will not listen to advice. (Venter praecpta non audit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxi, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 64)

The hungry belly has no ears. (Le ventre affamé n'a point d'oreilles.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 15. (1545) In bk. iv, ch. 63, Rabelais uses the phrase again with "l'estomach" for "ventre." La Fontaine, Fables, ix, 18, gives the modern French, "Ventre affamé n'a point d'oreilles."

Perhaps Ladie Frances would saie, that is no fit time, as one would once inferre, who being re-proved at the table, for eating to much, saide, Pardon me, my bellie and my throate have no cares.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 139. (1574)

It is a hard thing to perswade the belly, because it hath no ears.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler, p. 144. (1653)

As Cato said, "the belly has no ears," but it has a mouth, into which a bridle must be put.

ARCHBISHOP LEIGHTON, Theological Lectures, xxii. (c. 1673)

The hungry belly doesn't hear words willingly. (Jejunus venter non audit verba libenter.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 54. (1853) Trench says that this is merely a medieval rhymed version of "Venter auribus caret."

<sup>3</sup> It's the guts that carry the feet, not the feet the guts. (Tripas llevan pies, que no pies á tripas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1615) Shelton's rendering (1620) is, "The belly carries the legs, and not the legs the belly."

Let the Guts be full, for it's they that carry the legs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3194. (1732) The stomach carries the feet. . . . Similarly it is said "The heart carries the feet."

A. COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p. 39. (1911)

<sup>4</sup> Let the belly be the servant of the mind. (Sit servus mentis venter.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 5. (c. A. D. 600)

<sup>5</sup> Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats. (τὰ βρώματα τῇ κοιλίᾳ, καὶ ἡ κοιλία τοῖς βρώμασιν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, vi, 13. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Esca ventri et venter escis." Quoted by St. AUGUSTINE, Epistles, xxix, 11.

<sup>6</sup> I sacrifice to no god save myself—
And to my belly, greatest of deities.

(ἀγὼ οὐτῖνι θῶ πλὴν ἐμοί, θεοῖσι δ' οὐ, καὶ τῇ μεγίστῃ γαστρὶ τῆδε δαιμόνων.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 334. (c. 440 B. C.)

Whose God is their belly. (ὣν ὁ θεὸς ἡ κοιλία.)

New Testament: Philipians, iii, 19. (c. A. D.

60) The Vulgate, "Quorum Deus venter est" My belly wishes to be my God in Christ's place.

(Venter meus vult mihi deus esse pro Christo.)
St. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Let. xiv, sec. 4. (A. D. 374)

Whose God is their Belly. (Des quelz Ventre est le Dieu.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 58. (1548)

My Belly, the greatest of all the Gods. (Mon Ventre, le plus grand de tous les Dieux.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 58.

Those whose bellies be their Gods, who offer their goodies as Sacrifice to their guttes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 38. (1579)

Let it not be supposed that I wish to make a god of the belly.

ANDREW COMBE, Principles of Physiology, iv, 120. (1837)

<sup>7</sup> The way to many an honest heart lies through the belly.

RICHARD FORD, Hand-Book for Travellers in Spain, i, 30. (1845)

The heart is hidden in the belly. (Jên hsin ko tu p'i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1495. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> The Belly hates a long Sermon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4407. (1732)

"A pudding sermon" is an Essex phrase for a short sermon.

The Epicure puts his Purse into his Belly; and the Miser his Belly into his Purse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4502

<sup>9</sup> In vain do the brows frown, the eyes sparkle, the tongue threaten, the fist bend, and the arm strike, except the belly be fed.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Life of Lord Burleigh. (1642)

I can reason down or deny everything except this perpetual belly: feed he must and will, and I cannot make him respectable.

R. W. EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne. (1850)

- 1 A little meat best fits a little bellie.
ROBERT HERRICK, A Ternarie of Littles. (1648)
- 2 There is nothing more shameless than a hateful belly, which bids a man perforce take thought thereof, be he never so sore distressed and laden with grief at heart. (οὐ γὰρ τι στυγερὴ ἐπὶ γαστέρι κύντερον ἄλλο· ἐπλετο.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 216. (c. 850 B.C.)
The origin, perhaps, of the Greek proverb, "ὡς κάκιστον θηρίον ἐστὶν ἡ γαστήρ" (The vilest of beasts is the belly).
- 3 For their cursed belly's sake men endure evil woes. (ἀλλ' ἐνεκ' οὐλομένης γαστρὸς κακὰ κήδε' ἔχουσιν ἄνθρωποι.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 344. (c. 850 B.C.)
In Odyssey, xvii, 228, Homer speaks of the "insatiate belly" (γαστέρ' ἀναίτος).
A ravening belly may no man hide, an accursed plague, which brings many evils upon men. (γαστέρα δ' οὐ πῶς ἔστιν ἀποκρύψαι μεμαίαν, | οὐλομένην, ἢ πολλὰ κακ' ἀνθρώποισι διδωσι.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 286.
An insatiate paunch is a pernicious sink, and the fountain of all diseases, both of body and Mind.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy (1621) As quoted by HAUSER, Diet Does It, p. 138. (1944)
- 4 Bread and salt will appease your growling belly. (Cum sale panis latrantem stomachum bene leniet.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. ii, l. 17. (30 B.C.)
The Germans say, "Salz und Brod thut's auch, wenn man hungriq ist." (Salt and bread will do when one is hungry).
- 5 By his paunch his backe should farre the worse.
WILLIAM HORNBY, The Scourge of Drunkennes, sig. B3. (1619)
The belly robs the back
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1659)
That is well hained [saved] that is hained off the belly.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 182 (1721)
If it were not for the Belly, the Back might wear Gold.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2690. (1732) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.
Your Belly will never let your Back be warm.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6043.
- 6 Better belly burst than good drink be lost.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)
Better belly burst than good meat lost.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1678)
Better belly burst than good liquor be lost.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
- 7 Never did he kiss a strange hand for his belly's sake (οὐποτε δ' ὀφείλειν ἔκυσεν χεῖρα γαστρὸς ἑκτης).
ISIDORUS OF ALGAE, Epigram. (c. A.D. 500) See Greek Anthology, vii, 156.

- 8 He who does not mind his belly, will hardly mind anything else.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 5 Aug., 1763.
- 9 Nothing is more easily satisfied than the belly. (Ventre nihil novi frugalius.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 6. (c. A.D. 120)
- 10 That which is in my weime [belly] is not in my testament.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 324. (1721)
- 11 Do not mourn the dead with the belly. (οὐ γὰρ ἔοικεν γαστέρι περθεῖσαι νεκρόν.)
PALLADAS, quoting Homer. (c. 500 B.C.) See Greek Anthology, x, 47.
- 12 That master of arts, that dispenser of genius, the Belly. (Magister artis ingenique largitor Venter.)
PERSIUS, Satires: Prologue, l. 10. (c. A.D. 58)
The master of art and giver of wit, Their belly.
BEN JONSON, The Poetaster: To the Reader. (1601)
The belly teaches all arts.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 498 (1855)
- 13 Every man strains his strength to defend his belly from weary famine. (γαστρι δὲ πᾶς τις ἀνὴρ λυδὸν αἰαντὴ τέταται.)
PINDAR, Isthmian Odes Ode i, l. 49 (c. 458 B.C.)
- 14 The man whose heart obeyeth his belly causeth disgust in place of love.
PEVIL-HOTEP, Instruction No. 14 (c. 3550 B.C.) Prisse Papyrus Gunn, tr.
Never good that mind their belly so much
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)
- 15 My back to the fire, my belly to the table, and a good deep dish (Le dos au feu, le ventre à table, & escuelle bien profonde.)
RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1534)
- 16 When belly with bad pains doth swell, It matters nought what else goes well.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Maxim 9. (c. 1258)
The belly binds the hands, the feet unnerves; He heeds not heaven who his belly serves.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 51.
The Rebellions of the Belly are the worst.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions and Troubles. (1612)
- 17 It behooves all men who wish to excel the other animals to strive with might and main not to pass through life . . . slaves to the belly. (Ventre obœdientia)
SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. i, sec. 1. (c. 41 B.C.)
Men given up to the belly. (Mortales dediti ventri.)
SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 2, sec. 8. (c. 41 B.C.)

Slaves to the belly and the most shameful parts of the body. (Dediti ventri et turpissimae parti corporis.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 85.

Such as for their bellies' sake

Creep and intrude, and climb into the fold.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 114. (1637)

1 How many men are kept busy to humor a single belly! (Quantum hominum unus venter exercet!)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 24. (c. A. D. 64)
Referring to a banquet.

2 A great part of liberty is a well regulated belly. (Magna pars libertatis est bene moratus venter.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxxiii, sec. 3 (c. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 13

3 His belly is as bright ivory overlaid with sapphires. (Venter eius eburneus, distinctus sapphiris.)

Old Testament: The Song of Solomon, v, 14 (c. 900 B. C.)

4 Evil beasts, slow bellies (καρσίρες ἀργαί.)

New Testament: Titus, i, 12. (c. A. D. 62) Paul is quoting from a Cretan poet

5 My belly did not blab, so I was still a Mayde
WILLIAM WARNER, Albion's England, iv, 47, 222 (1602)

No barricado for a belly; know't;
It will let in and out the enemy
With bag and baggage.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, 2.204 (1610)
She may plead her belly at worst.

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Act i, sc. 2 (1728)

Plead pregnancy, in order to escape hanging
EYES BIGGER THAN BELLY, see under EYE

II—The Full Belly

6 Let Martha die, but let her die with a full belly. (Muera Marta y muera harta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote Pt. ii, ch. 59. (1615)
Also a Persian proverb. See ROEBUCK, No 258.

7 With bely stif and toght As any labour.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Somnour's Tale, l. 559. (c. 1388)

8 A fat belly does not breed a subtle mind (παχία γαστήρ λεπτόν οὐ τίκτει νόον.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vi, No. 18 (1508) A Greek proverb, quoted by St. Jerome, which Erasmus Latinus, "Pinguis venter non gignit sensum tenuem" (A fat belly does not produce a delicate sensibility) A closer form is, "Venter obesus non gignit mentem subtilem."

This Proverbe is as true as common. That a fat bellie doth not engender a subtilt witte.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 142. (1574)

Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits—
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 26.

(1595) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 106, calls this "A groundless reflection upon fat men."

With the exception of Kelly, there is general agreement with Shakespeare's dictum.

Who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cresida, ii, 1, 79. (1601)

Gross feeders, great sleepers; great sleepers, fat bodies; fat bodies, lean brains.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act ii, sc. 1 (c. 1620) Henry IV of France is credited with an epigram, "Les grands mangeurs et les grands dormeurs sont incapables de rien faire de grand" (Great eaters and great sleepers are incapable of doing anything else that is great). A Latin proverb warns, "Non auriger piger" (No fat charioteer), no lazy person as manager. The Germans say, "Fette Hühner legen wenig Eier" (Fat hens lay few eggs). The Italians say, "Capo grasso, cervello magro" (Fat head, lean brain). "Fat head" is, of course, the modern term for a fool

Full bowls make empty brains

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Iron Age Pt. i, act i (1632)

Fat paunches make lean pates

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No 1506 (1732)

Full Bellies make empty Skulls

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No 1633 (1732)

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 359 (1855)

A full Belly makes a dull Brain.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758

Hold your Council before Dinner; the full Belly hates Thinking as well as Acting

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

9 He that is fed beleueth not the fasting (El pasciuto non crede ac digiuno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

He that hath gorged himselfe thinkes all mens mawes be full

RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pance. (1611)

He whose Belly is full believes not him whose is empty

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 2399. (1732)

10 That olde Proverbe may be verified. That from a full bellie proceedeth sounder counsell

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. iv, p. 140. (1574) Young, tr.

11 A full belly neither fights nor flies well.

GEORGE HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 93 (1640) BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 287. (1855)

Full guts neither run away nor fight well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1634. (1732)

12 When the beli is fwill, the bonis wold haue rest.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 129 (c. 1500)

Husbande (quoth she) I would we were in our nest.

When the bealy is full, the bones wold be at rest
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1516)

Quhen the bellie is full, the bones wald have rest.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 106. (c. 1595)

I sometimes take a nap after my pipe; for when the belly is full, the bones would be at rest.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

1 What avails it us to have our bellies full of meat, if it be not digested? (Que nous sert il d'avoir la panse pleine de viande, si elle ne se digere?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24. (1580)

2 May God look with hatred on the belly and its food, for it is owing to them that chastity breaks down. (γαστέρα μισήσει θεός καὶ βρώματα γαστρός· εἵνεκα γὰρ τούτων σωφροσύνη λύεται.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. 500 B.C.) See Greek Anthology, x, 57. A manuscript proverb of c. 1645 embodies the same idea: "When the belly is full, the mind is amongst the maids."

A full Belly is the Mother of all Evil.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

A full Belly brings forth every Evil.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

3 I have victualled my camp.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 345. (1678)

4 In fair round belly with good capon lined

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 154. (1600)

He had a broad face and a little round belly,

That shook, when he laughed, like a bowlful of jelly.

CLEMENT CLARKE MOORE, A Visit from St. Nicholas. (1823)

5 A bellyfull is a bellyfull.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 321. (1666)

MOTTEUX, Rabelais, v, 23. (1694)

A belly full's a belly full, whether it be meat or drink.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1678)

A bellyful's a bellyful. if it be but of wheat-straw.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A wamefou is a wamefou.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 10. (1823)

Belly full, praise to God. (Tripa llena a Dios alaba.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 283. A Spanish proverb.

6 A full belly does not work willingly. (Plenus venter non studet libenter.)

UNKNOWN, Regimen Sanitatis Salerni. (c.1100)

A belly full of gluttony will never study willingly. I.e. the old proverbial verse, Impletus venter non vult studere libenter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 146. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6115. (1732) A characteristic medieval monkish jingle.

III—The Empty Belly

7

A fasting belly may never be merry.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 131. (c. 1500)

An empty Belly bears no Body.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 596. (1732)

A tume [empty] belly makes a lazy back.

MICHAEL DENHEM, ed., Denham Tracts, i, 42. (c. 1850)

An empty belly makes no compliments.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 52. (1880) There is also a Latin jingle, "Inanis [or iejunus] venter non audit libenter."

8

What comedy, what actor is better than a disappointed belly? (Quee comoedia, mimus, quis melior plorante gula?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 157. (c. A.D. 120)

9

I am so soore forhungered, that my bealy weneth my throte is cutte.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. H2. (1540)

When hongry mawe thinks throat is cut in deed

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Churchyardes Chippes, p. 127. (1575)

The Belly thinks the Throate is cut.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 332 (1605)

Let's walk apace; hunger will cut their throats else.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Pilgrimage. Act ii, sc. 2. (1630)

Your weime [belly] thinks your wizan [throat] is cutted.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 379. (1721)

Your belly thinks your throat is cut.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

10

My belly was my only sun-dial, surer and more exact than any of them. (Nam unum me puero venter erat solarium multo omnium istorum optimum et verissimum.)

PLAUTUS (?), Bocotia. Frag. (c. 200 B.C.) See AULUS GELLIUS, iii, 3

Everybody knows there is no clock more regular than the belly. (Chose notoire qu'il n'est horloge plus iuste que le ventre.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 64. (1548)

Your belly chimes: it's time to go to dinner.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1678) See also under APPETITE.

11

His belly cries cupboard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 237. (1678)

My belly chym'd cupboard above half an hour ago.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 88. (1694)

My belly began to cry cupboard.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Whose belly sings cupboard, too?

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 20. (1826)

So now away home. My inside cries cupboard.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Hol Ch.3. (1855)

BENCH

1 The poor creatures . . . seated themselves on the "anxious benches."

FRANCES M. TROLLOPE, Domestic Manners of the Americans. Ch. 8. (1832)

In front of the pulpit there was a space railed off and strewn with straw, which I was told was the anxious seat, and on which sat those who were touched by their consciences.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Diary in America, 1839. Folks got up . . . and worked their way . . . to the mourners' bench, with the tears running down their faces.

MARK TWAIN. (Century Magazine, Feb., 1885.)

2 Item, to . . . for mending the peneles bench. W. H. TURNER, ed., Selections from the Records of the City of Oxford, p. 284. (1560) The penniless bench was a covered open-air seat for destitute wayfarers.

Every stoole he sate on was Penniles bench.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 244. (1580)

Wee will teach him such a lesson as shall cost him a chiefe place on penniless-bench for his labour

ROBERT GREENE, The Scottish History of James the Fourth. Act iv, sc. 3. (1598)

Bid him bear up; she shall not

Sit long on Penniless-Bench

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act iv, sc. 1. (1632)

BENDING

3 Be as bending as the reed, not as unbending as the cedar

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 21b. (c. 450)

And reed that boweth down for every blast.

Ful lightly, cesse wind, it wol aryse;

But no nil not an ook whan it is cast.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, li, 1387

Rather to bowe then breake is profitable.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Christyne. (1390)

Beter bowe than brest.

UNKNOWN, Twenty-six Poems, p. 54. (1413)

For better is the tree that bowe than breste.

UNKNOWN, Peter Idle's Instructions to His Son, l. 88. (c. 1420)

Better plye than breake

JEHAN PAISGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 660. (1530)

Better it is to boow then breake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

WILSON, Rhetorique, p. 189. (1560) DAVIES,

Scourge of Folly, p. 44. (1611) FULLER,

Gnomologia. No. 882. (1732)

Better, for a time, to bow to our foes, rather than to be broken by them.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State. Ch. 18 (1642)

I have had sorrows . . . but I have borne them ill. I have broken where I should have bent.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 79. (1840) A proverb in nearly all languages. The French say, "Il vaut mieux plier que rompre"; the Germans, "Lieber biegen als brechen"; the Spaniards, "Mejor es dobrar que quebrar";

The Dutch, "Beter buigen dan te breken."

Strong trees splinter in the storm, but the grass blade survives, because the grass can bend.

STEFAN HEYM, Hostages, p. 76. (1942)

4 Stoop as you go through the world, and you will miss many hard knocks.

COTTON MATHER, Remark, to Benjamin Franklin. (1724) Franklin, in a letter to Samuel Mather, dated 12 May, 1784, tells of the incident: "The last time I saw your father was in the beginning of 1724, . . . and on my taking leave he showed me a shorter way out of the house through a narrow passage, which was crossed by a beam over head. We were still talking as I withdrew, he accompanying me behind, and I turning partly towards him, when he said hastily. 'Stoop, stoop!' I did not understand him till I felt my head hit against the beam. He was a man that never missed any occasion of giving instruction, and upon this he said to me, 'You are young, and have the world before you; stoop as you go through it, and you will miss many hard thumps.' This advice . . . has frequently been of use to me; and I often think of it, when I see pride mortified, and misfortunes brought upon people by their carrying their heads too high "

5 By being a willow and not an oak.

SIR WILLIAM PAULET, FIRST MARQUIS OF WINCHESTER, when asked how he had managed to preserve himself in favor at court through so many changes in British rulers. (1570) Like the Vicar of Bray, he had held office during the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth. See CAMPDEN, Remains, p. 313. The phrase derives, of course, from Æsop's fable of the oak which was uprooted by the storm, and the reed which came through unharmed. La Fontaine retells the fable, Bk. I, fab. 22, and sums it up with the phrase, "I bend and do not break" (Je plie, et ne romps pas). See also under OAK

6 If the wind be strong, yield to the wind; if the rain be heavy, yield to the rain. (Fêng ta sui fêng; yu ta sui yü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1973. (1875)

BENEDICK, see under Marriage

BENEFIT

See also Favor; Gifts; Injuries and Benefits; Kindness; Turn: Good Turn

7 Never run with swift steps to acquire a benefit; [On the other hand] never act in such a way as to destroy it.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxii, l. 17. (c. 700 B.C.) Budge, tr.

8 Benefactors seem to love those whom they benefit more than those who receive benefits love their benefactors. (οἱ δ' εὐεργέται τοὺς εὐεργετηθέντας δοκοῦσι μᾶλλον φιλεῖν ἢ οἱ ἐδ' παθόντες τοὺς δρᾶσαντας.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. vii, sec. 1. (c. 335 B. C.)

It is the nature of men to be as much bound by the benefits they confer as by those they receive. (E la natura delli uomini è così obbligarli per li benefizii che si fanno, come per quelli che si ricevono.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 10. (1513)
He who benefits another loves him better than the other loves him. (Celuy qui bien fait à quel'un l'ayme mieulx, qu'il n'en est aymé.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580) Quoting Aristotle.

He that has once done you a kindness will be more ready to do you another, than he whom you yourself have obliged.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1. (1785) Quoted as a maxim.

1
If you confer a benefit, never remember it;
If you receive one, remember it always.
(Tu bene si quid facias, nec meminisse fas est;
Quae bene facta accipias, perpetuo memento.)

CHILON OF LARDEMON, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) One of the Seven Sages of Greece. See AUSONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, i.6.

Keep in memory a benefit received (Benefici accepti esto memor.)

CATO (?), Disticha: Prol. No. 50. (c. 175 B. C.)

Let others' kindness frankly be revealed.
Your own good turns to others keep concealed.
(Officium alterius multis narrare memento:
at quaecumque aliis benefeceris ipse, sileto.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 15.

Let him who has conferred a benefit conceal it;
let him who has accepted one disclose it. (Qui dedit beneficium taceat; narret, qui accipit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 60) Paraphrasing Chilon.

When befriended, remember it.

When you befriend,—forget it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

2
It is a law of the gods, never broken, to sell somewhat dearly the great benefits they bestow upon us. (C'est un ordre des dieux qui jamais ne se rompt. | De nous vendre un peu cher les grands biens qu'ils nous font.)

CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act ii, sc. 1. (1640)

3
He is more noble that deserves, than he that confers Benefits.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1925. (1732)

4
Benefits please like flowers while they are fresh.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 42. (1640)

The last Benefit is most remembered.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4622. (1732)

5
Thanksgiving for a former, doth invite
God to bestow a second benefit.

ROBERT HERRICK, Thanksgiving. (1647)

Prayers precede, and Thanks succeed the benefit.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt.ii, ch.31. (1651)

6
No one wearies of benefits received. (οὐδεὶς κάμνει ὠφελούμενος.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 74. (c. A. D. 174)

7
A chief source for evils among men are benefits, excessive benefits. (ἀρχὴ μεγίστη τῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποις κακῶν ἀγαθὰ, τὰ λίαν ἀγαθὰ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 724. (c. 300 B. C.)

8
To accept a benefit is to sell one's freedom. (Beneficium accipere libertatem est vendere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No 61 (c.43 B. C.)

To ask a favor is a kind of slavery. (Rogare officium servitus quodammodo est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No 641 (c.43 B. C.)

Benefits make a man a slave

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs No 689

(1817) A slave, that is, to the benefactor.
The Germans say, "Geschenk nehmen, macht eigen."

There is a hook in every benefit, that sticks in his jaws that takes that benefit, and draws him whither the benefactor will

JOHN DONNE, Sermons, p. 550 (c. 1625)

He who accepts [a benefit] from another, sells his liberty (Chi dell' altrui prende, | La sua libertà vende.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 176. (1856) An Italian proverb.

9
When you benefit the deserving, you oblige all men. (Beneficium dignis ubi des omnes obliges.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No 91 (c.43 B. C.)

A benefit is best bestowed when the recipient has a good memory. (Optime positum est beneficium [bene] ubi meminit qui accipit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 491.

They are either rogues or fools who think benefits are merely gifts. (Beneficia donari aut mali aut stulti putant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 93.

Who knows how to return benefits receives the most (Beneficia plura recipit qui scit reddere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 61.

10
It is high enough interest for a benefit to remember it. (Sat magna usura est pro beneficio memoria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No.683. (c.43 B. C.)

There are three parts in a benefit: the one of the giver, the second of the receiver, the third of the remunerator; and the receiver rewards the giver when he freely receives the benefit, and always remembers it. (Trois parties estre en benefice: l'une du donnant, l'autre du recepuant, la tierce du recompensant: & le recepuant tresbien recompenser le donnant, quand il accepte volontiers le bienfait, & le retient en soubuenance perpetuelle.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1548)

11
One family builds a wall, and two families get the benefit. (Yi chia ta ch 'iang, liang chia fang pien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 698. (1875)

1 Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 184. (1600)

2 It is disgraceful not to be able to return a benefit as well as an injury. (τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι ἀμείνασθαι ὁμοίως εὐ παθόντα, ὥσπερ καὶ κακῶς.)

SOCRATES, when refusing to visit Archelaus. (c. 400 B.C.) See ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 23, 8.

That man is worthless who knows how to receive a benefit, but not how to return one. (Nam improbus est homo qui beneficium scit accipere et reddere nescit.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 762. (c. 200 B.C.)

A rascal knows how to ask a benefit, but not how to return one. (Improbus officium scit poscere, reddere nescit.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis: Collectio Monostichorum No. 17. (c. 175 B.C.)

3 Benefits are only acceptable so far as they can be requited; beyond that point, instead of gratitude they excite hatred. (Beneficia eo usque laeta sunt, dum videntur exsolvi posse: ubi multum antevenere, pro gratia odium redditur.)

TACITUS, Annals Bk. iv, sec. 18. (c. A.D. 116)
André Gide paraphrases this in Les Faux Monnayeurs, ii, 3: "Benefits, says Tacitus, are only agreeable as long as one can repay them."

Almost everyone takes pleasure in returning small obligations; many are grateful for moderate ones, but there is scarcely anyone who has anything but ingratitude for great ones. (Presque tout le monde prend plaisir à s'acquitter des petites obligations: beaucoup de gens ont de la reconnaissance pour les médiocres; mais il n'y a guère personne qui n'ait de l'ingratitude pour les grandes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 299. (1665)

Benefits too great
To be repaid, sit heavy on the soul,
As unrequited wrongs.

THOMAS GRAY, Agrippina. Act i, sc. 1. (1742)
BENEFIT OF CLERGY, see under CLERGY.

BENEVOLENCE

See also Philanthropy

4 The beginning of the law is benevolence, and with benevolence it ends.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 14a. (c. 450)

To be benevolent is to do the will of heaven.
KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk. I. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

5 It is very hard to distinguish universal and widespread benevolence from consummate tact. (Il est bien malaisé de distinguer la bonté générale et répandue sur tout le monde, de la grande habileté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 620. (1665)
No quality is rarer than true benevolence; even those who imagine they possess it are generally merely of a weak or complaisant nature. (Rien n'est plus rare que le véritable bonté; ceux même qui croient en avoir n'ont d'ordinaire que de la complaisance ou de la faiblesse.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 481. (1665)

6 The benevolent has no enemy.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. i, pt. i, ch. 5. (c. 300 B.C.)
Benevolence is the tranquil habitation of man, and righteousness is his straight path.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 10.
Benevolence is man's mind, and righteousness is man's path.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vi, pt. i, ch. 11.
Benevolence is the distinguishing characteristic of man. As embodied in man's conduct, it is called the path of duty.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. ii, ch. 16

7 God loveth the benevolent.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. iii, v. 134. (c. 622) Quoted by SAMI, Gulistan, i, 1.

8 The services of a benevolent mind have no end. (Officium benivoli animi finem non habet.)

PETILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 484. (c. 43 B.C.)

9 Benevolence is the medicine for all ills.

SAMI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec. 5. (c. 1260)

10 He who seeks to be rich will not be benevolent. He who wishes to be benevolent will not be rich.

YANG HOO. Quoted by MENCIVS, iii, i, 3. (c. 300 B.C.)

BEST

See also Worst: Best and Worst

11 May all be for the best! (εὖ γὰρ εἴη.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 216. (458 B.C.) A favorite sentiment with Æschylus, which he expressed in different ways. In l. 674 of Agamemnon he has γέροισι δ' ὥς ἀριστα (May all turn out for the best), and this is repeated in The Libation-Bearers, l. 782. In The Suppliant Maidens, l. 974, he says the same thing in a third way, εἴη δὲ τὰ λῶστα.

May the gods order all things for the best. (σφῶν δ' ὅπασι ἀριστα συμφέρει θεός.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 627. (c. 409 B.C.)

12 Give to the world the best you have.

And the best will come back to you

MADELEINE BRINGS, Life's Mirror. (c. 1890)

13 The best is always the cheapest.

CARIER, Six Mille Proverbs. See CHEAPNESS

- <sup>1</sup> The best is as good as stark naught.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 14. (1639)
- <sup>2</sup> The man who makes the best of everything
He lights upon will not fare ill.
(ἀλλ' οὐντηγχάνων τὰ πράγματ' ὁρθῶς ἂν τιθῇ, πράξει καλῶς.)
EURIPIDES, Bellerophon. Frag. 287 Nauck. (c. 430 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 467A.
It seems I must, as the saying goes, make the best of what I've got. (τὸ παρὸν εὖ ποιεῖν.)
PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 499C. (c. 385 B.C.)
Make the best of both worlds.
KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 12. (1855)
We have learnt . . . to make the best of both worlds.
J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Calvinism. (1871)
- <sup>3</sup> The best Cart may overthrow. The best Cloth may have a Moth in it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 4410-1. (1732) See under ACCIDENT.
- <sup>4</sup> In the arts the best is good enough. (In der Kunst ist das Beste gut genug.)
GOETHE, Italienische Reise: Letter, Naples, 3 March, 1787. Apparently the source of the German proverb, "Das Beste ist gut genug" (The best is good enough)
- <sup>5</sup> The oil which is on top, the wine which is in the middle, and the honey which is at the bottom, are thought to be the best. (Cur oleum quod in summo est, vinum quod in medio, mel quod in fundo optimum esse credantur.)
MACROBIUS, Saturnalia, vii, 12. (c. A. D. 400)
Wine in the middle, oyle above, and hony beneath.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)
It is an old and true rule, "The best oil is in the top; the best wine in the middle; and the best honey in the bottom."
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Hants, vi, 3. (1662) RAY, Proverbs, p. 41, gives the Italian, "Vino di mezo, oglio di sopra. & miele di sotto."
The best smell is bread, the best savour salt, the best love that of children.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 743. (1640)
The best Metal is Iron; the best Vegetable, Wheat; but the worst Animal, Man.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4415. (1732)
The best Fish swim deep.
The best is at the bottom.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 4412-3.
- <sup>6</sup> It is a funny thing about life, if you refuse to accept anything but the best you very often get it.
SOMERSET MAUGHAM, The Mixture as Before, p. 63 (1940)

- <sup>7</sup> The best things are most difficult. (χαλεπὰ τὰ καλά.)
PLATO, Cratylus. (c. 375 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 9C, and referred to as a proverb. Sometimes rendered, "Good things are hard." See under GOODNESS.
Excellent things are hard to come by.
JOHN SWAN, Speculum Mundi, p. 465. (1635)
The best things are worst to come by.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 87. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1670)
The best Things are hard to come by.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4420. (1732)
- <sup>8</sup> You did your best. (Te fecisse sedulo.)
PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 464. (c. 200 B.C.)
Let this suffice, by this conceive the rest,
He should, he could, he would, he did his best.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Look Home. (a. 1595)
Let each man do his best.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 2, 92. (1597)
Each man swore to do his best.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 631. (1663)
Unsham'd, though foil'd, he does the best he can.
JOHN DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii. l. 741. (1700)
Let fowk bode weel, an' strive to do their best,
Nae mair's required—let Heav'n mak out the rest.
ALLAN RAMSAY, The Gentle Shepherd. Act i, sc. 2. (1725)
Who does the best his circumstance allows
Does well, acts nobly; angels could no more.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 91. (1742)
And aiblins, when they winna stand the test,
Wink hard, and say, "The folks hae done their best!"
ROBERT BURNS, Scots Prologue for Mrs. Sunderland, l. 39. (1790)
Let every man . . . die with the consciousness that he has done his best.
SYDNEY SMITH, Of Occupation. (c. 1830) See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, l. 121.
Our best is bad, nor bears thy test;
Still, it should be our very best.
ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Canto viii (1850)
If he'd a reg'lar task to do,
He never took no rest;
Or if 'twas off-and-on—the same—
He done his level best.
MARK TWAIN, He Done His Level Best (1875)
Attributed to a mythical Simon Wheeler. Also ascribed to Mark Twain is, "He done his level damndest; angels could do no more."
Say not that she did well or ill,
Only, "She did her best."
DINAH MARIA MULOCK, Epitaph. (c. 1880)
One who did his best.
J. R. LOWELL, Verses Sent to Grover Cleveland, 10 Dec., 1889.
- <sup>9</sup> There's ne'er a best among them, as the fellow said by the fox-cubs.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 228. (1678)

A veritable Lord Mayor's fool; "the best of everything did for him."

J. R. ROBINSON, Old Q., p. 123. (1895) An echo of an old saying, "The Lord Mayor's fool, who likes everything that is good."

<sup>1</sup>
The best is reserved to the last. (Iucundissimum . . . in finem sui differt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 65)

The foremost was alway behynde.

CHAUCER, The Book of the Duchesse, l. 890. (c. 1369)

Take thys in worth, the best is behynde.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), i, 17. (c. 1529)

The greatest thing is yet behinde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 146 (1579)

The greatest is behind.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 3, 116. (1605)

For now the proverb true I find,

That the best part is still behind.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Works (Hazlitt), i, 49 (1630)

The last best, like to good wives daughters.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 324. (1721)

Like the wife wi' the mony dochters, the best's aye hindmost.

ALEXANDER HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 214 (1862)

Grow old along with me!

The best is yet to be.

The last of life, for which the first was made.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra, l. 1. (1864)

<sup>2</sup>
All is ordered for the best. (πάντα γὰρ ἔχει τάδε κῆπος.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1779. (c. 408 B. C.)

"All for the best" is an apt saying. ("Quid si hoc melius?" opportune dici.)

CICERO, Epistulae ad Atticum Bk. vii, epis. 3. (50 B. C.)

Be thou not wrooth, I hyde it for the beste.

(Ch' io 'l taccio per lo meglio e non tel dico.)

Boccaccio, Il Filostrato, Canto ii, st. 3. (c. 1350) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde Bk. i, l. 581. (c. 1380)

He took al for the beste

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1324. (c. 1380)

Wel she saugh that it was for the beste.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 118. (c. 1388)

I woot wel clerkes wol seyn as hem leste

By arguments, that al is for the beste.

CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 158.

Safe on this Maxim with the Writer rest,

That all that that happens, happens for the best.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanach, 1751.

All is for the best in the best of all possible worlds. (Dans ce meilleur des mondes possibles . . . tout est au mieux.)

VOLTAIRE, Candide. Ch. 1. (1758) This ever-recurrent phrase, which Voltaire puts into the mouth of Dr. Pangloss, was a jibe at Leibnitz's philosophy of Optimism

Whatever is—is best.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Whatever Is, Is Best (c. 1900) See also under OPTIMISM.

I hate the Pollyanna pest

Who says that All Is for the Best.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, Thoughts on the Cosmos (1924) Pollyanna, the over-optimistic heroine of a story for children by Eleanor H. Porter. (1920) One of the few instances in which a contemporary author has added a new word to the language. Conan Doyle with "Sherlock" and Sinclair Lewis with "Babbitt" are others.

Some people are just naturally Pollyanna

OGDEN NASH, The Germ. (1940)

I agreed with happy Miss Emily that everything was for the best in the best of possible worlds

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Moving Finger, p. 228 (1942)

<sup>3</sup>
The best is the enemy of the good (Le mieux est l'ennemi du bien.)

VOLTAIRE, La Bégueule (1772) Ascribed by Voltaire to "a wise Italian," said to be Boccaccio. The Italian is, "Il meglio è l'inimico del bene."

The best is oftentimes the enemy of the good.

ARCHBISHOP TRENCH, Epist. Seven Ch.: Preface, iii (1861)

Every respectable Pharisee proves the truth of the saying that "The good is the enemy of the best."

KELMAN, Thoughts on Things Eternal, p. 108 (1912)

The good is the enemy of the best

RALPH A. HABAS, Morals for Moderns, p. 211 (1939) Quoting an "old aphorism."

BETRAYAL

<sup>4</sup>
Who doth vnto me better then he is woont, he hath betrayed me, or els wyl betray me (Chi mi fa meglio che non sole, tradito mi ha ó tradir mi vole.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Frutes, fo. 28. (1578)

He that speaks me fairer than his woont was too
Hath done me harme, or meanes for to doo.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie (Arber), p. 295. (1589)

He that is kinder than he is wont, hath a Design upon thee.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2180. (1732)

<sup>5</sup>
To aim at never betraying others is to court frequent betrayal. (L'intention de ne jamais tromper nous expose à être souvent trompés.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 118 (1665)

<sup>6</sup>
Betrayers are hated even by those whom they benefit. (Proditores, etiam iis quos anteponunt, inuisi sunt.)

TACITUS, Annals, Bk. i, l. 58. (c. A. D. 116) "Betrogene Betrüger" (The betrayer betrayed) is a phrase of Lessing, "Traditus non victus" (Betrayed not conquered), a Latin proverbial phrase.

BETTER

<sup>1</sup> Seilde comed se betere. [Seldom comes the better.]

FRANCIS DOUCE, Illustrations of Shakespeare, ii, 34. The proverb is from a manuscript of the time of Henry III, c. 1272, where the story is related of the monks who prayed for the death of their abbot, because of his penuriousness. He did die, and the next abbot was even worse. Again the monks prayed, and again the abbot died, and again the new one was worse than his predecessors. So one of the monks suggested that perhaps they should pray for the abbot to live, for who could say what the fourth would be like? "Seldom comes a better."

It is comynly sayd that selde cometh the better.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 299. (1519)

Sceldome cumth the better, come or go who will.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 144. (1562)

Bad news, by 'r lady; seldom comes the better.

I fear, I fear 'twill prove a troublous world.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 3, 4. (1592)

I pray God save my master's life, for seldom comes the better!

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, ii, 1, 127. (1599)

Change, 'tis true, but seldom comes a better.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 339. (1740)

What says the very sooth proverb, "Seldom comes a better."

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 6. (1820)

<sup>2</sup> I suffer the bad, hopyng for the better. (Patisco il male, sperando il bene.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) The French say, "Bien vient à mieux, et mieux à mal" (Good grows to better, and better to bad.)

<sup>3</sup> If better were within, better would come out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2672. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> For bet, for wers, for oght, for noght,
Sche passeth nevere from my thought.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 24. (1390)

For bettere for wers for richere for pouerer.

UNKNOWN, Sarum Manuale: In Sponsalibus. (a. 1500) This was the precursor of The Book of Common Prayer (1549), in which the same form is used.

For better for worse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 122. (1639)

<sup>5</sup> Good is good, but better carries it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 456. (1640)

Good is not good, where better is expected.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. xi, sec. 3. (1655)

Though good be good, yet better is better.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1670)

The Italians say, "Il buono è buono, ma il meglio vince."

<sup>6</sup> As good neuer a whit as neuer the better.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>7</sup> I'm no better than the best.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Divine Tragedy: Third Passover. Pt. vii, l. 4. (1871) See also under MAN: MOST MEN ARE BAD.

<sup>8</sup> Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 369. (1605)

Better so than worse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 925. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> All these I better in one general best.

Thy love is better than high birth to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet xci. (1609)

Love betters what is best.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 25. (1822)

<sup>10</sup> Why should I leave the better, choose the worse? (πῶς δὴρ' ἐγὼ κεῖν' ἀρ' ἀβρομ' ἀφείς τάδε;)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 599. (c. 409 B. C.) Storr, tr.

<sup>11</sup> This truth within thy mind rehearse,
That in a boundless universe

Is boundless better, boundless worse.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 25. (1842)

<sup>12</sup> Nothing but may be better, and every better might be best.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Commendation. (1839)

<sup>13</sup> [His] wife was no better than she should be.

UNKNOWN, Pasquil's Jests, p. 35. (1604)

No better than you should be.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Coxcomb. Act

iv, sc. 3. (1612)

She is no saint, she is no better than she should be

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 172. (1666)

FIELDING, The Temple Beau. Act iv, sc. 5

(1730) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i

(1738) FITCH, Captain Jinks. Act i. (1901)

CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 47

(1941) BAILEY, Orphan Ann, p. 175. (1941)

etc., etc.

The shepherd thought her no better than she should be, a little loose in the hilts, and free of her hips.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. I, ch. 3. (1700)

Some say, "A very fine lady"; others, "I'll warrant you, she is no better than she should be."

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 503. (1712)

He's just—nae better than he should be.

BURNS, Dedication to Gavin Hamilton (1786)

We're none of us better than we ought to be.

B. P. SHILLABER, Life and Sayings of Mrs. Partington. (1854)

No better than you ought to be. Just good enough.

H. B. FULLER, Striking an Average. (1901)

She looks no better than she should be.

ANN BRIDGE, Frontier Passage, p. 5. (1943)

BETTERS

1 Fight valiantly with your betters. (κρῆσσοις ἰφί μάχεσθαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxi, l. 486. (c. 850 B. C.)

Not so at Troy did I bear myself, but ever was matched with my betters. (Certans semper melioribus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. v, l. 19. (30 B. C.)

Be busie or bolde With his biggers or betters.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

2 He loseth many a good bit that striveth with his betters.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 9 (1659)

3 Don't worry your betters, who don't know you are born. (Meliozem noli molestare, qui te natum non putat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. (c. A. D. 60)

4 Make way for your betters. (Da locum mellioribus.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 522 (161 B. C.)

BETTING, see Gambling

BEZONIAN

5 Great men oft die by vile bezonians.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 1, 134. (1591)

Recruits sent from Spain to Rome were called bezogni, because they were in need of everything, from the Italian bisogno, need Florio defined them as "new leuied souldiers such as come needy to the war."

Under which king, Besonian? speak, or die.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 3, 117. (1598)

A base Besonio, fitter for the spade than the sword

ROBERT JOHNSON, Kingdom and Commonwealth, 55. (1603)

Base and pilfering bezognios and marauders

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 16 (1820)

Out on ye, cullions and bezonians!

LYTTON, The Last of the Barons, i, 11. (1843)

BIBLE, THE

6 His studie was but litel on the bible.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 440
(c. 1386) See also GOSPEL.

7 He has the Bible in his Hand, and the Alcoran in his Heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1879. (1732)

8 The inspiration of the Bible depends upon the ignorance of the gentleman who reads it.

INGERSOLL, Speech, New York, 25 April, 1881

9 Search the scriptures. (ἐπευρίνατε τὰς γραφάς.)

New Testament: John, v, 39. (c. A. D. 110) The Vulgate is, "Scrutamini Scripturas."

Scrutamini Scripturas. These two words have undone the world.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Scripture. (c. 1650)

10 There is nothing patent in the New Testament that is not latent in the Old. (In vetere novum latet, in nova vetus patet.)

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. iv, p. 153. (1904)

11 The Bible and a stone do well together.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsall Transpos'd.
(1672) Marvell says this is a Welsh proverb, "meaning, perhaps, that if one miss, the other will hit."

12 I am a Bible-bigot. I follow it in all things, both great and small.

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 2 June, 1766.

Bible belt.

H. L. MENCKEN, referring to that section of the South inhabited by Bible-bigots. (c. 1924)

BIG

13 [They] look as though they had eaten bulbeefe.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, sig. T270. (1580)

To look as big, as if he had eaten bull beef.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 164. (1670)

He looks as big as bull beef

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 257. (1681)

You may go, and be a governor, and look as big as bull-beef.

PETER MOTTUUX, tr., Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5 (1712)

As big as bull-beef at Candlemas

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 58. Evans (Leics. Words, 112) explains that "as big as bull-beef" is comparable to "as proud as a pump wi' two spouts"

14 Ful hyg he was of brawn and eek of bones

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 548
(c. 1386) TENNYSON, Enid, l. 489, uses the phrase, "big of bone."

15 As big as a parson's barn.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 58. (1869)

The phrase refers to the time when the minister of the parish received his tithes in kind instead of in cash, and had to have a big barn in which to store them.

16 We had a cheese very greate,

But the greatest crabs are not alwaies the best meate.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11 (1546)

17 Statues . . . bigger than life.

WILLIAM HOGARTH, The Analysis of Beauty, xi, 85. (1753) Perhaps the forerunner of "As large as life and twice as natural."

18 Size is a matter of opinion.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 34
(1859)

19 Not less large than Canada. (N'estoit moins grand que de Canada.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 2. (1548)

THE BIGGER THEY COME THE HARDER THEY FALL.
see under FALL.

BIGOTRY

<sup>1</sup> Bigotry murders Religion, to frighten fools with her ghost.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 101. (1820)

<sup>2</sup> To take up half on trust, and half to try,
Name it not faith, but bungling bigotry.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 141. (1687)

<sup>3</sup> All bigotries hang to one another.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams. 1814.

<sup>4</sup> A bigot is a person who, under an atheist king, would be an atheist. (Un dévot est celui qui, sous un Roi athée, serait athée.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. iv, No. 39. (1688)

A bigot delights in public ridicule, for he begins to think he is a martyr.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. Let. 1. (1807)

BIOGRAPHY

See also Death: De Mortuis

<sup>5</sup> One of the new terrors of death.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT (c. 1730). As quoted by ROBERT CARRUTHERS, Life of Pope, p. 149. Arbuthnot was referring to the six-penny lives of prominent persons which Edmund Curll was in the habit of issuing immediately after their deaths.

Death was now armed with a new terror.

LORD BROUGHAM. See CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chancellors, vii, 163.

The poor dear dead have been laid out in vain;
Turn'd into cash, they are laid out again!

THOMAS HOOD, On Reading a Diary Lately Published. (c. 1827)

Every great man nowadays has his disciples, and it is always Judas who writes the biographies.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

<sup>6</sup> Biography is the only true history.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 13 Jan., 1832. See also under HISTORY.

A well-written life is almost as rare as a well-spent one.

CARLYLE, Essays: The State of German Literature. (1833)

BIRD

Proverbs relating to the more important birds will be found under their several names, Black-bird, Lark, Nightingale, etc.

<sup>7</sup> If bird prey on bird, how can it be pure? (ὅπριος ὄρνις πῶς ἂν ἀγνέται φαγών;)

ÆSCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 226. (c. 485 B. C.) A proverb which appears in many forms: "Dog won't eat dog" (κύων κυρὸς οὐχ ἀπτεται), and the Latin, "Canis non caninam est."

<sup>8</sup> Nobody knows where my treasures repose, unless it be some bird. (οὐδεὶς οἶδεν τὸν θησαυρὸν τὸν ἐμὸν πλὴν εἰ τις ὄρ' ὄρνις.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 601. (414 B. C.)

The usual form of the proverb is, "Nobody can see me, unless it be some bird" (οὐδεὶς με θεωρεῖ, πλὴν ὁ περιπτάμενος ὄρνις).

Only a bird could see me. (πλὴν εἰ τις οἶδεν ὄρνις.)

ARISTOTLE, Fragment. (c. 400 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 28, with the Latin, "Nisi si qua vidit avis."

<sup>9</sup> I know because I heard the whispering of the fig-leaves. (ὥς ἐγὼ πολλῶν ἀκούσας οἶδα θρίων τὸν ψόφον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 436. (422 B. C.)

Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter. (Aves caeli portabunt vocem tuam, et qui habet pennas annuntiabit sententiam.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x. 20 (c. 250 B. C.)

I did lately heere . . . by one byrd that in mine eare was late chaunting

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5 (1546)

I had a little bird, that brought me newes of it.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. F3 (1583)

I heard a bird so sing

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 5, 113 (1598)

I heard a bird sing, they mean him no good office.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act iv, sc. 2 (1618)

But I have also heard a sweet bird sing

HENRY FIELDING, Pasquin. Act iv (1736)

I heard the little bird say so.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 23 May, 1711.

A bird of the air shall carry the clatter

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818)

Stone walls have ears, and a bird of the air shall carry the matter

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 6. (1822)

A little bird has whispered a secret to me.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 39 (1833)

I have had a bird too singing something in my ear.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil, p. 285. (1845)

A little butterfly must have told him

O. HENRY, (W. S. PORTER), Buried Treasure.

(1909) Of a collector of butterflies. "Bird" becomes "finger" or "thumb" on the continent. The Germans say, "Mein kleiner Finger hat es mir gesagt"; the French, "Mon petit doigt me l'a dit" (My little finger told me). The third witch in Macbeth, iv, 1, alludes to the superstition underlying the phrase when she says, "By the pricking of my thumbs, Something wicked this way comes."

<sup>10</sup> Birds dwell with their kind. (Volatilia ad sibi similia conveniunt.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiastics), xxvii, 9. (c. 190 B. C.)

BIRDS OF A FEATHER FLOCK TOGETHER, see LIKE-NESS: LIKE TO LIKE.

- 1 Every bird must hatch its own eggs.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, c6.
(1616) MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)
FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1409. (1732)
- 2 Not to find nests where one thinks to find birds. (No haber hallado nidos donde pensó hallar pájaros.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 15. (1615)
- 3 The little birds of the field have God for their purveyor and caterer. (Las avecitas del campo tienen a Dios por su proveedor y despensero.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)
Learn from the birds what food the thickets yield
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 173. (1733)
God gives every bird its food, but does not throw it into the nest.
J. G. HOLLAND, Gold Foil: Providence (1859)
- 4 In the nests of last year there are no birds of this year. (En los nidos de antaño, no hay pájaros hogaño.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 74. (1615)
There are no Birds this Year, in last Year's Nest.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4863. (1732)
Enjoy the Spring of Love and Youth.
To some good angel leave the rest;
For Time will teach thee soon the truth,
There are no birds in last year's nest!
H. W. LONGFELLOW, It Is Not Always May.
(1840) Longfellow quotes the Spanish proverb as "No hay pájaros en los nidos de antaño"
There is no bird in any last year's nest
AUSTIN DOBSON, The Dying of Tanneguy du Bois (1885)
- 5 Tak any brid, and put it in a cage,
And do al thyn entente and thy corage
To fostre it tendrely with mete and drinke,
Of alle deyntees that thou canst bithinke,
And keep it al-so clenly as thou may;
Al-though his cage of gold be never so gay.
Yet hath this brid, by twenty thousand fold,
Lever in a forest, that is rude and cold,
Gon ete wormes and swich wrecchednesse
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Manciple's Tale, l. 59. (c. 1389)
The cage does not feed the birds
PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 11. (1693) An interpolation by Motteux. The Italians say, "La bella gabbia non nudrisce l' uccello" (The handsomest cage doesn't nourish the bird).
It is the beautiful bird which is put in a cage (Chiao niao pei lung.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs No. 888. (1875)
She's a bird in a gilded cage.
A. J. LAMB, A Bird in a Gilded Cage (1900)
She's just a bird in a gilded cage.
CHARLOTTE ARMSTRONG, Lay On, Mac Duff, p. 65. (1942)
- 6 Such bird, such neast.
COTGRAVE, French-English Dict.: Nid. (1611)
As the bird is, such is the nest.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 296. (1666)
A little Bird is content with a little Nest.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 244. (1732)
Birds in their little nests agree.
ISAAC WATTS, Love Between Brothers and Sisters. (1715) GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 208. (1941)
Birds in their little nests agree
Till old enough to fight.
PATRICIA WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 116. (1941)
- 7 To fright a bird is not the way to catch her.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 2. (1633)
CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 311. (1639) RAY, Proverbs, p. 95. (1670)
He that will take the bird, must not scare it.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 45. (1640)
Fleying [frightening] a bird is no the way to grip it.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 106. (1721)
Frightning of a Bird is not the way to catch it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1627. (1732) The French say, "Qui veut prendre un oiseau, qu'il ne l'effarouche" (He who wishes to take a bird, let him not scare her)
- 8 By the song one knows the bird. (E cantu dignoscitur avis.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. ii, No. 21. (1523) Another Latin form is, "Qualis avis, talis cantus" (Such bird, such song).
The bird is known by its note.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 10 (1659)
A Bird is known by its Note, and a Man by his Talk.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 12. (1732)
Every Bird is known by its Feathers.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1407. The Germans say, "Man erkennt den Vogel am Gesang" (One knows the bird by its song)
- 9 Every byrde knoweth not the good grayne (Ogni uccello non cognosce il bon grano)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33 (1578)
- 10 Thacker . . . plucked down a church belonging thereto [Repton abbey], adding he would destroy the nest, for fear the birds should build therein again.
THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. vi. 5. (1655)
Ding down the nests, and the rooks will flee away
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88 (1721)
I hear the sacrilegious cry,
"Down with the nests, and the rooks will fly!"
R. H. BARRHAM, Ingoldshy Legends (1898), p. 361. (1837)
- 11 A Bird may be caught with a Snare, that will not be shot.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 13. (1732)

Little Birds may pick a dead Lion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3250.
That is the Bird, that I would catch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4358.
The Fowler's Pipe sounds sweet, till the Bird is caught.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4542.

1 The Greene Knight was amongst the rest
Like John Greys birde that ventured withe the best.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Fruites of Warre, cxxxi. (c. 1575)

To cluster together like John Grayes birde, ut dicitur, who always loved company.

UNKNOWN, Quarrell Between Hall and Mallerie, 6. (1579)

Like John Gray's bird.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 263. (1869)

2 What he may get of his michinge [thieving],
It is al bile under the winge.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 6526.
(c. 1390)

The byrde . . . bylle undyr wyngge layede.

UNKNOWN, The Proces of the Seuen Sages, l. 2196. (c. 1425)

[He] thought it mete neither lenger to dissimule, nor farther to kepe his bill vnder wyng

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle: Henry VI, p. 174
(a. 1548)

All the little birds had laid their heads
Under their wings—sleeping in feather beds.

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream. (1827)

3 An ill byrde layeth an ill egge.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo 127
(1586) EDWARD WARD, Female Policy Detected, 93. (1695) Cited as "the old proverb"

4 Saying, when he was dying: I have saved the bird in my bosom: meaning that he had kept both his promise and oath.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 2. (1550)

[He] cheerfully took his death, affirming he had a bird in his breast (his own innocency) that sung comfort unto him.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Leic., ii, 253. (1662)

Thou hast kept well . . . the bird in thy bosom

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 8. (1820) In a note, Scott writes: "An expression used by Sir Ralph Percy, slain in the battle of Hedgely-moor in 1464, to express his having preserved unstained his fidelity to the House of Lancaster."

5 The bird loves her nest.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 80. (1640)

Every Bird likes its own Nest best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1408.
(1732) The Italians say, "Ad ogni uccello, suo nido è bello" (To every bird its own nest is beautiful); the French, "Chaque oiseau trouve son nid bien" (Every bird finds its own nest good), or "A chescun oysel | Son nye li semble bel" (To every bird its nest seems beautiful)—in modern French, "A chacun oiseau | Son nid semble beau."

6 It hurteth not the tounge to geue fayre wurdis.
The rough net is not the best catcher of burdis.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 313. (1614)

7 Er the next daie the birdes were flowne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1562)

The Byrdes were flowne before I found the nest
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poesies, p. 94. (1575)

Man . . . knows not his time, . . . he comes when the bird is flown.

WILLIAM GURNALL, *The Christian in Complete
Armour*, p. 46. (1655)

The birds are flown.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch 5. (1855)

Fifteen minutes late Your bird has fluttered.

DASHIEL HAMMETT, The Maltese Falcon. Ch
16. (1930)

8 By'r lady, than we shall catche byrds to morrow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

9 Even as he thus spake, there flew forth a bird upon the right hand, an eagle of lofty flight. (ὡς ἀρα οἱ εἰπόντι ἐπείτατο δεξιὸς ὄρνις, | αἰετὸς ὑψηλότης.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 821. (c. 850 B.C.) The eagle was a bird of good omen: as was also the owl. ZENOBIUS, ii, 93, gives "An owl's flight" (γλαυξ πταται) as a sign of victory.

The raven was the bird of ill omen, always croaking defeat. See under RAVEN

Send a bird of omen, . . . let him appear upon my right hand (πείσοι δ' οἰωνόν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 310. (c. 850 B.C.)

Be not a bird of ill omen. (μὴ δ' ὄρνις δεινέη.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. i, l.
304. (c. 225 B.C.)

I go out with clear auspices, with a bird on my left. (Liquido exeo foras auspicio, avi sinistra.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 182. (c. 200 B.C.) Two proverbial phrases are, "Bonis avibus" and "Malis avibus," literally, "With good or evil birds," meaning with good or bad omens.

10 Each bird is well pleased with his own voice

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

Each bird loves to hear himself sing.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 269. (1855)

11 Who provideth for the raven his food? (Quis præparat corvo escam suam?)

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 41. (c. 350 B.C.)

He giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens which cry. (Qui dat iumentis escam ip-sorum: et pullis corvorum invocantibus eum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxlvii, 9. (c. 250 B.C.)

Young ravens must have food.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i,
3, 38. (1600)

Small birds must have meat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 292. (1639)

Small birds must have meat. Children must be fed, they cannot be maintained with nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1670)

<sup>1</sup> The bird must flighter [flutter] that flies with one wing.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 308. (1721)

The bird maun flichter that flees wi' ae wing.

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance. Vol. iii, ch. 32. (1824)

<sup>2</sup> Birds act by instinct, and ne'er can Attain the rectitude of man.

MARY LAMB, The Rook and the Sparrows. (1809)

<sup>3</sup> Even when the bird walks one feels that it has wings. (Même quand l'oiseau marche on sent qu'il a des ailes.)

ANTOINE LAMIERRE, Fastes Chant i. (1769)

<sup>4</sup> Thou hatchest vp a bird to pecke out thine owne eyes

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde. (1590)

Ill fare that bird that picks out the Dammes eyes

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 169. (1639)

On p. 272, Clarke adds, "It's an ill bird that pecks out the Dammes eyes."

You bring up a bird to pick out your own eye

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 53. (1672)

I know you have hatched up some chickens that now seek to pick out your eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Lancs., ii. 198. (1662)

He has brought up a Bird, to pick out his own Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1864. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> It's a foul bird that defiles its own nest. (Nidos commaculans immundus habebitur ales.)

EDMUND LUTICH, Fecunda Ratio, 1148. (c. 1023)

Dahet habbe that ilke best That fuleth his owē nest (A curse be upon the bird that defiles his own nest.)

UNKNOWN, Owl and Nightingale, l. 99. (c. 1250)

Hyt ys a fowle brydde that flyeth hys owne nest

BOZON, Contes Moralizés, p. 205. (c. 1320)

Trop est l'oisele de mesprisure

Qu'on son ny propre fait leure.

(It is a contemptible bird that does wrong to its own nest.)

JOHN GOWER, Mirour de l'Homme, l. 23413. (c. 1378)

An olde proverbe seyde ys in englyssh: men seyn "that brid or foule ys dyshonest, what that he be and holden ful chirlyssh, that vseth to defoule his owne neste"

THOMAS HOUCLEYE, Minor Poems (E.E.T.S.), p. 80. (1402)

It is neyther wurshipful ne honest

On-to mankeende to foule soo his nest.

JOHN CAPGRAVE, Life of Saint Katherine, l. 1594. (c. 1440) JOHN SKEILTON, Poems

Against Christopher Gernesche, No. 3 (c. 1500), condenses this to, "That byrde is nat honest That fyleth his owne nest."

It is a foule thyng for a man to slauder the treasure or thynges of his owne house. (Domes-ticum thesaurum calumniaris turpe est.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 49.

(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 58. (1550) Taverner adds, "We have a very prety prouerbe in Englyshe whiche we use in the same sense, 'it is an euyl byrde that defyleth her owne neste.'"

It is a lewde byrde that fyleth his owne nest.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Follys, p. 65. (1509)

It is a foule byrd that fyleth his owne nest.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

It is fowle bird that defiles its own nest.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) Works (Gros-sart), ii, 31. But, as Grosart points out, "It is only its own nest that it can well defile." See also FITZGERALD, Euphranor, p. 13. (1851) SHAW, Augustus Does His Bit. (1917) BEED-ING, The Eight Crooked Trenches, p. 240 (1936) etc., etc. The Italians say, "Mad is the priest who blasphemes his own relics"; the Hebrews, "Never cast dirt into the fountain of which thou hast drunk."

It becometh not any woman to set light by her husband, nor to publish his infirmities: for they say, That is an evil bird that defileth her own nest.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, p. 26. (c. 1591)

We must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 207. (1599)

It's an ill bird that beraies its own nest.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 62. (1670)

I am taxed with bewraying my own nest.

DANIEL DEFOE, Trueborn Englishman: Preface. (1701)

Where's the use o' vilifying ane's country? . . .

It's an ill bird that files its ain nest.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818)

Jay-bird don't rob his own nes'.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plan-tation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>6</sup>

It is a mad Hare yat wil be caught with a Taber, and a foolish bird that staieth the lay-ing salt on hir taile, and a blinde Goose that commeth to the Foxes sermon.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 327. (1580)

<sup>7</sup>

A bird knows nothing of gladness,

Is only a song machine.

GEORGE MACDONALD, A Book of Dreams (c. 1860)

<sup>8</sup>

Rare bird as it would be. (Quando haec rara avis est.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 46. (c. A.D. 58)

A rare bird upon the earth, very similar to a black swan. (Rara avis in terris nigroque simillima cygno.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 165. (c. A.D. 120)

Less literally, "A prodigy seldom seen on earth, and just as rare as a black swan" Meaning a chaste woman.

1 The bird caught in lime, or conny in hay, or deare in toyle, the more they strive the faster they sticke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Germanicus and Agrippina, p. 75. (1576)

2 Let fly the bird before the cheesecakes. (Lascher l'oyseau deuant talemouses.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1532)

3 If the partridge had the woodcock's thigh, It would be the best bird that ever did fly.

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 36. (1678)

4 You may gape long enough ere a bird fall into your mouth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 97. (1678) A variant is, "Birds ready cooked do not fly into your mouth." The Germans say, "Ge-bratene Tauben, die einem in Maul fliegen?" (Do pigeons, ready roasted, fly into one's mouth?); the Dutch, "Gebrade duijven vliegen niet door de lucht" (Roasted pigeons do not fly through the air).

5 He's in great want of a bird that will give a groat for an owl.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 101. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2458. (1732)

A man must be hard driv'n to find a bird Who offers two-pence for an owl.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Pitt and His Statue (1802)

6 The bird that can sing and will not sing must be made to sing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 343. (1678)
DICKENS, Cricket on the Hearth. (1845)

Remember the proverb about little birds that can sing and won't sing.

A. T. QUILLER-BOUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 1. (1888)
Little birds that can sing and will not sing will have to be made to sing.

D. C. MURRAY, John Vale's Guardian. Ch. 7. (1890)

7 The old bird is never caught by the snare (γέροντας ὄρνις οὐκ ἐλε βρόχῳ.)

SAPPHO, To Charaxus. Frag. 35. (c. 610 B. C.)
See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 205.

I am no byrde to be locked ne take by chaf.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Fox, xl, 111 (1481)

An olde birde is not caught with chaffe.

UNKNOWN, Timon. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1600)

You must not think, sir, to catch olde birdes with chaffe.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. iv, ch. 5. (1620)

Teach them to lick honey, catch birds with chaffe.

RICHARD BROME, The Sparagus Garden. Act iv, sc. 11. (1640)

There's no catching old birds with chaff.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc. 3. (1668)

You can't catch old birds with chaff.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1670)
The Italians say, "Nuova rete non piglia uccello vecchio" (A new net won't catch an old bird); the Germans, "Alte Vögel sind schwer zu rupfen" (Old birds are hard to pluck).

Old birds are not caught with chaff.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 49. (1709)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3707. (1732)

SCOTT, Redgauntlet, ch. 4. (1824) SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh, ch. 31. (1850) etc., etc.

Two specimens of poultry, which, if there be any truth in adages, were certainly not caught with chaff.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 49. (1852)

They sang . . . and ogled him . . . with which chaff our noble bird was by no means to be caught.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 53. (1853)

8 The bird chooses its tree, not the tree the bird. (Niao tsé tsé mu, mu ch'i neng tsé niao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 448. (1875)

When the birds are full-fledged they fly away (Chang ta lao ch'ien tzu fei.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2159.

9 When every feather sticks in his own wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, ii, 1. 30. (1607)

If every bird should fetch her own feathers, you should have a naked Pope.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 203. (1629)
If euery birde had his owne, he should be as rich as a new shorne sheepe.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 18. (1633)

If every Bird take back its own Feathers, you'll be naked.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2675. (1732)

10 As when a bird hath flown through the air, there is no token of her way to be found. (Aut tamquam avis quae transvolat in aere, cuius nullum invenitur argumentum itineris.)

APOCRYPHA: Wisdom of Solomon, v, 11. (c. 100 B. C.)

II—The Early Bird Catches the Worm

11 The early bird catcheth the worme.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 333.
(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1670)

'Tis the early Bird, that catcheth the Worm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5118. (1732)

The early bird gets the worm.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn. Ch. 31. (1859)

It's the early bird that gets the worm.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 7. (1843)

The early bird gets the late one's breakfast.

MRS. CHAMBERLAIN, West Worcs. Words, p. 39. (1882)

It's the early bird, as the saying goes, that gets the rations.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 30. (1883) Where we would say "The early bird catches the worm," the Indian rustic says, "who sleeps late gets the bull-calf, he who rises early the cow-calf"—which is more valuable.

J. L. KIPLING, Beast and Man, p. 125. (1891) "The early bird catches the worm."—"Unfortunately, it is the early fish that catches the worm."—"But the early man catches the fish."

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Fod of the Fisherman. (1922)

She was one of the early birds,
And I was one of the worms.

T. W. CONNOR, She Was One of the Early Birds. Early bird. Any worms?

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 209. (1941)

1 The live man catches the cow.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 70. (c. 900) Bellows, tr. Note the resemblance to the Hindu proverb given by Kipling above. The fleetest fish swalloweth the delicatest bait.

JOHN LILLY, Euphuus (Arber), p. 35. (1579)

The cow that's first up, gets the first of the dew

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 306. (1721) The French say, "La vache la première au pré. ! Leche la rosée" (The first cow in the field licks up the dew). The Danes say, "Den første Fugl fanger det første Korn" (The first bird gets the first grain).

The early tire gets the roofin' tack

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 118. (1930)

III—A Bird in the Hand

2 I should be foolish to release the bird I have in my hand, in order to pursue another. (ἔγωγε δὲ εἶναι ἄφρων, εἰ τὴν ἐν χερσίν ἵτοιμην τροφὴν ἀφείς, τὰ μὴ φαιρόμενα τῷ διώκοιμι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Nightingale and the Hawk (c. 570 B. C.) The nightingale, caught by the hawk, argues that it should be released, since it is only a mouthful, and that the hawk should search for bigger prey. To which plea the hawk replies as above. The fable of The Fisherman and the Anchovy has a similar moral. The anchovy, caught in the net, asks to be released until it grows larger and better worth eating, but the fisherman answers that he would indeed be foolish to abandon a gain in hand, however small, in the hope of a greater gain in the future.

It is a pity to lose the spoil in hand. (Nam miserum est praesentem amittere praedam.)

AVIANUS, Fables. Fab. xx, l. 15. (c. A. D. 400) A rendering of Aesop's fable of The Fisherman and the Anchovy.

One thing that you have, they say, is worth more than two things which you may have. The one is sure, the other is not. (Un Tiens vaut, ce dit-on, mieux que deux Tu l'auras: | L'un est sûr; l'autre ne l'est pas.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Petit Poisson et le

Pêcheur. Bk. v, fab. 3. (1668) This is, of course, Aesop's fable referred to above.

3 If you don't still think the bird in the bush worth any two in the hand, you might as well die.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

Two birds in the bush are still two birds in the bush.

MELBA MARLETT, Death Has a Thousand Doors, p. 113. (1941)

Grab the bird in hand, shut your eyes, and pretend it's the bird in the bush.

MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 37. (1943)

4 Better a sparrow in the hand than a vulture on the wing. (Más vale pájaro en mano que buitres volando.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 31 (1605); pt. ii, chs. 31, 71. (1615) Pájaro, passer, while specifically a sparrow, is used generally for any small bird. Shelton, in his translation of Don Quixote, renders the passage. "A sparrow in the fist is worth more than a flying bittour [bittern]." The French say, "Le moineau en la main vaut mieux que l'oie qui vole" (A sparrow in the hand is worth more than a goose flying in the air); the Germans, "Besser ein Spatz in der Hand, als eine Taube auf dem Dach" (Better a sparrow in the hand than a pigeon on the roof)

A Sparrow in Hand is worth a Pheasant that flyeth by.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 420. (1732)

One bird in the net is better than a hundred flying

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 404. (1678)

A thousand cranes in the air are not worth one sparrow in the fist.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 3. (1817)

One captured bird is more than a thousand in the bush. (Capta avis est pluris quam mille in gramine ruris)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 48. (1869) Another Latin form is "Una avis in laqueo plus valet octo vasis" (One bird in the snare is worth more than eight flying)

5 I'll not change a cottage in possession for a kingdom in hope.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 256. (1639)

I will not change my Cottage in Possession, for a Palace in Reversion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2643. (1732)

6 A feather in hand is better than a bird in the air.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 580. (1640)

7 He is a fool who leaves what is close at hand to pursue what is out of reach. (ῥῆπιος, δὲ τὰ ἱτοιμα ληψὼν τ' ἀπτόμετα διώκει.)

HESIOD, Fragments. Frag. 234, Kinkel. (c. 800 B. C.) i. e. to leave a certainty for an uncertainty. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 505D.

Take what is at hand, why pursue the fleeing? (τὰν παροίον ἀμολγε· τί τὸν φεύγοντα διώκεις?)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xi, l. 75. (c. 270 B. C.)

Do not the unknown o'er the known advance:
Known things on judgment hang, unknown on chance.

(Ignotum tibi tu noli praeponere notis: cognita iudicio constant, incognita casu.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 32. (c. 175 B. C.)
For uncertain hope [to abandon] sure rewards.
(Pro incerta spe certa praemia.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 41. (c. 41 B. C.)
A cucumber now is better than a pumpkin in the future.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 83B. (c. 450) Also, Sukkah, 56B; Temurah, 9A.

Present joys are more to flesh and blood
Than a dull prospect of a distant good.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 364. (1687)

An egg to-day is better than a hen to-morrow.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. See under EGG.

A spur in the head is worth two in the heel.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 11. (1738)

A pullet in the pen is worth an hundred in the fen.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 31. (1869)
"This." Hazlitt comments, "seems to be a varia lectio of A bird in the hand, &c."

I'd a durn sight ruther have a Christmas dinner in hand than a house an' wife in the bush.

FRANK R. STOCKTON, The Christmas Wreck. (1886)

A bird in the soup is better than an eagle's nest in the desert.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 350. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Better a lean lintie on the hand than a fat finch on the wand.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 492. (1940)

1
A peece of a Kyd is woorth two of a cat.
Who the diuell will chaunge a rabet for a rat?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A piece of a kid is worth two of a cat.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 303. (1614)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 348. (1732)

2
To let go the uppermost rope to catch at the lower. (ἀφείλῃ τὴν ὑπεράνω τὸν πρὸς ἡμᾶς διώκει.)

HYPERIDES. (c. 350 B. C.) As quoted by Harpocration. To lose a greater advantage in trying to grasp a lesser one.

With Esopes Dogge, letteth fall the fleshe, to cathe the shadow.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 135. (1574) Pettie, tr. See under SHADOW.

3
As Confucius said, "No man lets a bird fly out of his hand because another nestles in his hair."

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 181. (1941)

4
The half cash obtained today is greater than thousands of gold to be got hereafter.

P. PERTVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 549. (1842)

Better is one portion in the hand than two "I'll give you." (Mas vale un "toma" que dos "te daré.")

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 283. (1836) A Spanish proverb.

One "Here it is" is better than ten "God help you's." (Ein Nimm hin ist besser als zehn Got helf dir.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 339. German
Better a quick penny than a dallying shilling.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, p. 11. (1894)

5
One grain of instant life is equivalent to acres of the leaf of hope hammered out to gild our prospect.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 1 Feb., 1852.

6
Of more worth is one bird in the hand than two in the bush. (Plus valet in manibus avis unica fronde duabus.)

J. WERNER, Latin Sprichwörter, p. 70. (c. 1400)

A mediæval rhymed version is "Una avis in dextra Melior quam quattuor extra" (One bird in the hand is better than four at large).
These rhymed Latin verses were great favorites in the Middle Ages, but went out of fashion with the revival of classical taste in the fifteenth century. Few of them were original; for the most part they were merely rhymed doggerel versions of older maxims and proverbs.

Betr yz a byrd in the hond than tweye in the wode.

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS., 3362. (c. 1470)

A birde in hond is better than thre in the wode
RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 128
(c. 1530)

A byrd in hand . . . is worth ten flye at large.

HUGH RHODES, The Boke of Nurture, 579. (c. 1530)

Better one byrde in hande than ten in the wood.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

One byrd in the hand, is worth two in the forest, and yet it is better to be a byrd of the field, then a byrd of the cage. (Un ucello in gabbia, ne val due del bosco, & pure si è meglio esser ucello di campagna, che ucello di gabbia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

One bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

NATHANIEL WOODS, The Conflict of Conscience.
Act iv. (1581) DYKES, English Proverbs, p.
213. (1709) etc., etc.

That proverb, A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, is of more authority with them [the men of this world] than are all the divine testimonies of the good of the world to come.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i,
p. 26. (1678)

This proverb turns up in several forms, but it always means that we are to prefer that which we have to that which we only expect. It is a proverb of this world only, and is not true on the broad field of eternal things. There our bird in the bush is worth all the birds that ever were in mortal hands.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON, Salt Cellars. (1885)

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush; but . . . the bird in the bush may never be in the cage, while the future . . . is sure to come.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Use of Life. Ch. 15. (1894)

There is a race of narrow wits that never get rich for want of courage. . . . They never get ahead an inch because they are always hugging some coward maxim, which they can only interpret literally. "Never change a certainty for an uncertainty," "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," are their favorite saws; and very good ones they are too, but not to be followed too slavishly. Of what use is it "to be sawing about a set of maxims to which there is a complete set of antagonist maxims"? Proverbs, it has been well said, should be sold in pairs, a single one being but a half truth.

WILLIAM MATHEWS, Getting on in the World. (1896)

Ten birds in the tree are not worth one in the hand.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xl. (1938)

Nearly every country has its variation. The Roumanians say, "Better a bird in the hand than a thousand on the house"; the Italians, "Better one bird in the cage than four in the arbor"; the Frisians, "A bird in the pan is better than many in the air"; the Swedes, "Better one bird in the cage than seven in the bush," and "Better one bird in the pot than ten in the wood"; the Italians, "A finch in the hand is better than a thrush afar off," or "Better a feather in the hand than a bird in the air," or "Better a sparrow in the pan than a hundred chickens in the priest's yard."

IV—Two Birds with One Stone

<sup>1</sup> For stoppyng of gaps (quoth he) care not a rushe,

I will learne to stop two gaps with one bushe

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Therefore with one bush (as they say) ye are to stop two gaps, and to do both at once.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, xxiii, iii. 474. (1600)

These Italians stopped two gaps with one bush; they were merchant pilgrims, and together applied themselves to profit and piety.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 22. (1639)

To stop two Gaps with one Bush.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5234. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> [He] thinks to kill two birds with one stone, and satisfy two arguments with one answer.

THOMAS HOBBS, The Questions Concerning Liberty, Necessity, and Chance. (1656)

Thus have I (not killed two birds with one bolt, but) revived two men's memories with one record.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Kent, ii, 151. (1662)

To kill two birds with one shaft.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 197. (1670)

And (if you can bring this lady) I should kill two birds with one stone, as that excellent thrifty proverb says.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Miser. Act ii. (1671)

It was their custom . . . to kill two birds with one stone, and never to throw away sprats, but as bait for whales.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 8. (1843)

Referring to Jonas Chuzzlewit and his father.

Trying to kill two birds with one stone, though they sit at opposite points of the compass, to see nature and do the honors to one who does not.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 8 Nov., 1858.

We can kill two birds with the same rock.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 38. (1884)

Thus he might bring down the kite and the humming-bird with one stone.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Caballero's Way. (1907)

A crying invitation to one-stone two birds.

JOHN KOBLER, Some Like It Gory, p. 114. (1940)

As you say in England, we kill two birds in one bush.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 68. (1941)

Three birds with one stone is quite good marksmanship.

J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past Is Dead, p. 249. (1942)

It would be breaking two eggs with one swipe.

LEE THAYER, Hanging's Too Good, p. 94. (1943)

<sup>3</sup> To make two hits with one stone. (Faire d'une pierre deux coups.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580) COT-GRIVE, Dictionary: Coup, gives this as "D'une pierre faire deux coups."

<sup>4</sup> The prouerbe sayeth, that with one beane, a man maye take two pigeons.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Diall of Princes, fo. 56. (1557)

It is a goodly thing to take two pigeons with one beane. (E bella cosa pigliar due colombi, con una faua.)

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p. 210. (1572) Quoted by JOHN FLORIO, Firde Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

In hoping to take two pigeons with one beane you are decyued.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis, sig. E2. (1577)

With one beane it is easie to gette two Pigeons, and with one baight to haue diuers bits.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 413. (1580)

To catch two pigeons with one bean.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 353. (1678)

To catch two Pigeons with one Pea

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5144. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Now in one brake I'm neatly going to catch two boars. (Iam ego uno in saltu lepide apros capiam duos.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 476. (c. 200 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi. 63

For one payment to obtain two things. (Una mercede duas res assequi.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Ch. 29, sec. 80. (80 B. C.)

I am not in the habit of whitewashing two walls out of the same pail. (Nec solere duo parietes de eadem fidelia dealbare.)

MANIUS CURIUS, Letter to Cicero. (45 B. C.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares, vii, 29. Quoting a proverb meaning, in this context, "I am not in the habit of serving two masters." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 3. Usually to whitewash two walls from one pot means to kill two birds with one stone.

To stop two mouths with one morsel.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)

To kill two flies with one flap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 275. (1678)

The Germans say, "Zwei Fliegen mit einer Klappe schlagen."

To make two friends with one favour.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 797. (1681) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5205 (1732), has, "To make two Friends with one Gift." The Italians say, "Di un dono far due amici."

He fells two dogs with one stone.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 131 (1721)

1 Eating pears cleans one's teeth.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443. (1938) One kills two birds with one stone. There are many other variations. For example, the Dutch say, "Twee appelen men eenen stok afwerpen" (To bring down two apples with one stick), and another is, "To hit two marks with one arrow."

BIRTH

See also Death and Birth

2 I came up stairs into the world, for I was born in a cellar.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 7. (1695)

Born in a cellar and living in a garret.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Author. Act ii. (1757)

Born in the garret, in the kitchen bred.

LORD BYRON, A Sketch from Private Life, l. 1. (1816)

3 First born, first fed.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 142. (1633)

First come, first serv'd.

GEORGE FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1543. (1732)

4 For we should mourn in sorrowing throngs the house

Where a man child is born to light of day (Nam nos decebat coetus celebrantes domum Lugere, ubi esset aliquis in lucem editus.)

EURIPIDES, Cresphontes. (c. 440 B. C.) As translated by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 48, sec. 115.

Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man child conceived. (Conceptus est homo.)

Old Testament: Job, iii, 3. (c. 350 B. C.)

5 Not to be born I count the same as death. (τὸ μὴ γενέσθαι τῷ θανεῖν ἴσον λέγω.)

EURIPIDES, Trojan Women, l. 636. (c. 415 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 109F. See also DEATH AND BIRTH.

6 Our English plain proverb, "de puerperis" (they are in the straw). i. e. in childbed.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 263. (1662)

We sipp'd our Fuddle,

As Women in the Straw do Caudle.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. iv, l. 18. (1705)

They found the lady in the straw.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Newton Forster. Ch. 15. (1832)

7 Morally, the birth follows the belly.

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Vol. x, ch. 6. (c. 1612) Bishop Hall is arguing that the mother has more influence with the son than the father has.

8 For men on earth 'tis best never to be born at all; or being born, to pass through the gates of Hades with all speed. (ἀρχὴν μὲν μὴ εἶναι ἐπιχθονίοισιν ἄριστον, | φύντα δ' ὅπως ὀκίστα πύλας Αἰδαο περῆσαι.)

HOMER, when Hesiod is said to have asked him what is best for mortal man. ALICIDAMUS, Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 315. (c. 400 B. C.) Quoted, with some slight variations, by THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 425, and AU-SONIUS, Eclogues, ii, 53.

Best were it for mortals never to be born. (ὀνατοῖσι μὴ εἶναι φέριστον.)

BACCHYLIDES, For Hiero of Syracuse, l. 160. (476 B. C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, iii, 155.

Not to be born at all

Is best, far best, that can befall;

Next best, when born, with least delay

To trace the backward way.

(μὴ εἶναι τὸν ἅπαντα νικᾷ λόγον τὸ δ' ἐπεὶ φανῇ, μῆναι κείθεν ὅθεν περ ἤκει, πολὺ δεύτερον, ὡς τάχιστα.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1224. (c. 408 B. C.) Storr, tr.

Not to be born is best of all, and to be dead is better than to live. (ὥς ἄρα μὴ γενέσθαι μὲν ἄριστον πάντων, τὸ δὲ θενῆναι τοῦ ζῆν ἔστι κρείττον.)

ARISTOTLE, Eudemus. Fr. x, 44, Rose. (c. 330 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 115C, telling the story of Silenus who, when captured by Midas, and asked what was the best of all things, gave the above reply.

Far best for man not to be born at all, and the next best thing to die as soon as possible. (Non nasci homini longe optimum esse, proximum autem quam primum mori.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 48, sec. 115. (45 B. C.) Also telling the story of Silenus. Cicero refers to it as a maxim.

Better not to be born, or, next best, being born, to die forthwith. (Non nasci optimum; proximum autem, si natus sis, quamprimum mori.)

CICERO, Consolatio. (45 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, xlix. Erasmus devotes more than two pages to variations upon this theme. The French say, "There is nobody in the world happy except he who dies in his swaddling-clothes" (Il n'y a personne heureux au monde, que celui qui meurt in mail-lot). The Italians have the same proverb, "Nel mondo non è felice | Se non quel chi muore in fascie."

Blest indeed are those who were never born to see the sun! (φειῦ μακαριστοί, | ὁσοὶ ἀπ' ὧδιναν οὐκ ἴδον ἥλιον.)

PHILIPPUS OF THESSALONICA. (C. A. D. 100) Greek Anthology, vii, 383.

The greatest felicity is never to be borne, and the second soone to die.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Palluce: Icilius and Virginia, p. 122. (1576)

The Philosophers accompted it ye chiefest felicitie neuer to be borne, the second soone to dye.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and Eubulus, p. 183. (1579) He alone is bless'd, who ne'er was born.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of The World. Bk. iii, l. 240. (1718)

A still small voice spake unto me,
"Thou art so full of misery,

Were it not better not to be?"

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 1. (1842)

One always smacks of the place he came from.
(On tient toujours du lieu dont on vient.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables Bk. ix, fab. 7. (1678)

I was not born yesterday, as the saying is.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Snarleyvow. Ch. 12. (1837) I warn't born yesterday.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 27. (1843)

You know that my eyes are pretty sharp, and that I wasn't born yesterday.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 21. (1894)

A man is not consulted by his parents as to whether he wishes to be brought into this world.

Midrash: Leviticus Rabbah, p. 14. (c. 450) Schiller expresses the same idea.

Truly, . . . a man does sometimes become a horse by being born in a stable.

MICHAEL SCOTT, Tom Cringle's Log. Ch. 4. (1829)

Except on the principle that the man who is born in a stable is a horse, [Lever] was not an Irishman at all.

Times (London) Literary Supplement, 27 Apr., 1906.

There is an old saying of the seamen's, "every man is not born to be a boatswain."

WALTER SCOTT. In LOCKHART, Life, iv, 76. (1817)

There was he born, under a hedge.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 54. (1590) I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 210. (1598)

Nobly to live, or nobly else to die
Befits proud birth.

(ἀλλ' ἢ καλῶς ζῆν ἢ καλῶς τεθνηκέαι τὸν εὐγενῆ χρῆ.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 479. (c. 409 B. C.)

The nearer high birth approaches royalty, the more grandeur enslaves the man. (Plus la haute naissance approche des couronnes, | Plus cette grandeur même asservit nos personnes.)

CORNEILLE, Rodogune. Act iii, sc. 3. (1644) Men do not choose, to command a ship, that one of the passengers who is of the highest birth. (On ne choisit pas pour gouverner un vaisseau celui des voyageurs qui est de meilleure maison.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. viii, No. 10 (c. 1660)

Nobility, fortune, rank, place: all that makes you so proud. What have you done for all these blessings? You have given yourself the trouble to be born, and nothing more. (Vous vous êtes donné la peine de naître, et rien de plus.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Mariage de Figaro. Act v, sc. 3. (1784)

There is indeed, I believe, a more abiding sense of noble birth to be derived from false than from authentic pedigrees; and plebeian blood flows with a more consciously aristocratic thrill through the veins of those who have dyed it in the azure of their own imaginations.

L. P. SMITH, Unforgotten Years, p. 4. (1939)

I 'spect I growed. Don't think nobody never made me.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 21. (1851) Topsy speaking.

When I was born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature, and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do. (Primam vocem similem omnibus emisi plorans.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vii, 3. (c. 100 B. C.)

Man alone at the very moment of his birth, cast naked upon the naked earth, does she abandon to cries and lamentations.

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. vii, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 77)

NAKED I WAS BORN AND NAKED I AM, see under NAKEDNESS.

Thou know'st the first time that we smell the air, We wawl and cry. . . . We cry that we are come To this great stage of fools.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6. 182. (1605)

He is born naked, and falls a whining at the first.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 10. (1621)

The infant, as soon as Nature . . . hath sent it forth from the womb, . . . fills every place around with mournful wailings and piteous lamentations, as is natural for one who has so many ills of life in store for him.

FRANCIS BACON, De Natura Rerum. Pt. v, sec. 223. (c. 1623)

I wept when I was born, and every day shews why.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 201.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 28. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2631. (1732)

When first brought forth we cry;

Each day brings forth its why.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoötomia, p. 31. (1654)

When I was born, I did lament and cry,

And now each day doth show the reason why.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo. (1662)

Nothing can exceed the vanity of our existence, but the folly of our pursuits. We wept when we came into the world, and every day tells us why.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i. (1768)

My mother groan'd, my father wept;

Into the dangerous world I leapt,

Helpless, naked, piping loud,

Like a fiend hid in a cloud.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Infant Sorrow. (c. 1793)

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Ode: Intimations of Immortality, l. 58. (1807)

II—Birth: Omens Good and Bad

<sup>1</sup> He was born with a penny in 's mouth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 39. (1639)

<sup>2</sup> Born in the fourth moon. (Quarta luna nati.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 77. (1500)

An old proverb for peculiarly unlucky people. The fourth moon was the month in which Hercules was born, and his labors, while beneficial to others, were of no advantage to himself. The Spaniards say, "He was born in an evil hour, or under an unlucky planet, who gets a bad name" (En hora mala nace, quien mala fama cobra). They have the reverse, of course, "En hora buena nace, quien buena fama cobra."

Born vnder a threepenny planet.

THOMAS DEKKER, A Knight's Conjuring, p. 32. (1607)

He that was born under a three-halfpenny planet shall never be worth two pence.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 64. (1670)

I'll make good the old saying to ye, That he that's born under a three-penny planet, shall never be worth a groat.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables of Aesop, p. 416. (1692)

If it rained rich widows, none of them would fall upon me. Egad, I was born under a three-penny planet, never to be worth a groat.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

He was born under a threepenny planet, i. e. is avaricious.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-phrases, p. 15. (1882)

BORN UNDER AN UNLUCKY STAR, see under STAR.

<sup>3</sup> How should I be vused, but as one that was wrapt in his mothers smock when he was borne.

ROBERT GREENE, Never too Late. (1590) Works, viii, 198. It has always been a popular belief that it is lucky to be "born with a caul," or with the amnion or inner membrane which encloses the foetus before birth, enveloping the head when the child is born. The Germans say, "Mit einem Helm geboren sein"; the Italians, "Nacque vestito" (Born with his clothes on); the French, "Il est né coiffé." Yo' were born with a caule o' your head.

BEN JONSON, The Alchemist. Act i, sc. 2. (1610)

Did I not tell you, sir, that I was born

With a caul upon my face? My mother wrapp'd me

In her own smock.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers. Act ii, sc. 2. (1632)

Sure I was born with a caul on my head, and wrapped in my mother's smock, the ladies do so love me

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc. 1. (1668)

He was lap't in his mother's smock

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670)

I can't believe there's anything in that old whim of being wrapt in one's mother's smock. . . But I have strange luck with the women.

RICHARD STEELE, The Lying Lover. Act ii, sc. 2. (1704)

He was wrap'd in his mother's sark tail

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 149. (1721)

You were born with a caul on your head, you are such a favorite among the ladies

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

He was wrapt up in the tail of his mother's smock, saying of any one remarkable for his success with the ladies

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Wrapt Up. (1785)

I was born with a caul, which was advertised for sale, in the newspapers, at the low price of fifteen guineas.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 1. (1849)

<sup>4</sup> You were born of a white hen. (Tu gallinae filius albae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiii, l. 141. (A. D. 127) A proverb, cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, l. 78.

To be "born of a white hen" was to be "born with a silver spoon in the mouth," "child of fortune," or "fortune's favorite." Suetonius gives the origin of the proverb. When Livia, wife of Augustus Caesar, was at one of her country seats, an eagle flying over the place dropped a white hen, holding a sprig of laurel in its beak, into her lap. The Empress was so pleased with the adventure that she ordered the hen to be well taken care of and the laurel to be planted in the garden. Both prospered, and branches from the laurel were used for many years by succeeding emperors in their triumphs.

I always carry a sprig of Laurel. (Laureum baculum gesto.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950) Quoted also by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 79. Said by persons who had escaped from any threatened danger. The laurel was thought by the Romans to be an antidote against poison and to protect from lightning. Tiberius Caesar is said always to have worn a branch of laurel about his head. Actually, instead of being an antidote for poison, the distilled water of the laurel leaf is itself a powerful poison.

1 Every man is not born with a silver spoon in his mouth.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 73. (1712) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 101. (1721) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1430. (1732)

One man is born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and another with a wooden ladle.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 119. (1762) Quoted with Scottish spelling in Noctes Ambrosianae, Nov., 1831.

You was born with a silver spoon in one hand, and a silver fork in the other.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws, ch. 3. (1843)

I think he is born with a silver spoon in his mouth.

LORD LYTTON, The Caxtons. Vol. ii, ch. 3. (1849)

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit, ch. 6. (1850)

They who are born with silver spoons in their mouths, don't know how to use them.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 399. (1869)

The youth who is born with a silver spoon in his mouth, the heir to entailed acres and accumulated Consols.

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Social Silhouettes. Ch. 17. (1906)

He had been born with a gold spoon, lobster fork, and fish set in his mouth.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Sociology in Serge and Straw (1910)

He was born with a knife, fork and spoon in his mouth, and a rabbit's foot hung round his neck

RING LARDNER, Horseshoes (1926)

It was said he had been born with a white tie in his mouth

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Rumor Hath It, p. 8. (1945)

2 He came in hosed and shod. He was born to a good estate.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)

3 He found Irene the Emperesse . . . in a house anciently appointed for the Emperresses child-birth. . . . They call that house Porphyra (πορφύρα), whence the name of Porphyrogeniti came into the world.

JOHN SELDEN, Titles of Honour, p. 82. (1614)

In the Greek language purple and porphyry are the same word. . . . An apartment of the Byzantine palace was lined with porphyry: it was reserved for the use of the pregnant emperresses; and the royal birth of their children was expressed by the appellation of porphyrogenite, or born in the purple. . . . This peculiar surname was first applied to Constantine the seventh.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire (1790), ix, xlviii, 57. (1788)

From this it will be seen that the phrase "born in the purple" has nothing to do with the purple robes of royalty, although some commentators have tried to explain it in that way.

He was born in the purple.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to M. Dupont. (1790)

See Correspondence (1844), iii, 161.

[Richard Cromwell] would probably have reigned as well as most of those who are born in the purple.

HENRY HALLAM, The Constitutional History of England. Vol. ii, ch. 10. (1827)

Zoë, the fourth wife of Leo VI., gave birth to the future Emperor Constantine Porphyrogenitus in the purple chamber of the imperial palace.

GEORGE FINLAY, The Byzantine and Greek Empires. Ch. 1. (1853)

The old Whig party reserved the highest places for those cradled in the purple.

GEORGE BANCROFT, History of the United States. Vol. vi, ch. 55. (1876)

I was not born into the purple.

NGAIO MARSH, Death and the Dancing Footman, p. 252. (1941)

4 They used to be a sayin', "A chile born outa sorrow'll be a happy chile." . . . An' I heard the other, "Born outa too much joy'll be a doleful boy."

JOHN STEINBECK, The Grapes of Wrath, p. 193. (1939)

5 Bonaparte was born in his shirt.

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 25. (1865) Dole translates this, "Born with a silver spoon in his mouth."

BIRTHDAY

6 Born of a Monday, fair in the face;
Born of a Tuesday, full of God's grace;
Born of a Wednesday, merry and glad;
Born of a Thursday, sour and sad;
Born of a Friday, godly given;
Born of a Saturday, work for your living;
Born of a Sunday, ne'er shall you want.
So ends the week, and there's an end on't.

JOHN BRAND, Observations on Popular Antiquities. (1877) A slightly different version is given in Notes and Queries, ser. v, vii, 424 (1877) HENDERSON (Folk-Lore N. Counties, 9, 1879) gives a third version, also with only minor differences. The N. & Q. version has Wednesday's child "sour and sad," and Thursday's "merry and glad."

Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child works hard for its living,

And a child that's born on the Sabbath day
Is fair and wise and good and gay.

ANNA ELIZA BRAY, Traditions of Devon. Vol. ii, p. 288. (1838)

1 "This is my birthday, Pip." I was going to wish her many happy returns.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 11. (1861)

2 Do you count your birthdays thankfully?
(Natalis grate numeras?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 210. (20 B. C.)

3 Is that a birthday? 'tis, alas! too clear;
'Tis but the funeral of the former year.

POPE, To Mrs. M. B. on Her Birthday. (1723)
Mrs. M. B. was Martha Blount.

BIRTHRIGHT

4 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint.
. . . And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright. . . . And he sold his birthright unto Jacob. (Vendidit primogenita.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxv, 30-33. (c. 800 B. C.) The proverb which has evolved from this story in Genesis is "To sell one's birthright for a mess of pottage," but the phrase "mess of pottage" does not occur in the text of the authorized version. Its earliest appearance is in the chapter-heading to Genesis xxv, in the Cranmer Bible (1539), "Esau selleth hys byrthryght for a messe of potage." In the same year, Richard Taverner's revision of Matthew's Bible appeared, with the heading, "Esau selleth his title of inheritance for a messe of potage." In 1557, in a play of unknown authorship, The Historie of Jacob and Esau, act ii, sc. 40, Esau is made to say, "Better a messe of potage than nothyng, pardie."

Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright. (Ἡσαῦ, ὃς ἀπὸ βρώσεως μιᾶς ἀπέλητο τὰ πρωτοτόκια δαυταῦς.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 16. (c. A. D. 90)
The Vulgate is, "Esau: qui propter unam escam vendidit primitiva sua."

His birthright sold, some pottage so to gain.

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomesday: The Sixth Hour. St. 39. (1614)

There be some that sell their birthright: it is said of the lawyer that he hath linguam venalem, a saleable tongue; the covetous, venalem animam, a saleable soul; the harlot, venalem carnem, a saleable flesh.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, II, 537. (1629)
Lest, selling that noble inheritance for a poor mess of pottage, you never enter into His eternal rest.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown, II, 20 (1669)

Scholars are wont to sell their birthright for a mess of learning.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

Shall we sell our birthrite for a mess of potash?
ARTEMUS WARD, The Crisis. (1860)

Esau, that swapped his copyright for a partridge.
O. HENRY, Cupid à la Carte. (1907)

BISHOP

5 The oyster-women lock'd their fish up,
And trudg'd away, to cry, No Bishop.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 539. (1663)

6 You wou'd be intreated, and say, Nolo, nolo, nolo, three times like any Bishop, when your mouth waters at the Diocese.

JOHN DRYDEN, Limberham. Act iii, sc. 1. (1678)

Referring to the phrase, "Nolo episcopari" (I do not wish to be made a bishop), now commonly applied to those who profess a reluctance for promotion which they do not feel

Unlike Bishops, 'tis my firm intention

To cry out, "Yes, my Liege," for place or pension

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Second Epistle to Mrs. C. (a. 1816)

Take thou mine answer in bare commonplace—
Nolo episcopari.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Becket: Prologue. (1884)

7 Once a bishop and ever a bishop.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain, vii, i. 28. (1655) The French have a proverb.

"Évêque d'or, crosse de bois évêque de bois crosse d'or" (Bishop of gold, staff of wood, staff of gold, bishop of wood). The German say, "Unter dem Krummstab ist gut wohnen" (It's good living under the crozier), referring to the preferred position enjoyed by serfs of ecclesiastical lords.

8 It is my aphorism, "No bishop, no king."

KING JAMES I OF ENGLAND. (1604) See FULLER, Church History, x, 1.

King James I of blessed memory said, no Bishop, no King: it was not he but others that added. No Ceremony, no Bishop.

SMECTYMNIUS, Vind. Answer. Sec. 16. (1641)

That prophetick axiom . . . we see fulfilled, No Bishop, no King.

CHETWYND, Harington's Briefe View of the Church: Dedication. (1653) Another form of the saying was "No miter, no crown."

9 The byshope hath blessed it.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Obedience of the Chrystian Man, p. 266. (1528) Tindale explains that the saying was applied to anything that "spreadeth not well, because that nothyng spreadeth well that [bishops] meddyl withall."

10 If the podesch be burned to, or the meate ouer roasted, we say, "the byshope has put his fote in the pottes," or "the byshope hath played the coke," because the byshopes burn who they lust, and whosoever displeaseth them.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Works, p. 166. (1528)

It will be as the bishop's foot in the broth.

JOHN MILTON, Animadversions. Sec. 1. (1641)

This cream is burnt too.—Why Madam, the bishop hath set his foot in it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. I. (1738)

The bishop hath set his foot in it, a saying in the North, used for milk that is burnt-to in the boiling.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Glossary: Bishop. (1790) "The milk is bishopped," is the usual phrase. Bishops evidently had a bad reputation, for another meaning of the word "bishopped" was to file down the teeth of a horse to make it look younger. One wonders whether any reflection on the clergy was involved in "bishop" as the common name for a woman's bustle in the United States. (1790-1848)

1 Burked the papa, now I'll Bishop the son.

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends, p. 201. (1840) No reflection upon either statesmen or the clergy is intended here. The Burke in question was the notorious Edinburgh criminal who strangled people to death and sold their bodies for dissection; Bishop was the name of a man who drowned a boy in Bethnal Green in 1831, and sold the body for the same purpose.

BIT

1 For three years he has rid your wit
And passion without drawing bit.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 559. (1664)

Spendthrift . . . never drawing bit.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table Talk, l. 685. (1782)

2 Like a resty jade thou wilt take the bit in thy mouth.

JOHN LYLY, Pappe with a Hatchet. (1589)

Taking the bit perversely in his teeth.

ARCHBISHOP GEORGE ABBOT, Exposition of Jonah, p. 521. (1600)

When I take the bit in my teeth there is no bridle to stop me.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 7. (1818)

He takes the bit fairly in his teeth.

JOHN RUSKIN, Political Economy of Art, p. 28. (1857)

BITING

3 "Nay, dred thee not therof," quod he,
"Hit is nothing wil byten thee."

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame, Bk. ii, l. 1043 (535) (c. 1383)

Thou wrecched mouses herte,

Art thou agast so that she wol thee byte?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 736. (c. 1380)

4 Though I am bitten, I am not all eaten.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 32. (1639)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6170. (1732)

5 Once in an age the biter should be bit.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Richmond Heiress: Epilogue. (1693)

I think she merits equal Praise

That has the Wit to bite the Biter.

EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues, ii, 179.

The biter may be bit.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1809)

The biter is bit.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 210. (1814)

"Attempting to lead another into an error," says Bland, "I am fallen into one myself, from which I am not likely easily to escape. Augustus Caesar, seeing a young man from the country, who in his features very much resembled his own family, asked him, by way of scoff, whether his mother had ever been at Rome? No, said the youth, but my father has." An anecdote which has been pinned upon many rulers.

The biter was bit: the fox . . . was caught.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 8. (1863)

The greatest sharp some day will find another sharper wit;

It always makes the Devil laugh to see the biter
bit.

C. G. LELAND, El Capitan-General. (1872)

Biters deserve to be bitten.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 16. (1880)

The tables had been turned upon him, . . . the biter had been bit.

MRS. OLIPHANT, The Second Son. Ch. 44. (1888)

6 Counting it no policy to show his teeth where he durst not bite.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy War, ii, 8.59. (1639)

If you cannot bite, never show your teeth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1670)

I'm sure you show your teeth when you can't bite.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

The French say, "Si vous ne pouvez mordre, ne montrez pas vos dents," or "Si tu ne peux mordre, n'aboie pas" (If you can't bite, don't bark).

7 This biteth the mare by the thumbe, as they say.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

Thus bitt the mare by the thumbe.

JOHN DAVIES OF HEREFORD, The Scourge of Folly, 43. (1611)

8 Never bite, unless you make your teeth meet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 258. (1721)

9 You take a bite out of your own hip.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 367. (1721)

What you say reflects on yourself.

You have taken a Bite out of your own Arm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5925. (1732)

10 The lecturer told his audience that he was "just going to bite off."

MRS. KIRKLAND, Western Clearings, p. 16. (1845)

"Ah, bite that off!" Rhode interrupted impatiently.

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE, Cynthia-of-the-Minute, p. 172. (1911)

11 The mon is muchel sot [a great fool] The nimeth [taketh] to him-seoluen [himself]
Mare thonne he mayen wolden [manage].

LAYAMON, Brut, i, 278. (c. 1205)

Who takes too much retains too little. (Qui nimis capit parum stringit.)

ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis. (c. 1240)

If you bite off too much you can't chew it thoroughly. ('Tan to chüeh pu lan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)

Men, you've bit off more'n you can chew.

J. H. BEADLE, Western Wilds, ii, 42. (1877)

They've bit off more'n they can chew.

H. B. STOWE, Poganuc People, iii, 33. (1878)

The moral is to know your biz,

When the pie is passed by Fate,

And not to indulge in a larger bite

Than you can masticate.

J. CHEEVER GOODWIN, Wang. Act i. (1891)

We've bitten off more than we can chew.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, The Clock Strikes Twelve, p. 85. (1944)

The mistake we describe metaphorically as "biting off more than they can chew."

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act v. (1912) See also SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act i. (1913)

FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 44. (1938)

ROMAINS, Verdun, p. 39. (1940) BAILEY,

Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 406. (1942) STAGG, The

Yellow Taxi, p. 260. (1942) WHEATLEY, The

Scarlet Impostor, p. 224. (1942) YATES, Mur- der by the Yard, p. 85. (1943) etc., etc.

Oh, when the postman's whistle shrills,

Just once, Lord, let me grin:

Let me have settled last month's bills

Before this month's come in.

Let me not bite more off the cob

Than I have teeth to chew;

Please let me finish just one job

Before the next is due.

OGDEN NASH, Prayer at the End of a Rope.

Bite off only what you can chew easily. It tastes better that way—any epicure can tell you that.

D. H. FINK, Release from Nervous Tension, p. 39. (1943)

1 He would make three bits of a cherry. (Il feroit d'une cerize trois morceaux.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 27. (1552)

He'll make nineteen bits of a bilberry.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 229. (1678)

Referring to a covetous person.

Take it all, man—take it all—never make two bites of a cherry.

WALTER SCOTT, The Two Drovers. (1827)

He is in the habit . . . of making two bites at a cherry.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 1. (1850)

Two Bites at a Cherry.

T. B. ALDRICH. Title of story. (1894)

2 More dog-like than man-like to bite the stone that struck thee.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Prerogative of Parliament: Epistle Dedicatory. (1616)

3 I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4.81. (1592)

Slave, I could bite thine ear.

BEN JONSON, The Alchemist. Act ii, sc. 3. (1610)

To bite the ear, mordre l'oreille, to flatter or caress delicately (mignonnement).

COTGRAVE, French-English Dictionary. (1611)

Nab me, and I'll nab thee.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)

Nab, to bite gently.

To nab the itches of their sects,

As jades do one another's necks.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 1457. (1678)

TO BITE THE HAND THAT FEEDS ONE, see under INGRATITUDE.

BITTER

See also Gall; Sweet and Bitter

4 As bitter as very gall. (πικρότερον αὐτῆς τῆς χολῆς.)

ALEXIS, Fragments. (c. 400 B. C.)

Ther hi habbeth dronek bittreer then the galle.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Political Songs, p. 195. (c. 1305)

The woofull teres . . . As bitter wer . . . as gall

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1109.

Whose taste I finde more bitter now then gall.

BARNABY RICH, Farewell. (1581)

Bitter as gall.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Devil's Law-Case. Act i, sc. 2. (1623)

5 As bitter as coloquintida.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 355. (1604)

The least dram of this Coloquintida will marre the relish of all his sweetes.

SAMUEL WARD, The Life of Faith in Death (1622)

A little coloquintida spoils all the broth.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), p. 711. (1630)

6 It takes a bitter draught to wash away the bitter gall. (πικρὴν χολὴν κλύουσι φαρμάκω πικρῷ.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. Fr. 733. (c. 450 B. C.)

O! sooth is seyed, that heled for to be . . .

Men moste drinke, as men may often see,

Ful bittre drink.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1215 (c. 1380)

A bitter draught, swallow it quickly. (El mal trago, pasarlo presto.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 283. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

BITTER PILL, see under PILL.

7 Bittrore then the sote.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Political Songs, p. 195. (c. 1305)

As bitter, I dare say, as soot.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. iv, ch. 13. (1758)

BLAB

8 Proverbis canst thi self ynow, and wost Ayenst that vice for to bene a blabbe.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iii, 291. (c. 1380)

He yt is a blabbe of his tonge.

MILES COVERDALE, Proverbs, xvi, 29. (1535)

Be no blabbe of hir tongue.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 406. (1580)

This tongue was never knowne to be a blab.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, II Edward IV, l. 148. (1600)

A long-tongued blab.

WILLIAM DU GARD, tr., The Gate of the Latin Tongue Unlocked. Sec. 644. (1656)

1 He that is a blab is a scab.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 132. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1670)

He that is a Blab, is a meer Scab.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6296. (1732)

If you blab, you are undone.

JONATHAN SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 135. (1733)

2 Now I will play the blab.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles, iv, 933. (1577)

Why have I blabb'd?

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 132. (1601)

Avoided as a blab.

JOHN MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 495. (1671)

Some men are quite as bad blabs as the women.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk, p. 42. (1869)

3 He was a great blabber.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Diall of Princes, fo. 94a. (1557)

I'll now play the blabber.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Captives. Act v, sc. 3. (1624)

4 When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 2, 63. (1599)

Mums the word, I never blab.

BENJAMIN HOADLY, The Suspicious Husband. Act iii, sc. 2. (1747)

We certainly would not have guessed it if he had not blabbed.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books. Ser. i, p. 202. (1870)

5 Blabbe hyt whyste, and owt ye must.

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS, l. 3362. (c. 1450)

Blab it wist and out it must.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

He cannot hold, but all must out.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 16. (1633)

BLACK

6 They that wear black must hang a brush at their back.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 201. (1639)

He that wears Black Must hang a Brush at his back.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6298. (1732)

7 Ouer blacke there is no colour. (Sopra negro non è colore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 33. (1578)

Above black there is no colour.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital-Eng., p. 7. (1659)

8 Though I am blacke, I am not the Diuell.
ROBERT GREENE, A Quip for an Upstart Courtier. (1592)

As the old proverb is, though I am black I am not the diuel.

GEORGE PEELE, Old Wives Tale, sig. D3. (1595)

I am black but I am not the devil.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

9 That when thou twynnest fro hir companye,
Another cometh and blered ys thyn ye!

THOMAS HOCCLVE, Minor Poems (E.E.T.S.). p. 76. (1402)

The riche and myghty man, thoughe he trespase.
No man seithe ones that blak is his eye.

HOCCLVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 2823. (c. 1412) To say "black is your eye," is to find fault with, or blame for something.

Yet maie no man saie blacke is their eye.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, p. 88. (1583)

No man shall say black is his eye.

BEN JONSON, Staple of News. Act i, sc. 2. (1625)

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 79. (1711)

Nobody can say black's my eye.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. 1738)

I defy anybody to say black is my eye.

HENRY FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1749)

There is none justified in saying with self-complacency, "black is the eye" of another.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, Letter to Miss H. Welsh. 27 May. 1838.

10 Black wool will take no other color. (Lanae nigrae nullum colorem bibunt.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. viii. (A.D. 77)

The Italians say, "Cattiva è quella lana che non si può tingere" (It's an ill wool that will take no dye).

Folke haue a sayiing bothe olde and trew,

In that they say, blacke will take none other hew

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Doe you not knowe that which all men doe affirme and know, that blacke will take no other colour?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 42. (1579)

Coal-black is better than another hue.

In that it scorns to bear another hue.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 99. (1593)

Black will take no other hue.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (1721)

"Intimating," Kelly adds, "the difficulty of reclaiming perverse people." FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 987 (1732)

11 I defy ony body to say black's my nail.

JOSEPH REED, The Register-Office. Act i. (1761)

Thou cannot say black's my nail.

WILLIAM CARR, Craven Dialect, ii, 2. (1828)

12 I am black but comely. (Nigra sum, sed formosa.)

Old Testament: The Song of Solomon, i, 5. (c. b. c. 900)

Is black so base a hue?

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 71. (1593)

The blacker, the fairer the Moor.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1709)

1 Mr. Slope was not quite so black as he had been painted.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 8. (1857) See also under DEVIL.

BEATEN BLACK AND BLUE, see under BEATING.

II—Black: Proverbial Comparisons

See also Dark

2 As blacke as inke.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Eglogues, p. 30. (c. 1510)

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, i, i, 201. (1590) AUBREY, Natural Hist. Wilts., 21. (c. 1685)

SHAKESPEARE, Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, 1, 288. (1594)

Black as ink-stains.

R. L. STEVENSON, Ebb-Tide. Ch. 1. (1893)

3 His stede was blak as rauen.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicles, 295. (c. 1300)

My mistress' brows are raven black.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet cxxvii. (c. 1600)

As black as a raven.

THOMAS KILLIGREW, Thomaso. Pt. ii, act i. (1663)

Black as the . . . glossy raven's back.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 198. (1720)

4 As black as Carry Nation's bonnet.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 145. (1940)

5 Blak as bery, or any slo.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 928. (c. 1365)

Blake as a sloo.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, 160. (c. 1386) GOLDING, tr., Ovid, ii, 315. (1567)

Hair black as a sloe.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, viii, 418. (1685)

Eyes as black as sloes.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. i, fab. iii, l. 16. (1727) A proverbial comparison very frequently used.

6 Blak as feend in helle.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 974.

Derke as hell.

SIR RICHARD GUYLFORDE, Pylgrymage to the Holy Land, p. 53. (1506) SPENSER, The Faerie Queene, i, viii, 355. (1590)

Black is the badge of hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 254. (1595)

Black as hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 3, 94. (1600) SCOTT, The Talisman. Ch. 15. (1825) etc. etc.

7 As black as the devil's hind foot.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843)

8 Blacker than pitch. (μελάντερον ἢ τε πίσσα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 277. (c. 850 B. C.)

As blac as eny pitch he was.

UNKNOWN, Vernon MS. (E.E.T.S.), p. 354. (c. 1300)

Than lai he thar so blac so pych.

UNKNOWN, Sir Ferumbras, p. 81. (c. 1380)

He is as blacke as pytche boylled.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Lyfe of Charles the Grete, (E.E.T.S.), p. 165. (1485)

Darke as pitch shall shew the glistering sunne.

ROBERT TOFTE, Alba (Grosart), p. 39. (1598)

Got home well by coach, though as dark as pitch.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 18 Jan., 1666.

All the windows were dark as pitch.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 16. (1824)

Black as pitch and ink. (Wu ch i no hei.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1387. (1875)

9 It cometh out of Ethiopie and Ynde, Blak as is get.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 987. (1412)

Two proper palfreys, black as jet.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, v, 2, 50. (1593)

Nails and teeth as black as jet.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 19 June, 1682.

The jet-black glossy velvet cap.

PHILIP PARSONS, Newmarket. Vol. ii, p. 89. (1771)

10 Black as the Earl of Hell's waistcoat.

HELEN MACINNES, Assignment in Brittany, p. 24. (1942)

11 As black as a crow. (Niger tanquam corvus)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

JOHN BALE, Kynge Johan, i, 88. (c. 1540)

WARD, Female Policy Detected, p. 86 (1716)

Blac as ani cawe.

UNKNOWN, Horn Childe and Maiden Rimnild, l. 1049. (c. 1320)

As blak as any cole or crowe.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 1834. (c. 1386)

Black as e'er was crow.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 4. (1610)

12 Black as soot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 281. (1678)

13 All was dark as a stack of black cats.

J. S. ROBB, Squatter Life, p. 65. (1847)

Black as a stack of black cats in the dark.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493. (1940)

14 Dark as a wolf's mouth.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 36. (1823)

The road as black as a wolf's mouth.

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 24. (1828)

15 As black as midnight at Martinmas.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 48. (1814)

As dark as a Yule midnight.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 62. (1846)

He started as if a serpent had stung him, and his brow became black as night.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 24. (1850)

16 Black as ebony.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 247. (1595)

1 Black as thunder looked King Padella.
W. M. THACKERAY, Rose and Ring, xv. (1855)
His looks as black as thunder.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, ii, 56. (1879)
He's in the room and as black as thunder.
STANLEY WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank, Ch.3. (1922)

2 His face was as black as a devill in a playe.
SIR HENRY SPELMAN, Dialogue, 42. (c. 1580)
Black as the devil.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 203. (1670)
As black as the de'il's nutting-bag.
WILLIAM HENDERSON, Folk-Lore of the North- ern Counties. (1879) Cited as Sussex proverb.

3 Blac as a bloamon [Blackamoor].
UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwele, p. 234. (a. 1225)

4 Blacker than an owl. (Ele est plus noire c'une choe.)

UNKNOWN, Des II. Changeors, l. 203. (c. 1250)
MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fables, i, 252.

5 Blak so eny cole.
UNKNOWN, King Horn, l. 590. (c. 1250) A comparison which dates back to a Saxon manuscript of before 1000, where the phrase is,
"Swa sweart swa col," and was no doubt proverbial even then.

As blak he lay as any cole.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights
Tale, l. 1834. (c. 1386)

He had a beres skin, col-blak, for-old.
CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1284.
Of col-blak silk, with-inne and eek withoute.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 54.
Blak as cole than was his hors.
UNKNOWN, Partonope, l. 3918. (c. 1450)

As blacke as a cole.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii. 14.
(1599) LYLIV, Euphues, p. 115. (1579) O
HENRY, The Venturers. (1910) etc., etc.

III—Black and White

6 A blacke raisin is as good as a white.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca etc., p. 15. (1633)

A black plum is as sweet as a white.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1670) Ray adds, "The prerogative of beauty proceeds from fancy."

Black Plums may eat as sweet as white.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 986. (1732)

7 I will believe that black is white.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv.
p. 159. (1574)

All his blacks are white.
SAMUEL RUTHERFORD, Tryal and Triumph of Faith, p. 56. (1645)

And finds with keen, discriminating sight,
Black's not so black—nor white so very white.
GEORGE CANNING, The New Morality. (1823)

We called the chess-board white, we call it black.
ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apol- ogy. (1855)

Make your affairs known in the market-place, and one will call them black and another white.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 488. (1855)

8 Snow is white, and lyeth in the dike,
And euery man lets it lye.

Pepper is black and hath a good smacke,
And euery man doth it bye.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

9 Two blacks make no white. An answer to them who, being blam'd, say others have done as ill or worse.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 321. (1721)
BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 548. (1855)

To try whether I cannot contradict the old proverb of "two blacks not making a white."

WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, v, 162. (1882)
Two blacks can never make a white.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p.
92. (1880) AINGER, Charles Lamb, p. 136 (1881)

Two black eyes wont make one white one.
BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)

Two blacks will never make a white.
EDGAR WALLACE, The Clue of the Twisted Can- dle, p. 183.

Never forget that two blacks do not make a white.
BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black
Girl in Her Search for God. (1932)

10 White is whitter, if it be set bi blak.

JOHN LYDGATE, Temple of Glas, l. 1250 (c. 1403)
We commonly see that a blacke ground doth best beseme a white counterfalte, and Venus according to the judgement of Mars, vvas then most amiable when she sate close by Vulcan.

JOHN LYLIV, The Anatomy of Wit: Epistle Ded- icatorie, p. 204 (1580)
The old saying is,

Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
v, 2, 12. (1594)

Oh, sir, black is a pearl in a woman's eye
GEORGE CHAPMAN, An Humorous Dayes Mirth
Sc. 8. (1599)

A black man is a pearl in a fair woman's eye, and is as acceptable as lame Vulcan was to Venus

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy
Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. ii, subs. 2. (1621)

The fairest ladies like the blackest men.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 4. (c. 1623)

A black man's a jewel in a fair woman's eye.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 16. (1732) Sir
Richard Burton, in a note to the opening chapter of his translation of The Thousand and One Nights, offers an explanation of this

11 Well skilled in cunning wiles, he could make white of black and black of white. (Furtum ingeniosus ad omne, | candida de nigris et de candentibus atra.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xi, l. 313. (A. D. 7)
They turn black into white. (Nigrum in candida vertunt.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 30. (c. A. D. 120)

These are they that turn black into white. (Qui nigrum in candida vertunt.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 41. (1511)
Such reasons make black white, and dark day night.

MARLOWE, Edward II. Act i, sc. 4. (c. 1590)
To make most glaring contraries unite,
And prove beyond dispute that black is white.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 309. (1763)
To prove

That right is wrong, and wrong is right,
And white is black, and black is white.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, All for Love. Pt. ix, st. 29. (1829)

1 Which, indeed, is not under white and black.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 1, 314. (1598)

I have it here in black and white. [He pulls out a paper.]

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iv, sc. 4. (1601)

We have gotten it under black and white.
JOSEPH HALL, An Humble Remonstrance. (1640)

I saw it . . . under black and white.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Cutter of Coleman-Street. Act i, sc. 5. (1658)

Thus I set pen to paper with delight,
And quickly had my thoughts in black and white.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: Author's Apology. (1678)

Give us in Black and White your Opinion.
RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 286. (1712)

The whole story of her life in black and white.
WILKIE COLLINS, Armada, iv, 15. (1866) See also SCOTT, St. Roman's Well, ch. 23. (1823)

HARDY, Mayor of Casterbridge, ch. 9. (1886)

In Authentic black-on-white against them.
CARLYLE, Life of Cromwell, iv, 127. (1845)

2 Every white will have its black
And every sweet its sour.

UNKNOWN, Sir Cautine. (c. 1475) See under SWEET AND BITTER.

BLACKSMITH, see Smith

BLAME

3 No one's to blame for this but me myself.
(οὐ τις ἐμοὶ τῶνδ' ἄλλος ἐπαίριος, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ αὐτός.)

CALLIMACHUS (?), Fragments. Frag. 372, Schneider. (c. 250 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 477A.

I have nobody to blame for my faults or misfortunes but myself. (Je n'y gueres à me prendre de mes fautes, ou infortunes, à aultre qu'à moy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)
She has no body to blame for it but herself.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 89. (1711)

4 One doth the scathe, and another hath the scorn.

RANDLE COTURAVE, Dictionary: Faire. (1611)
One doth the Harm, and another bears the Blame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6344. (1732)

5 Some in blamyng of others, condemne them

selues. (Tal biasma altrui, che se stesso condanna.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

6 He that blames would buy.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
He who findeth Fault, meaneth to buy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2383. (1732)

7 A fearsome man, the blameless he would blame. (δειρὸς ἀνὴρ· τάχα κεν καὶ ἀναιτιον αἰτιόωτο.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 654. (c. 850 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, xiii, 25. Homer refers to Achilles, Cicero to Varro.

Any blame one who is blameless. (ἀναιτιον αἰτιόωσαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 775. (c. 850 B.C.) Quoted by LUCIAN, Prometheus. Sec. 4.

8 "Blame my buttons," said Blossom, "if I like them eyes."

A. B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes, p. 26 (1835)
Blame my cats if he don't weigh five pounds.

MARK TWAIN, The Jumping Frog (1865)

Blame my skin if I wasn't joking.

C. H. SMITH, Bill Arp, p. 47. (1866)

This adjective "blamed" is the virtuous oath by which simple people, who are improving their habits, cure themselves of a stronger epithet.

E. E. HALE, If, Yes, and Perhaps, p. 20 (1862)

BLESSING

9 Not easily without the gods are men's blessings theirs forever. (Non facile sine deum opera humana propria sunt bona.)

ACCIIUS, Armorum Iudicium. Frag. 126, Loeb. (c. 140 B.C.)

10 I bring you here all blessings in a lump. (ὡς ἀγαθὰ σε ἀλλήσθην ἀπαντὰ σοὶ φέρω.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 646 (348 B.C.)

11 Let not the blessing of the plain man have little value in thine eyes.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 15b (c. 450)

12 They haue need of a blessing, will kneele to a thistle.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 279 (1605)

They haue need of a blessing that kneel to a thistle.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 13 (1639)
Cited by RAY, p. 63, and FULLER, No. 4964

13 "God bless us every one!" said Tiny Tim, the last of all.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 3. (1843)

God bless us every one, prayed Tiny Tim.

J. W. RILEY, God Bless Us Every One. (1891)

14 Out of the shadow into the sunlight. (Ex umbra in solem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 82. (1523)
That which was obscure and difficult has been made clear and luminous.

To leappe out of the halle into the kytchyn, or out of Chryst's blessing into a warme sunne.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolustus, sig. H3. (1540)

This proverb, very popular for a time, was used with various meanings, but its true meaning seems to be "from better to worse," and it probably refers to the haste of the congregation to leave the shelter of the church immediately after the benediction, running from God's blessing into the warm sun. That, at least, is Prof. Skeat's explanation.

In your running from him to me, ye runne

Out of Gods blessing into the warme sunne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Bringe me (as they say) out of Gods blessing into the warme sunne.

GEORGE PELLIE, Petite Pallace, p. 256. (1576)

It thou wilt follow my advice . . . thou shalt come out of a warme sunne into Gods blessing

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 196. (1579)

Thou forsakest Gods blessing to sit in a warme Sunne

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 320. (1580)

What reason hath Zeale to fly from God's blessing into a warme sunne

GEORGE HARVEY, Works (Grosart), ii, 207. (1593)

Good king, thou must approve the common saw, That out of heaven's benediction comest To the warm sun!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 166. (1605)

Be well settled in thine own Religion, lest, travelling out of England into Spain, thou goest out of God's blessing into the warm Sunne

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1612)

Small reason had King John to rejoyce, being come out of God's blessing (of whom before he immediately held the crown), into the warm sun, or rather scorching heat of the pope's protection.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain, iii, 1, 328. (1655)

Out of Gods blessing into the warm sun. Ab equis ad imos

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1670)

"From horse to ass" means, of course, from better to worse

Out of God's blessing into the warm sun

PETER MOUTON, tr. Don Quixote, Pt. i, bk. iii, ch. 4. (1712) Mouton takes the phrase to mean "out of the frying pan into the fire," or from bad to worse. The same misinterpretation is made in Donham Tracts, i, 77. (1846)

Well, she's got out of God's blessing into the warm sun.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i. (1738)

1 An injury may prove a blessing (Est ipsis iniuria passis utilis interdum.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 103. (1869) Quoting Ovid. A stumble may prevent a fall.

2 Well (quoth he) if ye list to bring it out, Ye can geue me your blessing in a clout.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

i. e. money wrapped up in a cloth.

God-fathers oft give their blessings in a clout.

JOHN DAVIES OF HEREFORD, The Scourge of Folly, p. 47. (1611)

3 May the gods grant you prosperity. (θεοὶ δ' ἀρετὴν δαΐσειαν.)

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xiii, l. 45. (c. 850 B. C.)

Let wealth and peace abound. (πλοῦτος δὲ καὶ εἰρήνη ἅλις ἔστω.)

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xxiv, l. 486. (c. 850 B. C.)

Blessed shall be thy basket and thy store. (Benedicta horrea tua, et benedictae reliquiae tuae.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxviii, 5. (c. 650 B. C.)

May maidens ravish him! May roses bloom wherever he plants his foot! (Puellae hunc rapiant; quidquid calcaverit hic, rosa fiat.)

PERSEUS, Satires, Sat. ii, l. 37. (c. 58 A. D.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42. There are a number of proverbial Latin blessings. One of them is, "Stet fortuna domus!" (May the fortune of the house endure!), and another is "Prosit tibi" (May it be well with thee).

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

"Prosit" of course is still in use. An old form of grace was, "Benedictus benedicat" (May the Blessed One bless)

1 As the saying goes, you are so crowded by your blessings that you have no room to ease yourself. (τὸ δὴ λεγόμενον, οὐκ ἔχεις ὅπου χέσῃς | ὑπὸ τῶν ἀγαθῶν, εἰς ἴσθι.)

MENANDER, The Ghost, l. 42. (c. 300 B. C.)

2 He whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed. . . . Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee. (Quod benedictus sit cui benedixeris.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xxii, 6; xxiv, 9. (c. 550 B. C.)

Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. (ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος ἐξέρχεται εὐλογία καὶ κατάρσα.)

New Testament: James, iii, 10. (c. A. D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Ex ipso ore procedit benedictio, et maledictio."

3 My blessings have banished fear. (Excessere metum mea iam bona.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 197. (A. D. 7)

4 We mortals realize the value of our blessings only when we have lost them. (Tum denique homines nostra intellegimus bona, | quom quae in potestate habuimus, ea amisimus.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 142. (c. 200 B. C.)

Blessings are not valued, till they are gone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 989. (1732)

How blessings brighten as they take their flight!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. ii, l. 600. (1742)

5 No human blessing lasts forever. (Nullum homini est perpetuum bonum.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 189. (Act i, sc. 3.) (c. 200 B. C.)

Nothing is blessed in every respect (Nihil est ab omni | parte beatum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 27. (23 B. C.)

'Tis not for mortals always to be blest.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iv, l. 260. (1744)

6 The blest today is as completely so As who began a thousand years ago.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 75. (1733)

Come what may, I have been blessed.

LORD BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1115. (1813)

7 In blessing others, bless'd.

POPE, tr. The Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 96. (1725)

In proportion as it blesses, blest.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 300. (1733)

He who blesses most is blest.

J. G. WHITTIER, Lines for the Agricultural Exhibition at Amesbury. (1858)

8 A double blessing is a double grace.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 53. (1600)

I had most need of blessing, and "Amen" Stuck in my throat.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 2, 32. (1606)

9 Got pless my heart, liver, and lungs.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 26. (1748)

10 The three blessings for which I am most grateful are: first, that I was born a human being and not one of the brutes; second, that I was born a man and not a woman; third, that I was born a Greek and not a barbarian.

THALES OF MILETUS, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.)

See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales, sec. 33.

These Blessings, Reader, may Heav'n grant to thee:

A faithful Friend, equal in Love's degree,
Land fruitful, never conscious of the Curse,

A liberal Heart and never-failing Purse;

A smiling Conscience, a contented Mind;

A temp'rate knowledge with true Wisdom join'd;

A life as long as fair, and, when expir'd,

A kindly Death, unfear'd and undesir'd.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745

May the three stars illumine thee.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 377. (1938)

A Chinese proverb A blessing often used over Chinese doorways. The "three stars" were happiness, official emoluments, and old age. According to the Hung Fang (c. 1100 B. C.), there were five blessings, long life, serenity, riches, the love of virtue and the attainment of ambition.

11 The blessings of the evil Genii are curses.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, vi. 152. (1853) An Arabic proverb

BLINDNESS

12 Laugh not at a blind man, nor mock at a dwarf, nor mar the design of a lame man.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxiv, l. 9. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way. (Maledictus qui errare facit caecum in itinere.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxvii, 18. (c. 650 B. C.)

Thou shalt not curse the deaf nor put a stumbling block before the blind (Non maledices surdo nec coram caeco pones offendiculum.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xix, 14. (c. 570 B. C.)

13 "Go look at a dog's tail, my lad," said I. (τούτῳ μὲν εἶπον ἐς κύνος πηγὴν ὄραν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 255. (c. 393 B. C.) A proverb said to the short-sighted

14 Groping for things in the dark. (ἐψηλαφῶμεν ἐν σκότῳ τὰ πράγματα.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 691. (421 B. C.)

Darkness, thou art my light! (σκότος, ἐμὸν φῶς.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 396. (c. 409 B. C.)

Them that sit in darkness. (Sedentes in tenebris.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlii, 7. (c. 725 B. C.)

They That Walk in Darkness.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL. Title of novel. (1899)

1 What matters it to a blind man that his father could see?

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 555. (1855)

2 The blind man relieves himself upon the terrace of the house and thinks that no one sees him.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 447. (1817)

3 Blindness is the first-born of Excess.

BYRON, Heaven and Earth. Pt. i, sc. 3, l. 807. (1821)

4 Very blind is he who cannot see through the bottom of a sieve. (Cuán ciego es aquel que no vee por tela de cedazo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, Ch. 1. (1615)

He is blind enough who sees not through the holes of a sieve.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1670)

He's so blind he can't see a hole through a nine-foot ladder.

Cornish Proverbs, in Notes and Queries. Ser. iii, vi, 494. (1864)

5 We'll follow the blind side of him.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1. (1616)

The imperfect knowledge Saints have here is Satan's advantage against them: He often takes them on the blind side

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, 27. (1655)

The rascals have a blind side.

APIRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 1 (1681)

If this good man had an enthusiasm, or what the vulgar call a blind side, it was this.

HENRY FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1742)

All people have their blind side—their superstitions

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's Opinions on Whist. (1823)

One-eyed mule can't be handled on de bline side.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

6 That been betid, no man wot why,
But as a blind man stert an hare.

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. ii, l. 680. (172) (c. 1383)

By wondrous accident perchance one may
Gripe out a needle in a load of hay;
And though a white crow be exceeding rare,
A blind man may (by fortune) catch a hare.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER POET, A Kicksy Winsay. Pt. vii. (1619)

7 A blind man can nat jugged wel in hewis.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 21. (c. 1380)

The blinde man no colour demeth.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 2499. (c. 1390)

The bynde man of coloures al wrong deemeth.

THOMAS HOCLEVE, De Regimine Principum, p. 36. (1412)

Blinde men should iudge no colours by olde sause,
And folk oft times ar most blinde in their owne cause.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
The Italians say, "Il cieco non dee giudicar dei colori."

If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 1, 125. (1590)

You cannot but confess that blind men can judge no colours.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Courtier and Countryman. (1618)

8 In the kingdom of the blind the one-eyed man is king. (In regione caecorum rex est luscus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iv, No. 96.

(1523) Erasmus also gives another form, "Inter caecos regnat strabus" (Among the blind the squinter reigns). And he adds two related ones: "Inter indoctos, qui semidoctus est, doctissimus habent" (Among the ignorant, the half-ignorant is learned), and "Inter mendicos, qui paululum habet nummorum, Croesus est" (Among beggars, he who has only a little money is a Croesus). Frequently quoted, recently by W. S. MAUGHAM, Lord Mountdrago. (1939)

In the country of the blind, the one-eyed man rules as king over all. (Caecorum in patria luscus rex imperat omnis)

MICHAEL APOSTOLIUS, Adagia. (1538) Palsgrave, tr., Acolastus. (1540)

But haue ye nat harde this.

How an one eyed man is Well syghted when

He is amonge blynde men?

JOHN SKELTON, Why Not to Court? 1529. (1522)

In the kingdom of blind men, the one-eyed is king.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 471.

(1640) The French say, "En la terre des aveugles celui qui n'a qu'un œil y est roi" (In the country of the blind, he who has but one eye is king); the Italians, "In terra di ciechi beato chi ha un occhio" (In the country of the blind blessed is he who has one eye)

Among the blind the one-eyed blinkard reigns.

So rules among the drowned he that drains.

ANDREW MARVELL, Character of Holland. (1665)

Among the blind, he that has one eye is a Prince.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Miscellanea. Pt. ii, l. 342. (1696)

He that has but one Eye, is a Prince among those that have none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2137. (1732)

Blessed are the one-eyed in the country of the blind. (Beati monoculi in regione caecorum.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, quoting a proverb, one of the tags of Latin he was fond of airing. (1735) See PREUSS, Friedrich der Grosse, i, 24.

He might still be the giant of the pygmies, the one-eyed monarch of the blind.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton. (1779)

The one-eyed person is a beauty in the country of the blind.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 129. (1817)
The purblind is a king you know among the blind.

WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, ii, 147. (1822)
Where there is no cinnabar, red earth is in high esteem.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 353.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

1
He is blind that eats his marrow [companion], but far blinder that lets him.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)
Wordsworth, it will be remembered, speaks of his "winsome marrow" in Yarrow Unvisited.

2
A blind Man will be glad to see it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 17. (1732)

A blind Man will not thank you for a Looking-Glass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 18. A rendering of the Greek proverb, τὶ τυφλῷ καὶ κατόπτρῳ (What has a blind man to do with a mirror?) It is a Latin proverb too, "Quid caeco cum speculo?"

A Pebble and a Diamond are alike to a blind Man
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 340.

Blind Men must not run.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 990

3
Amongst a multitude, it seldome falleth out that all are blinded.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 44. (1574) Pettie, tr.

4
A blind man's peck should be well measured
HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (1832)

5
Better to be blind than to see ill.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 131. (1640)

Better blind than burned. (Blindr er betri. en brendr sé.)

HEUSLER, Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde, xxv, 113. An ancient Germanic proverb, blind in this instance meaning dead

6
Marry, that I would see, quod blind Hugh

JOHN HEYWOOD, Pardoner and Friar. (1533)

Would I could see it, quoth blind Hugh.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

That I would fain see, quoth the blind George of Holloway.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub, ii, 1. (1633)

That would I fain see, said blind George of Holloway.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 268. (1678)

7
Folk oft tymes are most blind in their owne cause.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1536)

Men are blind in their own cause.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 384. (1678)

MERRITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 85 (1683)

8
I came to be mery. Wherwith merily, Proface.
Haue among you, blynd harpers (sayde I).

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
A drinking pledge.

Harping always upon love, till you be as blind as a harper.

JOHN LVLV, Sapho and Phao. Act iv, sc. 3. (1584)
Are you blind?—As a purblind poet: have amongst you, blind harpers.

JOHN DAY, Humour out of Breath. Act iv, sc. 3. (1608) See also under HARP.

9
Ye cast and coniecture this muche like in show,

As the blind man casts his staffe, or shootes the crow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

He does as the blind man when he casts his staff
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 52. (c. 1595)

Now and then a blinde man may hit a crow.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, p. 15. (1608)

Even as the blind Man shot the Crow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1393. (1732)

Hitty-missy, as the blind man shot the crow.

FORBY, Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 428. (1830)

10
Who is so deafe, or so blynde as is hee

That wilfully will nother here nor see?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Who is blynder than he yt wyl nat see.

ANDREW BOORDY, Breviary of Healtke. Bk. ii, fo 6. (1547)

None so blind as he that will not see.

PETER HEVLIN, Animadversions. (1659)

Who is so blind as he that will not see?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 64. (1670)

There's none so blind as they that won't see

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 58. (1852)

There's none so blind as he who will not see any one except his wife.

MARGARET YATES, Murder by the Yard, p. 3 (1943)

11
The vile leads the vile. (κακὸς κακὸν ἡγῆλᾷ.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 217. (c. 850 B.C.)

The blind man calls to the deaf. (ὁ τυφλὸς παρὰ τὸν κωφὸν καλεῖ.)

CRATINUS, Archilochus, sec. 3. (c. 450 B.C.)

I who am old will lead you, also old. (γέροντα γέροντα παιδαγωγῶσω σ' ἐγὼ.)

SOPHOCLES, Phthiotides, l. 633. (c. 400 B.C.)

Repeated in EURIPIDES, Bacchar, l. 193

VARRO, De Lingua Latina, bk. iii (c. 50 B.C.)

gives the Latin proverb, "Cascus cascum ducit" (The old leads the old), and adds that this is only one of many "similis similem" sayings, such as "The deformed the deformed," "The barbarous the barbarous," and so on. It is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, l. ii, 62.

Men who know not their own path, yet point the way for others. (Qui sibi semitam non sapiunt, alteri monstrant viam.)

ENNIUS, Telemon. Frag. 334, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.)

It is as if a blind man sought to show the way.
(Ut si caecus iter monstrare velit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xvii, l. 4. (20 B. C.)
They be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.
(τυφλοί εἰσιν ὁδηγοί· τυφλὸς δὲ τυφλὸν ἐὰν ὁδηγῇ, ἀμφοτέροις εἰς βόθυνον πεσοῦνται.)

New Testament: Matthew, xv, 14. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Caeci sunt, et duces caecorum. Caecus autem si caeco ducatum praestet, ambo in foveam cadunt." The earliest English rendering is in the Anglo-Saxon Gospel of 995: "Se blinda gyl he blinde laet, hig feallath begen on zenne pytt." The Wyclif rendering (1389) is, "Sothely yif a blynd man geue ledynge to a blynd man, bothe fallen doun in to the diche."

Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch? (μήτι δύνανται τυφλὸς τυφλὸν ὁδηγεῖν; οὐχὶ ἀμφοτέροις εἰς βόθυνον ἐμπεσοῦνται;)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 39. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Potest caecus caecum ducere? nonne ambo in foveam cadunt?"

A crippled helmsman steers a leaking ship, a blind man leads the blind into a pit. (Caecus caecos ducat in foveam.)

St. Jerome (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Let. vii, sec. 5 (A. D. 374)

The blind leading the blind. (τιφλὸς τιφλῷ ὁδηγῶς.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. viii, No. 40

(1500) The Latin is, "Caecus caeco dux"

Where the blynd leadth the blynd, both fall in the dike.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5 (1546)

Like two blinde men which leade one an other they fall both into one ditch.

STEFANO GUZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 74 (1574) Pettie, tr.

In the ditch falls the blind that is led by the blind

BRIAN MERRANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Y1. (1583)

The blind leads the blind and both fall into the ditch

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 332. (1605)

If the blind lead the blind, both are in danger of falling into the ditch. (Si el ciego guia al ciego, ambos van a peligro de caer en el hoyo.)

ERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

That ditch is it into which the blind have led the blind in all ages, and have both there miserably perished

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i, p. 64. (1678)

When the blind leads the blind, no wonder they both fall into matrimony.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act v, sc. 1. (1699)

When a blind Man flourisheth the Antient [banner], woe be unto those that follow him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5529. (1732)

He loses his way whom blind men guide.

When crows are the guides of the people, they lead them to the carcasses of dogs.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 524. (1817)

It is written, When the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1834)
He had often heard of the blind leading the blind, and now . . . he knew what it meant.

WILKIE COLLINS, The Moonstone, i, 10. (1868)
When the blind lead the blind, they will certainly fall into a ditch. (Hsia tzü ch'an fu hsia tzü, wei pi pu tiao hsia k'eng ch'u.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1318. (1875)

It did look to me somethin' like the blind leadin' the blind.

FRANK R. STOCKTON, Christmas Wreck (1886)

1
Like a fowler with his eyes upon blackbirds, he fell into a well. (Veluti merulis intentus decedit auceps in puteum.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 458. (c. 20 B. C.)

Thales is said to have fallen into a well while studying the stars.

2
I am not so blind, as I am blear ey'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 199. (1721)

I may think it proper to hold my tongue, but yet I can very well observe how things go

3
It would be a good sight for a blind man to see

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 206. (1721)

A blind man would be glad to see it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A blind man on a galloping horse would be glad to see it.

G. F. NORTHALE, Folk Phrases. (1894) There is a Latin proverb, "Vel caeco appareat" (Even to a blind man that would be apparent, or Even a blind man could see that). The Italians say, "Ben è cieco chi non vede il sole" (He is very blind who can't see the sun)

4
A blind man is a poor man, and blind a poor man is;

For the former seeth no man, and the latter no man sees.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinngedichte. (c. 1640) Longfellow, tr.

5
The blind et many a fly.

JOHN LYDGATE, Ballade. (c. 1450) See SKEAT, Chaucer, vii, 295.

The blynde eteth many a flye.

JOHN SKELTON, A Replycacion agaynst Certayne Yong Scolers. (c. 1528) Cited by FLORIO, Firste Frutes, fo. 34, with the Italian. "L'orbo mangia molte mosce"

The blynde eate many flies.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
The blind eats many a fly.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 558. (1640) The popularity of this proverb throughout Elizabethan times, and its general acceptance, throw a flash of light as TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 77 observes, upon a dark corner of sixteenth century culinary manners. Obviously, those who could see fished out the flies.

<sup>1</sup> The eyes are blind when the mind is elsewhere. (Caeci sunt oculi cum animus alias res agit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 126. (c. 43 B. C.)
By testing everything even the blind walk safely.
(Temptando cuncta caeci quoque tuto ambulant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 697. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> A man were better be half blind than have both his eyes out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 64. (1678)
Better one eye than quite blind. (Mieux vaut être borgne qu'aveugle.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 368. (1856)

<sup>3</sup> He is like a blind man on a blind horse coming at midnight upon a deep ditch.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 804. (1875)
The thoughts of the blind are like a knife.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1315

<sup>4</sup> As one blind man said to another, let's behold ourselves.

THOMAS SHELTON, Don Quixote, i, iv, 23. (1612)
Let me see, said the blind man.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend, ii, 2. (1864)
Let me see, as the blind man said.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 258. (1869)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>5</sup> Blinder than a snake's slough. (τυφλότερος λεβηρίδος.)

ARISTOPHANES, Fragments. Frag. 102. (c. 415 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 56, with the Latin, "Leberide caecior." The cast skin of a snake, in which only the apertures for the eyes remain.

<sup>6</sup> As blind as a bat at noone.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 52. (1639)
What a blind bat I have been.

MRS. HANNAH COWLEY, A School for Greybeards. Act v, sc. 2. (1786)

Anybody would think you were blind as a bat.

MATTHEW HEAD, The Smell of Money, p. 158. (1943)

<sup>7</sup> Blinder than a mole. (τυφλότερος ἀσπάλακος.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, viii, 26. (c. A. D. 125)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 55, with the Latin, "Talpa caecior."

Blynde as molles.

UNKNOWN, A Myrroure for Magistrates: Rivers, lxi. (1563)

In the water as blinde as a mole.

B. R., Euterpe, p. 68. (1584)

Like blinde Moles into our bane we go.

FRANCIS ROUS, Thule, sig. L4b. (1598)

In heavenly things ye are more blinde than Moals.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes, ii, i, 2. (1598)

Blinder than a trebly-handaged mole.

CALVERLEY, On Hearing an Organ. (1862)

<sup>8</sup> Blinder than a beetle. (Hypsea caecior.)

HORACE, Satires. (35 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 58.

She were in very dede as blynde as a betell.

NICOLAS UDALL, Erasmus' Adagia, i, 5. (1548)
In this wysdome he is as blynd as a beatel.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, p. 90. (1549)
Wee cease not to bee . . . as blinde as Betles.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons: Timothy. (1579)

As blind as a Beetle.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 220. (1709)

They [beetles] frequently dash themselves against people's faces with great violence, and by their so doing occasioned the common proverb. As blind as a beetle.

HENRY BAKER, Philosophical Transactions. Vol. xlv, p. 581. (1747) This is perhaps as good an explanation of the phrase as any, though, as Brown points out in his book on Vulgar Errors, a beetle's eyes are evident enough to any one who looks. Used also figuratively for intellectual blindness. Tomson (1579) refers to people as "poore blinde betels."

HESLOP, Northumberland Words, p. 69, says the expression "As blind as a bittle" is very common, the bittle or beetle, being a wooden beater for beating flax or linen clothes.

What a blind beetle I have been!

CONAN DOYLE, The Stock-Broker's Clerk (1893)

<sup>9</sup> I rede eche a blynde bosarde

JOHN LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus x, l. 267. (1377)

When buzzard blynd thou canst not see what is before thy feete

TIMOTHY KENDALL, Flowers of Epigrammes, p. 143. (1577)

I'll weep till blind as buzzard

THOMAS OTWAY, The Soldier's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 3. (1681)

The saying "As blind as a buzzard" does not refer to the bird of that name, which is extremely quick-sighted, but rather to the beetle, from the buzzing sound of its flight

SWAINSON, Folk-Lore of British Birds, p. 133. (1886)

<sup>10</sup> He bicam blind so ston.

UNKNOWN, The Proses of the Seven Sages, l. 2359. (c. 1350)

As blind as is a ston

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 912. (c. 1388)

The man continued as blind as a stone.

JOHN HAMPSON, The Memoirs of John Wesley, ii, 133. (1791)

<sup>11</sup> As blynde as bayard watz euer.

UNKNOWN, Early English Alliterative Poems, B886. (c. 1325) See under BAYARD

BLISS

See also Delight, Joy

<sup>12</sup> The bliss e'en of a moment still is bliss.

JOANNA BAILLIE, The Bracon. Act i, sc. 2. (1836)

- 1 How devel maystow bringen me to blisse?
(Me dunque come credi sodisfare?)
Boccaccio, Il Filostrato. Canto ii, st. 9. (c. 1350) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde Bk. i, l. 623. (c. 1380)
- 2 The way to bliss lies not on beds of down.
JOHN CLARKE, Paraemologia, p. 16. (1639)
The path to bliss abounds with many a snare
WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 301. (1781)
- 3 The hues of bliss more brightly glow,
Chastis'd by sabler tints of woe.
THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude, l. 41. (1757)
- 4 Such sober certainty of waking bliss
I never heard till now
JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 263. (1634)
The sum of earthly bliss.
MILTON Paradise Lost Bk viii, l. 522 (1663)
- 5 Bliss is the same in subject or in king
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 58. (1733)
- 6 Two blesis ben.—blesse of the soule and blesse of the bodi
JOHN WYCLIF, Sermons, ii, 234 (c. 1380)
Ther may no man han parfite blisses two,
This is to seye, in erthe and eek in hevене.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 394 (c. 1388)

BLOCKHEAD

- 1 Master have gone off his chump.
BESANT AND RICE, This Son of Vulcan, ii, 24 (1877) The original meaning of chump was a short thick lump of wood. MONON, Mech Exercises, 1703, speaks of "a chump of wood."
- Such a long-winded old chump
HAWLEY SMART, At Fault. Vol. ii, ch 1 (1883)
You are what is called a chump
BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 104 (1910)
- 2 An Athenian blockhead is the worst of all blockheads
SAMUEL JOHNSON (BOSWELL, Life, 1729.) It may be noted that the original meaning of blockhead was a wooden head or block for hats or wigs
- All the blockheads and blockheadesses think themselves printable
SYDNEY LADY MORGAN, The O'Briens and the O'Flahertys, iv, 361 (1827)
- He who has to deal with a blockhead has need of much brains
F. E. HUIJME, Proverb Lore, p. 203 (1902)
- 4 A mutton-head (Teste de mouton.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel Bk ii, ch. 12. (1532)
Peace, mutton-head!
JOHN NEAL, Brother Jonathan, i, 99. (1825)
- 10 It ain't going too far to say he is a pudd'nhead
If he ain't a pudd'nhead, I ain't no judge
MARK TWAIN Pudd'nhead Wilson, p. 17. (1893)

BLOOD

- 11 And behold ye this god shall wash himself clean in your blood, and he shall bathe in your gore.
ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. cxxxiv, l. 9. (c. 4000 B.C.)
Once more began the bath of blood.
F. W. FARRAR, Early Days of Christianity, ii, 207. (1882)
- 12 I will drink your blood. (Bibam sanguinem tuum.)
ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. xxxiv, sec. 3. (A. D. 396)
- 13 It is not by speeches and resolutions that the great questions of the time are decided but by blood and iron. (Blut und Eisen.)
OTTO VON BISMARCK, Speech, Prussian House of Delegates, 30 Sept., 1862
Not with dreams, but with blood and with iron
Shall a nation be moulded to last.
A. C. SWINBURNE, A Word for the Country. St. 13. (1865)
- 14 You come of good blood, and so does a black pudding.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 576. (1855)
- 15 It runs in the blood like wooden legs.
J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 18. (1917)
Of any family peculiarity In dialect. "That rins in fam'lies, like timbern legs."
- 16 A lustie blood, or a pleasaunte brave young roister
WILLIAM BULLEIN, The Booke of the Use of Sicke Men, p. 73. (1562)
As many and as well-born bloods as those.
SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 278. (1595)
The Newes put diuers Young Bloods into such a furie.
BACON, History of Henry VII, p. 49 (1622)
I now became a blood upon town.
WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller, l, 341. (1824)
The "bloods" looked fierce.
W. A. CARRUTHERS, The Kentuckian in New York, i, 17. (1834)
A perfect and celebrated "blood" or dandy about town.
THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 10. (1848)
- 17 True blood may not lye.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 248. (c. 1489) Referred to as a saying. The French say, "Bon sang ne peut mentir."
- Blood will tell.
L. C. BLOCHMAN, See You at the Morgue, p. 225. (1941) THAYER, Hallowe'en Homicide. p. 70. (1941)
- 18 Blood is an inheritance, virtue an acquisition
(La sangre se hereda, y la virtud se aquista)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch 42 (1615)

<sup>1</sup>
In hot blood and while the mill is grinding.
(A sangre caliente y cuando estaba picado el molino.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71. (1615)

<sup>2</sup>
The blood is the life. (Sanguis enim eorum pro anima est.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xii, 23. (c. 650
B. C.)

The life of the flesh is in the blood. (Anima carnis in sanguine est.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xvii, 11. (c. 570
B. C.) PHILO, Quod Deterius Potiori, sec. 80, puts this into Greek, ψυχὴ τῆς σαρκὸς
αἷμα ἐστίν.

Blood is a very special kind of sap. (Blut ist ein ganz besondrer Saft.)

GOLTHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 214. (c. 1772)

<sup>3</sup>
Something will come of this. I hope it mayn't be human gore

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 4. (1841)

<sup>4</sup>
Thou knowst how drie a Cinder this world is.
And learn'st thus much by our Anatomy.
That 'tis in vaine to dew, or mollifie
It with thy teares, or sweat, or blood.

JOHN DONNE, First Anniversary, l. 430. (1611)

Tears, sweat, blood,—each spasm, ghastly once, glorified now

ROBERT BROWNING, Izion, l. 8. (1883)

I would say to the House, as I said to those who have joined this Government: "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears, and sweat"

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Address, House of Commons on accepting the post of Prime Minister, 13 May, 1940

<sup>5</sup>
From Spain, of high rank and birth, of the sanere azul, the blue blood.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Ch. 15. (1834) Pure
Castilian, uncontaminated with Jewish or Moorish blood

A young nobleman of the bluest blood

J. A. FROUDE, Julius Caesar. Ch. 11. (1879)

<sup>6</sup>
Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed. (Quicumque effuderit humanum sanguinem, fundetur sanguis illius.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ix, 6. (c. 550 B. C.)

It is the eternal rule that drops of blood spilt upon the ground demand yet other blood. (αἷμα νόμος μὲν φονίας σταγόνας | χυμένας ἐν γῆνι ἄλλο
προσαιτεῖν | αἷμα.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 400. (458 B. C.)

Blood is purged with blood. (αἷματι γὰρ αἷμα καθαίρεται.)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 150
(C. A. D. 40)

Blood asketh blood, and death must death requite

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Gorboduc. Act. iv, sc. 2.
(1561)

Blood for blood.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, i, 1, 19. (1596)

Blood hath brought blood, and blows have an-swer'd blows.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 329.

They say, blood will have blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 122. (1606)

Blood cries out for blood.

WORDSWORTH, Hart-Leap Well. (1798)

Blood will have blood, revenge beget revenge

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales: The Battle. Pt. i, canto vii, l. 45. (1805)

<sup>7</sup>
Also I hear it said that kin-blood is not spoiled by water. (Auch hoer' ich sagen, daz Sippeblut von Wassere niht verdirbet.)

HEINRICH DER GLICHESSERE, Reinhart Fuchs. (c.
1180)

For naturally blod will ay of kynde

Draw vn-to blod, wher he may it fynde.

JOHN LYDKATE, Troy Book. Bk. iii, l. 2071. (1412)

Blood's thicker than water.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 231. (1670)

i.e. the tie of relationship. SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 38. (1815) HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1857) DAVIS, Ice-bound. Act. iii. (1923) COLE, Topper's End,
p. 28. (1942) etc., etc.

Blood is thicker than water - and so is treacle

SIR JAMES LOCKHART, Epigram. (ca. 1674)

Blood is thicker than water

COMMODORE JOSIAH TAINNALL, Dispatch, to Secretary of U.S. Navy, explaining why he had assisted the British fleet in an attack on the Chinese in the Peiho, June, 1859. See
MC CARTHY, History of Our Own Times, iii, 18.

Blood is thicker than water, the bond it forms between men is strange and potent and intrangible.

A. M. FAIRBAIRN, Studies in Religion, p. 465
(1910)

Blood, as all men know, than water's thicker

But water's wider, thank the Lord, than blood

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Ninth Philosopher's Song
(1920)

I'm not sure that blood is always thicker than water

JOHN RHODE, In the Face of the Evidence, p.
181. (1940)

Blood is thicker than water - yes, and dirtier

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boonum
p. 41. (1941)

<sup>8</sup>
In cold blood he leaped into burning Aetna
(Ardentem frigidus Aetnam insiluit.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 465. (c. 20 B. C.)

In cooler blood I shall determine of her

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act. iv,
sc. 2. (1626)

<sup>9</sup>
What coast knows not our blood? (Quae caret ora cruore nostro?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 1, l. 36. (23 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup>
You talke of your birth, when I knowe there is no difference of blouds in a basen.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 289. (1580)

Our bloods . . . pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 3, 125. (1602)

There is no Difference of Bloods in a Bason.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4907. (1732)
All Blood is alike ancient.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 505. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

Humane Blood is all of a Colour.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2560.

1 His blood be on us, and on our children. (τὸ αἷμα αὐτῶν ἐφ' ἡμᾶς καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ τέκνα ἡμῶν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxvii, 25. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Sanguis eius super nos, et super filios nostros."

2 A very good blood-and-thunder fiction.

ROBERT HENRY NEWELL, Orpheus C. Kerr Papers, i, 38 (1861)

Reads aloud some blood-and-thunder novel.

FANNY FERN, Ginger-Snaps, p. 206. (1870)

Murat Hal-tead . . . wrote blood-and-thunder stories

UNKNOWN, in Newton Kansan, 15 May, 1873
Or "thud and blunder," as Henry van Dyke called it

3 Your antient but ignoble blood
Has crept thro' Scoundrels ever since the Blood

POPE, An Essay on Man Epist. iv, l. 211 (1734)

4 Good blood makes bad puddings without groats or suet

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66 (1678)

He hath good blood in him if he had but groats to it

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 230 (1678)

Good Blood makes poor Pudding without Suet

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1703 (1732)

The proverb, "Blood without groats is nowt," meaning that family without fortune is of no consequence

Lonsdale Glossary: Groats (1869)

5 O, the blood more stirs

To rouse a lion than to start a hare!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 197. (1597)

6 Her Welsh blood is up

JAMES SHIRLEY, Love Tricks Act v, sc. 3 (1631)

His Welsh blood is up

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 488. (1662)

7 I hope you can see your own blood without fainting.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation Dial. i. (1738)

I warrant you would faint at the sight of your own blood.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

8 There's no getting blood out of that wall.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 161. (1666)

The French say, "On ne saurait tirer de l'huile d'un mur" (One cannot draw oil from a wall).

There's no getting blood out of a turnip.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet in Search of a Father. Ch. 4. (1836) The Italians say, "Non si può cavar sangue dalla rapa." O. HENRY, The Brief Debut of Tildy (1906), calls it extracting "a sanguinary stream from the pallid turnip." ARTHUR E. HERTZLER, The Doctor and His Patients, p. 261 (1940), speaks of "The age old difficulty of getting blood out of a turnip."

You can't get blood out of a stump, you know.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 4. (1843)

Blood cannot be obtained from a stone, neither can anything on account be obtained at present . . . from Mr Micawber.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 11. (1849)

You can't get blood out of a stone.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 15. (1865)

9 Vergill threwe a goldene blood soukere in to the botome of a pitte.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon. (1387)
Referring to a leech.

God keep the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 3, 6. (1592) Lord Grey is referring to his executioners, in the sense of one who draws or sheds the blood of another.

A Tax-gatherer . . . that sort of Blood-suckers.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Visions de Villages, p. 15. (1668)

While there is a silver sixpence left, these blood-suckers will never be quiet.

SWIFT, Works (1841), ii, 3. (1724)

He's only a blood-sucker

T. S. ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room Night v, p. 91. (1854) A sponger.

Pirates, and those bloodsuckers who lived upon them

SHERARD OSBORN, Quedah. Ch. 20. (1857)

10 A compact sealed in blood. (In sanguine foedus)

UNKNOWN, A Latin proverb.

BLOOM

11 She has quite lost the blue on the plum.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation Dial. ii (1738)

The bloom has been off the peach any time these fifteen years.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Old Maid. (1761)

It's a sort of bloom on a woman

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act i. (1908) Referring to charm.

Bloom, the blue colour upon plums and grapes newly gathered.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Bloom. (1755)

12 She looks as blooming as a basket of chips.

W. D. HOWELLS, The Lady of the Aroostook. Ch. 23. (1875)

13 He was Engelondes blome.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, 63. (a. 1300)

BLOT

<sup>1</sup> Cleaning a Blot with blotted Fingers, maketh a greater Blur.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1112. (1732)
The fairer the Paper, the fouler the Blot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4513.

<sup>2</sup> You neuer vse to misse a blot, Especially when it stands so faire to be hit.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, 12. (1599) The reference is to the game of backgammon, where to "hit a blot" is to take a piece, or man, which has been exposed.

He is too great a master of his art, to make a blot which may so easily be hit.

JOHN DRYDEN, Aeneid: Dedication. (1698) To "make a blot" is, of course, to expose a man—to commit a fault, or make an error.

A blot is no blot till it be hit.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act v. sc. 3. (1664)

A blot is never a blot till it is hit; dishonour concealed is not dishonour in some respects.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 16. (1823)

BLOW

<sup>3</sup> The second blow makes the fray.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Colours of Good and Evil. Sec. 10. (1597)

The first blow makes the Wrong, but the second makes the Fray.

JOHN DONNE, Sermons, xi, 306. (c. 1631)

It is a true Proverb, It is the second blow makes the fray.

SIR MATTHEW HALE, Contemplations, i, 242. (1676) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4742. (1732)

It takes two blows to make a battle.

CHARLOTTE S. BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, 589. (1883) A local proverb.

<sup>4</sup> It is not the last blow of the axe that fells the oak.

JEREMIAH BURROUGHS, An Exposition of Hosea, iv. (1643)

LITTLE STROKES FELL GREAT OAKS, see TRIFLES

<sup>5</sup> A Phrygian is usually improved by blows. (Phrygem plagis fieri solere meliorem.)

CICERO, Pro Flacco. Ch. xivii, sec. 65. (59 B. C.)

Quoted as a proverb.

<sup>6</sup> Words are but winde but blowes are unkinde.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 103. (1633)

Words may pass but blows fall heavy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

WORD AND A BLOW, see under WORD.

<sup>7</sup> Blows are sarcasms turned stupid.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Bk. ii, ch. 30. (1866)

<sup>8</sup> Blow high, blow low, he need not be afraid.

P. V. FITZIAN, Journal and Letters, i, 235 (1774) Whatever may happen.

I've booked Brother John fur Paradise; Brother Joseph's got a white robe fur him, blow high, blow low!

THEODORE WINTHROP, John Brent. Ch. 6. (c. 1861)
Blithely resolved to stand by each other through thick and thin, blow high, blow low.

R. D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean. Ch. 10. (1921)

BLOW HOT AND COLD, see HEAT AND COLD.

<sup>9</sup> A Blow with a Reed makes a Noise, but hurts not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 20. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> When Fencers fees are like to apes rewards, A peece of breade, and therewithal a bobbe.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Steele Glas, 80. (1576)
Some againe that doe feed them, but alas! it is as the proverbe saith, with a bit and a knocke.

DANIEL TUVIL, Vade Mecum, 81. (1609)

You feed me like an ape, with a bit and a knock
WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 10. (1672)

A bit and a knock (or bob) as men feed apes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 226. (1678)

Why, miss. I find there is nothing but a bit and a blow with you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Ne'er give a bit And a buffet wi' 't.

F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 14. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> The blow almost killed father.

JEAN HAVEZ, Title of a popular song. (c. 1895)

<sup>12</sup> One sound blow will serve to undo us all

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 35. (1640)

<sup>13</sup> The first blow is as much as two.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 912 (1640) The French say, "Le premier coup en vaut deux," the Italians, "Il premier colpo per due colpi vale."

The first blow is half the battle.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer, ii. 1. (1773)

He bids you mind, amid your thoughtless rattle.
That the first blow is ever half the battle

ROBERT BURNS, Prologue Spoken at the Theatre of Dumfries. (1790)

"Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just"—
And four times he who gets his fist in fust.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Shakespeare Up-to-Date. (1862) See also under JUSTICE

<sup>14</sup> Reserve the master-blow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1678) I.e. teach not all thy skill, lest the scholar overreach the master <sup>15</sup> "Lambe them, lads! lambe them!" a cant phrase derived from the fate of Dr. Lambe, an astrologer and quack, of the time of Charles I, who was knocked on the head by the rabble.

WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 42. (1823)

<sup>16</sup> Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 3, 81. (1593)

Their controversy must either come to blowes, or be undecided.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1651)

Neither side dared strike the first blow.

MACAULAY, History of England, i, 261. (1848)

1 Gregory, remember thy swashing blow.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 69. (1595)

2 This is a rib-bender; but I can bear it.

SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act ii. (1926)

3 Beware of the man who does not return your blow.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

4 What's the blow now?

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 8. (1852)
What's the matter?

5 He gaff the Kyng Episcopos

Suche a Recumbentibus,

He smot In-two both helme & mayle.

UNKNOWN, Laud Troy-Book, l. 7490 (c. 1400)
i.e. a knock-down blow.

Had you some husbände, and snapt at him thus,
I was he would geue you a recumbentibus.

JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 70. (1546)

BLUE

6 Steal into his hat the colour whose blueness doth express trueness.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc 2. (1600)
Bess, poor wretch, is married to a chandler; but she's true blue still

COWLEY, The Guardian. Act v, sc. 5. (1650)

He is true Coventry blue.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, iii, 272
(1662) Fuller explains that "The best blues are dyed in Coventry," and that the saying "is applied to a fast and faithful friend."

True blue will never stain

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 166 (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5279. (1732)

KELLY (Scottish Proverbs, 303) comments, "A man of fix'd principles, and firm resolutions, will not be easily induc'd to do an ill, or mean thing."

Twas Presbyterian true blue.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 191.
(1663) The Scottish Covenanters adopted blue as their color in contradistinction to the royal red, and "true blue" was specifically applied to the Scottish Presbyterians in the 17th century. See O.E.D.

A tough true-blue Presbyterian.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian Ch. 75. (1818)

A few was true blue.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Draft in Baldinsville. (1862)

True blue, Harry, true blue!

BERNARD SHAW, Widowers' Houses. Act ii. (1892)

7 Blue, and better blue.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 58. (1721)
There may be Blue, and better Blue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4940. (1732)

8 They'll . . . pinch us black and blue.

SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, ii, 2, 194. (1593)

Pinch the maids as blue as bilberry.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5, 49. (1601)

As blue as a wimberry.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancs. Sayings. (1901)

BLUE-STOCKING

9 The Blue Stocking Society.

ADMIRAL EDWARD BOSCOWAN (c. 1750), referring to the assemblies held at the houses of Mrs. Montagu, Mrs. Vesey and Mrs. Ord, who endeavored to substitute for card-playing, which then formed the chief recreation at evening parties, more intellectual amusements, such as conversation on literary subjects. Benjamin Stillingfleet, a habitual attendant, always wore grey or blue worsted stockings instead of black silk ones, and many others also eschewed full dress. See FORBES, Life of Beattie, i, 210, note.

He [Mr. Stillingfleet] has left off his old friends and his blue stockings.

MRS. ELIZABETH MONTAGU, Letter. (1757) See DORAN, A Lady of the Last Century.

Who would not be a blue stockinger at this rate?

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, i, 326 (1780)

I see the band of Blue Stockings arise.

Historic, critic and poetic Dames.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR). To Apollo. (1790)

I have an utter aversion to blue-stockings. I do not care a fig for any woman who knows even what an author means.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk, ii, vii, 168. (1822)
When we think very ill of a woman, and wish to blacken her character, we merely call her a bluestocking.

E. A. POE, Fifty Suggestions. (1845) See Graham's Magazine, May-June, 1845.

The order of ladies called Bluestockings, by way of reproach, has become totally extinct among us

THOMAS DEQUINCEY, Autobiographical Sketch (1858) Works (1862), i, xiii, 353, note

BLUNDER

10 Your blunderer is as sturdy as a rock.

COWPER, The Progress of Error. l. 539. (1780)

11 Another mistake, not to call it a blunder.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Political History of the Devil, i, 5. (1726)

It is more than a crime; it is a blunder—words which I record because they have been attributed to others. (C'est plus qu'un crime, c'est une faute.)

JOSEPH FOUCHÉ, Mémoires. Fouché was Napoleon's clever Minister of Police, and his remark referred to the political execution of the Duc d'Enghien by Napoleon in 1804. Sometimes quoted as "C'est pis qu'un crime," or "C'estoit pire qu'un crime." See Notes and Queries, 14 Aug., 1915, p. 123; 28 Aug., p. 166. LUCIEN BONAPARTE, Mémoires, 1804, i, 432, attributes the saying to Talleyrand, while other authorities allege that it was originated by Boulay de la Meurthe, but Fouché's claim is the most direct.

"It is worse than a crime, it is a blunder," said Napoleon, speaking the language of the intellect.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

If the Confederate authorities had directly or indirectly sanctioned this assassination [of President Lincoln] it would be on their part worse than a crime, it would be a blunder.

LORD DERBY, Speech, in House of Lords, 3 May, 1865.

In diplomacy there are no crimes. But there are blunders.

FREDERICK L. SCHUMAN, Berlin-Moscow Axis. (Events, Nov., 1939, p. 322.)

"You would commit a crime."—"A crime, yes, but not a blunder—the ancient distinction holds good today as ever."

HELEN McCLOY, Do Not Disturb, p. 208. (1943)

1 The foreign policy of the noble earl . . . may be summed up in two truly expressive words: "meddle" and "muddle."

LORD DERBY, Speech, House of Lords, Feb., 1864, referring to Earl Russell.

Support a compatriot against a native, however the former may blunder or plunder.

R. F. BURTON, Explorations of the Highlands of Brazil. Vol. i, p. 11. (1869)

This country has, I think, made up its mind to close this career of plundering and blundering.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Letter to Lord Grey de Wilton, Oct., 1873.

I will leave the leader of the opposition, for the present, floundering and foundering in the Straits of Malacca.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, at Greenwich, Jan., 1874. Referring to Disraeli's accusation that the Liberal government had neglected British interests in the Straits of Malacca.

2 Don't make of one blunder two. (No hacer de una necedad dos.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 214. (1647)

BLUSH

3 Apple-cheeked. (εἰδομαλίδας.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 61. (c. 595 B.C.)

Quoted by EUSTATHIUS on the Odyssey, who says that Alcaeus called a friend "apple-cheeked" because of his maiden-like blushes. SCHOLIAST on the Iliad gives the phrase as "apple-faced." See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 359.

4 I would rather see a young man blush than turn pale. (τὰν δὲ νέον χαίρειν τοῖς ἐρυθρίαισι μᾶλλον ἢ τοῖς ὀχρῶσι.)

MARCUS CATO, Sententiae. (c. 175 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives, Cato, ix, 4.

Better a blush on the cheek than a sore in the heart. (Más vale vergüenza en cara que mancha en corazón.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 44. (1615) Shelton renders it, "Better shame in the face than spot in the heart." The Portuguese say, "Melhor he rosto vermelho, que coração negro" (Better to have a red face than a black heart).

Better a Blush in the Face, than a Spot in the Heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 859. (1732)

5 We griev'd, we sigh'd, we wept; we never blush'd before.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, A Discourse Concerning the Government of Oliver Cromwell. (1661) Quoted by Sir Robert Peel, in the House of Commons, replying to an attack by William Cobbett.

6 Blushing is the most peculiar, and the most human of all expressions.

CHARLES DARWIN, Expression of the Emotions, xiii, 310. (1872)

7 The question about everything [with Mr Podsnap] was, would it bring a blush to the cheek of the young person.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend Bk i, ch 11 (1864)

8 Mr. Phunky, blushing into the very whites of his eyes, tried to look as if he didn't know that everybody was gazing at him.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers Ch 34 (1837)

I should blush myself black in the face.

MARRYAT, Rutlin the Reefer. Ch 20. (1848)

9 Courage! that is the hue of virtue. (θάρρος τοιοῦτον ἐστὶ τῆς ἀρετῆς τὸ χρῶμα.)

DIODEGENES, to a young man who blushed (c. 250 B.C.) See DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, sec. 54.

He blushed; all's well. (Erubuit; salva res est.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 643. (160 B.C.)

The boy hath grace in him: he blushes.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, v, 4, 165. (1594)

When guilty men begin to blush, it is a signe of grace.

UNKNOWN, Schoole of Slovenrie, 96. (1605)

It was truly said, that Rubor est virtutis color [A blush is the color of virtue], though sometimes it comes from vice.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, i, 3, 20. (1605)

Blushing is vertues colour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 64. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 999. (1732)

Blushing is the colour of virtue.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Jeremiah, iii. (1710)

Blushing is some sign of grace.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The man that blushes is not quite a brute.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. vii, l. 496. (1745)

1 A blush is no language: only a dubious flag-signal which may mean either of two contradictories.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda, iii, 35. (1876)

2 The blush is beautiful, but it is sometimes inconvenient. (Bello è il rossore, ma è incommodo qualche volta.)

CARLO GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1770)

3 We will make him to blush like a blacke Dogge when he is graueled

STEPHEN GOSSEN, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 75 (1579)

He is given to blush no more then my black dog

UNKNOWN, Plaine Percevall, p. 13. (c. 1590)

What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?—Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, v, i, 122. (1593)

A black saint can no more blush than a black dog

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 66. (1629)

You'll make Miss Betty blush.—Blush! ay, blush like a blue dog.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

4 When you blush, it is notice to be careful.

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons (1926)

5 The blush that flies at seventeen

Is fixed at forty-nine

RUDYARD KIPLING, My Rival (1891)

6 Men blush less for their crimes than for their weaknesses and vanity (Les hommes rougissent moins de leur crimes que de leurs faiblesses et de leur vanité.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. ii. (1688)

7 The blush of modesty tinged your sun-browned cheeks (Flava verecundus tinxerat ora rubor)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. iv, l. 72 (c. 10 B.C.)

His young face glowed with the blush of modesty. (Ora flavus tenera tinguebat pudor.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 652. (c. A.D. 60)

8 Blushes become a pale face, but the blush one feigns is the one that profits (Decet alba quidem pudor ora, sed iste tibi similes, prodest.)

OVID, Amores. Bk i. eleg. viii, l. 35 (c. 13 B.C.)

9 The modest fan was lifted up no more, And virgins smil'd at what they blush'd before.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 342. (1711)

A Virtue but at second-hand;

They blush because they understand

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa, l. 168 (1713)

10 They put all the Christian world to the blush. JOHN SELDEN, Laws of England, i, 4, 10. (1649)

Puts London to the blush, if a blush could be seen on its dingy face.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, French and Italian Note-books, i, 11. (1858)

11 Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iv. 1. 43. (1598)

By her cheeks you might find guilty Gilbert where he had hid the brush.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, 39. (1608)

SMITH, Oxford Dict. Eng. Prov., notes that Gilbert is a North country name for a dog. Innocence is not accustomed to blush. (L'innocence à rougir n'est point accoutumée.)

MOLIÈRE, Don Garcie de Navarre. Act ii, sc. 5 (c. 1665)

Whoso blushes is guilty already. true innocence is ashamed of nothing. (Quiconque rougit est déjà coupable, la vraie innocence n'a honte de rien.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk iv (1762)

Blushes are badges of imperfection

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act i. sc. 1 (1671)

I always take blushing either for a sign of guilt or ill-breeding

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act i, sc. 9. (1700)

12 Able at the first blush to discearne truth from falsehood.

PHILIP STUBBS, Anatomie of Abuses, ii. 7. (1583)

This discourse hath a pretty shew at the first blush

WILLIAM BEDELL, Letters, v, 82. (1624)

13 Rather bring the blood into a man's cheek than let it out of his body (Suffundere malis hominis sanguinem, quam effundere.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus (A.D. 197) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, bk i, ch 15

14 She blushed; you might have lit a candle at her face. (ἡρώαυτ' εὐωαρεως αὐτ' ἀπ' αὐτὰς καὶ λυχνον ἀψαυ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. xiv, l. 23 (c. 270 B.C.)

She blushed withal like milk and crimson mingled (Simul erubuit ceu lacte et purpura mixta)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk xi, frag. 352 (c. 180 B.C.)

Therewith al rosy hewed tho wex she

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk ii, l. 1198 (c. 1380)

She changed coloure and blusseyd as rudy as a rose

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeaux, 550 (c. 1532)

And ever and anone with rosy red

The bashfull blood her snowy cheekes did dye

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk ii, canto ix, st. 41 (1589)

Her pure, and eloquent blood Spoke in her cheekes, and so distinctly wrought.

That one might almost say, her body thought.

JOHN DONNE, The Progress of the Soul: The Second Anniversary l. 244 (1612)

The very sight of his scarlet coat made me blush as red as a turkey-cock

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER (?), The Faithful Friends. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

To the Nuptial Bowre

I led her blushing like the Morn.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk viii, l. 510 (1667)

The rising blushes, which her cheek o'er-spread,
Are op'ning roses in the lily's bed.

JOHN GAY, Dione. Act ii, sc. 3. (1720)

A blush, faint as the earliest glance of young-eyed Morning.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 46. (1850)
She blushed a pretty rose red.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men, p. 137. (1882)

Oh, leaf that yesterday was green

But now is blushing rosy red,

What happened to you overnight?

Why not to me, instead?

DORIS BLACK, Quatrain (Reader's Digest, Nov., 1940, p. 74.) RED AS A ROSE, see under RED.

1
In a blush love finds a barrier. (Ubi enim rubor, obstat amori.)

VERGIL, Ciris, l. 180. (c. 25 B. C.)

2
No man blushes in the dark.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, *Moral and Religious
Aphorisms*. (1753)

Do people ever blush in the dark? That they grow pale with fright in the dark is probable, but not red with shame. For they get pale on their own account, whereas they blush on account of others.

G. C. LICHTENBERG, Reflections. (1799)

BO

3
Speake now . . . And say ones, bo.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Smyth and His Dame, l.
407. (c. 1430)

Beyond the reach of common peoples boe.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, p. 153. (1575)

The Pope's Raw-head-and-bloody-bones cry Boh behind the door.

ROBERT WILD, Poetica Licentia. (1672)

We start and are afraid when we hear one cry
Boh!

WALTER SCOTT, Letters on Demonology and Witchcraft, vi, 178. (1829)

4
Not able to say bo to a battledore.

RICHARD MONTAGU, Diatribae, p. 118. (1621)

He dare not say Bo to your blanket.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 154. (1721)

5
You can't say mu or ma. (Nec mu nec ma argutas.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 57. (c. A. D. 60)

He is not able to say bo to a goose.

"MARTIN MARPRELATE," Epistle to the Priests of the Confocation House (Arber), p. 43. (1588)

There's not one amongst them all can say bo to a goose.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, *A Woman Killed With
Kindness*. Act iii, sc. 2. (1603)

He never durst say so much as boh to a mouse.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Martin Mark-all, p. 15.
(1610)

A Scholar, when just from his College broke loose,

Can hardly tell how to cry Bo to a Goose.

SWIFT, Grand Question Debated, l. 157. (1729)

BOASTING

You can't cry bo to a goose: yes, but I can, said she: and egad, cry'd bo full in his face.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Dear me, Mary, can't you say bo to a goose!

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Countess Kate. Ch. 7.
(1864)

Bob would never say "bo" to a gosling of the feminine gender.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell Ch. 30. (1866)

He is too good-natured to say "Bo!" to a goose.

A. W. PINERO, The Magistrate. Act i. (1885)

We are accustomed to exalt those who can say
"bo" to a goose.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Tatterdemulion, p. 189.
(1920)

BOASTING

See also Bragging, Self-Praise

6
A vantour and a lyere, al is on.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iii, l.
309. (c. 1380)

A vaunter and a liar is both one thing.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (c. 1595)

A vaunter and a liar is baith ay thing

MERRITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

A vaunter and a liar are near akin

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 36. (1721)

You will soon find that a boaster and a liar are first cousins

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 8 (1869)

7
Grete boost and small roast.

ROBERT COPLAND, Spyttel House, l. 978 (c. 1532)

I thanke you (quoth I) but great boist and small rost.

Maketh unsauery mouthes, where ever men oste
[gather together]

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i. ch. 12. (1546)

Great boast and small roast makes unsavoury mouths.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 57. (c. 1591)

As if there were great boast and little rost.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk.
xxv, st. 66. (1591)

Of Flanks and Chines of Beefe doth Gorrell boast
He has at home; but who taste boild or rost?

HERRICK, Great Boast, Small Rost. (1648)

Great boast, small roast.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 64. (1670) FULLER,
Gnomologia, No. 6297. (1732) The Italians say, "Gran fumo, poco arrosto" (Great smoke, little roast).

Such hopes lead to great boast and small roast.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 15. (1869)

8
No good thing is it to boast overweeningly.
(οὐ μὲν καλὸν ὑπερβίον εὐχετάσθαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 19. (c. 850 B. C.)

Don't talk too big. (μὴ μεγάλα λαλῶν λέγε.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 835. (405 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 52, with the Latin, "Ne magna loquaris." The Greeks had another phrase for a braggart, λόγκας ἐσθίων, a spear-eater, preserved in a fragment from an unknown comic poet.

Be not boastful with thy tongue.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iv, 29. (c. 190 B. C.)

Never be boastful; someone may pass who knew you as a child.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 351. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

1 What will this boaster produce worthy of such inflated language? (Quid dignum tanto feret hic promissor hiatus?)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 138. (c. 20 B. C.)

He who says: "I will sing of the war which the Titans waged against Jupiter," promises a lot; but what usually comes out of it? Wind. (Mais qu'en sort-il souvent? Du vent.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Montagne Qui Accouche Bk. v, fab. 10. (1668)

If they had not dragged me from under him, I should have killed him.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 579. (1817)

The lion-mouth has a hare's heart. (Das Loewenmaul hat ein Hasenherz.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 337. (1856) A German proverb.

They can do least who boast loudest. (Minima possunt, qui plurima iactant.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 223. (1869) "A long tongue is a sign of a short hand." See also WORD AND DEED.

2 Make big things bigger in the telling. (Magnis maiora loquuntur.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. iv, l. 17. (c. A. D. 120)

Make not meikle of little.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 78. (c. 1595)

He changes a fly into an elephant.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678) The French say, "On affaiblit tout ce qu'on exagère" (One weakens everything which one exaggerates).

3 Never a poor man of his kin.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 260. (1721) Of those who boast mightily.

4 He who is self-approving does not shine He who boasts has no merit. He who exalts himself does not rise high. (Tsz chien' ché pu ming. Tsz fa ché wu kung. Tsz ching ché pu ch'ang.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-ich-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 24. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

5 Your words need a country to back them. (οἱ λόγοι σου πόλεως δεύονται.)

LYSANDER, to a man from Megara who made bold to speak for Greece. (c. 400 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 71E, 190F, 229C. Plutarch also tells the story in his Life of Lysander, and credits a somewhat similar utterance to Agis II, when an ambitious plan to free Greece was put before him, "Friend, thy words need an army and a treasure."

The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 166. (1600)

6 He who blushes at riding in a rattle-trap, will boast when he rides in style. (Qui sordido vehiculo erubescit, pretioso gloriabitur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 87, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 60)

7 Where boasting ends, there dignity begins.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. viii, l. 509. (1745)

BOAT

See also Ship

8 Rowing together. (δροπορθῶ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 851. (c. 414 B. C.)

That is "In the same boat." Said to be from the Peleus of Sophocles.

All rowing on the same thwarts. (ταῦτ' ἐμοὶ ζυγὸν τριβεῖς.)

HERODES, Mimes, vi, 12. (c. 300 B. C.)

We all labor with one ox. (ὅλοι μὲ ἐν βῶδιον ἀμνομεν.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 91. (1831)

In one boat we both embarked be.

THOMAS HUDSON, Historie of Judith, iii, 352 (1584)

Therefore the sinner and the saint

Are often in the selfsame boat.

EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues. Pt. ii, l. 360 (1710)

Well, I will row on the same boat.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet in Search of a Father. Ch. 66. (1836)

We're all in one boat.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days, p. 131. (1857)

We are all in the same boat.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), The Draft in Baldinsville. (1862)

We're all in the same swim, it appears.

BERNARD SHAW, Widowers' Houses. Act ii. (1892)

We are all in the same boat—though we do not all steer.

STANLEY WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 13 (1922)

We're both in the same boat.

JOSEPH SHEARING, Blanche Fury, p. 143. (1939)

We are all in the same caldron.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, For Whom the Bell Tolls, p. 300. (1940)

You will row in the same boat with us.

J. D. CARR, The Case of the Constant Suicides, p. 294. (1941) The French say, "Nous sommes tous logés à la même enseigne" (We are all lodged at the same hotel)

9 When on the other side I intended—metaphorically speaking—to "burn my boats," so that there could be no retreating or looking back.

V. L. CAMERON, Across Africa, i, 313 (1877) An article in the London Times, 26 Aug. 1927, points out that "burning one's boats, which is often quoted as a sign of strength, is, in essence, much more a sign of weakness."

- 1
It goes the boat without an ore.
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 28. (1578)
DAVIES, Scourge of Folly. (1611) HOWELL,
Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 3. (1659)
- 2
Little Cock boat is safe, when it is hoised into a tall ship.
JOHN LYLY, *Euphues and His England; Epistle
Dedicatory*, p. 218. (1580)
- 3
The front boat is eyes for those behind.
ARTHUR E. MOULLE, Proverbs from Ningpo. See
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 324.
(1872)
LITTLE BOATS MUST KEEP NEAR SHORE, see under SHORE.

BODKIN

- 4
Where but two lie in a bed, you must be—bodkin, bitch-baby—must ye?
JOHN FORD, Fancies Chast and Noble, iv. 1.
(1638) "To lie bodkin" was to lie in bed squeezed in between two other people. "To sit bodkin," "To ride bodkin," similarly, to sit or to ride between two others.
While the pressed bodkin, punched and squeezed to death,
Sweats in the midmost place.
UNKNOWN, Loves of the Triangles, 182. (1798)
Between the two massive figures . . . was stuck, by way of bodkin, the slim form of Mary McIntyre.
WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 17. (1816)
He's too big to travel bodkin between you and me.
THACKERAY, Vanity Fair, ii, 241. (1848)
Her position as bodkin between her father and mother.
MRS. TROLLOPE, Lottery of Marriage. Ch. 13.
(1849)
The three called a hansom outside, and Cecily sat bodkin.
FLORENCE MONTOMERY, Thrown Together, ii,
62. (1872)

BODY

- See also Mind and Body; Soul and Body
- 5
Fair was this yonge wyf, and ther-with-al
As any wesele hir body gent and smal.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale,
l. 48. (c. 1386)
Her cheekes are purple ruddie tyke a horse
plumme,
And the bygge parte of hir body is hir bumme.
But little tittle all taye, I have heard er this,
As high as twoo horse lous hir person is.
JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
"All tail, little tit" is the usual form of the phrase.
- 6
I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection. (ὑποτάξω μου τὸ σῶμα καὶ δουλαγωγῶ.)
New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 27. (c. A. D.
60) The Vulgate is, "Castigo corpus meum, ut in servitutem reddo."

- No man is free who is a slave to his body. (Nemo liber est, qui corpori servit.)
SENECA, Ad Luciliū. Epis. xcii, sec. 33. (a. A. D. 64)
And the same Seneca also seith: "I am born to gretter things than to be thral to my body, or than for to maken of my body a thral."
CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Persones
Tale*, Sec. 9. (c. 1389)
- 7
The body she has given earth takes back, and suffers no whit of loss. (Quae dedit ipsa capit neque dispendi facit hilum.)
ENNIUS, Annales. Frag. 14, Vahlen. (c. 175
B. C.) Quoted by VARRO, De Lingua Latina, ix, 54.
Can anyone foretell in what condition his body will be, I do not say a year hence, but this evening? (An id exploratum cuiquam potest esse, quomodo se hoc habiturum sit corpus, non dico ad annum, sed ad vesperum?)
CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 28, sec. 92. (c.
45 B. C.)
Every body is subject to change, . . . every body is mortal. (Omne corpus mutabile est, . . .
omne corpus mortale est.)
CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, sec. 12.
(45 B. C.) See also under MORTALITY.
Who can put trust in strength of body? (Qui poterit corporis firmitate confidere?)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 14. (45 B. C.)
Death alone discloses how insignificant are the puny bodies of men. (Mors sola fatetur quantula sint hominum corporacula.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 172. (c. A. D. 120)
He who knoweth the body is of the earth gets rid of pride.
ABDULLAH ANSARI, The Knower and the Known. (c. 1075)
- 8
The perfection of the body consisteth in the meane, so that it bee neither to strong nor to bewtiful, neither to weake, nor to deformed: for the one maketh folke audacious and proude, the other low and base minded.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 11. (1574)
- 9
To what vulture shall the carcass be given?
(Cuius vulturis hoc erit cadaver?)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 62. (c. A. D. 90)
Nature sought to winne great commendation in carving so cunningly so curious a carkas.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Mynos and Pas-phae, p. 211. (1576)
My poor gentlemanly carcass.
BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
iv, sc. 5. (1598)
- 10
If any part of the body be putrefied, it must bee cut of for feare of infectinge the whole body.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 133. (1576)
- 11
Our vile body. (τὸ σῶμα τῆς ταπεινότητος.)
New Testament: Philippians, iii, 21. (c. A. D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Corpus humilitatis nostrae."

- <sup>1</sup> No more was seen the human form divine.
POPE, tr. Homer's Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 278. (1726)
In Paradise Lost (iii, 44) Milton speaks of the "human face divine," but the phrase never attained the vogue of Pope's.
- <sup>2</sup> A human body is hard to beg. (Nan tē t'ao jēn shēn ti.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2436. (1875) A warning that a wicked man will not be able to obtain a human body in the future life, but will have to assume the body of some beast or reptile.
- <sup>3</sup> If anything is sacred the human body is sacred.
WALT WHITMAN, I Sing the Body Electric. Sec. 6. (1855)
- <sup>4</sup> A Body politick, compact of all Sorts and Degrees of people.
UNKNOWN, Act 24 Henry VIII, xii. (1532-3)
How does your body politic?
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

BOHEMIA

- <sup>5</sup> Whoever controls Bohemia controls Europe.
OTTO VON BISMARCK, Remark, during the formulation of the Austro-German treaty of 1879.
- <sup>6</sup> He perhaps reads of a shipwreck on the coast of Bohemia.
EDMUND BURKE, A Philosophical Inquiry into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. i, Introduction. (1756)
The Coast of Bohemia.
W. D. HOWELLS, Title of novel. (1893)
- <sup>7</sup> Imagine me . . . in fair Bohemia.
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 1, 19. (1610)
What is now called Bohemia [is] a pleasant land, not fenced with drab stucco, like Tyburnia or Belgravia.
W. M. THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip. Ch. 5. (1862)
I'd rather live in Bohemia than in any other land.
JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Bohemia. (1876)
- <sup>8</sup> She was of a wild, roving nature, inherited from father and mother, who were both Bohemians.
W. M. THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 64. (1848)
A Bohemian is an educated hoss-thief.
ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), A Ward, His Book. (1862)
A person open to the suspicion of irregular and immoral living.
R. W. EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims. (1875)

BOLDNESS

See also Daring, Rashness

- <sup>9</sup> Push on, pursue, in no wise faint of foot!
(Θα, δύναι, μή τι μαλ' αὖτις ποδῶ.)
AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 185. (c. 475 B. C.)

Not for laggards doth a contest wait. (ἀγὼν γὰρ ἀνδρῶν οὐ μένει λαλαυμένους.)
AESCHYLUS, Glaucois of Potniae. Frag. 21.

<sup>10</sup> Boldness of speech beseemeth not the weak.
(θρασύστομος γὰρ οὐ πρέπει τοῖς ἡσαστάς.)
AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 203. (c. 485 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Boldness is royal power without a crown. It avails even with heaven.
Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 105a. (c. 450)

<sup>12</sup> What first? Boldnesse. What Second and Third? Boldnesse. And yet Boldnesse is a Childe of Ignorance and Basenesse, farre inferior to other Parts.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldnesse. (1612)
Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute! Boldness has genius, power and magic in it.

GOETHE, Faust: Prelude at the Theatre. (1806)
John Anster, tr.
What action is to the orator, that is boldness to the public man; first, second, third.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Audacia. (1605)

Boldness in Business is the first, second, and third thing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1006. (1732)
Boldness, and again boldness, and always boldness! (De l'audace, et encore de l'audace, et toujours de l'audace!)

GEORGE JACQUES DANTON, Speech, to the Legislative Committee of General Defence, 2 Sept. 1792, when the tocsin gave the signal for the slaughter of the Royalists who crowded the prisons of Paris. The entire sentence is, "Legislators! it is not the alarm-cannon that you hear: it is the pas-de-charge against our enemies. To conquer them, to hurl them back, what do we require? Boldness, and again boldness, and forever boldness!" See Le Moniteur: Hist. Parl., xvii, 347; CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. i, ch. 4.

<sup>13</sup> Boldnesse is an ill keeper of promise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldnesse. (1612)
Great boldnesse is seldom without some absurdity

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldnesse.
Boldnesse is ever blinde: for it seeth not dangers and inconveniences.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldnesse.
Boldness is blind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1005. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> 'Tis boldness, boldness, does the deed in the Court.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act. iii, sc. 1. (1606)

<sup>15</sup> You are not so bold as welcome.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 53. (1591)
More hamely than welcome.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 251. (1721)
He is more bolde than wise.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 17. (1633)
You are more bold than welcome.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

1 Just as bad is perpetual boldness as perpetual modesty. (Tam malum est audere semper quam malum est semper pudor.)

FLORUS, Epigrams. No. viii, l. 3. (c. A. D. 124)

In conversation boldness now bears sway;
But know, that nothing can so foolish be
As empty boldness.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 35. (1633)

2 Where Necessity pinches, Boldness is Prudence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5650. (1732)

There is safety in boldness.

FOOTNER, Death of a Saboteur, p. 165. (1943)

3 Boldness is good in all things, and nothing is well done, which is doubtfully and fearfully done.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 82. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A grain of boldness in everything. (Un grano de audacia con todo.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 183. (1647)

4 A bold man is better in all things. (θαρσαλέος γὰρ ἄνθρωπος ἐν πᾶσιν ἀμείνων ἔργοισιν τελίθει.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 51. (c. 850 B. C.)

5 Be not too bold with your biggers, or betters.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

Towards great persons use respective boldness.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 43. (1633)

6 Boldness is the power to speak or do what we intend, before others, without fear or disorder.

LOCKE, Human Understanding, ii, 23. (1690)

7 By boldness great fears are concealed. (Audendo magnus tegitur timor.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 702. (c. A. D. 60)

8 Be valyaunt, but not too venturous.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1579)

Repeated p. 154.

And as she lookt about, she did behold
How over that same dore was likewise writ,
Be bolde, be bolde, and every where Be bold,
That much she muz'd, yet could not construe it
By any ridling skill or commune wit.
At last she spyde at that rowmes upper end
Another yron dore, on which was writ,
Be not too bold; whereto though she did bend
Her earnest minde, yet wist not what it might intend.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto xi, st. 54. (1596)

One would say he had read the inscription on the gates of Buxyrane,—“Be bold”; and on the second gate,—“Be bold, be bold, and evermore be bold”; and then again had paused well at the third gate,—“Be not too bold.”

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato. (1850)

Write on your doors the saying wise and old,
“Be bold! be bold!” and everywhere, “Be bold;

Be not too bold!” Yet better the excess
Than the defect; better the more than less;
Better like Hector in the field to die,
Than like a perfumed Paris turn and fly.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 100. (1874)
Be bold; everywhere be bold, but be not bowled over.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Tale of a Tainted Tenner. (1907)

9 Even God lends a hand to honest boldness. (τόλμη δίκαια καὶ θεὸς συλλαμβάνει.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 572. (c. 300 B. C.)

God himself favors the bold. (Audentes deus ipse iuvat.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. x, l. 586. (c. A. D. 7)

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BOLD, see under FORTUNE.

10 Come what will, happen what may, sink or swim! (Vogue la gallee!)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580) Usually written, “Vogue la galère!” The whole quotation is, “Celuy à qui le bourreau donnoit le bransle s'ecria, ‘Vogue la gallee!’” (He whom the headsman threw from the gallows cried, “Sink or swim!”)

My fearful trust “en vogant la galère.”

SIR THOMAS WYATT, The Lover Prayeth Venus. (c. 1542)

11 Boldness grows by experiment. (Crescit audacia experimento.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 33 (c. A. D. 108) The Germans say, “Probieren macht gelüstige Leute” (To taste makes lustful people).

12 Boldness is certain to win praise. (Audacia certe laus erit.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 10, l. 5. (c. 26 B. C.)

A decent boldness ever meets with friends.

POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 67 (1726)

13 In a tight corner boldness counts for most (In rebus dubiis plurimi est audacia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 298. (c. 43 A. D.)

Boldness is a bulwark. (Audacia pro muro habetur.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 58, sec. 17. (c. 41 B. C.)

Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, i, 6, 18. (1609)

14 Show boldness and aspiring confidence.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 1, 56 (1596)

You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 1, 134. (1597)

15 The only hope of safety was in boldness (Unam in audacia spem salutis.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 49. (c. A. D. 109)

16 O the shameless audacity of man!
(O hominis impudentem audaciam!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, 313. (163 B. C.)

A bold bad man, that dar'd to call by name
Great Gorgon, prince of darknes and dead night.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 37. (1590)

This bold bad man.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 2, 44. (1612)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>1</sup> Ye been as bolde as is Bayard the blinde.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns
Yemannes Tale*, l. 860. (c. 1389) See under BAYARD.

<sup>2</sup> Being every man well hors'd like a bold Beacham.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Mad World, My Masters. Act v, sc. 2. (1608)

"As bold as Beauchamp." I conceive that Thomas [Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, c. 1346] the first of that name, gave the chief occasion to this proverb.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Warwick. (1661)

<sup>3</sup> He died . . . as bold as brass.

GEORGE PARKER, Life's Painter, p. 162. (1789)

<sup>4</sup> Herdi ase leun.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Ricle, 274. (c. 1220)

Force of juvenus, hardy as lion.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 198. (c. 1430)

Valiant as a lion.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1. (1597)

I'm as bold as a lion.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 84. (1694)

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor, ch. 11. (1819)

R. L. STEVENSON, Catriona, ch. 30. (1893)

BOLONEY, see Baloney

BOLT

<sup>5</sup> I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't. 'Slid, 'tis but venturing.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 4, 24. (1600) A shaft was an arrow for a long-bow; a bolt an arrow for a crossbow

I'll quickly make a bolt or a shaft on 't.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, *A Trick to Catch the Old
One*. Act ii, sc. 1. (1608)

One might have made a Bolt or a Shaft on't.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Answer to a Dissenter,
p. 46. (1687)

To make a Bolt or a Shaft of it

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 5201. (1732)
None but true toxophilites [lovers of the bow] could have made such a proverb as "I will either make a shaft or a bolt of it!"

D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, i,
448. (1823)

Hence the old English proverb. "I will either make a shaft or a bolt of it," signifying the determination that a thing shall not go unused.

HACKWOOD, Old English Sports, p. 103. (1907)
Your bolt is soon shot, according to the old proverb.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 53.

(1748) A FOOL'S BOLT IS SOON SHOT, see under FOOL.

BOLT FROM THE BLUE, see under LIGHTNING.

BONAPARTE, see Napoleon

BONE

See also Flesh and Bone

<sup>6</sup> He who eats the meat, let him pick the bone.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 399. (1855)

THE NEARER THE BONE, THE SWEETER THE FLESH.
see under FLESH.

<sup>7</sup> I will add this, which may be a bone for you to pick on.

JAMES CALPHILL, Answer to Martiall, p. 277.
(1565)

Some Archplayer . . . will cast me a bone or ii to pick.

STEPHEN GORSON, The Schoole of Abuse (Ar-ber), p. 30. (1579)

One very much offended . . . sent him this bone to gnaw upon.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 371. (1580)

I cast thee a bone to bite on.

BRIAN MELRANCKE, Philotimus, sig. C1. (1583)

He . . . gaue them a bone to gnaw.

WILLIAM FULBECKE, The Pandectes of the Law of Nations, p. 69. (1602)

[He] has given me a bone to tire on, with a pestilence.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act
ii, sc. 1. (1612)

Here's a bone for ye to pick.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, The Observer, i, 64
(1681)

To give one a bone to pick, scrupulum alicui iniicere.

AINSWORTH, Latin Dictionary: Pick. (1783)

There is a bone for the gastronomers to pick.

WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, vii, 215. (1830)

Many a "bone" . . . which a keen metaphysician would be disposed to "pick" with the author

HENRY ROGERS, Essays. Vol. ii, ch. 2. (1850)

The inspector had already thrown him a few bones to gnaw.

NGAIO MARSH, The Nursing-Home Murder, p.
270. (1941)

I've got a bone to pick with you.

H. S. KEELER, The Man in the Wooden Spectacles, p. 114. (1941)

<sup>8</sup> He who gives thee a bone, does not wish to see thee dead. (Quien te da el hueso no te querria ver muerta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 50. (1615)

He that gives thee a bone would not have thee die

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>9</sup> It is the soundness of the bones that ulti-mates itself in the peach-bloom complexion.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty. (1860)

BRED IN THE BONE, see BREEDING.

<sup>1</sup> He has a bone in his speech. (Os inest orationi.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. iii, No. 56.

(1523) A phrase which Erasmus says is attributed to Themistocles—one of the phrases descriptive of Demosthenes' refusal to speak after he had been bribed. See under BRIBERY. He [Demosthenes] refused to speake, allegeyng that he had a bone in his throte, & could not speake.

NICOLAS UDALL, Erasmus' Apothegms, 337. (1542) The English say, He hath a bone in his arm and cannot work.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 276. (1666)

I have a bone in mine arm. This is a pretended excuse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678)

Were it not for the bone in the leg, all the world would turn Carpenters.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1018.

(1640) i. e. to make them crutches.

I can't go, for I have a bone in my leg.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

Panting and bright-eyed she would stop and say, 'Eh, dear, I can't run any more: I've got a bone in my leg.'

E. F. BENSON, Our Family Affairs, p. 15. (1920)

LEIGH (Chester Glossary, 25) says, "When a person has a shooting pain in the arm or leg, it is common to say, 'I've got a bone i' the arm or leg.'"

<sup>2</sup> I will give you a Shirt full of sore Bones.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2637. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Bone of my bones. (Os ex ossibus meis.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 23. (c. 550 B. C.)

See also FLESH AND BONE.

<sup>4</sup> The diuell hath cast a bone (said I) to set styfe betweene you.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 654. (c. 1594) DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 197. (1633)

This became a bone of dissension between these deere friends.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 425. (1576)

She cast in a Bone betwixt the Wife and the Husband.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Flavius Josephus, xvi, 11. (1692)

A great bone of contention.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Dispatches, i, 517. (1803)

<sup>5</sup> The bones of a great estate are worth the picking.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 337. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> The broken bone once set together is stronger than euer it was.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 58. (1579)

Our peace will, like a broken limb united, Crow stronger for the breaking.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, i, 222. (1597)

Like bones which, broke in sunder, and well set, Knit the more strongly.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act ii, sc. 1. (1612)

<sup>7</sup> May his bones rest gently. (Molliter ossa cubent.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 162. (c. 10 B. C.)

Rattle his bones over the stones,

He's only a pauper whom nobody owns.

THOMAS NOEL, The Pauper's Drive. (1833)

She . . . will ne'er make old bones.

CHARLES READE, Wandering Heir. Ch. 9. (1872)

<sup>8</sup> I may tell all my bones: they look and stare upon me. (Dinumeraverunt omnia ossa mea, ipsi vero consideraverunt et inspexerunt me.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxii, 17. (c. 550 B. C.)

NOTHING BUT SKIN AND BONE, see under SKIN.

<sup>9</sup> Thy bones are hollow.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 2, 56 (1604)

Thy bones are marrowless.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 94. (1606)

<sup>10</sup> Lord Timon's mad. I feel't upon my bones.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iii, vi, 129. (1607)

I seem to hear it in my very bones.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 53. (1841)

I can feel the thing in my bones.

J. G. HOLLAND, Sevenoaks. Ch. 23. (1875)

<sup>11</sup> "Cast that bone to another dog," quoth the innkeeper.

SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1620)

<sup>12</sup> If the Bow be too broad, she will seldom carry a bone in her mouth, or cut a feather, that is, to make a fome before her.

CAPT. JOHN SMITH, A Sea Grammar, ii, 10. (1627)

Our little craft shall seem to leave port with a clipping breeze, and to carry, in nautical phrase, a bone in her mouth.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Introduction. (1848)

See how she leaps . . . and speeds away with a bone in her mouth.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v. (1851)

<sup>13</sup> He made no manier bones ne stickyng, but went in hande to offer up his ownly son

NICOLAS UDALL, Apothegms from Erasmus: Luke i, 28. (1548) "To make no bones" about a thing, i. e. to treat it without formality or evasion, a proverbial phrase whose origin has been forgotten.

They haue made no bones at it to say.

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, The Begynnyng of Heresyes in Oure Tyme, fo. 14. (1565)

What matter soever is intreated of, they never make bones in it.

JOHN MANBECK, Book of Notes, p. 325. (1581)

Hee . . . makes no bone

To swear by God (for, hee beleeves there's none).

JOSEPH SYLVESTER, tr., Du Bartas, liv, 4. (1598)

I'll make no bones on't.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours: Epilogue. (1663)
 "O, don't make any bones about it!" he interrupted.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 25. (1894)

<sup>1</sup>
 The bone that hath fallen to thy lot, whether it be good or evil, gnaw it.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. (c. 1050)

<sup>2</sup>
 Bones bring meat to town, meaning, Difficult and hard things are not altogether to be rejected.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS, iii, 31. (1639)

We have an English proverb that bones bring meat to town.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State: The Life of Andronicus. (1642)

The bones bears the beef home.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 337. (1721)

"An answer to them who complain that there are so many bones in the meat they are buying."

BONEHEAD

<sup>3</sup>
 Some boneheaded mule displayed characteristic traits.

A. J. DICKSON, Across the Plains, p. 143. (1864)
 Bonehead.

CHARLES DRYDEN, reviving an old word, in a newspaper article describing the famous play in which Fred Merkle, first baseman of the New York Giants, failed to touch second base in the deciding game of the 1908 championship series, at Polo Grounds, New York City, 23 Sept.—an error which lost the game for the Giants and resulted in a riot. See SULLIVAN, Our Times, iii, 541.

That bone-head from the woods sat there, his mouth open.

E. D. BIGGERS, Seven Keys to Baldpate. Ch. 8 (1913)

Yes, my little bonehead, you're lovely.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 8. (1941)

<sup>4</sup>
 A few weeks' more "boning" would brace me up to the mark.

E. L. DORSEY, Midshipman Bob, p. 72. (1886)
 i. e. hard studying, using the bonehead.

I have known the General to 'bone-up,' as his West Point phrase expressed it, on the smallest details of some question at issue.

E. B. CUSTER, Tenting on the Plains. Ch. 9. (1887)

<sup>5</sup>
 Get out of here before you make any more boners.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, The Case of the Grieving Monkey, p. 267. (1941) A boner is, of course, a stupid action or remark by a bonehead.

BOOKS

See also Library, Reading, Writing

<sup>6</sup>
 I am a man of one book. (Homo unius libri.)
 St. THOMAS AQUINAS (c. 1260), referring to the fact that he read only the Bible.

Aquinas was once asked, with what compendium a man might become learned. He answered, "By reading of one book." [i. e. by knowing one subject thoroughly.]

JEREMY TAYLOR, Life of Christ. Pt. ii, sec. 12. (1675)

Woe be to him that reads but one book.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1144. (1640)
 From one that reads but one book . . . the Lord deliver us.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 7. (1659)
 God keep me from the man that had but one thing in mind.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 115. (1721)
 He who has long been intimate with one great author, will always be found to be a formidable antagonist; . . . he is like a man who ever sleeps in armour ready at a moment! The old Latin proverb reminds us of this fact, Cave ab homine unius libri: Be cautious of the man of one book!

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Man of One Book. (1817)

God deliver me from a man of one book. (Dios me libra de hombre de un libro.)

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 15. (1824) A Spanish proverb. "That is,"

Fielding explains, "from a man who has studied only one subject, and is constantly referring to it, to the fatigue of his auditors."

The homo unius libri is indeed proverbially formidable to all conversational figurantes.

ROBERT SOUTHHEY, The Doctor, p. 164. (1848)

"I fear the man of one book" is a classic proverb.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Portraits of the Sixties, p. 152. (1903)

We all have at least one book in us.

ELIZABETH DALY, Deadly Nightshade, p. 175. (1940)

<sup>7</sup>
 Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies. (1612)

Some Books are onely cursorily to be tasted of.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Books. (1642)

Every book must be chewed to get out its juice (Tzū tzū yao yao ch'ü chih Chiang lai.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 548. (1875)

<sup>8</sup>
 Books will speak plain, when counsellors blanch.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Counsel. (1612)

<sup>9</sup>
 Alonso of Arragon was wont to say of himself, "That he was a great necromancer, for that he used to ask counsel of the dead": meaning books.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 105. (1625)

After the Latin proverb, "Optimi consilarii mortui" (The dead are the best advisers).

He is a great Necromancer, for he asks counsel of the Dead [i. e. of books].

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1149. (1640)

Studious let me sit,

And hold high converse with the mighty dead.

JAMES THOMSON, Seasons: Winter, l. 431. (1730)

Dead counsellors are likewise most instructive, because they are heard with patience and with reverence.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 87. (1750)
My days among the Dead are passed.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, My Days among the Dead Are Passed. (1797)

He breaks his fast

With Aristotle, dines with Tully, takes

His watering with the Muses, sups with Livy.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Elder Brother. Act i, sc. 2. (1637)

No prince fares like him; he breaks his fast with Aristotle, dines with Tully, drinks tea at Helicon, sups with Seneca.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love Makes a Man. Act i, sc. 1. (1700)

<sup>1</sup> The reason why so few good books are written is that so few people that can write know anything.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies: Shakespeare. (1879)

<sup>2</sup> You, O Books, are the golden vessels of the temple. . . burning lamps to be held ever in the hand.

RICHARD DE BURY, BISHOP OF DURHAM, Philobiblion. Ch. 15. (1345)

Books are the shrine where the saint is.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Sir Thomas Bodley. (1605)

The monument of vanish'd minds.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, Gondibert. Bk. ii, canto 5. (1651)

Books, the children of the brain.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Tule of a Tub. Sec. 1. (1704)

Books are not seldom talismans and spells.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi. l. 98. (1784)

Books are the blessed chloroform of the mind.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, What English Literature Gives Us. (1835) See also DIODORUS SICULUS, under LIBRARY.

Books are men of higher stature.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship. St. 49. (1850)

Books are sepulchres of thought.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Wind Over the Chimney. St. 8. (1864)

<sup>3</sup> A great book, a great evil. (μέγα βιβλίον, μέγα κακόν.)

CALLIMACHUS, Aitia. Bk. iii, 72. Frag. 359. (c. 250 B.C.) The phrase has been rendered in various ways: "A big book, a great evil," "A big book, a big evil," "A big book is as bad as a great misfortune." Callimachus was probably pleading for conciseness.

Oftentimes it falls out (which Callimachus taxed of old) a great book is a great mischief.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

A great book is a great evil.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 23 July, 1711. Quoted as "the famous Greek proverb." The context shows that Addison interpreted the proverb correctly as referring to size, not merit.

The main fault of all books is that they are too long. (Le défaut unique de tous les ouvrages c'est d'être trop longs.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 628. (1746)

Books that you may carry to the fire, and hold readily in your hand, are the most useful after all

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (c. 1770) See HAWKINS, Johnsoniana. No. 197.

A fig for big books! We like only the little format which slips into the pocket. (Fi des gros livres! Nous ne voulons pas que de petit format qui marche avec nous.)

JULES JANIN, Le Livre, p. 109. (1839)

Callimachus was in accordance with the spirit of the age when he proclaimed "a great book" to be "a great evil," and sought to confine poetical activity within the narrowest limits both of subject and space.

R. C. SEATON, Introduction to Apollonius Rhodius, p. ix. (1921)

<sup>4</sup> Great knowledge you have gained from books, 'tis true,

But don't forget that life can teach you something too.

(Cum tibi contigerit studio cognoscere multa, fac discas multa a vita te scire doceri.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 48. (c. 175 B.C.)

Deep vers'd in books and shallow in himself.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 328. (1671)

Books teach us very little of the world.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Letter to Henry Goldsmith, Feb., 1759.

Sleep over books and leave mankind unknown.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 20. (1763)

Books without the knowledge of life are useless.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (c. 1775) MRS. PIOZZI, Johnsoniana.

We can not learn men from books.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1824)

Books are a triviality. Life alone is great.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 29 May, 1839.

The proper study of mankind is books.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Chrome Yellow. (1926)

<sup>5</sup> Out of olde bokes, in good feith.

Cometh al this newe science that men lere.

CHAUCEER (?), The Parlement of Foules: Proem, l. 24. (c. 1382)

I care little for new books, because the old ones seem to me more full and more pithy. (Je ne me prends gueres aux nouveaux, pour ce que les anciens me semblent plus pleins et plus roides.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 10. (1580)

Books, like proverbs, receive their chief value from the stamp and esteem of ages through which they have passed.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Ancient and Modern Learning. (c. 1690)

Books, like metals, require to be stamped with some valuable effigies before they become popular.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals: Preface. (1702)

The volumes of antiquity, like medals, may very well serve to amuse the curious; but the works of the moderns, like the current coin of a kingdom, are much better for immediate use.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 75. (1760)

The great drawback in new books is that they prevent our reading the old ones. (Le grand inconvénient des livres nouveaux, c'est qu'ils nous empêchent de lire les anciens.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 250. (1810)

Old Books are best! With what delight Does "Faithorne fecit" greet our sight.

BEVERLY CREW, Old Books Are Best. (c. 1900)

What [Walter Pater] is condemning is the . . . encrusting the mind with prejudices and habits, the tendency, as Charles Lamb wittily said, whenever a new book comes out, to read an old one.

A. C. BENSON, From a College Window, p. 297. (1907)

1 Lo, here a little volume, but great book!

RICHARD CRASHAW, Prayer Prefixed to a Little Prayer-Book, l. 1. (a. 1649)

2 The sauce of the book. (La salsa del libro.)

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Curiosities of Literature: Prefaces. (1791) An Italian proverb, referring to prefaces. The French sometimes call "the surly pomposity of prefaces" "La morgue littéraire."

3 One who steals a book cannot be reckoned a thief.

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese vocabulary, ii, 677. (1872) i.e. since he steals it for his own improvement, he is not to be blamed. But bibliophiles reckon book-thefts the most serious of all, and many monitions have been composed to prevent them. Here is one dating from 1578:

This boke is one thing, the halter another; He that stealeth the one may be sure of the other.

A very common one about the middle of the 19th century was:

Steal not this book, my honest friend.

For fear the gallows be thine end.

Since theft was no longer punished by hanging, the inference was that theft would lead to assault, and eventually to murder. A more elaborate one, to be written under the owner's name on the flyleaf, was:

Steal not this book, for fear or shame.

For it is in its owner's name;

And when you're dead, the Lord will say,

"Where is that book you stole away?"

4 Of making many books there is no end. (Faciendi plures libros nullus est finis.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 12. (c. 900 B. C.)

Solomon saith truly, Of making many Books there is no end, so insatiable is the thirst of men therein.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Books. (1642)

Nay, there thou liest, my friend,

In writing foolish books there is no end.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Books.

Fuller says this was written by a wit under the Finis of a "witlesse Pamphlet." And, as Voltaire added, "The multitude of books is making us ignorant."

Of writing many books there is no end.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 1. (1856)

Didymus the scholar wrote four thousand books, in which he investigates Homer's birthplace, the true mother of Aeneas, whether Anacreon was more of a rake than a sot, whether Sappho was a prostitute, and other questions the answers to which, if found, should forthwith be forgotten And then people complain that life is short! (I nunc et longam esse vita nega.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxviii, sec. 37 (c. A. D. 65)

5 I had better never see a book than to be warped by its attraction clean out of my own orbit, and made a satellite instead of a system.

R. W. EMERSON, The American Scholar, 1837. Some books leave us free and some books make us free.

EMERSON, Journals, 22 Dec., 1839.

6 Pollio who values nothing that's within, Buys books as men hunt beavers—for their skin.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

Some books we read, tho' few there are that hit The happy Point where Wisdom joins with Wit That set fair Virtue naked to our View, And teach us what is decent, what is true.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746

7 Learning hath gained most by those books by which the Printers have lost.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Books. (1642)

8 A Book that is shut, is but a Block.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 23. (1732)

9 Some books are read in the parlour and some in the kitchen, but the test of a real genuine book is that it is read in both.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 19. (1843)

10 Bookes giue not wisdom where none was before,

But where some is, there reading makes it more.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. i. epig. 2 (1612)

Who, without books, essays to learn.

Draws water in a leaky urn.

AUSTIN DOBSON, A Bookman's Budget (1885)

11 My Book and Heart Shall never part.

BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (c. 1687)

12 Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book. (In libro diligenter exara illud.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 8. (c. 725 B. C.)

Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! (Quis mihi tribuat ut scribantur sermones mei? quis mihi det ut exarentur in libro.)

Old Testament: Job, xix, 23. (c. 350 B.C.)
"Exarentur," of course, means "noted down," not "printed."

When found, make a note of.

DICKENS, Dombey & Son. Bk. i, ch. 15. (1846)
Repeated frequently by Captain Cuttle throughout the story.

I cannot live without books.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 1815.

Behold, my desire is . . . that mine adversary had written a book. (Ut desiderium meum . . . librum scribat ipse qui iudicat.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxi, 35. (c. 350 B.C.)

When I would know thee . . . my thought looks

Upon thy well-made choice of friends and books;

Then do I love thee, and behold thy ends
In making thy friends books, and thy books friends.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 86. (1612)

While you converse with lords and dukes,
I have their betters here—my books.

THOMAS SHERIDAN, My Books. (c. 1730)

The best companions are the best books.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters to Lord Huntingdon. No. 3. (c. 1760)

My books are friends that never fail me.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to His Mother, 17 March, 1817.

We should choose our books as we would our companions, for their sterling and intrinsic merit.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Volume ii, No. 181. (1820) A variation of the Spanish proverb.
"Libros y amigos pocos y buenos" (Books and friends should be few and good).

A good book is the best of friends, the same to-day and forever.

MARTIN F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Reading. (1838)

"Man delights me not," often, "nor women," but books

Are the best of good comrades in loneliest nooks.

ANDREW LANG, To the Gentle Reader. (1888)

Say by the book. Signifying that we firmly believe what they say; so that they need not swear it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 242. (1721)

To kiss the book, see under KISS.

Saint Paule . . . speaketh not without booke, but of experience.

ANDREW KINGSMYLL, A View of Mans Estate, 12. (c. 1569)

He is quite beside the book [i.e. mistaken].

WILLIAM WALKER, Paraemologia, p. 32. (1672)

I do not speak wholly without book.

JOHN LOCKE, Toleration. Sec. 2. (1692)

To speak loosely and without book [i.e. from memory].

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 257. (1870)
Recite according to the book. (Chao pên hsüan k'o.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 41. (1875)

All books are either dreams or swords,
You can cut, or you can drug, with words.

AMY LOWELL, Sword Blades and Poppy Seed, 1. 292. (1914)

We profit little by books we do not enjoy.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Pleasures of Life. Ch. 3. (1887)

Far more seemely were it for thee to haue thy Studie full of bookes, then thy pursse full of mony.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 192. (1579)

A fashion is but a daies wearing and a booke but an houres reading.

Bookes be stale when they be printed in that they be common.

We commonly see the booke that at Easter lyeth bounde on the Stacioners stall, at Christmasse to be broken in the Haberdashers shop [as wrapping paper].

Gentlemen vse bookes as Gentlewomen handle their flowers, who in the morning stick them in their heads and at night strawe them at their heeles.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: To the Gentlemen Readers, p. 205. (1580)

Away with thy books! Be no longer drawn aside by them: it is not allowed. ( $\delta\phi\epsilon\varsigma\ \tau\alpha\ \beta\epsilon\beta\lambda\iota\alpha\ \mu\eta\kappa\epsilon\tau\iota\ \sigma\eta\tilde{\omega}\ \nu\acute{\alpha}\ \delta\acute{\iota}\delta\omicron\tau\alpha\iota$ .)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 2. (c. A.D. 174) The injunction is repeated in Sec. 3.

What need of books these truths to tell,
Which folks perceive who cannot spell?

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 590. (1718)

A wicked book is the wickedder, because it cannot repent.

GEORGE FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 457. (1732)

Some books are lies frae end to end.

BURNS, Death and Dr. Hornbook, l. 1. (1785)

Good books are among the most precious of blessings to a people; bad books among the worst of curses.

E. P. WHIPPLE, Essays: Romance of Rascality. (1849)

There is no worse robber than a bad book. (Non v'è il peggior ladro d'un cattivo libro.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 77. (1853)

Most books, indeed, are records less
Of fulness than of emptiness.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Writing. (1900)

Go forth, my book, to bear my greeting for me. (Vade salutatum pro me, liber.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 70. (c. A.D. 85)

Go, litel book, go litel myn tregedie,
Ther god thy maker yet, er that he dye, . . .
And kis the steppes, wher-as thou seest pace
Virgile, Ovyde, Omer, Lucan, and Stace.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus, v, 1786. (c. 1380)

Go now, my little Book, to every place
Where my first Pilgrim has but shown his face.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Way of Sending forth His Second Part. (1678)

Go, little Book! from this my solitude;

I cast thee on the waters,—go thy ways:

And if, as I believe, thy vein be good,
The World will find thee after many days.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Lay of the Laureate: L'Envoi. (1816) Parodied by BYRON, Don Juan, i, 222.

Go forth, my little book! pursue thy way;

Go forth, and please the gentle and the good.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour on the Continent. No. 37. (1820)

Go, little book, and wish to all

Flowers in the garden, meat in the hall.

R. L. STEVENSON, Envoy. (1890)

1

Those books they praise, but these they read.
(Laudant illa sed ista legunt.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 49. (c. A. D. 90) Martial is saying that everybody affects to admire the classic tragedies, but when it comes to reading, they read lighter things, such as his epigrams.

2

Do you wonder, Theodorus, why it is that, despite your entreaties, I have never given you my books? I have an excellent reason:
lest you should give me yours.

(Non donem tibi cur meos libellos oranti totiens et exigenti miraris, Theodore? Magna causa est:
dones tu mihi ne tuos libellos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 73. (c. A. D. 90)

3

The readers and the hearers like my books.
And yet some writers cannot them digest;
But what care I? for when I make a feast!

I would my guests should praise it, not the cooks.

(Lector et auditor nostros probat, Aule, libellos, sed quidam exactos esse poeta negat.

non nimium curo: nam cenae fercula nostrae malim convivis quam placuisse coci.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 81. (A. D. 93)
Sir John Harington, tr.

I have not made my book more than my book has made me. (Je n'ay pas plus fait mon livre, que mon livre m'a fait.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 18. (1580)

Pray thee, take care, that tak't my book in hand,
To read it well; that is, to understand.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 1. (1612)

Better 'twere my Book were dead

Than to live not perfected.

ROBERT HERRICK, His Request to Julia. (1648)

Some said, John, print it; others said, Not so;
Some said, It might do good; others said, No.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book. (1678)

The best part of every author is in general to be found in his book.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (c. 1770) HILL, Johnsonian Miscellanies, ii, 310.

'Tis pleasant, sure, to see one's name in print;
A book's a book, although there's nothing in't.

LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 51. (1809)

When I am dead, I hope it may be said:

"His sins were scarlet, but his books were read."

HILAIRE BELLOC, On His Books. (c. 1910)

4
Books are not absolutely dead things. . . .
As good almost kill a man as kill a good book.

JOHN MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 6. (1644)

Laws die, books never.

LORD LYTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 2. (1838)

The one invincible thing is a good book; neither malice nor stupidity can crush it.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions and Opinions: A Great Poet. (1891)

5
To each age belongeth its own Book.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xiii, 38. (c. 622)

6
There are more books about books than about any other subject. (Il y a . . . plus de livres sur les livres, que sur aultre sujet.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595)

7
The book is doubly gifted: it moves to laughter, and by its counsel teaches a wise man how to live. (Duplex libelli dos est: quod risum movet, et quod prudenti vitam consilio monet.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables: Bk. i, Prologue. (c. 25 B. C.)
Wear the old coat and buy the new book.

AUSTIN PHELPS, Theory of Preaching. (1881)

8
No book is so bad but some profit may be gleaned from it. (Nullum esse librum tam malum, ut non aliqua parte prodesset.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Marim. (c. A. D. 70) As quoted by PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles, iii. 5

There's no book so bad but has some good in it
(No hay libro tan malo que no tenga algo bueno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 3, 59. (1615)

Quoting Pliny.

A wise man, like a good refiner, can gather gold out of the drossiest volume.

JOHN MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 28. (1644)

Take up any book, even down to a jest-book.
it is still better than nothing.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747.

The foolishest book is a kind of leaky boat on a sea of wisdom; some of the wisdom will get in anyhow.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Poet at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 11. (1872)

You cannot open a book without learning something. (K'ai chüan yü i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
545. (1875)

1 Since you cannot read all the books which you may possess, it is enough to possess only as many books as you can read. (Cum legere non possis, quantum habueris, satis est habere, quantum legas.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epils. ii, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

2 You two are book-men.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 35. (1595)

You, so great a booke-man.

BISHOP RICHARD MONTAGUE, Diatribae, 403. (1621)

I am a book-man.

J. R. LOWELL. (1870) Used as motto by The Bookman.

3 In the four quarters of the globe, who reads an American book?

SYDNEY SMITH, Review of Seybert's Annals of the U.S. in Edinburgh Review, Jan., 1820.

4 For Learning's mighty Treasures look
In that deep Grave a Book.

SWIFT, Ode to Sir William Temple, l. 35. (1689)

5 The reader's fancy makes the fate of books.
(Pro captu lectoris habent sua fata libelli.)

TERENTIANUS MAURUS, De Litteris, de Syllabis, de Metris, l. 1286. (c. A. D. 150) More literally, "In proportion to the capacity of the reader books have their fates"; more freely, "You can't tell beforehand which books will catch the reader's fancy." Often shortened to, "Habent sua fata libelli."

6 Everywhere have I sought rest and found it not, except sitting apart in a nook with a little book. (In omnibus requiem quaesivi et non inveni, nisi seorsum sedans in angulo cum libello.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, Inscription, on his picture at Zwoll, Holland, where he is buried. It is supposed to have been written by him in his copy of De Imitatione Christi, and is credited to him by Rosweyde in his preface to the 1617 edition. It will be noted that "nook" is a literal translation of "angulus," which Andrews defines as "a retired, unfrequented place, a nook, corner, lurking-place." "Nook" has been a favorite rhyme for "book"; Leigh Hunt uses it in The Story of Rimini, and Longfellow in Morituri Salutamus, l. 232

O for a Booke and a shadeie nooke,
Eyther in-a-dooore or out;

With the grene leaves whispering overhede,

Or the streete cryes all about;

Where I male Reade all at my ease,

Both of the Newe and Olde,

For a jollie goode Booke whereon to looke
Is better to me than golde.

JOHN WILSON. (c. 1880) The attribution is on the authority of Austin Dobson, who stated that Wilson, a London dealer in old books, had told him that he had written this stanza as a motto for one of his second-hand book catalogues. See Notes and Queries, Nov., 1919, p. 297. It was first published in Alexander Ireland's Book Lover's Enchiridion (1882). Ireland was evidently deceived by it, for he called it an "old English song." So did Sir John Lubbock, who used it as the heading for the third chapter of his Pleasures of Life.

7 Homeliness is almost as great a merit in a book as in a house, if the reader would abide there.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

8 My books are at home to me at any time, for they are never busy. (Mihi vero omne tempus est ad meos libros vacuum; numquam enim sunt illi occupati.)

QUINTUS TUBERO, to his uncle, Publius Africanus, when asked why he had come to visit his uncle instead of studying. (129 B. C.) See CICERO, De Re Publica, i, 9.

9 Few, but full of understanding, are the books of the library of God.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Recreation. (1838)

10 As useless to recommend a good book as to excuse a bad one. (Aussi inutile pour faire valoir un bon ouvrage, que pour en justifier un mauvais.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 627. (1746)

11 There is no such thing as a moral or an immoral book. Books are well written or badly written.

OSCAR WILDE, Dorian Gray: Preface. (1890)

12 He is out of our bokes, and we out of his.

UNKNOWN, The Parlyment of Deuyllis, p. 47 (1509)

If you solowe theym, you are oute of youre boke
HUGH LATIMER, Sermons before Edward VI. p. 68. (1549)

And I (quoth he) crosse the quyte out of my books.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

His villanies . . . are too many to be described in my Blacke Booke.

ROBERT GREENE, The Blacke Bookes Messenger (1592)

I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, I, 1. 79. (1598)

He comes not in my books.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Widdow. Act I. (c. 1613)

So odious to him, and farre out of his books.

BISHOP MILES SMYTH, Sermons, p. 4. (c. 1624)

You're not in my book.

J. K. PAULDING, The Buctails. Act v, sc. 1. (1815)

At that time [they] were in his bad books.

WILLIAM PERRY, History of the Church of England, i, 12. (1861)

BOOT

See also Shoe

- <sup>1</sup> To sit in tight boots.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 543. (1855) To be ill at ease.
- <sup>2</sup> I'll stick to you like old boots.
MARY E. BRADDON, Sir Jasper. Ch. 27. (1865)
- <sup>3</sup> With a tongue like that, if you had the chance, you would lick a rustic's clogs. (Ista cum lingua, si usus veniat tibi, possis | culos et crepidas lingere carpatinas.)
CATULLUS, Odes. No. xcvi, l. 3. (c. 57 B. C.)
To grease one's boots. (Ungere gli stavile.)
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1813)
To cajole or flatter.
Sweezer's very intimit with the squire's folks—a kind o' bootlicker tew 'em.
FRANCES M. WHITCHER, The Widow Bedott Papers. Ch. 27. (c. 1850)
Some [students are] very apt to linger after recitation to get a clearer knowledge of some passage. They are Bootlicks [bootlickers] and that is known as Bootlicking.
B. H. HALL, College Words, p. 24. (1851)
- <sup>4</sup> They that are booted are not always ready.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 88. (1640)
- <sup>5</sup> The way to keep a man out of the mud is to black his boots.
M. LOANE, An Englishman's Castle. Ch. 7. (1909) So "mothers who believe in this 'old saying' dress their sons as well as they possibly can."
- <sup>6</sup> A young man "too big for his boots."
SIR HERRERT MAXWELL, Life of W. H. Smith, p. 34. (1894)
- <sup>7</sup> Their wordes should haue twoo senses, and one boote serue for either legge.
SIR THOMAS MORE, The Debellacyon of Salem. (1533)
The young woman as owns that house has got the boot on the other leg
G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, General Bounce. Ch. 16. (1855)
Here . . . the boot is on the other leg, and Civilization is ashamed of her arrangements in the presence of a savage.
WINSTON CHURCHILL, My African Journal. Ch. 3. (1908)
- BOOT ON OTHER FOOT, see under SHOE
- <sup>8</sup> To talk about boots. (Parler à propos de bottes.)
OUDIN, Curiosités Françaises, p. 41. (c. 1525)
The phrase, which is proverbial French for talking irrelevantly, is said to have originated when a suitor at the court of François I, who had been "debouté" (decided against in a suit), told the King by mistake that he had been "debotté"—debooted.

Talking of boots. (A propos de bottes.)

JEAN FRANÇOIS REGNARD, Le Distrain. (1697)
Apropos of nothing—a phrase introducing an irrelevant remark.<sup>9</sup> Over shoes, over boots.ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, ii, 248. (1648)

Over boots, over shoes.

HENRY FOULIS, Historie of Wicked Plots, etc., p. 67. (1662)<sup>10</sup> To boot and saddle again they sound.SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, Aesop. Fab. ii. (1697)

The Sound was chang'd to Boots and Saddles.

SIR RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 51. (1709)

Our trumpets blew "Boot-and-saddle."

JAMES GRANT, Harry Ogilvie. Ch. 12. (1856)

Boots and Saddles.

ELIZABETH BACON CUSTER. Title of a book of reminiscences. (1885)

BOOZE

<sup>11</sup> When good Sir Peter boozes with the squire.GEORGE COLMAN, Epilogue to The School for Scandal. (1777)

I won't sit in the kitchen and booze in the servants' hall.

W. M. THACKERAY, The Newcomes, i. 39. (1854)

With few resources but to booze around the fire.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 30. (1870)<sup>12</sup> A boozier. From the verb to booze.AUGUSTIN DALY, Horizon. Act ii. (1871)<sup>13</sup> Booze and the blowens cop the lot. (Tout aux tavernes et aux fiells.)W. E. HENLEY, tr., Villon's Straight Tip to all Cross Coves. (1893)<sup>14</sup> Full little wit have men who sup on booze. (δὲλα φροσύουσιν οἱ χάλιν πεπωκότες.)HIPPONAX (?), Fragmentis. Frag. 72. (c. 550 B. C.)<sup>15</sup> He's quit his gun fighting as well as his booze.S. E. WHITE, Arizona Nights, p. 322. (1907)

They'll drink you up like a bottle of booze.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Roads of Destiny, p. 374. (1909)

I'm a devotee to the great joss Booze.

O. HENRY, Helping the Other Fellow. (1909)

A drop of booze just takes that [low-spiritedness] off and makes him happy.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act iii. (1912)

BORE

<sup>16</sup> He really bores me to a degree.FANNY BURNAY, Cecilia. (1782) A phrase which has perhaps developed into the more familiar "bored to death," or "bored to tears."

And she became a bore intense

Unto her love-sick boy.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury. (1875)<sup>17</sup> All passes, all breaks, all bores. (Tout passe, tout casse, tout lasse.)CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes. (1856)

Down here everything passes, everything bores, everything wears out. (Ici-bas tout passe, tout lasse, tout casse.)

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 38. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> Ennui has made more gamblers than avarice, more drunkards than thirst, and perhaps as many suicides as despair.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 259. (1820)

<sup>2</sup> The tedium of life. (Taedium vitae.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. vi. (c. A. D. 150)

<sup>3</sup> All men are bores, except when we want them.

O. W. HOLMES, Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1858)

<sup>4</sup> A tedious person is one a man would leap a steeple from, gallop down any steep hill to avoid.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Impertinens. (1636)
The true bore is that man who thinks the world is only interested in one subject, because he himself can only comprehend one.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 6. (1826)

Bore: a person who talks when you wish him to listen.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
A bore is a man who, when you ask him how he is, tells you.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 163. (1922)

<sup>5</sup> We often pardon those who bore us, but we cannot pardon those whom we bore. (Nous pardonnons souvent à ceux qui nous ennuiant, mais nous ne pouvons pardonner à ceux que nous ennuyons.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 304. (1665)
We are almost always bored by those whom we bore. (On s'ennuie presque toujours avec ceux que l'on ennue.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 555.
Extreme boredom serves to cure boredom. (L'extrême ennui sert à nous désennuyer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 532. Recalling the French proverb, "Il faut savoir s'ennuyer" (One must know how to bore oneself).

<sup>6</sup> And so dull that the men who retailed them out-doors

Got the ill name of augurs, because they were bores.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 54. (1818)
There was one feudal custom worth keeping, at least,

Roasted bores made a part of each well-ordered feast.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1226.

<sup>7</sup> The well bred man should never consent to become a bore. (Dedecet ingenuos taedia ferre sui.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. II, l. 530. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Every species of mankind is good except the bore species. (Tous les genres sont bons hors le genre ennuyeux.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Enfant Prodigue: Preface. (1736)

The secret of being a bore is that of telling everything. (Le secret d'ennuyer est celui de tout dire.)

VOLTAIRE, Discours. No. 6. (c. 1778)

BORROWING

See also Debt, Lending

I—Borrowing

<sup>9</sup> He that buildeth his house with other men's money,

Is as one gathering stones for his sepulchre.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxi, 8. (c. 190 B. C.)

The Borrower runs in his own debt.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

<sup>10</sup> Who would borrow when he hath not, let him borrow when he hath.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 567. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> Borrow from yourself. (A te mutuum sumes.)

CATO THE ELDER, Fragments. No. 79. (c. 175 B. C.) See SENECA, Ad Lucilium, cxix, 2.

Borrow of your own table. (ἀπό τῆς ἰδίας δαπέδας τραπεζῆς.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Borrowing. Sec. 828A.

(A. D. 97) A play upon words, for τραπέζα means bank as well as table. Plutarch is arguing that, rather than borrow, one should pawn his drinking-cups, his silver dishes, etc., and use pottery instead: i. e. borrow of his own resources.

Better spare to have of thine own, than ask of other men.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 268. (1640)

I had rather ask of my sire brown bread, than borrow of my neighbour's white.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 271

<sup>12</sup> Stand and borrow, kneel and beg the return.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 351.

(1938) A Chinese proverb. The Germans have a proverb, "Borgen thut nur einmal wohl" (Borrowing thrives but once).

<sup>13</sup> He that will borrow must pay.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 246. (1639)

He that borrows must pay again with shame or loss. Shame if he returns not as much as he has borrowed, loss if more, and it's very hard to cut the hair.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1678)

So borrow as to repay by the very act of borrowing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 111. (1830)

<sup>14</sup> If one wants to know the real value of money, he needs but try to borrow some from his friends.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) See TSENYI HSIEN, Confucius Said It First, p. 87.

Would you know what money is, Go borrow some.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 376. (1640)
If you would know the value of a Ducat, try to borrow one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2801. (1732)
From the Spanish, "Se quieres ver quanto vale un ducado, buscalo prestado."

If you'd know the value of Money, go and borrow some.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754. The French say, "Pour connaitre le prix de l'argent, il faut être obligé d'en emprunter."

If you want to learn the value of money, try to borrow some.

SAMUEL WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 4. (1841)

1 Be not made a beggar by banqueting upon borrowing. (Ne fueris mediocris in contentione ex foenore.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xviii.33. (c. 190 B.C.)
To borrow upon Usury bringeth on Beggary.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6089. (1732)

2 He that lippens [trusts] to bon [borrowed] plowes, his land will ly ley [unplowed].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)
He that trusts to borrowed Ploughs, will have his Land lie fallow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2337. (1732)

3 Creditors are a superstitious sect, great observers of set days and times.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

4 Better buy than borrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 884. (1732)
Borrow not too much upon Time to come.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1007.

Thou canst not fly high with borrowed Wings.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5033.

5 Who desires a short Lent, let him make a debt to be paid at Easter.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng. (1659)
He has but a short Lent, that must pay Money at Easter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1865. (1732)
He that would have a short Lent, let him borrow money to be repaid at Easter.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.
Lent seems short to him that borrows money to be paid at Easter.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 32. (1846)
Make a debt payable at Easter and you'll find Lent short. (Deve algo para Pascua, y hacersete ha corta la cuaresma.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 239. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

6 Borrowing is not much better than begging. (Borgen ist nicht viel besser als betteln.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act II, sc. 9. (1779)

7 Who borrows easily? He who pays punctually.

(ποιός καλοδανειζεται; δποιος καλοπληρόνει.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 111. (1831) See also under PAYMENT.

8 Borrowing is an act of extreme folly and weakness. Have you money? Do not borrow, for you are not in need. Have you no money? Do not borrow, for you will not be able to pay. . . . By so doing you will incur the derision of the proverb, "I am unable to carry the goat, so put the ox upon me." (ού δύναμαι τήν αἶγα φέρειν, ἐπὶ μοι θέτε τὸν βοῦν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Borrowing. Sec. 829F. (A. D. 97)

The man who is once involved in debt remains a debtor all his life, exchanging, like a horse that has once been bridled, one rider for another.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Borrowing. Sec. 830F. (A. D. 97) By borrowing from one usurer to pay off another.

9 Borrowing is the canker and death of every man's estate.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. v. (1616)

10 Better patch up one's old garment than borrow the raiment of another man.

SADI, Gulistan: Conclusion. (c. 1258) Also rendered, "Better to wear one's own tatters than a broidered robe that is borrowed."

Borrowed Garments never fit well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1008. (1732)

A borrowed cloak does not keep one warm.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 171. (1817)
The familiar phrase, "borrowed plumes," is derived perhaps from HORACE, "Furtivis nudata coloribus" (Stripped of its stolen colors)

11 He that goeth a borowynge goeth a sorowynge. RICHARD TAVERNER, Translation of Erasmus, fo. 46. (1550)

Who goeth a borrowing goeth a sorrowing.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 15. (1573)

He that goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1678)

Borgen macht sorgen. (Borrowing makes sorrowing.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743. Quoting a German proverb. The French say, "Argent emprunté porte tristesse" (Borrowed money brings sorrow).

Them ez borrows, sorrows.

E. R. SILL, A Baker's Dussen uv Wise Saws. (1883)

Debt is slavery. "Who goes a-borrowing goes a-sorrowing."

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Use of Life. Ch. 3. (1894) An old jingle runs, "Loans and debts Make worries and frets."

12 A man came to him to hire two hundred dollars for thirty days.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts. (2 March, 1852)

They hired the money, didn't they?

CALVIN COOLIDGE, referring to the borrowings of France and England during the first World War. (1925)

1 Let us all be happy, and live within our means, even if we have to borrow the money to do it.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Science and Natural History. (1858)

2 Borrowurd thyng wyll home agayne.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Good Counsel. (c.1460)

Borrowed ware wyll home agayne.

UNKNOWN, Parlement of Byrdes, l.224. (c.1550)

II—Borrowing and Lending

3 Acquaintance: A person whom we know well enough to borrow from, but not well enough to lend to.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

4 The world still he keeps at his staves end That need not to borrow and never will lend.

JOHN DAVIES OF HEREFORD, The Scourge of Folly, ii, 45. (1611)

He is well staitket [stocked] thereben, that will neither borrow nor len.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)

5 Creditors have better memories than debtors.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

6 Not so good to borowe, as be able to lend.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

I need not borowe, nor I will not lend.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

7 He begs of them that borrowed of him.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 170. (1721)

"Spoken of a man who by his liberal, or squandering temper, has ruined an estate."

8 He who cannot lend, let him take heed of borrowing. (Qui ne peult prester, qu'il se deffende d'emprunter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)

9 The borrower is servant to the lender. (Qui accipit mutuum, servus est foenerantis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Borrower is a Slave to the Lender; the Security to both.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

He that borrows binds himself with his neighbor's rope.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 227. (1902)

The Germans say, "Borghardt ist Lehnhardt's Knecht" (Mr. Borrow is the servant of Mr. Lend).

10 No one is so rich that he may not sometimes owe, nor any so poor that he may not sometimes lend. (Il n'est si riche qui quelques foys ne doibue. Il n'est si pauvre, de qui quelques foys on ne puisse emprunter.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1545)

Nature hath not to any other end created man, but to borrow and lend. . . . Believe me, it is a divine thing to lend, to owe an heroic virtue. (Nature n'a créé l'homme que pour prester & emprunter. . . . Croyez que chose diuine est prester: debuoir est vertus Heroïque.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

11 Neither a borrower nor a lender be:

For loan oft loses both itself and friend, And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 75. (1600)

The best way to keep your friends is never to owe them anything and never lend them anything. (Le meilleur moyen de conserver vos amis est de rien leur devoir et de ne jamais leur prêter.)

PAUL DE KOCK, L'Homme aux Trois Culottes. Ch. 3. (1844)

The holy passion of Friendship is of so sweet and steady and loyal and enduring a nature that it will last through a whole lifetime, if not asked to lend money.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

12 Lend less than thou owest.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 133. (1605)

13 'Tis a very good world we live in,

To lend, or to spend, or to give in;

But to beg or to borrow, or get a man's own, 'Tis the very worst world that ever was known.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, The World. (1675) Quoted by Washington Irving as the motto for Tales of a Traveller, pt. ii.

Among the Divines there has been much Debate Concerning the World in its ancient Estate; Some say 't was once good, but now is grown bad; Some say 't is reformed of the faults it once had: I say 't is the best World, this that we now live in. Either to lend, or to spend, or to give in; But to borrow, to beg, or to get a Man's own, It is the worst World that ever was known.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742. The Chinese say, "If you don't entreat their assistance, all men will appear good-natured."

BOSOM

14 Now he [Nebridius] lives in the bosom of Abraham. . . . For what other place is there for such a soul? (Nunc ille vivit in sinu Abraham. . . . nam quis alius tali animae locus?)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. ix, ch. 3. (A.D. 397) Augustine also uses this phrase in De Anima (iv, 16, 24), where he states that by Abraham's bosom is meant "that remote and secret abode of quiet where Abraham is." It has come to be a proverbial expression for Paradise.

This day he sits in Abraham's bosom.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 72b. (c. A.D. 450)

And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom (als τον κάποιον Ἀβραάμ): the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

New Testament: Luke, xvi, 22-23. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "In sinum Abrahæ."

With whom there is no place of toil, no burning heat, no piercing cold, . . . this place we call the Bosom of Abraham. (κάποιος Ἀβραάμ.)

FLAVIUS JOSEPHUS, Discourse to the Greeks Concerning Hades. (c. A. D. 80)

Crist . . . that inn hiss Fader bosemm iss.

ORMIN, Ormulum, l. 19391. (c. 1200)

Oon of his disciples was resting in the bosom of Jhesu.

JOHN WYCLIF, tr., John, xiii, 23. (1382)

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 3, 38. (1592)

Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom Of good old Abraham!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iv, 1, 103. (1595)

Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 3, 10. (1599) Mistress Quickly misquotes the proverbial phrase.

I believe he heartily wishes her in Abraham's bosom.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Two or three old ladies, who are languishing to be in Abraham's bosom, as the only man's bosom to whom they can hope for admittance.

WALPOLE, Letter to John Chute, 3 Oct., 1765.

BREWER, Dict. of Phrase and Fable, p. 5, cites a proverb, "There is no leaping from Delilah's lap into Abraham's bosom," i. e. those who live in sin must not expect to go to heaven.

Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i, sonnet 30. (1807)

They come home, to Mens Business and Bosoms.

BACON, Essays: Epistle Dedicatory. (1625)

The cause comes home to the bosom of every man.

UNKNOWN, Gentleman's Magazine. Vol. lxxxviii. No. 2, p. 153. (1818)

Within the bosom of his family.

JANE PORTER, Thaddeus of Warsaw. Ch. 1. (1803)

BOSTON

A Boston man is the East wind made flesh.

THOMAS G. APPLETON (?), Epigram. (c. 1860)

"Boston is a state of mind" has also been attributed to Appleton, as well as to Emerson and Mark Twain.

Where the scrapples eat Biddle on Sunday

PHILIP BARRY, The Philadelphia Story. Act i. (1939)

And this is good old Boston,

The home of the bean and the cod,

Where the Lowells talk to the Cabots,

And the Cabots talk only to God.

J. C. BOSSIDY, On the Aristocracy of Harvard

Recited at a meeting of Holy Cross men in Boston, 1905.

I've never seen a Lowell walk,
Nor heard a Cabot speak with God,

But I enjoy good Boston talk

And Boston beans and Boston cod.

R. H. B. LOCKHART, In Praise of Boston. (c. 1930)

Here's to the town of New Haven,

The home of the Truth and the Light,

Where God talks to Jones in the very same tones

That He uses with Hadley and Dwight.

F. S. JONES, On the Democracy of Yale.

Boston's a hole, the herring-pond is wide.

BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium". (1864)

Boston State-house is the hub of the solar system.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6. (1857)

That's all I claim for Boston,—that it is the thinking center of the continent, and therefore of the planet.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1860)

He left the metropolis and journeyed eastward toward the "Hub of the Universe."

FRANK MOORE, Rebellion Records, v. ii. 600. (1862)

Massachusetts has been the wheel within New England, and Boston the wheel within Massachusetts. Boston therefore is often called the "hub of the world," since it has been the source and fountain of the ideas that have reared and made America.

REV. F. B. ZINKLE, Last Winter in the United States. (1868)

I soon found the country too far from the "hub of the Universe" to suit my taste.

C. B. GEORGE, Forty Years on the Rail. Ch. 4. (1887)

Full of crooked little streets; but I tell you Boston has opened and kept open more turnpikes that lead straight to free thought and free speech and free deeds than any other city of live men or dead men.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1860)

We say the cows laid out Boston. Well, there are worse surveyors.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

One day, through the primeval wood,
A calf walked home, as good calves should;

But made a trail all bent askew,

A crooked trail as all calves do. . . .

That forest trail became a lane,

That bent, and turned, and turned again, . . .

And this, before men were aware,

A city's crowded thoroughfare; . . .

And men two centuries and a half

Trod in the footsteps of that calf.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Calf-Path. (1892)

It will be a cold day when Boston gets left.
(Dies erit praeaelida sinistra quum Bostonia.)

J. J. ROCHE, The V-A-S-E. (1900)

BOSWELL

1 Every man his own Boswell.

O. W. HOLMES, Sub-title, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. A phrase which found its way, with a slight variant, into Oscar Wilde's essay, The Critic as Artist. Wilde helped himself to several of the good sayings in the Autocrat. Appleton's mot, quoted in the Autocrat, "Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris," was used by Wilde, with an introductory, "They say," in both The Picture of Dorian Gray and A Woman of No Importance. "Give us the luxuries of life and we will dispense with its necessities" is also used in Dorian Gray.

2 That propensity which, for want of a better name, we will venture to christen Boswellism.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays (1860), i, 58. (1825)
The relating of a thing in minute detail.

But I have been Boswellizing to you.

R. A. VAUGHAN, Hours with the Mystics, i, 7. (1856)

BOW

3 Men that have bows bend them at need only; were bows kept forever bent they would break. Such too is the nature of men. Were they to be ever at serious work nor permit themselves a fair share of sport they would go mad or silly.

AMASIS, KING OF EGYPT (c. 570 B.C.), when admonished because he spent half of every day carousing. See Herodotus, ii, 173.

Straining breaks the bow, relaxation relieves the mind. (Arcum intensio frangit, animum remisso.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 57. (c. 43 B.C.)
You will soon break the bow, if you always keep it bent. (Cito rumpes arcum, semper si tensum habueris.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fable 14. (c. 25 B.C.)
The Italians say, "Arco siempre armado, o flojo, o quebrado" (The bow always bent grows slack or breaks).

Apollo does not always stretch the bow. (Neque semper arcum | tendit Apollo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode x, l. 19. (23 B.C.)

That which lacks its alternations of repose will not endure. The bow, if you never cease to bend it, will grow slack. (Arcus, si numquam cesses tendere, mollis erit.)

OVIO, Heroides, Epis. iv, l. 91. (c. 10 B.C.)

A bow, they say, breaks when too tightly stretched, but a soul when too much relaxed. (τόξον μὲν γὰρ, ὡς φασι, ἐπιτενόμενον ῥήγνεται, ψυχὴ δ' ἀνιμμένη.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Old Men in Public Affairs. Sec. 792D. (c. A.D. 95) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 77, "Arcus tensus rumpitur."

The taut rope will break. (ἀποραγήσεται τενόμενον τὸ καλῶδιον.)

DIOSCORIDUS, Adagia, ii, 89. (c. A.D. 125) Quoting an old Greek proverb, which Erasmus, Adagia, i, v, 67, renders "Funem abruptum nimium tendendo."

The bowe will breake yf it be to sore bent.

MILES COVERDALE, Christen State of Matrymony. Sig. 11. (1541)

A bow long bent, at length must waxe weake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

By bending the bow too much, breake it in sunder.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 192. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Too much bending breketh a bow.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing, p. 44. (1577)

The bow the more it is bent . . . the weaker it waxeth.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 46. (1579)

A bow long bent at length waxeth weak.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 316. (1605)

A bow that stands alwayes bent looseth its strength in the end.

DUDLEY NORTH, Oeconomical Observations, p. 123. (1669)

Bows too long bent, grow weak.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1013. (1732)

It's a man's duty never to miss an opportunity of recruiting his exhausted and care-worn frame . . . by enjoying a little innocent recreation: "nec semper tendit Apollo."

F. E. SMIDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 52. (1850)

4 Penelope brought Vlixes bowe downe amonges the gentlemen, whiche came on wowing to her, that he which was able to bende it and drawe it, might inioye her.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 135. (1545)

Their example has given me the confidence to try myself in this bow of Ulysses.

JOHN DRYDEN, All for Love: Preface. (1678)

The bow of Ulysses, which none but its master could bend.

SIR JOHN HERSHEL, Studies in Natural Philosophy. Bk. iii, ch. 3 (1830) "To bend the bow of Ulysses," proverbial for undertaking a task of great difficulty. See HOMER, Odyssey, bk. xxi.

5 A wise mans bow goes with a two fold string.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act ii, sc. 2. (1606)

TWO STRINGS TO YOUR BOW, see under STRING.

6 It is too late to unbend the Bow, when it is broken.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 171 (1709) See also under LATENESS.

7 They could not bend him vnto their bowe.

JOHN FOXE, Actes and Monuments, iii, 12. (1631) Make him compliant to their will.

Hoping by this means to bring him to his bowe.

HENRY COGAN, Voyages of Pinto. Ch. 72. (1633)

They must have all men come to their bow.

THOMAS HURBERT, A Pill to Purge Formality, p. 22. (1650)

Mansoul being wholly at his beck, and brought wholly to his bow.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Holy War, p. 30. (1682)

8 Draw not thy bow before thy arrow be fixed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1326. (1732)

1 If the bow is drawn taut, the arrow will fly fast.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, No. 379. (1937)

2 The one at variance with itself is drawn together like harmony of bow or lyre. (διαφερόμενον αὐτὸ αὐτῷ συμφέρεσθαι, ὥσπερ ἀρμονίαν τόξου τε καὶ λύρας.)

HERACLEITUS, Fragments. Frag. 45, Bywater. (c. 500 B. C.) The universe is held together by the strain of opposing forces, just as the right use of bow or lyre depends on opposite tension. Quoted by PLATO, Symposium, 187A.

It is not well said of the archer that his hands at the same time thrust away the bow and draw it nigh, but we should rather say that there is one hand that puts it away and another that draws it to.

PLATO, Republic. Bk. iv, sec. 439C. (c. 375 B. C.)

3 A certain man drew a bow at a venture and smote the king of Israel. (Vir autem quidam tetendit arcum, in incertum sagittam dirigens, et casu percussit regem Israel.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xxii, 34. (c. 600 B. C.)

Repeated in II Chronicles, xviii, 33.

"And your mother was an Indian," said Lady Jane, drawing her bow at a venture.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 16. (1886)

She draws a bow at a venture.

A. E. W. MASON, House of the Arrow. Ch. 26. (1924)

I SHOT AN ARROW INTO THE AIR, see under ARROW.

4 We knowe to well the bent of Jackys bowe.

LYDGATE, Mumming at Hertford, 198. (c. 1430)

I, hauyng the bent of your vnclow bow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Do you therefore thinke me easely entised to the bent of your bow?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 75. (1579)

To have the bent of ones bow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 228. (1670)

I have got the bent of his bow, ego illius sensum pulchrè calleo. (I am perfectly acquainted with the bent of his disposition.)

AINSWORTH, Latin Dictionary: Bnt. (1783)

5 In your awin bow ye are owreschot.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae. No. lxxix, l. 42. (c. 1585)

Learned men woulde . . . outshoote them in their owne bowe.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii, sec. 23. (1605)

Because Rome maketh her universality such a masterpiece to boast of, let us see if the Greek church may not outshoot her in her own bow.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. iv, ch. 6. (1639)

To outshoot a Man in his own Bow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5212. (1732)

6 He's a long-bow man. A Liar.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)

In modern usage, "to draw the long-bow" means rather to exaggerate than to lie, because, perhaps, with the long-bow, as opposed to the short, one can shoot far.

They draw the long bow better now than ever.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 1. (1824)

I can draw as long a bow as any Indian or author.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.

Ch. 19. (1843)

If he had recollected . . . he would not have pulled that unlucky long-bow.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 52. (1853)

A habit of ever drawing the long bow.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Lady Higher Up. (1911)

It is thought that Americans have a special talent for drawing the long bow.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p.

128. (1939)

7 [They] love to go by the string rather than by the bow.

WALKER, Idiomatologia Anglo-Latina: Preface.

(1690) i. e. prefer to go directly rather than roundabout.

BOWDLERISE

8 Those words and expressions are omitted which cannot with propriety be read aloud in a family.

DR. THOMAS BOWDLER, Preface, to his Family

Shakespeare, 1818.

A Bowdlerised version would hardly be intelligible.

FREDERIC HARRISON, Choice of Books, p. 63

(1879)

Evil counsellors who wished him to bowdlerise glorious John.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Dryden, p. 9. (1881)

BOWLS

9 Challenge her to bowl.—I fear too much rubbing.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1, 140.

(1595)

We'll play at bowls.—'Twill make me think the world is full of rubs.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 4, 4. (1595)

He who plays at bowls will sometimes meet with rubbers.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch.

10. (1762)

According to the proverb, he that will play at bowls must expect to meet with rubbers.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 3 Oct., 1771.

See also SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 20. (1824)

DE QUINCEY, Whiggism. (c. 1840) STEPHEN,

Hours in a Library, i, 384. (1874)

It you play at bowls, you must take rubbers.

ROLF BOLDRWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), Robbery

under Arms, p. 348. (1888)

He who plays at bowls must look out for rubs.

HACKWOOD, Old English Sports, p. 180. (1907)

Apparently the oldest form of the proverb,

"rubbers" being a later alteration.

BOX

<sup>1</sup> Thereby in the wrong boxe to thryve. ye weare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
Ye are in the wrong box.

NICHOLAS RIDLEY, Works, p. 163. (1554)
Faith, you were in the wrong box.

JOHN CLEVELAND, The Coachman. (c. 1650)
Take care your rights of man don't get you in the wrong box.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 10. (1836)
I very much question whether the Clerkinwell Sessions will not find themselves in the wrong box.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 17. (1838)

The Wrong Box.

R. L. STEVENSON AND LLOYD OSBOURNE. Title of novel. (1889)

BOY

See also Child, Youth

<sup>2</sup> A fine strapping boy, as the phrase goes. (Pueri, ut dici adsolet, forsitan belli.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. iv, sec. 2. (A. D. 387)

<sup>3</sup> A boy comes into the world with a loaf of bread in his hand, but a girl is empty-handed.

Babylonian Talmud: Niddah, fo. 91a. (c. 450)
To a man, all means of livelihood are open.

<sup>4</sup> He that is man'd with boyes, and horst with colts, shall haue his meate eaten, and his worke undone.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 270. (1605)

RAY, Proverbs, 118. (1670) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 169, with the comment, "Because the boy will neglect his business, and the horse will throw him." FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2286. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Few boys are born with talents that excel. But all are capable of living well.

WILLIAM COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 509. (1784)

<sup>6</sup> Laddes will be men.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)

Or, as they say, boyes will be men one day.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Enfant. (1611)
Boys will be Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1014. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> In him [Nicholas West, Bishop of Ely] the proverb was verified, "Naughty boys sometimes make good men."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Surrey, iii, 207. (1662)

<sup>8</sup> He's an ill Boy, that goes like a Top; no longer than 'tis whipt.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2449. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> The boy stood on the burning deck

Whence all but him had fled;

The flame that lit the battle's wreck,
Shone round him o'er the dead.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Casablanca. (1808)

The original version. In later ones Mrs. Hemans, uncertain of her grammar, sometimes preferred, "Whence all but he had fled."

<sup>10</sup> A smiling boy seldom proves a good servant.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 8. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 24. (1670)

A laughing fac'd lad makes a lither [bad] servant. It is supposed such are too full of roguery to be diligent.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 53. (1721)
Softness of smile indicates softness of character. An old proverb says, "A smiling boy is a bad servant."

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 53. (1852)

<sup>11</sup> Jest with boyes, and leave the saints alone.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 8. (1659)

If you play with Boys, you must take Boys' Play.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2779. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> Whose white boy is that same?

HENRY PORTER, Two Angrie Women of Abington, p. 69. (1599)

They terme you delight of men, white boye.

UNKNOWN, Timon. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1600)

The pope was loath to adventure his darlings into danger; those white boys were to stay at home.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. i, ch. 13. (1639)

He was always my white-headed boy.

HALL CAINE, The Manxman. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1894) i. e. my favorite.

She gave me the gate. You're the original white-haired boy.

EUGENE O'NEILL, The Great God Brown: Prologue. (1926)

<sup>13</sup> Lasses are lads' leavings.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1670)

In line with the Greek proverb, στέλος γὰρ ἰσίκου παῖδες εἰσιν ἀπρηνες (Boys are the prop of a house).

What are little boys made of, made of?

What are little boys made of?

Snips and snails and puppy-dog tails,

And such are little boys made of.

What are young women made of? . . .

Sugar and spice and all things nice,

And such are young women made of.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, What All the World Is Made Of. (c. 1820) The second stanza is usually quoted, "What are little girls made of?"

If only you wouldn't always think little girls are made of sugar and spice and everything nice

F. C. DAVIS, The Graveyard Never Closes, p. 244. (1941)

<sup>14</sup> Children will do like children.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phrasenologia Generalis, p. 330. (1681) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Pueri sunt pueri, pueri puerilia tractant" (Children are children and employ themselves with childish things).

Young fellows will be young fellows.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act II. (1762)

Boys will be boys.

LORD LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. xv, ch. 1. (1849)

SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh, ch. 41. (1850)
THACKERAY, The Newcomes, ch. 20. (1853)
MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn, ch. 41.
(1884) BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play.
Act I. (1911)

"Boys will be boys." "And even that," I interposed, "wouldn't matter if we could only prevent girls from being girls."

ANTHONY HOPE, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 16. (1894)

<sup>1</sup> You may see the man in the boy. (Ts'ung hsiao k'an ta.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1434. (1875)

CHILD FATHER OF THE MAN, see under CHILD.

<sup>2</sup> Don't send a boy on a man's errand.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 488. (1940) Or, "Don't send a boy to mill." A card-player is said to send a boy to mill when he plays a low card, which he thinks high enough to win the trick, and it is exceeded by an opponent.

<sup>3</sup> One of the best things in the world to be is a boy; it requires no experience, though it needs some practice to be a good one.

C. D. WARNER, Being a Boy. Ch. 1. (1878)

BRAG

See also Boasting

<sup>4</sup> Brag in thy bravery like a cock beside his hen. (κρόμασον θαρώων, ἀλέκτωρ ὥστε θηλείας πέλας.)
AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1671. (458 B.C.)
Those that fayne to bee valiant, brag most gloriously.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Scilla and Minos, p. 157. (1576) A phrase unidentified in its probably classical origin, "Miles gloriosus."

A man ought not to bragge of three things, Of good wine, of the beauty of his wife, nor of his riches. (Vn homo non si doueria mai vantar di tre cose, di bon vino, de la belezza de la sua moglie, & de le sue ricchezze.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 24. (1578)
Toscani has, "Ne cavallo, ne moglie, ne vino non ti lodare a nessuno," which is rendered fairly closely by THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1126, "Commend not your Wife, Wine, nor House."

Thou hast eaten bulbeefe, and braggest highlie.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Y2. (1583)
Every braggart shall be found an ass.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, 3, 372. (1602)

To brag of many good-morrrows.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1670)

If I cannot brag of knowing something, then I brag of not knowing it. At any rate, brag.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1866.

<sup>5</sup> Greatest crakers [braggers] ar nat ay boldest men.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Skyp of Polys, i, 198.

(1509) Repeated in his Mirrou of Good Manners, p. 76.

Great braggers commonly be least fyghters.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 49. (1539)

It is an old saying, they brag most that can doe least.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (c. 1598)

Great Braggers, little Doers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1753. (1732)

The French say, "Grands vanteurs, petits faiseurs."

<sup>6</sup> Brag is a good dog (quoth Stutely), but tell vs, hast thou made thy Will?

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (c. 1598)

Holdfast is the only dog, my duck.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 3, 54. (1599)

Ay, Brag's a good dog; threatened folks live long.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, iv, 3. (1599)

If Brag were not a good dog, I know not how he would hold up his tail.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Courtier and Countryman (1618)

Brag's a good dog if he be well set on.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1670)

Brag's a good dog but that he hath lost his tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1678)

Braggs a good dog . . . But he was hang'd for biting that was ill.

MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 58. (1685)

Brag's a good Dog, but dares not bite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1015. (1732)

Brag is a good dog, but Hold-fast is a better.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 123. (1709)

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 18. (1861)

READE, Put Yourself in His Place. Ch. 29. (1870)

When I envied the finery of one of my neighbours. [my mother] told me that "Brag was a good dog, but Holdfast was a better."

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 197. (1752)

Brag is a dog that everybody hates, but nobody fears.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 21. (1843)

BRAIN

See also Mind

<sup>7</sup> If one wanted to know what books to read in any line, one had only to pick his brains.

A. C. BENSON, From a College Window, p. 48. (1907)

<sup>8</sup> Brain. An apparatus with which we think that we think.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>9</sup> He carries his brains in his breeches-pocket.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 589. (1883)

<sup>10</sup> Begin writing Satanic Poetry; or blow out his brains.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1831)

He demanded his money, or he would blow out his brains.

UNKNOWN, Autobiography of a Beggar-boy, p. 95. (1859)

<sup>1</sup> Every head is ful of braynes. (Di senno è pieno ogni testa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

<sup>2</sup> He is sillier than a Crab, that has all his Brains in his Belly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1944. (1732)

Idle Brains are the Devil's Workhouses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3052. See also under IDLENESS.

<sup>3</sup> [He] looked as if he'd stood in line twice when the brains were being handed out.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 206. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> My desire is that none of you be so unadvised or hare-brained.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 216. (1548)

Thys rashe kynde of vowyng . . . he may wele bequethe to his madmen, his harebraynes.

JOHN BALE, Apologie of J. B., p. 29. (1550)

What a company of hair-brains have done in their rage.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 9. (1621)

Lady Smart: Madam, will your ladyship have any of this hare?

Lady Answerall: No, madam, they say 'tis melancholy meat.

Lady Smart: Then, madam, shall I send you the brains?

Lady Answerall: No, madam; for perhaps it will make me harebrain'd.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>5</sup> If the brain sows not corn, it plants thistles.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1022. (1640)

The brain that sows not corn plants thistles, viz. If there be not good thoughts, there are bad.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1670)

The busy Brain, that sows not Corn, sows Thistles.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4437. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Our brains are seventy-year clocks. The Angel of Life winds them up once for all, then closes the case, and gives the key into the hand of the Angel of the Resurrection.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8. (1857)

<sup>7</sup> Most brains reflect but the crown of a hat.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 704. (1848)

<sup>8</sup> There are three kinds of brains: one understands of itself, another can be taught to understand, and the third can neither understand of itself or be taught to understand.

NICCOLO MACHIAVELLI, The Prince. Ch. 22. (1513)

<sup>9</sup> I mix them with my brains, sir.

JOHN OPIE, the painter, when asked what he mixed his colors with. (c. 1790) See SMILES, Self Help, ch. 4.

<sup>10</sup> We breake our braynes for nought.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, 350. (1530)

She was busely beating her braines.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 155. (1576)

Cudgel thy brains no more about it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 63. (1600)

Who rack their brains for lucre, not for fame.

LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 178. (1809)

Cudgelling his brain to find any rhyme for sorrow besides borrow and to-morrow.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 15. (1849)

<sup>11</sup> His brains will work without barm [yeast, leaven].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 230. (1678)

His Brains want no Barm to make them work

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2505. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> I'll have my brains ta'en out and butter'd.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 5, 7. (1598)

The time has been,

That, when the brains were out, the man would die.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 79. (1606)

<sup>13</sup> He hath in his head . . . As much braine as a burbolt [bird-bolt].

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1550)

Fine head, but void of brains. (Belle tête, mais de cervelle point.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Renard et le Buste. Bk. iv, fab. 14. (1668) "How many noblemen," La Fontaine adds, "are busts like that!"

His brains are addle. His brains crow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 230. (1678)

A brain of feathers, and a heart of lead.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 44. (1712)

His Brain is not big enough for his Skull.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2504. (1732)

A well-meaning soul, but the brain . . . of a hen.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 214. (1941)

No brains above broccoli, if you get me.

JEFFERSON FARJEON, Murder at a Police Station, p. 97. (1943)

THE BRAINS TRUST, see under TRUST.

BRAVERY, see Courage

BRAY, VICAR OF

<sup>14</sup> I always kept my principle, to live and die the Vicar of Bray.

REV. SYMON ALEYN, VICAR OF BRAY, when taxed with being a turncoat. (c. 1575) See FULLER, infra. BROME (Letters by Eminent Persons, ii, 100) says, "It is Simon Aleyn or Allen, who was Vicar of Bray about 1540 and died 1588."

He held it safer to be of the religion of the King or Queen than was in being, for he knew that he came raw into the world, and accounted it no point of wisdom to be broiled out of it.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, The Old, Old, Very Old Man. (1635)

Whatever I can say or do,
I'm sure not much avails;
I shall still Vicar be of Bray,
Whichever side prevails.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Tale of the Cobbler and the Vicar of Bray. (c. 1660)

"The Vicar of Bray will be Vicar of Bray still." The vivacious hereof living under king Henry the Eighth, king Edward the Sixth, queen Mary, and queen Elizabeth, was first a Papist, then a Protestant, then a Papist, then a Protestant again. . . . Being taxed for being a turncoat . . . "not so," said he, "for I always kept my principle, which is this, to live and die the vicar of Bray."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Berkshire, i, 113. (1662)

And this is law that I'll maintain
Until my dying day, sir,
That whatsoever king shall reign,
Still I'll be Vicar of Bray, sir.

UNKNOWN, The Vicar of Bray. (c. 1720) Sometimes ascribed to a Colonel Fuller, an officer in the army of George I.

I never doubted of the prudent versatility of your Vicar of Bray.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Nov., 1756.

They admire the Vicar of Bray, whose principle was to be Vicar of Bray, whether the church was Protestant or Popish.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 18. (1869)

BREAD

1 All goes well here; bread is not to be had.
(Tout va bien ici; le pain manque.)

PIERRE BAILLE, Letter, from Paris, 1792. (CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. ii, bk. v, ch. 8.)

2 Ye bread-and-butter rogues, do ye run?

BAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant. Act iii, sc. 6. (c. 1625) "Bread-and-butter," i. e. childish. So "bread and butter politicians" (WASHINGTON IRVING, Salmagundi, 180), and "bread-and-butter period of life" (TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers, ch. 61). These examples from O.E.D.

It is no bread and butter of mine.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Mayor of Garret, i, 1. (1764) No business of mine.

The Brodwissenschaften, which we may translate "The Bread and Butter Sciences."

SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON, Lectures on Metaphysics, i, 1, 6. (1836) The lucrative sciences.

Young man, your bread and butter is cut for life.

TWISS, Life of Lord Eldon, i, 6, 119. (1844)

Not a deed would he do, nor a word would he utter,

Till he'd weigh'd its relations to plain bread and butter.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 186. (1848)

There are gentlemen here who in the last political contest went over the country saying that a certain party was a "bread and butter brigade."

FRANCIS C. LEBLOND, Debate, House of Representatives, 19 Dec., 1866. See Cong. Globe, p. 206, col. 3.

Life lifted above the plane of Bread-and-butter associations.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books, i, 222. (1870)

3 The second side of the bread takes less time to toast.

RICHARD DODDRIDGE BLACKMORE, Springhaven. Ch. 18. (1887)

4 Eat, if you must, the bread made by a woman with a bleeding nose, but never the bread of her who reminds you of having given it.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 541. (1817) The dirtiest bread is better than that of one who reminds you of favors. In the East, to remind one of a favor is an insult.

5 For hard bread, sharp teeth. (A pan duro, diente agudo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 270. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Germans say, "Zum harten Brod, zur harten Nuss, gehoeren scharfe Zaehne" (To hard bread and hard nuts, hard teeth).

6 Since we have bread, let us not seek for tarts. (Pues tenemos hogazas, no busquemos tortas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615) Tortas is frequently used in Don Quixote as a general word for dainties.

All this was tarts and painted bread to what I am about to say. (Esto todo fueron tortas y pan pintado para lo que ahora diré.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 63.

Don Quixote's bread would not bake, as the saying is. (No se cocía el pan a don Quijote, como suele decirse.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 25. Proverbial for extreme impatience.

7 With his bread let him eat it. (Con su pan se lo come.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 25. (1615) That's his look-out.

There no stealing a loaf from him who kneads and bakes the bread. (A quien cuece y amasa no le hurtes hogaza.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

Some translators render it, "Thou must not steal a loaf," etc., i. e. "not muzzle the ox that treads out the corn."

They make as good bread here as in France. (Tan buen pan hacen aquí como en Francia.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

At the present day they make a great deal better.

ALICE R. BURKE, Sancho Panza's Proverbs, p. 19. (1872)

8 Man doth not live by bread alone. (Non in solo pane vivat homo.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, viii, 3. (c. 650

a. c.) Matthew, iv, 4, has "Man shall not live by bread alone."

Man does not live by bread alone, but by faith, by admiration, and by sympathy.

EMERSON, The Sovereignty of Ethics. (1875)

Man is a creature who lives not by bread alone, but principally by catch-words.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. ii. (1881)

1 Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days. (Mitte panem tuum super transeuntis aquas: quia post tempora multa invenies illum.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)

Cast thy bread upon the waters and upon the land, for thou shalt find it after many days.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira, No. 7. (c. 1000)

In this the proverb is approved plaine,
What bread men breake is broke to them againe.

JOHN TAYLOR, Water-Poet, Works, p. 186. (1630)

He who casts his bread upon the Water shall surely find it again; for though it falleth to the bottom, it sinks but like the Ax of the Prophet, to arise again unto him.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 6. (1682)

Upon the Water cast thy Bread
And after many Days thou'lt find it,
But Gold upon this Ocean spread
Shall sink, and leave no mark behind it.

SWIFT, The Bubble, l. 133. (1720)

Cast thy bread upon the water, God will know of it if the fishes do not.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 134. (1902) A Persian saying.

Cast your bread upon the waters and it will come back to you—buttered.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (1911)

I bred my cast upon the waters.

ED. WYNN, Boys and Girls Together. Act i. (1940) Wynn is referring to the girls of the cast, whom he says he got from a showboat.

Bread cast upon these particular waters was sure to come back as cake.

MARGARET YATES, Murder by the Yard, p. 17. (1943)

2 Will it bake bread?

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence. (1841) "A prudence which asks but one question of any project,—Will it bake bread?"

3 Ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread. (Et observabitis azyma.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xii, 17. (c. 550 B. C.)

And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt. (Fecerunt subcineritios panes azymos.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xii, 39.

Unleavened bread is an Emblem or Symbol of Sincerity and Truth.

RICHARD CHALLONER, The Catholic Christian Instructed, p. 39. (1737)

Unleavened Bread.

ROBERT GRANT. Title of novel. (1900)

Unleavened bread makes weary eating.

EDITH HOWIE, Murder at Stone House, p. 7. (1942)

4 Wine by the sauour, and bread by the heate. (El vino al sapore, el pane al calore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

5 When bread is wanting, all's to be sold.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

6 Every day brings its bread.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 6 (1640)

There's no tomorrow but brings its bread.

TORRIANO, Piuzzu Universale, p. 73. (1666)

Every day brings its bread. (Chaque jour amène son pain.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 2. (1678)

The French also say, "Chaque demain apporte son pain" (Every tomorrow brings its bread), or "Il ne viengne demain s'il n'apporte son pain" (No tomorrow comes which does not bring its bread), the latter being an old French form of c. 1490.

7 Another's bread costs dear.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 326. (1640)

8 I know upon which syde my bread is buttred.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

FORD, The Lady's Trial. Act ii, sc. 1. (1638)

He knoweth upon which side his bread is buttered.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 112. (1564) VACHEL, Quinney's. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1914)

Perceiue, on which side my bread was buttered.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 469. (1580)

Does his Grace think I don't know which side my bread's buttered on?

COLLEY CIBBER, The Refusal. Act i. (1721)

He knows how to butter his bread as well as any man in Derbyshire.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

No man knows so well . . . on which side his bread is buttered.

WALTER SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor.

Ch. 18. (1819) Also, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 23.

You know . . . upon which side your bread is buttered.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 9. (1882)

He told himself that in any case his bread was buttered for life.

D. C. MURRAY, First Person Singular. Ch. 20. (1885)

He knew which side his bread was buttered on and enough to come in out of a monsoon.

OGDEN NASH, The Strange Case of the Wise Child. (1935)

So damn many chaps don't know which side of the bread has the butter.

A. A. FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 141. (1941)

The child hadn't enough sense to see on which side her bread was buttered.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 223. (1941)

I know which side of the bread has the butter.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Empty Tin, p. 188. (1941)

I know which side my bread is buttered on and I like butter.

HEBERDEN, Murder Goes Astray, p. 138. (1943)

1 He that bath store of bread may beg his milk merrily.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

2 The people that once bestowed commands, consulships, legions, and all else, now meddles no more, and longs eagerly for just two things, bread and circus games. (Panem et circenses.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 78. (c. A. D. 120)
Bread and Circuses.

HELEN PARRY EDEN. Title of book. (1914)
There is never a better time for the circuses than when the bread is dear or scarce.

UNKNOWN, London Times, 11 Nov., 1930, p. 15.

3 Bread the rustic gods approve who taught man to disdain the acorn of ancient times. (Contingunt homini veteris fastidia quercus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 184. (c. A. D. 120)
Acorns were good till bread was found.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Colours of Good and Evil. Sec. 6. (1597)

4 Lyke one of fond fancy so fyne and so neate, That would haue better bread than is made of wheate.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. vii. (1562)
Englishmen deserve . . . to eat finer bread than is made of wheat.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues: Dedication. (1580)
To look for better bread than ever came of wheat. (Buscar pan de trarigo.)

CRIVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1605)
Pt. ii, ch. 67. (1615)

Would you have better bread then's made of wheat?

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Froment. (1611)
What warnings against . . . looking for perfection in a world of imperfection. . . We say, He expects better bread than can be made of wheat.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1853)

You're asking for better bread than wheat makes.

H. J. SMITH, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh. Act i. (1911)

5 Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life. (ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς.)

New Testament: John, vi, 35. (c. A. D. 110)

The Vulgate is, "Ego sum panis vitae."

6 The waiter roars it through the hall,
"We don't give bread with one fishball!"

GEORGE MARTIN LANE, The Lay of the One Fishball. (1855) The ballad was used as the basis of a mock Italian opera, Il Pescerballo, by Professor Francis James Child and James Russell Lowell.

7 Instead of a fish he gives you a scorpion. (ὄφρὶ ψάρηος σκορπίον.)

LYCOPHRON, Alexandra. (c. 300 B. C.) An old Greek proverb quoted in Matthew, vii, 10, and in Luke, xi, 11, ἢ καὶ ἰχθὺν αἰτήσῃ—μή δέσιν ἐπιώσσει αὐτῷ; (If he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?) The Vulgate is, "Aut si piscem petierit, numquid serpentem porriget ei?" Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 6, with the Latin, "Pro perca scorpionum." A somewhat similar Greek proverb is, μή λόγους ἀντ' ἀλφίτων (Don't give words for bread).

In one hand he has a stone, while he shows a piece of bread in the other. (Altera manu fert lapidem, panem ostentat altera.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 195. (c. 210 B. C.) "From the custom," says BLAND (Proverbs, i, 177) "of enticing dogs, whom we mean to beat, by holding out to them a piece of bread; or a horse, when we wish to harness him, by showing him corn." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 29. A similar Latin proverb is, "Altera manu scabunt, altera feriunt" (They scratch with one hand and tickle with the other), which the Germans have expanded to "Das thun alle bösen Katzen: Vornen lecken, hinten kratzen" (All bad cats do it: in front they lick, behind they scratch). FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5994, has, "You shew Bread in one Hand, and a Stone in t'other" Fabius Verrucosus called a favor roughly bestowed by a hard man, bread made of stone (Panem lapidosum.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis, Bk. ii, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 54)
What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? (ἢ τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἀνθρώπος, ὃν αἰτήσῃ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ἄρτον—μή λίθον ἐπιώσσει αὐτῷ;)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 9. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Quis est ex vobis homo, quem si petierit filius suus panem, numquid lapidem porriget ei?" Repeated, with slight variations, in Luke, xi, 11.

He carries water in one hand, fire in the other (Altera manu fert aquam, altera ignem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv. cent. iv, No. 74. (1523)

A poet's fate is here in emblem shown:

He asked for Bread, and he received a Stone.

SAMUEL WESLEY, On Samuel Butler's Monument in Westminster Abbey. (1721) Butler, author of Hudibras, died in want in 1680. and "it was the scandal of the age," says the Dictionary of National Biography (viii, 75), "that though the king was lavish in promises, he never did anything to relieve Butler's poverty." Wesley's epigram is the earliest known use of the phrase in its modern proverbial meaning of finding only hard-heartedness when seeking for sympathy and compassion. Robert Burns's mother is said to have used the same witticism when she was told that a monument was to be erected to her son by his admiring countrymen. "Rabbie asked for bread when he was alive," she is reported to have said; "now that he is dead, they give him a stone."

I ask you for a Fork, and you bring me a Rake. THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2587. (1732)

"We will find you bread, . . . it's like a flint."—"So we ask for bread, and you give us a stone."

MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 37. (1834)

A fact must be the vehicle of some humanity in order to interest us. Otherwise it is like giving a man a stone when he asks for bread.

H. D. THORAU, Winter, 23 Feb., 1860.

1 God maketh the staff of life whereon men live.

MARIETTE, Les Papyrus Egyptiens. Plate 12. The Book of the Dead: Hymn to Amen-Ra. (c. 4000 B.C.)

The stay and the staff, the whole stay of bread. (Omne robur panis.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, iii, 1. (c. 725 B.C.)

Behold, I will break the staff of bread in Jerusalem. (Ecce ego conteram baculum panis in Jerusalem.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, iv, 16. (c. 600 B.C.) To diminish or cut off the supply of bread. See also Ezekiel, xiv, 13; Leviticus, xxvi, 26.

He brake the whole staff of bread. (Omne firmitum panis contrivit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cv, 16. (c. 350 B.C.)

Corn, which is the staff of life.

EDWARD WINSLOW, Good Neues from New England, p. 47. (1624)

Bread is worth all, being the Staffe of life.

JOHN PENKETHMAN, Ariachthos, sig. A j b. (1638)

Corn (the main staffe of life).

JOHN HAMMOND, Leah and Rachel, p. 9. (1656)

For corn, they have Rice the Staff of the Land.

JOHN FRYER, A New Account of East India and Persia, p. 35. (1698)

Bread, dear brothers, is the staff of life.

JONATHAN SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub, Sec. 4. (1704)

Here is bread, which strengthens man's heart, and is therefore called the staff of life.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Psalm cv. (1710) Folk-Lore (xxiv, 76) notes an Oxfordshire addition: "Bread is the staff of life, but beer's life itself."

Barley bannocks and oat cake long remained the staff of life of villages in Scotland.

UNKNOWN, All the Year Round. No. 45, p. 440. (1860)

Broad beans formed one of the staves of life in Sicily.

DOUGLAS SLADEN, In Sicily, i, 372. (1901)

2 Give us this day our daily bread. (τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν τὸν ἐπιούριον δὸς ἡμῖν σήμερον.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 11. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Panem nostrum supersubstantialem da nobis hodie."

Think not merely of today's bread. (μὴ καθόσθαι ἐπὶ χεῖρα.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. Bk. x, sec. 452E. (c. A. D. 200) Quoting an apothegm of Pythagoras, meaning, Athenaeus explains, "Consider not merely the things of today."

Our daily bread depends on Heaven. (Ch'ih fan k'ao t'ien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 353. (1875)

3 Eaten bread is forgotten.

MIMAKU, Spanish Grammar. p. 80. (1591)

CASPER, Remains, p. 321. (1605) RAY, Eng- lish Proverbs, p. 84. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1358. (1732)

The bread eaten and the company dispersed. (El pan comido y la compañía deshecha.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

Eaten bread is soon forgotten.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 169. (1639)

Cited by CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 187, with the Italian, "Il pane mangiato è presto dimenticato." The French say, "Pain mangé est vite oublié."

Eaten bread is forgotten, and the hand that gave it is despised.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 15. (1869)

The bitter proverb that eaten bread is soon forgotten must never be true of the Christian.

J. W. CHADWICK, Commentary on Exodus. xvi. (1890)

4 Bread and cheese be two targets against death.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Health's Improvement, p. 236. (1655) "Bread and cheese" figuratively stand for plain fare, needful food. The proverbial bachelor's fare, "Bread and cheese—and kisses."

Cheese and bread is physick to such as are in health.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 92. (1666)

A white loaf and hard cheese never shames the master.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

Bread with Eyes, Cheese without Eyes, and Wine that leaps to the Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1017. (1732)

5 You little Prigs, will you offer to take the Bread out of my mouth?

MOTTEUX, Rablais. Bk. iv, ch. 16. (1708) An interpolation by Motteux.

6 That's the bread line. They get a cup of coffee and a loaf of bread every night at twelve o'clock.

A. B. PAINE, The Bread Line. (1900) See Lippincott's Magazine, lxx, 3.

The bread line moved forward slowly, its leathern feet sliding on the stones.

O. HENRY, The Trimmed Lamp, p. 188. (1906)

Your family's in wheat, and me and Sam are standing in the breadline.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 251. (1941)

7 Pure whole-meal bread, which I prefer to white myself; it puts strength into you and is good for the bowels. (Panem autopyrum de suo sibi, quem ego malo quam candidum; et vires facit, et cum mea re causa facio, non ploro.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 66. (c. A. D. 60)

8 The eating of bread is under the providence of God; he is an ignorant man that disputeth it.

PTAR-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 7. (c. 3550 B.C.) Pruss Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

1 He ate his white bread first. (Mangeoyt son pain blanc le premier.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)
It is a good thing to eat your brown bread first.
ROBERT FORBY, Vocabulary of East Anglia, 429. (1830) "If you are unfortunate in the early part of life, you may hope for better success in the future."

2 This buying of bread undoes us.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1678) See also under BELLY.

3 Be fair conditioned and eat bread with your pudding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

4 His bread is buttered on both sides.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678) "He hath a plentiful estate; he is fat and full."

Your bread is butter'd on both Sides.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6044. (1732)
Wherever Walter goes he is pretty sure to find his bread buttered on both sides.

LOCKHART, Life of Scott. Vol. i, p. 206 note. (1837)

His bread, of which he buttered both sides.

LORD BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 96.

(1821) To butter both sides of one's bread is to be wasteful or luxurious.

5 When he lets his slice fall, or some one nocks it out of his hand, it always somehow falls butter side up.

SERA SMITH, Major Downing, p. 163. (1834)

I never had a piece of toast.

Particularly long and wide.

But fell upon the sanded floor.

And always on its buttered side.

JAMES PAYN (?), After Tom Moore. (1853)

See HAMILTON, Parodies, iii, 268.

My cake always falls butter side down.

Notes and Queries, Ser. iv, viii, 506. (1871) A Lancashire proverb.

We express the completeness of ill-luck by saying, "The bread never falls but on its buttered side."

J. L. KIPLING, Beast and Man, p. 246 (1891)

6 The litel childer askeden bred, and ther was not that shulde breke to them.

JOHN WYCLIFF, Bible: Lamentations, iv, 4.

(1382) The King James has, "The young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them." "To break bread" means either to break it for one's own eating, or to break it for distribution to others.

Break not bread. (Panem ne frangito.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2 (1508)

A Pythagorean proverb, meaning, so Erasmus explains, that friendship should not be broken, friendship being signified by bread eaten together.

Not all who break his bread are true.

LORD BYRON, The Bride of Abydos, li, 16. (1813)
ALL SORROWS ARE LESS WITH BREAD, see under SORROW.

II—Bread: Half a Loaf

7 Better a louse in the pot than no flesh at all.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 319.

(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117, cites this proverb, and adds, "The Scotch proverb saith a mouse, which is better sense, for a mouse is flesh and edible."

When the pot ore fire you heat,

A Lowse is better than no meat.

UNKNOWN, Musarum Deliciae, i, 31. (1656)

Better a Mouse in the Pot, than no Flesh at all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 867 (1732)

8 Half an egg is better than an empty shell.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 86. (1639)

Better half an Egg than an empty Shell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 901. (1732)

9 They that have no other meat,
Bread and butter are glad to eat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 113. (1639)

RAY, 66. (1670) FULLER, No. 6162. (1732)

To QUARREL WITH ONE'S BREAD AND BUTTER, see under QUARREL.

10 Better be up to the Ancles, than quite over Head and Ears.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 879. (1732)

Tripe-Broth is better than no Porridge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5274.

He who misses the meat, let him feed on the broth.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 662. (1817)

Better de gravy dan no grease 'tall.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

11 Better are small Fish than an empty Dish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6369. (1732)

Sma' fish are better than nane.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 262. (1862)

12 Throw no gyft agayne at the geuers head;
For better is halfe a lose than no bread.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

And well this proverb commeth in my head,
Birlady halfe a loaf is better then nere a whit of bread.

UNKNOWN, Appius and Virginia, l. 1109. (1567)

It is better to have halfe a loafe, then no bread at al. (Meglio è hauer mezzo un pane, che non ne hauer niente.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

Better half a loaf than no bread.

CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 319. (1605)

He is a foole who counts not halfe a loafe better then no bread, or despiseth the moonshine because the sunne is down.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian: To the Reader. (1642)

Better a bit than no bread.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1670)

You know the proverb of the half loaf, Ariadne.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 2. (1681)

We must live somehow, and half a loaf is better than no bread.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 10. (1850)

Half a loaf is a lot better than no bread.

F. B. YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 32. (1942)

<sup>1</sup> Whenever one offers you no one thing complete, accept the fraction, for obtaining the lesser part will be a good deal better than getting nothing at all. (τὸ λαβεῖν ἑλαττον καλίων ἔσται σοι πολὺ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 571K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Better to sail slowly than not to sail at all. (Commodus tarde navigare quam omnino non navigare.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, epis. 4. (44 B. C.)

If there is no flesh, fish must content us. (Si non adsunt carnes, taricho contentos esse oportet.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, i, 5. (c. A. D. 125). Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 62.

Take barley bread, if you can't get wheaten bread (ἀγὰρ καὶ μάλα μετ' ἄρτον.)

ZENOBIOUS, Adagia, i, 12. (c. A. D. 130) Quoting a Greek proverb, also cited by Erasmus, with the Latin, "Bona est etiam offa post panem."

If you can't drive an ox, you must drive an ass (εἰ μὴ ἤναισιν βοὴν ἔλανε δ' ὄνον.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, vi, 2. (c. 950) There are many Greek proverbs indicating that one must make the best of what one has, but they are all summed up in one of the oldest of all. τὸ πᾶρον εὖ ποιεῖν (Do your best with what you already have).

Better it is, to lese [lose] cloth than brede.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 129 (c. 1500)

And by this prouerbe apeerth this o thyng, That alwaie somwhat is better than nothyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Something is better than nothing. (Más vale algo que nada.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 21. (1605) Another Spanish form is, "Más vale duro que ninguno." The French say, "Un peu vaut mieux que rien"; the Germans, "Besser etwas als nichts."

So long as one gets something, there is nothing lost. (Mientras se gana algo, no se pierde nada.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

It is better to sup with a cutty [short pipe] than want a spoon.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 210. (1721)

Half an orange tastes as sweet as a whole one.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 371 (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>2</sup> Better my hog dirty home, than no hog at all.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

Better's a dirty Hog than no Hog at all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 927. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Better some of a pudding than none of a pie.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135. (1670) FULLER, No. 924. (1732)

Bannocks [oat cakes] are better nor nae kind o' bread.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)

Better a lean jade than an empty halter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 166. (1678) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 863. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Let us not be too particular. It is better to have old second-hand diamonds than none at all.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar (1893)

BREADTH

<sup>5</sup> Every one [of the chosen lefthanded men] could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss. (Capillum quoque possent percutere.)

Old Testament: Judges, xx, 16. (c. 800 B. C.)

I profess requital to a hair's breadth.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, iv, 2, 4. (1598)

[She] knows to a hair's breadth where her place is.

STEELE, The Tatler. No. 36. (1709)

I'm within a hair-breadth raving mad.

FRANCIS FAWKES, tr., Theocritus, xiv, 12. (1767)

<sup>6</sup> As broad as long.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678)

In the broad or the long

JOHN SCARLETT, The Style of Exchanges, 171 (1682)

'Tis just as Broad as it is Long.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Answer to a Dissenier, 6. (1687)

It is even as broad as it is long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2933. (1732)

It is as long as it is broad.

GOVERNEUR MORRIS. (1775). See SPARKS, Life, i, 55.

It's as broad as it's long.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 9. l. 113. (1848)

As broad as narrow, like Paddy's plank.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 10. (1917)

BREAKFAST

<sup>7</sup> Evening orts [scraps, leavings] are good morning fodder.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 114 (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86 (1670) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (1721)

Evening-Oats are good Morning-Fodder.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1401 (1732)

<sup>8</sup> Breakfast makes good memory. (Le déjeuner fait bonne mémoire.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1534)

<sup>9</sup> If I were to fast for my life, I would eat a good breakfast in the morning.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1678)

He that would eat a good dinner, let him eat a good breakfast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85.

A bit in the morning is better than nothing all day, or than a thump in the back with a stone.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 282.

1 Take a meal at morn; unknown it is where at eve you may be.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Reginsmol. St. 25.
(c. A. D. 900)

2 A good, honest, wholesome, hungry breakfast.

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler. Ch. 5. (1653)

A sinking at the lower abdomen

Begins the day with indifferent omen.

ROBERT BROWNING. (c. 1870) As quoted by CHAVASSE, Advice to a Wife.

3 Only dull people are brilliant at breakfast.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii. (1895)

4 Ete and be merry, why breke yee nowt your fast?

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn: Prologue, l. 71.
(c. 1400)

Be vppe betyme & breake thy faste.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry.
Sec. 149. (1523)

My purpose is to be at Hodsden . . . before I brak my fast.

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler, i, 2. (1653)

I brak fast this morning with the King.

JOHN EVELYN, Memoirs (1857), i, 375. (1665)

BREATH

5 Ile keep my breath to coole my pottage.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch.
3. (c. 1598)

Keep your wind to cool your pottage.

HENRY PORTER, *The Two Angrie Women of
Abington*. Act ii, sc. 1. (1599)

I will save my breath for my broth anon.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe, iii, 2. (1605)

My lord, save your breath for your broth.

LEWIS MACHIN, The Dumble Knight. Act ii.
(1633)

Spare your breath to cool your porridge

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 28
(1693) An interpolation by Motteux. MINS
EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant, p. 262.
(1796)

Keep your breath to cool your brose.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 229. (1721)

"Spoken to them that talk much to little purpose." Sometimes "crowdie" is used instead of "brose." Crowdie is a gruel of meal and water, brose a porridge of oatmeal.

Spare your Breath, to cool your Broth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4240. (1732)

Pray keep your breath to cool your porridge.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

But if I get among the glum,

I hold my tongue to tell the troth

And keep my breath to cool my broth.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content. (c. 1763)

There is a very fine old saying, "Keep your breath to cool your porridge," and I shall keep mine to swell my song.

JANE AUSTEN, Pride and Prejudice. Ch. 6. (1813)

You may save your breath to cool your porridge.

BERNARD SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act ii.
(1897)

You might better save your breath to cool your soup.

THORNE SMITH, The Passionate Witch, p. 226.
(1941)

I kept the breath to cool the porridge.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Twelve Disguises, p. 191.
(1942)

6 If you would foster a calm spirit first regulate your breathing.

KALBARA EKKEN, *Ten Kun (Ten Precepts):
Book of Meditation*. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

7 The first Breath is the Beginning of Death.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4524. (1732)

8 There can be no real recovery until the fears of business have been allayed through the granting of a breathing spell to industry.

ROY HOWARD, Letter to President F. D. Roosevelt, August, 1935.

The "breathing spell" of which you speak is here
—very decidedly so.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Letter to Roy Howard, 2
Sept., 1935.

9 Never thinke to doe it while I have any breath left in my body.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Icilius and Virginia, p. 120. (1576) Repeated on p. 124 (Hartman, ed.): "Till breath doe leave their bodies."

Give me some little breath, some little pause

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 2, 24. (1594)

It was a sort of breath-taking surprise.

MARK TWAIN, A Tramp Abroad, p. 33. (1880)

He said it placidly, but it took our breath for a moment.

MARK TWAIN, The Mysterious Stranger. (1898)

The daring campaign these men were waging took his breath.

THOMAS DIXON, The Clansman, p. 351. (1905)

10 Hiero was reviled by one of his enemies for his offensive breath; so when he went home he said to his wife, "What do you mean?
Why haven't you told me of this?" But she, being virtuous and innocent, said, "I supposed that all men smelt so." (ὅτι τοῖς ἄλλοις ὁσμήν ἔδοξεν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Profit by One's Enemies, 90B. (c. A. D. 95) The story is a famous one, and is repeated by PLUTARCH,
Moralia 175B, and elsewhere by other writers.

Teeth to rote [rot], ande breeth to stynke.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 3573. (c. 1340)

Sour is thi breeth.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's
Tale*, l. 224. (c. 1386)

Wel I woot, thy breeth ful soure stinketh.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Manciple's
Prologue*, l. 32 (c. 1389)

When the stinking breath commeth from the stomake, it booteth not much to put some sweete thing in the mouth, to leave there a pleasant smell.

STEFANO GUARDO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p.
108. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The rabblement . . . utter'd such a deal of stinking breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 249. (1601)
Jack, eating rotten cheese, did say,
Like Samson I my thousands slay:
I vow, quoth Roger, so you do,
And with the self-same weapon, too.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

<sup>1</sup> You run this humour out of breath.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 1, 57. (1590)

Away went Gilpin, out of breath.

WILLIAM COWPER, John Gilpin. (1782)

They sat down to take breath.

P. F. TYTLER, History of Scotland, i, 112. (1828)

<sup>2</sup> Direct not him whose way himself will choose:
'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 29. (1595)

I will no longer spend my breath.

BERKELEY, Hylas and Philonous, iii. (1713)

I trust I have not wasted breath.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. 120. (1850)

<sup>3</sup> Give breath to his nostrils and to his parched throat.

UNKNOWN, The Laments of Isis and Nephtys,
p. 2. (c. 700 B.C.) Dennis, tr.

All in whose nostrils was the breath of life. (In quibus spiraculum vitae est in terra.)

Old Testament: Genesis, vii, 22. (c. 550 B.C.)

The breath in our nostrils is as smoke. (Quoniam fumus status est in naribus nostris.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 2. (c.
100 B.C.)

BREECHES

<sup>4</sup> Without black velvet breeches, what is man?
JAMES BRAMSTON, Men of Taste. (c. 1730)

<sup>5</sup> Between Adam and me the great difference is.
Though a paradise each has been forced to resign,

That he never wore breeches till turned out of his,

While, for want of my breeches, I'm banished from mine.

THOMAS MOORE, Upon Being Obligated to Leave a Pleasant Party from the Want of a Pair of Breeches to Dress for Dinner In.

TO WEAR THE BREECHES, see WIFE: THE CROWING
HEN. UNMENTIONABLES, see under EUPHEMISM

<sup>6</sup> It's ill taking the breeks aff a Hielandman
WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818) See also under IMPOSSIBILITY.

BREEDING

See also Ancestry, Manners

<sup>7</sup> What is bred in the bone will never come out of the flesh.

BURAL, Fables: The Two Fishermen. Fab. 14.
(c. 300 B.C.)

BREEDING

What is rooted in the bone rarely comes out of the flesh. (Osse radicatum raro de carne recedit.)

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs, p. 167. (c.
1290)

That whiche cleuid by the bone myght not out of the flesh.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr. Renart the Fox, xii, 29.
(1481)

Hard hit is to take oute of the flesshe that is bred in the bone.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte d'Arthur. Bk.
ix, ch. 39. (1485)

This prouerbe prophesied many yeres agone,
It will not out of the fleshe that is bred in the bone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

That is bred in the bone will neuer awaye.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 37. (1550)

That whiche is bred in the bone will not out of the flesh.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 204. (1576)

FLORIO, tr., Montaigne, iii, 13. (1603) DEFOE.

Further Adventures of Robinson Crusoe. Ch.
1. (1719) etc., etc.

Once get into the bone, it will step into the flesh
ROBERT GREENE, Repentance. (1592)

It will never out of the flesh that's bred i' the bone.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act.
ii, sc. 1. (1596)

What's bred in the bone. Admits no hope of cure.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame Act ii.
sc. 3. (1632)

Whatever is bred in the Bone will stick by us to the Day of our Deaths, whether it be Disease of Body, or Indisposition of Mind. What's natural will never out of the Flesh.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1709)

It is ill to bring out of the flesh that is bred in the bone. It is hard to leave those ill customs to which we have long been inured.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 179. (1721)

What's bred in the bone is apt to stick in the flesh.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iv. sc. 3.
(1815)

"You cannot expel nature with a fork," said the Roman. "What's bred in the bone won't come out of the flesh," says the Englishman.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Epistle to the Romans,
231. (1912) The Roman alluded to was Horace (Epis., i, 10, 24). See under NATURE for quotation.

Some things are bred in the bone.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 38. (1940)

Born in the bone and bred in the flesh.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 272
(1941)

<sup>8</sup> Not with whom thou art bred, but with whom thou art fed. (No con quién nace, sino con quién paces.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 10, 32, 68
(1615)

The Latins have a proverb, "non ubi nascor, sed ubi pascor"; making that place their mother, not which bred but which fed them.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies. Ch. 21. (1662)

1 A man's own good-breeding is his best security against other people's ill manners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Feb., 1750

2 None but the well-bred man knows how to confess a fault, or acknowledge himself in an error.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.
He is not well bred that cannot bear Ill-Breeding in others.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

3 All that breed in the Mud are not Eels.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 549. (1732)

4 Birth is much, but Breeding is more.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 983. (1732)
"Better ill-fed than ill-bred," is another proverb, and the Scots say, "Gude breeding an' siller mak' our sons gentlemen."

5 It is not ynough to be wel borne, but also to be wel brought up.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 17. (1574) Pettie, tr.

(Other men are . . . better brought up than he.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 28.

6 The best bred have the best portion.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 951. (1640) In a letter to his brother of about the same date, Herbert wrote, "The best bred child bath the best portion."

Grout [breeding] afore brass [money] for me.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 63. (1917)

7 Bred and born. (Ἰτραφὲν ἢδ' ἐγένετο.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 417. (c. 850 B. C.)

8 Nurture passes nature. (Nourriture passe nature.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Erreurs Populaires, i. 5. (1579)

You see how Education altereth Nature.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 127. (1579)

Nurture surpasseth nature.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Nourriture. (1611)

Nurture is above nature.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 50 (1633)

Nurture goes beyond nature.

BERTHELSON. Eng.-Danish Dict.: Nurture. (1748)

Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

Breed is stronger than pasture.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 31. (1917)

9 Everyone thinks himself well-bred.

LORD SHAPTESBURY, Characteristics, i. 65 (1711)

I am well-bred to a degree of needless scrupulosity.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies, i. 169. (1774)

No dancing bear was so genteel,
Or half so dégagé.

WILLIAM COWPER, Of Himself. (1782)

10 The test of a man or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel.

BERNARD SHAW, The Philanderer. Act iv. (1893)
Good breeding consists in concealing how much we think of ourselves and how little we think of the other person.

MARK TWAIN, Unpublished Diaries. (c. 1900)

11 She was spoil'd in the making.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

BREVITY

12 That is a Laconian staff. (σκούτλαν Λακωνικήν.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. x, epis. 10. (49 B. C.)
Spartan dispatches were wound round a staff in such a way that they could not be read when taken off, but here Cicero is referring to their brevity. The Laconians, or Spartans, were noted for their sententious speech. When Philip of Macedon wrote to the magistrates of Sparta, "If I enter Laconia, I will level Lacedaemon to the ground," the ephors replied in one word, "If."

I will discover it with laconic brevity.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1625)

This laconic fool makes brevity ridiculous.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, The Man's the Master. Act ii, sc. 1. (1668)

I grow laconic even beyond laconicism.

POPE, Letter to Swift, 17 Aug., 1736.

Terse without laconicism.

MRS. PIOZZI, A Journey Through France, Italy, and Germany. Bk. i, p. 374. (1789)

13 Shortness is acceptable. (Grata breuitas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. v, No. 1. (1508)

Taverner, tr., fo. 68. (1550) Taverner adds:
"The englyshe prouerbe is thus pronounced:
Short and swete."

14 Good things, if short, are twice as good. (Lo bueno, si breve, dos veces bueno.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 105. (1647)

Little and good is twice good. (Lo bueno, si poco, dos veces bueno.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 299.

15 You reply, as your custom is, in few words. (Respondes ut tuus est mos, | pauca.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 60. (35 B. C.)

There is need of brevity, that the thought may run on. (Est brevitatis opus, ut currat sententia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 9.

Every word that is superfluous flows away from the full mind. (Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 337. (c. 20 B. C.)

16 In laboring to be brief, I become obscure. (Brevis esse laboro, obscurus fio.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 25. (c. 20 B. C.)

Brevitie is many times the mother of Obscuritie.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Suetonius: To the Reader. (1606)

For brevity is very good,
Where we are, or are not understood.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 669.
(1663)

<sup>1</sup> The shortest works are always the best. (Les ouvrages les plus courts sont toujours les meilleurs.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 15. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> Things are not long from which nothing can be subtracted. (Non sunt longa quibus nihil est quod demere possis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 77. (c. A. D. 85)
What is the use of brevity, tell me, when there is a whole book of it? (Quid prodest brevitās, dic mihi, si liber est?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 29.
Nothing pleases so much as brevity. (Nihil, . . . ut brevitās, placet.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 20.
(c. A. D. 98)

To be brief is almost a condition of being inspired.
GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 141. (1920)

<sup>3</sup> You talk to the point. (Expedite fabulatu's.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 174. (c. 200 B. C.)

Stick to the point. (Nunc hanc rem gere.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 825.

Come to the main points. (Ad capita rerum perveni.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 609. (c. 200 B. C.)

Make it short. (Paucis expedi.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 650. (c. 200 B. C.)

Drop it and come to the point. (Mitte, ad rem redi.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 320. (163 B. C.)

"Saw it off," says the Duchess.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Tictocq. (1894)

That's what it means—in a nutshell.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 17. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> Since brevity is the soul of wit, . . . I will be brief.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 90. (1600)

Brevity is the soul of drinking, as of wit.

CHARLES LAMB, John Woodvil. Ch. 3. (1802)

Brevity, "the soul of wit," will be eminently the soul of a proverb's wit.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 1. (1853)

Brevity is the soul of lingerie.

DOROTHY PARKER. A line produced while working in an advertising agency. (c. 1920)

<sup>5</sup> It is better to be brief than tedious.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 4, 88. (1592)

Brief as the lightning in the collied night.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 1, 145. (1596)

Brief—as woman's love.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 163. (1600)

<sup>6</sup> Brevity is in writing what charity is to all other virtues.

SYDNEY SMITH, Works, i, 208. (1811)

BREW

<sup>7</sup>

How right and reasonable it is that he who brews it should drink it. (Que il est bien droiz et reson | Que qui le brasce si le boive.)

JEAN DE CHAPELAIN, Le Dit Dou Soucretain, l. 381. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, vi, 129.

Who brews excrement, drinks excrement. (Qui merde brasce, merde boive.)

COLIN MALET, De Jouglet, l. 246. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, iv, 119.

Let him habbe ase he brew, bale to dryng.

UNKNOWN. See RITSON, Songs and Ballads, p. 11. (c. 1264)

Suilk as thai breu nou haue thai drunke.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 2848. (a. 1300)

And who so wicked ale breweth,

Ful ofte he mote the werse drinke.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 1626. (c. 1390)

We must drynk as we brew, And that is bot reson.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries (Surtees), p. 111. (c. 1460)

As I woulde needes brewē, so must I needes drynke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

Drynk that thou hes brewit.

ALEXANDER SCOTT, Poems, xx, 64. (c. 1560)

As he brews, so shall he drink.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act ii, sc. 1. (1596) CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605) SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 10. (1762) BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 21. (1883) STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 30. (1883) etc., etc.

She drinketh of her owne brewing.

JOHN HEALEY, tr., Cebes His Table, p. 114. (1610)

Antichrist shall one day . . . drink as he brewed, be paid in his own coin.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary: Revelation, xiii, 10. (1647)

Stay and drink of your browst [brewing]. Take a share of the mischief that you have occasioned.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 289. (1721)

<sup>8</sup> If you brew well, you'll drink the better.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 186. (1721)

<sup>9</sup> This must be if we brew. That is, if we undertake mean and sordid, or lucrative employments, we must be content with some trouble.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1678)

Sik things will be, if we sell drink.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 295. (1721)

Thus it must be, if we sell ale.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>10</sup> You mixed the mess and you must eat it up. (Tute hoc intristi: tibi omnest exedendum.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 318. (161 B. C.)

Suche bread as they bake, suche muste they eate.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 431. (1548)

As he has brewed, that so he should bake.

THOMAS INGELEND, The Disobedient Child. (c. 1560) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, ii, 294.

As thou bakst, so shal brewe.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act iii, sc. 1. (1577)
Even as they brew, so let them bake.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act lii, sc. 2. (1599)

I will have no more to do with her, let her brew as she has baked.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 15 August, 1664.

As they brew, so let them bake.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 151. (1678)
COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. iv. (1670) GARRICK
AND COLMAN, The Clandestine Marriage. Act i, sc. 1. (1766)

As you Brew, so shall you Bake.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 82. (1709)
"This Proverb is a Reflexion upon all those that suffer by their own Folly," Dykes explains. "You did it, and must answer for't."

As they bake they shall brew,

Old Nick and his crew.

DAVID GARRICK, May-Day, Sc. 2. (1775)
"As they bake, so they will brew," philosophized Mr. Challis to himself.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, It Never Can Happen Again. Ch. 5. (1909)

BRIBERY

1
Receive no bribe from one who is powerful,
And oppress not the poor for his benefit.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxi,
l. 3. (c. 700 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

2
The man was clever, but of his hand had no control. (σοφὸς γὰρ ἀνὴρ, τῆς δὲ χειρὸς οὐ κρατῶν.)

ARISTIDES, of Themistocles. (c. 483 B. C.) See
PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides, iv. 2.

Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 9. (1599)

3
Take no bribe, surrender no right. (Ni tome cohecho, ni pierda derecho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32. 49. (1615)
Neither bribe, nor lose thy right.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 286. (1640)

4
To refuse with the right and take with the left.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 149. (1639)
He refuseth the Bribe, but putteth forth his Hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2009. (1732)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, pt. ii, ch. 42, has,
"No quiero; mas echadme lo en la capilla"
(I won't take it, but throw it into my cape)

5
Fight with silver lances and you will never lose. (ἀργυρέαις λογχαῖσι μάχου καὶ τάλυα κρηθήσεις.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, ii, 81. (c. 125 A. D.) This was the response of the Delphian Oracle to Phillip of Macedon, when he asked how he might be victorious in war.

Fight thou with shafts of silver, and o'ercome,
When no force else can get the masterdome

HERRICK, Money Gets the Masterie (1648)

Silver bullets.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, 1914, referring to the war with Germany.

6
A bribe entrench everywhere without knocking.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 18. (1616)

Honesty stands at the gate and knockes, and bribery enters in.

BARNABY RICH, The Irish Hubbub, p. 9. (1619)

Bribes will enter without knocking.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1019. (1732)

A bribe enters without knocking.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 132. (1902)

Similarly, "He that bringeth a present findeth the door open."

7
Bribes throw Dust into cunning Men's Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1018. (1732)

I do not hear that a Bribe on both Sides is out of Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2594.

8
The palms of their hands so hot that they cannot be cold vnlesse they be rubed with the oil of angels.

ROBERT GREENE, The Upstart Courtier. (1592)

The "angel" was a gold coin worth 10s. MAS-SINGER, The Duke of Milan, iii, 2, has, "I have seen . . . his stripes washed off With the oil of angels."

My mission was eventually accomplished, chiefly by the aid of "palm oil."

HENRY DE WINDT, Through Savage Europe. Ch.
18. (1907)

9
And if thou freely wilt, in bribes thy covne
bestowe,

Both judge, and jurie will bee prest, all favour thee to showe:

Yea Gods from heaven will hither come, all honour thee to doe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p.
187. (1574) Pettie, tr. Referred to as an "epigram translated out of greeke." "Even the gods accept bribes."

10
A bribe I know is a juggling knave.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 33. (1659)

11
You take pay to hold your tongue. (Accipis.
ut taceas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 95. (c. A. D. 85)

12
Ointment-money. (Unguentarium.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 11.
(c. A. D. 98) Euphemistic for a bribe

Wyth golde and grotes they grese my hande.

In stede of ryght that wronge may stande.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 437. (c. 1529)
Annointing their clarkes in the hand with double fee.

EDWARD FENTON, Certaine Secrete Wonders of Nature, 135. (1569)

He will largely grease me in the hand.

GEORGE WAPULL, Tide Tarrieth No Man, sig.
C1. (1576)

If you have argent . . . to grease them in the fist withall, then your sute shall want no furtherance.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, i, 117. (1583)

To grease a man i' the fist. That is to put money in his hand, to fee or bribe him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1670)

You must grease him in the fist with a new fee, for a bribe.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 281. (1681)

Where many a Client Verdict miss'd,

For want of Greazing in the fist.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Collin's Walk Through London. Pt. iii. (1690)

Having his Fist greas'd.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 290. (1709)

If we were greased in the palm, we should . . . be ready to turn a courtier.

EATON S. BARRETT, The Rising Sun, iii, 42. (1807)

Grease is indispensable for making wheels move easily.

LEO TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 6. (1865) Dole, tr.

When you want results, keep the wheels greased. It's the oldest rule in the world.

JOHN BENTLEY, Mr. Marlow Stops for Brandy, p. 57. (1940)

<sup>1</sup> The wits, however, declared that the orator had been seized over night, not with an ordinary quinsy, but with a silver quinsy. (ἀργυράγχης.)

PLUTARCH, of Demosthenes, when the latter, who had been bribed not to speak against Harpalus, pretended to have lost his voice because of a sudden attack of the quinsy. (325 B.C.) Harpalus was the treasurer of Alexander the Great, and had fled to Greece after robbing his master of a huge sum. See PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes, xxv, 5.

Envoys from Miletus came to Athens to seek aid, but Demosthenes opposed their demands, maintaining that the Milesians did not deserve aid. The matter was postponed until the next day, and the envoys came to Demosthenes and begged him not to speak against them. He asked for a sum of money, which they gave him, and on the following day when the case was taken up again, Demosthenes, with his neck and shoulders wrapped in thick wool, said he was suffering from quinsy and could not speak against the Milesians. Then one of the populace cried out that it was not quinsy but silverquinsy that Demosthenes was suffering from. (Non synanchen, sed argyranchen.)

CRITOLAUS. (c. 155 B.C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, xi, 9.

For a crust of bread he can be hired either to keep silence or to speak. (Frusto panis conducti potest, vel uti taceat vel uti loquatur.)

MARCUS CATO, referring to Marcus Caelius. (c. 175 B.C.) See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticar, i, 15, 10.

I would sooner sell you silence, though at a dearer rate, as Demosthenes formerly sold it, by means of his Argentangina or Silver Quinsy. (Quelques foys la vendit Demosthenes moyennant son argentangine.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 56. (1548)

He hath the siluer dropsie.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 33. (1633)

Sick of the silver dropsy.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 40. (1639)

Moved by the rhet'rick of a silver fee.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 318. (1716)

<sup>2</sup> It is perilous to buy from a few what belongs to the many. (Periculose a paucis emi, quod multorum esset.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 8. (c. 40 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> For a con-si-de-ra-tion.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 22. (1822)

<sup>4</sup> You can't bribe a fox. (ἀλώπηξ οὐ δαροκεῖται.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, ii, 24. (c. 950)

<sup>5</sup> He has an ox on his tongue. (βοὺς ἐπὶ γλώσσῃ.)

THEOGNIS, Elegy, l. 813. (c. 600 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 18, who gives the Latin, "Bos in lingua." The original meaning was to be silent for some weighty reason, but, since the Athenians had a piece of money stamped with the figure of an ox, it soon acquired its proverbial meaning of being silent because of bribery. A shorter form is βοὺς ἐπέβη. Menander, in a fragment, has παχὺς ὅς ἐπὶ στόμα (a fat pig on the tongue).

A great ox stands upon my tongue. (βοὺς ἐπὶ γλώσσῃ μέγας βέβηκεν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 36. (458 B.C.) Varied in Frag. 176, to "A key stands guard upon my tongue" (ἀλλ' ἔστι κἀμοὶ κλῆς ἐπὶ γλώσσῃ φύλαξ).

He speaks well without a Bribe, if he has not an Ox (or a Piece of Money) in his Mouth big enough to make him hold his tongue.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 288. (1709)

<sup>6</sup> Heaven knows, Earth knows, you know, and I know. (T'ien chih, ti chih, ni chih, wo chih.)

YANG TSEN, a mandarin of the Han dynasty, when he was brought a bribe in the night and assured that no one would ever know. See SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2344.

BRICK

<sup>7</sup> He began to think that in making any Outlay for Lutie's Vocal Training he had bought a Gold Brick.

GEORGE ADZ, More Fables, p. 180. (1900)

Bunco men can clean him out in a gambling joint, but who ever heard of their selling him a gold brick?

S. E. WHITE, The Westerners, p. 94. (1901)

If you gave some fellows a talent wrapped in a napkin to start with in business, they would swap the talent for a gold brick and lose the napkin.

G. H. LOWMYER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 18. (1902)

The market fo' goldbricks is always firm and advancing'.

G. H. LORIMER, Jack Spurlock, p. 203. (1908)
What a gold brick he was!

O. HENRY, Madame Bo-Peep. (1910)
He had picked up a gold brick with the plating on it very thin.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON, Pitching. Ch. 2. (1912)

1 Father Dick . . . was a regular Brick.

R. H. BARRHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Brothers of Birchington. (1840)

You fellows worked like bricks.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Letters, May, 1856.

What a brick not to give us twenty lines to learn.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Ch. 7. (1857)

She believed Robert was no end of a brick.

MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne. Pt. i, ch. 18. (1870)

2 And Pharaoh commanded . . . Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves. (Nequaquam ultra dabit is paleas populo ad conficiendos lateres, sicut prius.)

Old Testament: Exodus, v, 7. (c. 550 B.C.)

They take away their straw, and compel them to make their number of brick.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 15. (1621) Referring to patrons.

It is an hard task to make bricks without straw.

F. P. VERNEY, Verney Memoirs, ii, 79. (1658)

I cannot make news without straw.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Miss Berrys, 8 June, 1791.

It is often good for us to have to make bricks without straw.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Hours in a Library. Vol. i, ch. 6, p. 271. (1874)

Your task from today will be to make bricks without straw.

MATILDA BETHAM-EDWARDS, Disarmed. Ch. 1. (1883)

Loved ones may not be able to make bricks without straw but often they don't need any straw to manufacture a bone to pick or a chip for their soft white shoulder.

OGDEN NASH, I Never Even Suggested It. (1938)

You can't expect him to make bricks without straw.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 91. (1941)

Bricks without straw. Omelettes without eggs. Is it reasonable?

FRANCIS BEEDING, Twelve Disguises, p. 5. (1942)

3 If folks is sassv, we walk right into 'em like a thousand o' brick.

CAROLINE KIRKLAND, Forest Life, i, 135. (1842)
He lit upon the upper town . . . "like a thousand of brick."

J. S. RONN, Squatter Life, p. 37. (1847)

I . . . am down on every opposer of the war "like a thousand of brick."

C. E. NORTON, Army Letters, p. 173. (1863)

You'll have the trustees down on you like a "thousand of bricks."

HAROLD FREDERIC, The Damnation of Theron Ware, p. 158. (1896)

He'd be down on me like a ton of bricks.

JOHN BENTLEY, Mr. Marlow Stops for Brandy, p. 52. (1940)

You fell for her like a ton of brick.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Tinsley's Bones, p. 168. (1942)

BRIDE

See also Marriage

4 An ugly bride may be praised as handsome in order to enhance the bridegroom's affection.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 17a. (c. 450)

5 Bride. A woman with a fine prospect of happiness behind her.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

6 When brides are new,
They are abashed to meet, the first night, lovers' view. (Le nuove spose Son la notte primiera vergognose.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto iii, st. 31. (c. 1250) Cummings, tr.

7 A fair bride is soon buskt [dressed, bedecked], and a short horse soon wispt.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 6. (c. 1595) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 228. (1678)

A bonny bride is soon busked. A short horse is soon whisked. What is of itself beautiful needs little adorning.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 1. (1721)

8 Now he in Charon's barge a bride doth seek.

JOSEPH HALL, Virgidemarium. Bk. iv. (1598)

9 Blest is the Bride, on whom the Sun doth shine.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Nuptial Song. St. 5. (1648)
Blessed is the bride that the sun shines on.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, i, 667. (1827)

Fair weather weddings make fair weather lives.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere. Act i, sc. 3. (1891) However, a medieval Latin proverb says, "Felici sponsae pluit in gremium" (Happy is the bride in whose lap rain falls).

10 Thus won I my blushing bride,
One happy summer day.

CHARLES MACKAY, Three Flowers. (1858)

11 Where you are Gaius, there am I Gaia. (ὅπου εἶμι Γάιος, ἐγὼ Γαία.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Roman Questions, 271E. Quoting a saying which every Roman bride was supposed to repeat as she entered her new home, meaning "Where you are lord and master, there I am lady and mistress."

The Latin is "Ubi tu Gaius, ego Gaia."
Why was it an old Roman custom to have a bride touch fire and water? Was it because fire is masculine and water feminine [the genders are ignis, aqua, not the Greek words]; or because fire purifies and water cleanses, and a married woman should remain pure and clean?

Also why do they not allow the bride to cross the threshold of the home herself, but lift her over? Is it because brides were originally carried off by force, or is it because they wish to make it appear that it is only under constraint they enter the house where they are [presumably] to lose their virginity?

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Roman Questions. Sec. 263E. (c. A. D. 95)

In Boetia they covered the bride with Asparagus, the nature of the which plant is, to bring sweete fruit out of a sharpe thorne, wher-by they noted, that although the virgin were somewhat shrewishe at the first, yet in time she myght become a sheepe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: Euphues to Philautus (Arber), p. 471 (1580)

1 The compliance of the bride soon brings loathing of the harlot. (Obsequio nuptae cito fit odium paelicis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 492. (c. 43 B. C.)

2 Now ripe for the bridal bed has grown virginity in full bloom. (Jam matura thoro plenis adoleverat annis Virginitatis.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 40. (1545)

Quoted as a "take off" on VERGIL, Aeneid, vii, 53: "Iam mature viro, iam plenis nubilis annis" (Ripe for a husband, of full age to be a bride).

3 In a bride's bed-speech put no trust.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 86. (c. 900)

4 A happy bridesmaid makes a happy bride.

ALFRED TENNYSON, The Bridesmaid. (1872)

Bridesmaids may soon become brides; one wedding brings on another.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

5 Resistance on the Wedding-Night
Is what our Maidens claim by Right.

SWIFT, Strephon and Chloe, l. 155. (1731)

6 The bride enters the bridal chamber, yet knows not what will befall her.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 11. (c. 1000)

According to the saying of Bensirah, the wise Jew, "The bride went into her chamber, and knew not what should befall her there."

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying, i, 303. (1651)

The bride goes to her marriage-bed, but knows not what shall happen to her.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 412. (1678)

BRIDEGROOM

7 He was not that night bent

To plaie the bridgroom. Alone to bed she went.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

8 As the bridegroom rejoices over the bride. (Gaudebit sponsus super sponsam.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxii, 5. (c. 725 B. C.)

9 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom. (ὁ ἔχων τὴν νύμφην νυμφὸς ἐστίν.)

New Testament: John, iii, 29. (c. A. D. 110) The Vulgate is, "Qui habet sponsam, sponsus est."

10 All the women we need are inside, said the bridegroom, and closed the door on the bride.

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xv, l. 77. (c. 270 B. C.)

BRIDGE

11 One who anticipates difficulty is told not to cross the bridge until he gets to it.

ADDY, Household Tales, p. 144. (1895)

Never cross a bridge until you reach one.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 252. (1920)

Never cross a bridge till you come to it.

R. L. GALES, Old-World Essays, p. 242. (1921)

We'll cross that bridge when we come to it.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Empty Tin, p. 13. (1941) RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 120. (1942)

The old bromide about not crossing your bridges till you come to them.

M. V. HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murders, p. 91. (1941)

He needn't worry about his fences till he came to them.

F. W. Crofts, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 105. (1941)

If all the bridges Aunt Mel had crossed before she came to them were laid end to end we'd have three complete spans across the Atlantic.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, The Singing Clock. Ch. 3 (1941)

There was no point in crossing bridges after having burned them.

MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 149. (1943)

I don't believe in crying over my bridge before I've eaten it.

NOEL COWARD, Private Lives. Act ii. (1930)

12 Bridges were made for wise men to walk over, and fools to ride under.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1678)

London bridge was made for wise men to pass over, and fools to pass under.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 213.

13 Let every man praise the bridge he goes over.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1678)

"I. e. Speak not ill of him who hath done you a courtesie, or whom you have made use of to your benefit."

Let every one praise the Bridge, that carries him over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3175. (1732)

It is strange men cannot praise the bridge they go over, or be thankful for favours they have had.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 368. (1740)

Praise the bridge that carried you over.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir at Law. Act i, sc. 1. (1797)

I am bound to praise the bridge that carried me over.

WALTER SCOTT. (1817) See LOCKHART, Life, iv, 59. Every one speaks well of the bridge which carries him over.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 10. (1850) Of course we speak well of the bridge that carries us over.

GEORGE DAWSON, Biographical Lectures, i, 22. (c. 1870)

1 To make a bridge of one's nose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 231. (1678) Ray explains that this means "to offer or pretend to do kindnesses to one, and then pass him by and do them to another; to serve himself of that which was intended for another."

You make a bridge of his nose, when you pass your next neighbour in drinking, or one is preferred over another's head.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. H8. (1690)

Pray, my lord, don't make a bridge of my nose.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Yesterday Abraham [Lincoln] paid us a visit, or rather he didn't. He reviewed all the other regiments in the brigade, but by some blunder of Colonel Stockton's he made a bridge of our nose.

C. L. NORTON, Army Letters, p. 148. (1863)

2 What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 318. (1598)

3 Peregrine . . . began to read Euclid . . . but he had scarcely advanced beyond the Pons Asinorum when his ardour abated.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Bk. i, ch. 18. (1751) The Pons Asinorum, or bridge of asses, is humorously applied to the fifth proposition of the first book of Euclid, where the diagram somewhat resembles a bridge, which beginners find it difficult to cross.

This bridge was the pons asinorum of the French, which the English never suffered them to cross.

RICHARD FORD, Handbook for Travellers in Spain. Bk. i, p. 217. (1845)

4 He burned his bridges while they were changing horses in midstream.

STANLEY WALKER, The Uncanny Knacks of Mr. Doherty (New Yorker, 12 July, 1941)

He is a master of cutting his bridges behind him.

F. L. COLLINS, Article, in Liberty Magazine, 2 Aug., 1941, p. 17. Referring to Charles Lindbergh.

Never burn your bridges till you come to them.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 86. (1942)

FOR A FLYING ENEMY A BRIDGE OF SILVER, see under ENEMY.

BRIDLE

5 They are like to bite o' the bridle.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 2. (1605) i.e. to fast.

His horse got a bite of cold bridle.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 161. (1721) That is, got neither hay nor oats.

6 Take with thy teeth the bridel faste.

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 3299. (c. 1365)

She taketh the brydell in the teeth,
And runth away with it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
See also under BIT.

7 Upon the bridel I chiewe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 929. (c. 1390) To be impatient of restraint; to champ the bit.

Smelling these dishes, they bite upon the bridle.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Cyteen and Uplondyskman, p. 41. (1514)

His Father . . . suffered him to bite upon the bridle awhile.

HUGH LATIMER, Seventh Sermon Before Edward VI. (1549)

Bite upon the bridle, that . . . he may be wiser afterward.

ARCHBISHOP GEORGE ABBOT, An Exposition Upon the Prophet Jonah, 342. (1600)

"Make the rogue bite upon the bridle," said I; "pay none of his bills."

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 25. (1709)

The minister was going to retire into his closet, to bite upon the bridle at liberty.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Gil Blas, iv, 248. (1750)

To bite on the bridle: to suffer or fare hard.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbyisms, p. 91. (1791)

8 Giving the bridle to a desperate man.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, Plutarch, 362. (1580)

Lay the brydle in their necke that they might go when they listed.

ARTHUR GOLDING, Calvin upon Deuteronomie, ii, 8. (1583)

9 It being proverbial, That 'tis a greater shame to bring home the Bridle than steal the Horse.

UNKNOWN, Church and Court of Rome, p. 8. (1674)

BRIER

10 It is good to nip the briar in the bud.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 211. (1721)

"It is good to prevent, by wholesome correction, the vicious inclinations of children."

Nip the Briar in the Bud.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3543. (1732)

11 Thou art a sure sprer at nede that leues a man stykkyng in the breres.

ROBERT WHITTINGTON, Vulgaria (E.E.T.S.), p. 98. (1520)

Doest thou not se me brought in the briers through thy devise?

NICOLAS UDALL, Flowers Out of Terence, fo.
18. (1533)

Leaving the Bishops, and such others, in the Briers.

JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs, i, 208. (1563)

Leaue me not now ith [in the] breares.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act iii, sc. 1. (1577)

To leave one in the briers (or suds).

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 166. (1670)

In the briers, in trouble.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew,
sig. B8. (1690)

BRIGHT

<sup>1</sup>
Brighte as any glas.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Knightes
Tale*, l. 1100. (c. 1386)

That shone as bright as ony somers day.

JOHN LYDGATE, Lyf of Our Lady, sig. F2. (c.
1440)

Bright as the sun on a summer's day.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, 51. (1846)

<sup>2</sup>
The saying of Dant, that only he is bright, who shineth of him selfe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk ii,
p. 181. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He is only bright that shines by himself.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 709. (1640)

<sup>3</sup>
All that's bright must fade,—
The brightest still the fleetest.

THOMAS MOORE, All That's Bright Must Fade.
(a. 1852)

BRISK

<sup>4</sup>
There is nothing so crouse [brisk] as a new washen louce.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 100. (1641)

Crouse as a new washen louce.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 203. (1670)

At last she sallies from the house,

As fine and brisk as a body-louse.

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. iv. (1670)

Brisk as a body-louse she trips.

JOHN GAY, Poems, ii, 279. (1720)

Brisk as bottled ale.

JOHN GAY, Poems, ii, 278. (1720) The Agreeable Companion, a "medley of wit and good-humour," published in 1745. has "Brisk as bottled beer." (P. 351)

As brisk as a Bee in a Tar-Pot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 666. (1732)

Parson Adams, who was as brisk as a bee.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. lii, ch. 2. (1742)

Brisk as a flea.

GEORGE COLMAN, jr., Poetical Vagaries. (1812)

"As crouse as a lop," as brisk as a flea.

ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, 40. (1855)

BRITTLE

<sup>5</sup>
Brotel as glas.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk.v., 1854. (1412)

More brittle than glass.

THOMAS BECON, New Catechisme, 437. (c.1550)

Her fortune being as brittle as her glasses.

THOMAS FULLER, Historie of the Holy Warre.
Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1639)

BROKER

<sup>6</sup>
An honest broker. (Ehrlicher Makler.)

OTTO VON BISMARCK, Speech, Reichstag, 19
Feb., 1878.

A broker is a man who runs your fortune into a shoestring.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT, after he had dropped some money in the stock market. (1930)

BROMIDE

<sup>7</sup>
Are you a bromide?

GELETT BURGESS. Title of essay. (Smart Set,
April, 1906.)

Bromides and Sulphites.

GELETT BURGESS. Two words coined in 1907, the first to indicate the majority of mankind, who all think and talk alike, the latter the select minority who "eliminate the obvious from their conversation."

BROOM

<sup>8</sup>
A bad broom leaves a dirty room.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 1. (1917)

<sup>9</sup>
As they say of a broom that it is dirty to keep other things clean.

J.W.CROKER, Croker Papers. Vol.ii, ch.14. (1829)

<sup>10</sup>
There is little for the rake to get after the bissome.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595)

There is little for the rake after the besom.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 259. (1678)

<sup>11</sup>
No besom can sweep so clean as to leave no crumme of dust behind it.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State: The Witch of Endor Bk. v, ch. 4. (1642)

<sup>12</sup>
The greene new brome sweepth cleene.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Like a new broome whiche sweepeth the house cleane.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 110. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Well I wot that a new broome sweepeth cleane.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 89. (1579)

I am the besom that must sweep the court clean.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 7, 34. (1590)

New brooms sweep clean.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies, iii, 77. (1867)

The new broom sweeps clean, too clean.

HELEN MACINNES, Assignment in Brittany, p.
241. (1942) A proverb in many languages.

The French say, "Un balai neuf un balai net"

(A new broom is a clean broom); the Italians, "Granata nuova spazza ben la casa"

(A new broom sweeps the house clean);

the Germans, "Neue Besen kehren gut"

(New brooms sweep well). There is a tradition that the proverb originated in the seventeenth century when the Dutch Admiral Tromp lashed a broom to the mast of his flagship to indicate his intention of sweeping the British off the seas. The British admiral retorted by lashing a horsewhip to his mast—an emblem which is said to have become the pennant.

<sup>1</sup> He shuts his doors against new brooms in defiance of the proverb.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act i, sc. 1. (1815)

<sup>2</sup> They have need of a besom that sweep the house with a turf.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 101. (1678)

<sup>3</sup> The new broom, that now sweepeth clean all discontents from thee, will soon grow stubbed.

BISHOP ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons. Vol i, p. 213. (1621) The Italians say "Granata nuova, tre di buona" (A new broom is good for three days).

New brooms make a little bustle at first; but the dirt will return, never fear.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Cozeners. Act i. (c. 1760)

<sup>4</sup> I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 396. (1590)

<sup>5</sup> A new broom sweeps clean, but the old one finds the corners.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 492. (1940) An Irish proverb, usually quoted, "the old one knows the corners."

BROTHER

<sup>6</sup> A brother's suff'rings claim a brother's pity.
JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc 1 (1712)

<sup>7</sup> Brother against brother. (κασιγνήτω κἀσιν.)
AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 674. (467 B.C.)

Brothers' wars are cruel. (χαλεποί πόλεμοι ἀδελφῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Fr. 965. (c. 415 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Politics, vii, 6, 4.

So great is the strife between brothers. (Tanta est discordia fratrum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 60. (A.D. 7)

It is rare to find affection among brothers. (Fratrum quoque gratia rara est.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 145. (A.D. 7)

When brothers have once broken the bonds of Nature, they can come together again only with difficulty, and even if they do, their reconciliation bears with it a filthy hidden sore of suspicion.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Brotherly Love. Sec. 481C. (c. A.D. 95)

Rut, when one has broken the bonds of nature, there is nothing that can reunite those whom knots so strong could not hold together. One hates with excess when one hates a brother.

(Mais, quand de la nature on a brisé les chaînes, Cher Attale, il n'est rien qui puisse réunir Ceux que les nœuds si forts n'ont pas su retenir: L'on hait avec excès lorsque l'on hait un frère.)

RACINE, La Thébaïde, ou Les Frères Ennemis. Act iii, sc. 6. (1664)

The rage between savage beasts is not so great, as the hate and rancour between brothers living in dissention.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 84. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Discords between brothers are most bitter. (Fratrum inter se irae sunt acerbissimae.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 50.

(1623) Erasmus goes on to say that history supplies many examples of the truth of this adage: Cain and Abel, Romulus and Remus, Jacob and Esau, and so on. Taverner, fo. 10, translates and comments upon it.

The Wrath of Brothers is fierce and devilish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4853

(1732) The Japanese do not wholly agree with all this, for they have a proverb, "Brothers quarrel like thieves inside a house, but outside their swords leap out in each other's defence."

<sup>8</sup> Cleric before and Lay behind;

A lawless linsey-woolsey brother.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1226. (1663)

Here's the sweet brotherhood of the proverb! (Hoc est, quod dicitur, illud | fratrum vere dulce sodalitium.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode c, l. 3. (c. 57 B.C.)

The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man.

JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE, Statement of Faith. (c. 1850) The first of the "Five Points of Unitarianism."

<sup>10</sup> All within the four seas are brethren.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) See DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 492. A variation of the still older Chinese proverb, "Wu 'hu ssü 'hai tu shih p'êng yu" (Men are brothers the world over).

Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham. (ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, υἱοὶ γένους Ἀβραάμ.)

New Testament: Acts, xiii, 26. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Viri fratres filii generis Abraham."

Al er we brither.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 23873. (c. 1300)

Adam's sons are my brethren.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 67. (1599)

Man to man, the world o'er

Shall brothers be for a' that.

ROBERT BURNS, A Man's a Man. (1795)

Am I not a man and a brother?

UNKNOWN, Motto, on the seal of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. Approved by a Committee of the Society, 16 Oct., 1787. The design, a kneeling slave in chains, was shortly after produced as a cameo, black on white, by Wedgwood, and became extremely popular as a personal ornament.

Read the great charter on his brow,

I am a man, a brother now.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Poems on the Abolition of the Slave Trade, i, 2. (1809) "Man and brotherism" became a taunt. "Are these the sentiments of man and brotherism?"—Pall Mall Gazette, 27 March, 1865.

1 Through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish? (ἀπόλλυται γὰρ ὁ ἀσθενῶν ἐν τῇ σῇ γνώσει, ὁ ἀδελφός;) New Testament: I Corinthians, viii, 11. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Et peribit infirmus in tua scientia frater?" "Weaker brethren," which is the phrase used from Tindale on to translate the Greek ἀσθενής, ἀσθενῶν, was applied by Saint Paul to believers whose scruples, though unsound, should be treated with tenderness. Hence applied to the more timorous members of any party.

I do as little as I can on Sunday, because of the weaker brethren.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men. Ch. 8. (1882).

2 The brother would have his sister rich any way, but at his charges.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Frère. (1611) The Brother had rather see his Sister rich, than make her so.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4435. (1732)

3 Am I my brother's keeper? (μὴ φύλαξ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ μου εἰμι ἐγώ;) Old Testament: Genesis, iv, 9. (c. 800 B. C.)

The Greek is Philo's, Quod Deterius Potiori Insidiari Soleat, 57. The Vulgate is, "Custos fratris mei sum ego?"

When we disavow

Being keeper to our brother, we're his Cain.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 467. (1857)

4 Brothers stand us in the like stead as our eyes, hands, and feete do.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 86. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Brothers resemble hands and feet. (Hsiung ti ju shou tsu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2245. (1875) Repeated many times in Chinese books.

Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism. (1870)

5 He which hath no care of his brothers honour, hath no care of his owne.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 88. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As one hande washeth another, and both of them the face, so one brother ought to support another, and all of them to procure the honour of their house.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 92.

As of the twoo dogs which Lycurgus brought before Spartanes, which though they came both of one lytter, yet the one ran to the potage pot, the other at the hare: so of two brothers, the one shalbee more gentle then the other, by howe much hee shalbe more learned vertuous, and placed in higher degree.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 185.

6 Let brotherly love continue. (ἡ φιλαδελφία μενέτω.) New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 1. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Charitas fraternitatis maneat in vobis."

7 A noble pair of brothers. (Par nobile fratrum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 243. (35 B. C.) Her name was Margaret Lucas, youngest sister to the Lord Lucas of Colchester, a Noble Familie: for all the brothers were valiant and all the sisters virtuous.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, Westminster Abbey. (1674)

8 I am a brother to dragons. (Fratr fui draconum.)

Old Testament: Job, xxx, 29. (c. 350 B. C.) "A Brother to Dragons," title of a novel by Amélie Rives. (1888)

Brother of Religioun.

DAVID LYNDESAY, The Monarche, l. 5850. (1552) The five brothers of the Rose.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Le Gobelet d'une Rose. (1611) The five-leaved cap.

Brothers in arms.

MASSINGER, Maid of Honour. Act v, sc. 2. (1632) I am a Brother of the Angle.

WALTON, The Compleat Angler, p. 5. (1653)

Brothers of the Blade.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., The Visions of . . . Villegas, 105. (1668)

Brother of the Quill.

UNKNOWN, Observations on "Curse ye Meroz" 7. (1680)

The little brown brother.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, in 1900, referring to the Filipinos.

He may be a brother of Big Bill Taft,

But he ain't no brother of mine.

R. F. MORRISON, Little Brown Brother. (1902)

9 If it wasn't you, it was your brother. (Si ce n'est toi, c'est donc ton frère.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Loup et l'Agneau. Bk. i, fab. 10. The wolf and the lamb are drinking at a stream, and the wolf accuses the lamb of muddying the water he is drinking. The lamb points out that that is impossible, since it is drinking some distance downstream from the wolf. Then the wolf says, "Well, anyway, you've been slandering me for the past year." "But I wasn't even born a year ago," says the lamb. "If it wasn't you, it was your brother," says the wolf, and kills the lamb and eats it. The saying became proverbial.

1 The amiable age when man said to man,
Let us be brothers—or I'll knock you on the head.

(L'amiable siècle où l'homme dit à l'homme,
Soyons frères,—ou je t'assomme.)

CHARLES FRANÇOIS LEBRUN, Sur la Fraternité ou la Mort. (1795) "Fraternité ou la mort" (Fraternity or death) was the watchword of the French revolution of 1789.

2 A brother is a friend given by nature. (Un frère est un ami donné par la nature.)

GABRIEL MARIE LEGOUVÉ, Maximes. (c. 1800)

3 Sweet amongst brethren is the love of unity.
(ἡδὺν γ' ἐν ἀδελφοῖς ἐστὶν ὁμονοίας ἔρως.)

MENANDER, Fragments, Frag. 809 K. (c. 300 B. C.)
Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. (Ecce quam bonum, et quam iucundum habitare fratres in unum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxiii, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)
Yu thought if any one in the empire were drowned, it was as if he drowned him. Tseih thought that if any one in the empire suffered hunger, it was as if he famished him.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. ii, ch. 29,
sec. 4. (c. 300 B. C.)

I am a man, and nothing human can be alien to me. (Homo sum, humani nil a me alienum puto.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 77. (163
B. C.) La Fontaine puts the line into French:
"Je suis homme, et ne tiens rien d'humain hors de moi."

Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not? (τίς ἀσθενεῖ, καὶ οὐκ ἀσθενῶ; τίς σκανδαλίζεται, καὶ οὐκ ἐγὼ πυροῖμαι;)

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 29. (c. A. D.
55) The Vulgate is, "Quis infirmatur, et ego non infirmor? quis scandalizatur, et ego non uror?" Quoted by ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles, xxiv. 2.

Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. (ἐφ' ὅσον ἐποιήσατε ἐπὶ τοῖς τῶν ἀδελφῶν μου τῶν ἐλαχίστων, ἐμεῖς ἐποιήσατε.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 40. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Quamdiu fecistis uni ex his fratribus meis minimis, mihi fecistis," often compressed into a Latin proverb. "Quod eorum minimis, mihi."

Whoever degrades another degrades me.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself, Sec. 24. (1855)
Not till the sun excludes you do I exclude you.

WALT WHITMAN, To a Common Prostitute.
While there is a lower class I am in it, while there is a criminal element I am of it, and while there is a soul in prison I am not free.

EUGENE DEBS, Speech, during his trial at Canton, Ohio, June 16, 1918

4 Below the belt all men are brothers. Man has never known solitude except in the upper regions.

HENRY MILLER, The Cosmological Eye, p. 151.
(1939)

5 Verily, the name of brother is a glorious name, and full of loving kindness. (C'est, à la vérité, un beau nom et plein de dilection, que le nom de frère.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580)

6 A brother is born for adversity. (Frater in angustiis comprobatur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)

In adversity a man shall know who is his brother.

MILES COVERDALE, Proverbs, xvii, 17. (1535)

Bare is back without brother behind it.

E. R. EDDISON, The Worm Ouroboros. Ch. 7
(1926)

7 The brother whose aims are relative to himself alone is neither brother nor relative.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apol. 44. (c. 1258)

8 Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 2, 110.
(1601)

9 The younger brothers (according to the old wives' tales) always prove the wisest men.

EDWARD SHARPEHAM, Cupid's Whirligig. Act iii,
l. 42. (1607)

The younger brother hath the more wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1678)

The Younger Brother. Some account him the better Gentleman of the two, because sonne to the more ancient Gentleman.

FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 15. (1642)

The younger brother is the ancienter Gentleman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1678)

The younger Brother, the better Gentleman.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 131.

(1709) A pure English proverb, as Dykes says, founded upon the fact that younger brothers have to make their own way in the world, while the eldest "lives like a Dormouse at Home."

You are a younger brother.—Well, madam, the younger brother is the better gentleman.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

10 His brether als him-self he loued.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 1210. (c. 1300)

11 Drawer (quoth he) thou muste not thinke to make a younger brother of me.

UNKNOWN, Discoverie of Knights of the Poste.
Sig. C2. (1597)

He has made a younger brother of him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1678)

BROWN

12 His palfrey was as broun as is a berye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 207.

(c. 1386) "Broun as a berie" is repeated in
The Cokes Tale, l. 4. Strangely enough, in spite of the fact that this is one of the best known of proverbial comparisons, few if any berries are really brown.

Thy nose is as brown as a berry.

JOHN TATHAM, Love Crowns the End. (1640)

As brown as a berry with sun.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters, i, 173. (1874)

<sup>1</sup> "Done up brown" as they say on the Bowery.

LORENZO DOW, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 188. (c. 1849)

They are doing it up brown and no mistake.

NELSON KINGSLEY, Diary, p. 160. (1850)

We do it up here as brown as they do it anywhere.

A. O. HALL, Manhattaner, p. 82. (1851) "To do a thing up brown" is to do it thoroughly, to perfection.

<sup>2</sup> Ha! browne done!

UNKNOWN, John Bon and Mast Person, l. 162.

(c. 1550) See W. C. HAZLITT, Early English Poetry. Vol. iv, p. 16.

He'll come out done so ex-ceedin' brown that his most formiliar friends won't know him.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 43. (1837)

We are all of us done so uncommonly brown!

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Execution. (1840)

I thought he was doin' up the rascal very brown.

UNKNOWN, Arkansas Doctor, p. 162. (1851)

I'll do you up brown.

WILL N. HARBEN, Abner Daniel, p. 55. (1902)

"To do a person up brown" means to deceive, to take in.

I see you've done yourself up pretty brown

ELLERY QUEEN, The New Adventures of Ellery Queen: The Trojan Horse. (1940) Have got yourself into a hole.

BUCK

<sup>3</sup> Jimmy can afford to buy wine at four bucks a throw.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 106. (1896) Dollars.

"There's my eight hundred bucks," he said.

J. F. WILSON, Land Claimers, p. 2. (1911)

<sup>4</sup> A large assembly of young fellows whom they call bucks.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia, x, 2. (1751) The New Canting Dictionary (1725) explains, "A Bold Buck, is sometimes used to signify a forward daring Person of either Sex."

The dashing young buck, driving his own equipage.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller, i, 341. (1824)

I remember you a buck of bucks when that coat first came out to Calcutta.

W.M. THACKERAY, The Newcomes, i, 82. (1854)

<sup>5</sup> No matter how I make an honest rise, I'm sure to "buck it off" at farrer [faro].

J. J. HOOPER, Widow Rugby's Husband, p. 20. (1851)

One who boldly bucked the tiger.

C. D. FERGUSON, Experiences of a Forty-Niner, p. 136. (1888)

He had already collected everything that was due this week and lost it bucking the tiger.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 188. (1902)

BUCKET

<sup>6</sup> Why can't a man buck up?

J. C. NEAL, in Graham's Magazine, Jan., 1844, p. 38.

You are out of place among the little fellows. Buck up!

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 153. (1902)

Buck up and go tell the yarn to the crowd.

R. D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean, p. 152. (1921)

<sup>7</sup> The deer . . . was a buck of the first head.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 10. (1594)

He's like a buck of the first head. Brisk, pert, forward.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678) The Returne from Parnassus (1606) explains that "A bucke of the first yeare is a Fawne; the second yeare a Pricket; the third yeare a Sorell; the fourth yeare a Soare; the fift a Bucke of the first head; the sixth yeare a compleat Bucke."

<sup>8</sup> I reckon I can't call my hand. Ante and pass the buck.

MARK TWAIN, Roughing It. Ch. 47. (1872)

They resort to the bold and ludicrous experiment of "passing the buck." The buck is any inanimate object, usually a knife or pencil, which is thrown into a jackpot and temporarily taken by the winner of the pot.

J. W. KELLER, Draw Poker, p. 38. (1887)

The Deputy will pass the buck down to me

WILL IRWIN, The Red Button, p. 341. (1912)

Will shift the responsibility.

I reckoned they'd pass the buck to you.

C. E. MULFORD, Johnny Nelson, p. 60. (1920)

It would suit me right down to the ground if I could pass the buck to you.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Design for Murder, p. 194. (1941) See also TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 189.

All this crowd is a great bunch of buck-passers.

LUCY CORES, Painted for the Kill, p. 232. (1943)

BUCKET

<sup>9</sup> Now up, now down, as boket in a welle.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 675 (c. 1386)

Now is this golden crown like a deep well

That owes two buckets, filling one another,

The emptier ever dancing in the air,

The other down, unseen and full of water.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iv, 1, 184. (1596)

In Bath a wanton wife did dwell,

She had two buckets to a well.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 76. (c. 1620)

The three lives went up and down before him like buckets in a well.

R. L. STEVENSON, Ebb-Tide. Ch. 8. (1893)

<sup>10</sup> Defend me, therefore, . . . from the toll Of dropping buckets into empty wells,

And growing old in drawing nothing up!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 187. (1784)

He has spent all his life in letting down buckets into empty wells; and he is frittering away his age in trying to draw them up again.

SYDNEY SMITH, paraphrasing Cowper. (a. 1845) See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 259.

<sup>1</sup> He was sore put about because Hester had gi'en him the bucket.

MRS. GASKELL, Sylvia's Lovers, ii, 122. (1863)
Given him the mitten, dismissed him.

<sup>2</sup> The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket, The moss-covered bucket that hangs in the well!

SAMUEL WOODWORTH, The Bucket. (c. 1835)

To KICK THE BUCKET, see under KICK.

BUCKLE

<sup>3</sup> Squire South buckled too, to assist his friend.
JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull (1727), p. 107. (1712)

I have shook off idleness, and begun to buckle to.

EDMUND BURKE, Correspondence, i, 21. (1746)
Chiquita buckled right down to her work.

BRET HARTE, Chiquita. (1871)

I buckled in and read all those books.

MARK TWAIN, A Tramp Abroad. Ch. 20. (1880)
In a few days the boys buckled down to hard work.

ELLA L. DORSEY, Midshipman Bob, ii, viii, 188. (1886)

<sup>4</sup> Little and little he decaied so long,
Tyll he at length came to buckle and bare thong.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
"To come to buckle and thong," to be stripped of everything.

His mother and I were nayle and flesh, buckle and thong.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina. Act iii. (1631)
Hold him to it buckle and thong.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1678)
He'll bring buckle and thong together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2422. (1732)

IF ANGRY, TURN THE BUCKLE OF YOUR GIRDLE. see under ANGER

BUG

<sup>5</sup> Thou shalt not nede to be afraied for eny bugges by night.

MILES COVERDALE, Psalms of David, xci. 5. (1535) Bugges: hobgoblins, bogeys.

A bug meet only to fray Children.

JOHN JEWEL, Defense of an Apologie, 285. (1565)
For all, that here on earth we dreadfull hold.

Be but as bugs to fearen babes withall.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene Bk. ii. canto xii, st. 25. (1589)

Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v. 2. 2. (1591)

Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i. 2, 211. (1594)

<sup>6</sup> 'Twixt de bug en de bee-martin 'tain't hard ter tell w'ich gwineter git kotch.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>7</sup> I'm nine times as good a man as he is or any bug of his country.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker. July 18 (1771)

You must see the magic dress of this Indian "big bug."

GEORGE CATLIN, North American Indians. Vol. i, p. 40. (1832)

We'll go to the Lord's house . . . pick out the big bugs.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 24. (1843)

For the biggest bugs of the Papist set
Were not convinced by their primate yet.

CHARLES A. BRISTED, The Upper Ten Thousand, ix, 207. (1852) The Dictionary of American English notes that "big bug," used to denote a person of importance, has been in common use in the United States since 1830

They don't know who the big bugs are.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, N or M? p. 59. (1941)

He's rather a big bug in his way.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Evil Under the Sun, p. 113. (1941)

SNUG AS A BUG, see under SNUG.

BUGBEAR

<sup>8</sup> Imagined spirits that nurces fraie their babes withall to make them leave crying, as we say bug-beare, or else rawe head and bloodie bone
JOHN FLORIO, Worlde of Wordes: Mani. (1598)

But now I look

Like Bloody-Bone and Raw-Head, to fright children.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetesse. Act iv, sc. 5 (1622)

Tell a raw-head-and-bloody-bone story about a footpad.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 19. (1824)

<sup>9</sup> It is the test of reason and refinement to be able to exist without bugbears.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Emancipation of the Jews (1819)

<sup>10</sup> No fustian about churchyards, no bugaboo tales.

E. A. POE, The Premature Burial. (1843)

Desperate doings with a bauble-sword,
And other bugaboo-and-baby-work.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book Pt. v, l. 949. (1872)

<sup>11</sup> At the worst it is but a bug-beare.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, iii, 317. (1580)

Meare bugge-beares to scare boys.

THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse, 74. (1592)

Like Bug-bears would eat up crying boys.

EDWARD TOPSELL, Historie of Foure-Footed Beastes, 353. (1607)

To the world no bugbear is so great
As want of figure and a small estate.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, i, 1, 67. (1733)

The bugbear behind him is after him still.

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsbys Legends: Look at the Clock. (1842)

BUILDING

See also Architecture

<sup>1</sup> If thou wilt build, let necessitie induce thee thereto, and not lust of howsing. (Tu ne dois point edifier se tu nen as necessite, car plus edifie lomme et plus vouldroit edifier.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

Inordinate building causith hastie sale of placys. (Souvent advient que il convient vendre ou alier les edifices pour paier ceulx qui les ont fais.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige.

A performed tower and a bare coffyr make, over late, the great builder wyse.

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige.

<sup>2</sup> He who builds upon another's ground, loses his mortar and his stone. (Chi fabbrica su quel d'altri, perde la calcina e le pietre.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 176.

The French have a jingle, "Qui bâtit hors de ses terres, | Perd son mortier et ses pierres," which says exactly the same thing.

<sup>3</sup> A high building a low foundation.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605) RAY, 103. (1670)

High Buildings have a low Foundation.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2499. (1732)

No good Building without a good Foundation.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3578. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Old houses mended,
Cost little less than new, before they're ended.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Double Gallant: Prologue, l. 15. (1707)

<sup>5</sup> The building of houses and making of feasts, are unlimited wasters of a man's substance.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Abandon. (1611)

Building and marrying of children are great wasters.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 12. (1640)

Biggings, and bairns marrying are great wasters.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 60. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> Men who love building are their own undoers, and need no other foes. (οὗτοι φιλοκοδόμους αὐτοὺς ὄψ' αὐτῶν καταλύσθαι χωρὶς ἀταγωνιστῶν.)

MARCUS CRASSUS, Maxim. (c. 50 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Crassus, ii, 5.

To build many houses is the readiest road to poverty. (ἄμαρα πάλλ' ἀνοικοδομεῖν | ἀπρωτὶ εἰς πείνην ὁδὸν ἀνοικοδομεῖν.)

UNKNOWN. Greek Anthology, Bk. x, epig. 119.

The proverb is that building is a theife, because it makes us lay out more money than wee thought on.

JOHN MANNINGHAM, Diary, p. 9. (1602) The Italians say, "Chi edifica, sua borsa purifica" (He who builds cleans out his purse); the Germans, "Bauen und Borgen, Ein Sack voll Sorgen" (Building and borrowing, A sack full of sorrowing).

Building is a great impoverishing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 461. (1640)

Building is sweet impoverishing.

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations. (1824) Proverbs are all for letting the other fellow do the building, and then buying the house. "He who buys a house ready wrought, | Has many a pin and nail for nought," for example, or, as the French say, "Il faut acheter maison fait, et femme à faire" (A house ready made and a wife to make).

To build is to be robbed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 62. (1758)

<sup>7</sup> He builded better than he knew.

R. W. EMERSON, The Problem. (1846)

<sup>8</sup> He that repairs not a part, builds all.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 346. (1640)

The charges of building, and making of gardens are unknown.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 414

<sup>9</sup> A man rich in substance, and beloved of all men; for he dwelt in a house by the high-road and was wont to give entertainment to all. (ἀφνειὸς βίβτοιο, φίλος δ' ἦν ἀνθρώποισι· πάντας γὰρ φιλέσσκεν ὅδῳ ἐπὶ οἰκίᾳ ναίων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 14. (c. 850 B.C.)

He that builds a house by the highway side. it is either too high or too low.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1678)

The Germans say, "Wer an dem Wege bauet der hat viele Meister" (He who builds by the wayside has many masters), and "Wer da bauet an der Strassen, muss die Leute reden lassen" (Who builds on the street must let people talk). The Spaniards say, "Quien en la plaza á labrar se mete, muchos adestadores tiene" (He who goes to work in the public square will have many advisers).

Let me live by the side of the road,

And be a friend to man.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The House by the Side of the Road. (1897)

<sup>10</sup> Tenants who have taken up this proverb. Botch and sit, Build and flit.

WILLIAM LAWSON, A New Orchard and Garden, p. 9. (1618)

Patch, and long sit; Build, and soon flit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

<sup>11</sup> It is easier to tear down than to build up. (Il est plus facile démolir que bastir.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 307. (1859). See also under CRITICISM.

<sup>1</sup> Which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? (τίς γάρ ἐξ ὑμῶν θέλων πύργον οἰκοδομήσαι οὐχὶ πρῶτον καθίσας ψηφίσει τὴν δαπάνην, εἰ ἔχει εἰς ἀπαρτισμόν;)

New Testament: Luke, xiv, 28. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Quis enim ex vobis volens turrim aedificare, non prius sedens computat sumptus, qui necessarii sunt, si habeat ad perficiendum?"

If you think of building a tower, first reckon up its cost. (Aedificaturus turrem futuri operis sumptus supputa.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistles. Epis. xiv, sec. 9. (A. D. 374)

When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model; And when we see the figure of the house, Then must we rate the cost of the erection.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 3, 41. (1598)

He beginneth to build too soon that hath not the money to finish it.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 1. (1633)

The man who builds and wants wherewith to pay,

Provides a home from which to run away.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame, i, 171. (1725)

He that builds before he counts the cost, acts foolishly; and he that counts before he builds, finds that he did not count wisely.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

Who borrows to build, builds to sell.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 114. (1902) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>2</sup> Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock (ὅστις ᾠκοδόμησεν αὐτοῦ τὴν οἰκίαν ἐπὶ τῇ πέτρᾳ): And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand (ἐπὶ τὴν ἄμμον): And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it (καὶ ἦν ἡ πτώσις αὐτῆς μεγάλη).

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 24-27. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Omnis ergo, qui audit verba mea haec, et facit ea, assimilabitur viro sapienti, qui aedificavit domum suam supra petram, et descendit pluvia, et venerunt flumina, et flaverunt venti, et irruerunt in domum illam, et non cecidit: fundata enim erat super petram. Et omnis, qui audit verba mea haec, et non facit ea, similis erit viro stulto, qui aedificavit domum suam super arenam: et descendit pluvia, et venerunt flumina, et flaverunt venti, et irruerunt in domum illam, et cecidit, et fuit ruina illius magna." In Luke vi, 47-49, the same parable is related in somewhat different words. In both instances, Christ was quoting an old Greek proverb, εἰς ἄμμον οἰκοδομεῖς (To build upon sand).

Who-so that buildeth his house al of salwes [willow-twigs, reeds] . . .

Is worthy to been hanged on the galwes.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 655. (c. 1386)

Who builds his house on sands . . . Deserves a fool's cap.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 347. (1714)

Safe upon the solid rock the ugly houses stand; Come and see my shining palace built upon the sand.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, A Few Figs from Thistles: Second Fig. (1921)

<sup>3</sup> They gave themselves over to pleasure as though they would die tomorrow, and built as if they would never die. (Ils s'abandonnoient aux delices comme s'ils avoient lendemain à mourir, et bastissoient comme si jamais ils ne devoient mourir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1580) Quoting the remark of Empedocles about the Agrigentins.

Building as if they were to live forever.

LEIGH HUNT, A Jar of Honey from Mount Hybla, iii, 33. (1848)

<sup>4</sup> The spirit of building is come upon him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> Fools build houses and wise men buy them

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670)

Fools build Houses; and wise Men enjoy them

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1573. (1732)

Fools build houses and wise men inhabit them

R. S. HAWKER. (c. 1860) See BYLES, Life, p. 82.

The adage says that fools build houses for other men to live in.

W. F. BUTLER, Autobiography. Ch. 19. (1911)

Fools build for wise men. (Les fous bâtissent pour les sages.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 369. (1856)

<sup>6</sup> To build a mansion or a country house, to adorn it with statues, tapestries and other works of art, to make everything in it better worth seeing than its owner, is not to make one's riches an honor, but to be a disgrace to them.

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch. 8. (c. 46 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Dip not thy finger in the mortar, nor seek thy penny in water.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 28. (1639) Do not dabble in building, or shipping.

A wise man ought never to put his finger into Morter.

SIR BALTHASAR GERBIER, Summary Description, p. 3. (1660)

He that once gets his fingers in the mud, can hardly get them out again.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 171. (1721)

You are come to a sad dirty house; I am sorry for it, but we have had our hands in the mortar.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

BULL

<sup>1</sup> He bellowed like a bull whose throat has just been cut. (ἐρωθόρυξε ταῦρος <ὡς> νεοφάρυξ.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 159, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.)

He bellows like a bull, but is as weak as a bul-rush.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 142. (1639)

<sup>2</sup> Two boles, maked al of bras, That spitten fyr.
CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women, l. 1432. (c. 1385)

Tortures nor bulls of brass,

Should draw it from me.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act iii, sc. 1. (1611) Perillos of Athens made a brazen bull for Phalaris, Tyrant of Syracuse, intended for the execution of criminals, who were shut in the belly and roasted to death by means of fires built beneath it. Phalaris thought the invention ingenious, and tested it on Perillos himself.

All manner of tortures, brazen bulls, racks, wheels.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. i, mem. i, subs. 1. (1621)

<sup>3</sup> A pig among roses. (ὡς ἰὰ ῥόδων.)

CRATES, Neighbors. Frags. (c. 450 B.C.) Also proverbial are the phrases, ὡς ἐκώμασεν (The pig ran amuck), and βοῦν ἐν πόλει (The ox in the city).

The bull peeping in. (βουὺν παρὰκρυψίς.)

MENANDER, Fragments. (c. 300 B.C.) Cited by ZENOBIUS, Adagia, v, 39.

Whatever it is that smashes, Mrs. T. always swears it was the most valuable thing in the room. I'm like a bull in a china-shop.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 15. (1834) This seems to be the earliest recorded use of the phrase.

Lawless's tastes and habits being about as congenial to the atmosphere of a ball-room, as those of a bull to the interior of a china-shop.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 13. (1850)

Comparing himself to a bull in a china-shop.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 41.

On went the giant . . . like a bull in a china-shop.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Water-Babies. Ch. 8. (1863) Floundering and romping through the arts, . . . very much as a bull through a china-shop.

HENRY JAMES, Letters, I, 349. (1899)

[He] will go blundering in like your proverbial bull in a china-shop.

DENNIS WHEATLEY, The Scarlet Impostor, p. 222. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> A mad Bull is not to be ty'd up with a Pack-thread.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 266. (1732)

Mad kings and mad bulls are not to be held by treaties and packthread.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

<sup>5</sup> Accordyng to the old prouerbe, let him take the bull that stole the calf.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 406. (1548)

HE THAT BULLS THE COW MUST KEEP THE CALF, see under BASTARD.

<sup>6</sup> I haue read, that the Bull being tyed to the Figge tree, looseth his strength.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 78. (1579)

<sup>7</sup> Strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round. They gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion. (Tauri pingues obsederunt me. Aperuerunt super me os suum, sicut leo rapiens et rugiens.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxii, 12-13. (c. 350 B.C.) Hence the proverbial, "To roar like a bull of Bashan."

O that I were

Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar

The horned herd! for I have savage cause.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 13, 126. (1606)

By the roarin' Bulls of Bason, I'd make you obey my orders.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 4. (1843)

When you came in I was roaring like the bull of Bashan.

FOOTNER, Death of a Saboteur, p. 65. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> I am as strong as a bull moose and you can use me to the limit.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Letter to Mark Hanna, at opening of the Presidential campaign in 1900. See BISHOP, Roosevelt and His Times, i, 139.

It takes more than that to kill a Bull Moose.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at Milwaukee, Wis., 14 Oct., 1912. Referring to the attempt which had been made that day to assassinate him, when he had been wounded in the chest.

Bull Moose, an emblem of the Progressive Party in 1912, originated from the statement of President Roosevelt, made upon his arrival at Chicago just before the Republican convention, that he felt like a "Bull Moose."

E. C. SMITH, Dictionary of American Politics: Bull Moose. The first discovered newspaper use of the term was in the New York Tribune, 26 June, 1912.

<sup>9</sup> He had not, as the phrase goes, taken the bull by the horns.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 25. (1816) To "take the bull by the horns" is to meet a difficulty rather than evade it.

It would never do to take the bull by the horns in that manner.

JOHN GALT, The Provost. Ch. 28. (1822)

He took the bull fairly by the horns.

LORD LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. II, ch. 1. (1849)

I take the bull by the horns.

LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854.

Nora would have faced the difficulty, and taken the bull by the horns.

TROLLOPE, He Knew He Was Right. (Ch. 91. (1869))

I have often been told to be bold, and take the bull by the horns.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 11. (1869)

We decided to take the bull by the horns.

CLYDE FITCH, Captain Jinks. Act. i. (1901)

1 It is no Bull, to speak of a common Peace, in the place of War.

JOHN SELDEN, Laws of England, ii, 11. (1649)

I confess it was what the English call a bull.

ALEXANDER POPE, Letter. (1711) Works, v, 174. There is one distinguishing peculiarity of the Irish bull—its horns are tipped with brass [i. e. with impudence or assurance].

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Essay on Irish Bulls. Ch. 9. (1802) "Bull" had been used to describe a self-contradictory proposition long before it was associated with the Irish.

A bull is an apparent congruity, and real incongruity of ideas, suddenly discovered.

SYDNEY SMITH. (1803) Works (1867), i. 69.

I had committed a bull myself, by intruding.

S. A. HAMMETT, Captain Priest, p. 226. (1855) He told me that you were the fellow who had made the bull.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 70. (1902)

2 As lawless as a town-bull.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 286. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 706 (1732)

No law for a town's bull.

HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 454. (1886)

BULLET

3 Better pointed bullets than pointed speeches. (Lieber Spitzkugeln als Spitzreden.)

OTTO VON BISMARCK, Speech, during the Hesse-Cassel insurrection of 1850.

4 Now he is thought the most unfortunate, and cursed in his mother's womb, who dyeth by great shot.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, Concerning Britain (1870), p. 225. (1614)

Who was killed by a cannon bullet was curst in his mother's belly.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 6. (1659) RAY. English Proverbs, p. 110. (1670)

Yet do I not believe what soldiers commonly say, 'that he was cursed in his mother's belly, who is killed with a cannon.'

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Sussex, lii, 241. (1662)

He was cursed in his mother's belly that was killed by a cannon-bullet.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ix. (1738)

5 Every bullet hath a lighting place.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Fruits of Warre, St. 67. (1575)

Every shot has its commission, d'ye see.

SMOLLETT, The Reprisal. Act ii, sc. 8. (1757) King William was of an opinion, an' please your honour, quoth Trim, that everything was predestined for us in this world; insomuch, that he would often say to his soldiers, that 'every ball had its billet.'

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. viii, ch. 19. (1759)

He never received one wound. So true is the old saying of King William, that 'every bullet has its billet.'

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 6 June, 1765. This is the accepted form of the saying, which tradition has always attributed to William of Orange. No real authority for the attribution has ever been discovered, but it was in keeping with his character, and he may very possibly have said it, or something like it. The bullet destined for him found its billet, when he fell at the hands of an assassin in 1584.

Each bullet has got its commission,

And when our time's come we must go.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Benevolent Tar. (c. 1800) Its billet every bullet has.

THOMAS HOOD, Waterloo Ballad. (c. 1830)

Heaven knows its time; the bullet has its billet, Arrow and javelin each its destined purpose.

WALTER SCOTT, Count Robert of Paris. Ch. 25. heading. (1831) Credited to "Old Play."

It is an established axiom that "every bullet has its billet."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 19. (1837)

6 Bullets through good people's hearts make a long echo.

STEFAN HEYM, Hostages, p. 324. (1942)

BULLY

7 Though she be sunwhat olde,
It is myne owne swete bullye,
My muskyne and my bullye.

JOHN BALE, Three Lawes, l. 475. (1538) A term of endearment and familiarity, originally applied to either sex, but later usually to men.

What sayest thou, bully Bottom?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 1, 8. (1596)

From heartstring I love the lovely bully.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 48. (1599)

I have promised to be with the sweet Bully early in the morning of her important day.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. iv, let. 15. (1754)

8 The bully's bluster proves the coward's fear.

CRABBE, Parish Register. Pt. i, l. 354. (1807)

A bully is always a coward.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 4. (1843) Charles Lamb denied this in his Popular Fallacies.

His yellow streak, the hall mark of the bully, though not wide was deep.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 46. (1941)

<sup>1</sup>
He that is a bully-boy,
Come pledge me on the ground.

THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, Deuteromelia. (1609)
The bully-boys of the Helderberg.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York (1861), p. 143. (1809)

You are not the first bully-boy that has said stand to a true man.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 8. (1818)

BUNCOMBE

<sup>2</sup>
Talking for Buncombe.

FELIX WALKER, Speech on the Missouri Bill, House of Representatives, 25 Feb., 1820. Walker was a Representative from North Carolina, and Buncombe County was part of his district. He was known as "the old oil-jug" because of his fondness for speech-making, and when, toward the close of the long debate on the Missouri Bill, he rose to speak, several members urged him to desist, he refused, and stated that he was "bound to make a speech for Buncombe." See Annals of Congress, 16th Cong., 1st session, vol. xxvi, col. 1539. Also a full account of the incident by Dr. William Darlington in The Historical Magazine, Oct., 1858. (Vol. i, No. 10, p. 311.)

Several years ago, in Congress, the member from this immediate district [Buncombe County, N.C.] rose to address the House. Many members left the hall. Very naively he told those who were so kind as to remain that they might go too; for he should speak for some time, but he was only talking for Buncombe.

JOHN WHEELER, Historical Sketches of North Carolina. Vol. ii, p. 52. (1851)

It's all bunkum, you know.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 2. (1843)

Here, would-be Tullys pompously parade
Their timid tropes for simple "Buncombe" made.

J. G. SAXE, Progress. (1846)

Now do not think this is "Buncombe."

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Introduction. (1848) "It is seldom that we can get any frank utterance from men, who address, for the most part, a Buncombe either in this world or the next."—Ser. i, No. 1. Introduction.

America too will find that . . . speeches to Buncombe will not carry men to the immortal gods.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets: Parliaments. (1850)

Talk plain talk, and leave bunkum for right nonorables who keep their places thereby.

KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago. Ch. 25. (1857)

Bunk is mental junk.

GEORGE W. LYON and O. F. PAGE. A definition submitted simultaneously by these two men, strangers to each other, in a contest sponsored by The Forum, Sept., 1927, p. 449.

The practice for which W. E. Woodward, in a novel [Bunk] published in 1923, invented the word "debunking."

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 236. (1931)

BURDEN

<sup>3</sup>
According to the strength of the camel is the weight of his burden.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 67a. (c. 450)

According to the camel, so is the burden.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 13b. Ascribed to Ben Sirā, but not found.

God giveth to no soul a burden heavier than it can bear.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ii, 286. (c. 622)

We lay no burden on any man more than he is able to bear.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxiii, 62.

Every man's burden is suited to his strength.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. ii, Apol. 5. (c. 1258)

God has made the back to the burthen.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Rural Rides, 2 Jan., 1822.

Carlyle quotes "The back is made for the burden" as "a pious adage." The Germans say, "Gott giebt die Schultern nach der Bürde" (God gives the shoulder according to the burden).

The sisters worried these men a good deal. They all took it in good part. Their backs were made to bear their burden.

S. BARING-GOULD, John Herring. Ch. 6. (1883)

<sup>4</sup>
A burthen of one's own choice is not felt.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 282. (1855) The Italians say, "Carica volontaria non carica" (A voluntary burden is not a burden). An English variant is, "The burden one likes is cheerfully borne."

The burden which one has thoughtlessly got must be patiently borne.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 499

<sup>5</sup>
It is other people's burdens that kill the ass. (Cuidados ajenos matan al asno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

It is not the burthen but the over-burthen that kills the beast. (No mata la carga sino la sobrecarga.)

J. COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, p. 231. (1823)

There is a Latin proverb, "Onus segni impone asello" (Place the burden on the slow-paced ass). See also under Ass.

<sup>6</sup>
The greatest burdens are not the gainfullest.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Acquests. (1611) Cited by JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 336, who adds, "That is, they who labour sorest have not the best wages."

<sup>7</sup>
Every one finds his own burthen heavy. (À chacun son fardeau pèse.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Fardeau. (1611) The Italians say, "Ad ognuno par più grave la croce sua" (To everyone his own cross weighs heaviest).

Every one thinks his sack heaviest.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 750. (1640)

Every Horse thinks his own Pack heaviest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1420. (1732)

Each one thinks his lot the worst; but he is mistaken. If he thought himself the worst of the lot he might be right.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

<sup>1</sup> Helpe the taker of a burthen, but not the layer downe. (Tollenti onus auxiliare, deponenti nequaquam.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2. (1508)

Taverner, tr., fo. 72. (1550) Taverner adds:

"As who shuld saye: Further suche as labour to attayne to vertue, but such as be slouthfull and lay downe all honeste labours, helpe nat." Quoted as a maxim of Pythagoras.

<sup>2</sup> Bear ye one another's burdens. (ἀλλήλων τὰ βάρη βαστάετε.)

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 2. (c. A. D. 53)

The Vulgate is, "Alter alterius onera portate."

We should bear each other's burdens. (Invicem onera nostra portemus.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. xxii, sec. 9.

(A. D. 392) Paraphrasing Galatians.

<sup>3</sup> Every man shall bear his own burden. (ἕκαστος γὰρ τὸ ἴδιον φορτὸν βαστάσει.)

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 5. (c. A. D. 53)

The Vulgate is, "Unusquisque enim onus suum portabit."

No man may bear another's burden.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, liii, 38. (c. 622)

Every one must look to his owne charge: or beare his owne burden.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chasque. (1611)

It was Heaven's will . . . and to be borne as such. Every man must bear his own burden

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 26. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> He carries well, to whom it weighs not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 393. (1640)

<sup>5</sup> None knows the weight of another's burthen.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 879

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3655. (1732)

No one knows the weight of another's burden

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1670)

<sup>6</sup> Ah, sir! light burdeine far heauy (quoth she) This light burdein in longe walke welny tryeth me.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Light burdens heavy, if far borne.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Ideas Mirrour St 59 (1594)

Light burdens, long borne, grow heavy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 16. (1640)

Light burdens far heavy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1670)

Ray adds the French, "Petit fardeau pèse à la longue." or "Petit chose de loin pèse."

Another form is, "Au long aller, petit fardeau pèse" (On a long journey, a little burden tires). The Germans say, "Leichte Bürden werden ferne schwer."

We use to say, light burdens far carried are heavy.

JOHN BUNYAN, Greatness of the Soul. (1682)

He will think his breeks a burden.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 166. (1721)

When he has to carry them all the time.

There is no light burden on a long road.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 375.

(1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>7</sup> A profitless burden to the earth. (ἐρώσιον ἀχθος ἀπούρησ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 104. (c. 850 B. C.)

You're a burden to the earth. (γάς βάρος.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. Frag. 945. (c. 410 B. C.)

I am a burden to myself. (Factus sum mihimetipsi gravis.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 20. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> How many weak shoulders have craved heavy burdens! (Combien d'épaules sans force ont demandé de lourds fardeaux!)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 201. (1810)

<sup>9</sup> Take no more on you than you're able to bear.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 305. (1721)

<sup>10</sup> Take up the White Man's burden.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The White Man's Burden.

(1899) The conquest and oversight of the so-called inferior races.

Take up th' white man's burden an' hand it to th' coons.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, The Decline of National Feeling. (1900)

He'll take up the red man's burden again.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear. (1903)

<sup>11</sup> He that gauges his burden can bear it. (Qui sua metitur pondera, ferre potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 98. (c. A. D. 85)

<sup>12</sup> Light grows the burden which is well borne. (Leve fit, quod bene fertur, onus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 10. (c. 13 B. C.)

To support the burden, you must strive with head erect. (Sustineas ut onus, nitendum vertice pleno est.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 77. (c. A. D. 13)

<sup>13</sup> It's no friendly act to delay a man who's burdened down. (Haud amice facis, qui cum onere offers moram.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 852. (c. 194 B. C.)

And when the porter bends beneath his load, And pants for breath, clear thou the crowded road.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 49. (1716)

Respect the burden, Madam. (Respectez le fardeau, Madame.)

NAPOLÉON, to Mrs. Balcombe, at St. Helena when some servants, carrying heavy boxes, passed in their way, and she ordered them to keep back. See O'MEARA, Napoleon at St. Helena; EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

Napoleon made the lady get out of the way of the porter and said, "Respect the burden, madam." That was behaving like a very fine gentleman.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 94. (1910)

1 A kicking animal is best well-burdened.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. ii, Apol. 11. (c. 1257)

The lower mill-stone revolves not, and hence, of necessity supports the greater burden.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apol. 28.

2 It is base to flinch under a burden. (Turpe est cedere oneri.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 65)

3 The burden is light on the shoulders of another.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 92. (1853) A Russian proverb.

BURR

4 Togider thei cleued . . . So with other doth the burre.

UNKNOWN, Arthour and Merlin, l. 8290. (c. 1330)

Together they cleve more fast then do burres.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Cytelen and Up-londyskman, 43. (1514)

I toke hir for a rose, but she breedth a burre.

She comth to sticke to me nowe in his lacke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

They cleave together like burs.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Ye cleave together so like burres.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Churchyard's Charge. (1580)

5 Thou cat, thou burr! vile thing, let loose.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer Night's Dream, iii, 2, 260. (1596)

They are burrs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 120. (1602)

I am a kind of burr; I shall stick.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iv, 3, 193. (1604)

They hold together like burres.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 63. (1639)

They will stick like burrs.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology. (1678)

They hang together like burs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 250. (1678)

When a fellow stuck like a bur, that there was no shaking him off.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, p. 59. (1712)

BUSH

6 Not with vain terror do I shrink, as bird that misdoubteth bush. (οὐτοι δυσολῶ θάμνον ὡς ὄρνις φόβῳ | ἄλλως.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1316. (458 B. C.)

He that feareth every bush must neuer goe a birding.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 354. (1580) FULLER, Gnomologia, 2098.

He that is afrajd of every bush will never prove good huntsman.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 56. (c. 1595)

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 6, 12. (1590)

See under THIEF.

Let . . . the dire thought of his committed evil

Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 972. (1594)

Or in the night, imagining some fear,

How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 22. (1595)

In every hedge and ditch, both day and night,

We fear our death, of every leaf affright;

A lamb appears a lion, and we fear

Each bush we see's a bear.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblemes. Bk. i, emb. 13. (1635)

The guilty conscience fears, when there's no fear, And thinks that every bush contains a bear.

ROWLAND WATKYN, Flamma Sine Fumo: The Righteous Is Confident as a Lion. (1662)

He thinks every bush a boggard [bugbear, phantasm].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)

You take every bush for a bug-bear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6002. (1732)

If I see a stump, I took it for a man.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 8. (1884)

THE GUILTY FLEE, see under GUILT. THE GUILTY CONSCIENCE, see under CONSCIENCE.

7 Young women in the old world were not wont To hang out gaudy bushes for their beauties.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Custom of the Country. Act iii, sc. 2. (1616) "To hang out bushes," i. e. to hang out signs or advertisements.

In every one of them, some outward figures, which hang as signes or bushes of their inward formes.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 2. (1643)

GOOD WINE NEEDS NO BUSH, see under WINE.

8 Where if you beat a bush, 'tis odds you start a thief.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Polyolbion. (1612)

Beat the bush and start a thief.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, i, 194. (1662)

9 The angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed. (Rubus arderet, et non combureretur.)

Old Testament: Exodus, iii, 2. (c. 550 B. C.)

Hence "the burning bush." It is generally held that a thorn-bush of some sort is meant.

See Jewish Encyclopaedia, iii, 439.

10 That's a cap sheef that bangs the bush.

T. C. HALIBURTON, The Clockmaker. Ser. i, 52. (1835) i. e. caps the climax.

If this don't take the rag off the bush!
ANN SOPHIA STEPHENS, High Life in New York, i, 56. (1843)

That . . . comes nigher draggin the bush up by the roots an a most enny thing I ever seed.

JOHNSON HOOPER, Adventures of Captain Simon Suggs. Ch. 12. (1845)

Don't that take the rag off the bush?

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843) A phrase probably deriving from the fact that a rag hung on a bush was frequently used as a target.

It happifies me to say that we bang the bush.
W. E. BURTON, Waggeries, p. 70. (1848)

1
It's a low bush that the sun never shihes on.
MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 102. (1942)

2
It is a tiresome way of speaking, when you should dispatch the business, to talk about things afar off. (Odiosast oratio, cum rem agas longinquom loqui.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 608. (c. 200 B.C.) i.e. things which have nothing to do with the matter in hand.

A longe betyng aboute the busshe and losse of time.

ROBERT WHYTYNTON, Vulgaria, p. 35. (1520)

Tell it orderly, without going about the bush.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 2. (1560)

It was vaine so longe to beate about the bush.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto. (1588)

To use many circumstances, to goe about the bush.

RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Aller. (1611)

I went round the bush, and round the bush, before I came to the matter.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Confederacy. Act iii, sc. 2. (1705)

He does not beat about the bush for difficulties or excuses.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk, ii, ix, 212. (1822)

Like a good sportin'-dog, if I did beat round the bush, I always put up the birds.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 10. (1843)

I was beating about the bush.

HENRY JAMES, The Aspern Papers. Ch. 1. (1888)

I did not know how long he might thus beat about the bush.

STEVENSON AND OSBOURNE, The Wrecker. Ch. 18. (1892)

There isn't time for beating round the bush.

CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act iii. (1901)

No good is ever done by beating about the bush.
BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act iii. (1911)

It's no good beating about the bush.

EDGAR WALLACE, The India-Rubber Man. Ch. 7. (c. 1920)

You needn't beat about the bush.

JOSEPH SHEARING, Blanche Fury, p. 106. (1939)

A favorite cliché of writers of mystery stories.

3
Thus hath every gap his bush, each suspicion his prevention.

SIR EDWIN SANDYS, Europae Speculum, p. 123. (1599)

With one bush (as they say) you are to stop two gaps.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr. Livy, xxiii, 3, (1600)

To kill two birds with one stone, see under BIRD.

4
On the bushe bettes one, another man hath the byrde.

UNKNOWN, Lyfe of Ipomedon, l. 6021. (c. 1300)

And takth the bridd to his beyete,

Wher othre men the buisshe bete.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 2355. (c. 1390)

Some bete the bussh and some the byrdes take.

UNKNOWN, Generydes, l. 4524. (c. 1440)

I will not beat the bush, and another shall have the birds.

THOMAS MONTACUTE, EARL OF SALISBURY, at the siege of Orleans, when his ally, the Duke of Burgundy, proposed that Salisbury withdraw when the town was ready to yield. (1428) See CAMDEN, Remains, p. 289. Camden says it was this remark which "so offended the Burgundian, that it wholly alienated his mind from the English, to their great loss in all the French wars following."

Beat the bushes without catching the birds. (Battoyt les buissons sans prandre les ozillons.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

Another form is, "Vous battez les buissons dont un autre a les oysissons" (You beat the bushes, but another gets the birds).

And while I at length debate and beate the bushe,

There shall steppe in other men, and catche the burdes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

I beate the bushe, the birdes to them doe flye.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 93. (1580) Grosart.

It hath been my luck always to beat the bush, while another killed the hare.

UNKNOWN, Returne from Parnassus, ii, 5. (1606)

One beateth the Bush, and another catcheth the Bird.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3738. (1732)

Your active benevolence starts the game while others beat the bush.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Mrs. Hughes. (1828)

5
Ounder buskes me shal fair weder abide. (Under a bush I'll wait for fair weather.)

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. St. 22. (c. 1300)

Under the bosshe yt ys gode fayre weder to abyde.

UNKNOWN, Sloane MS. 747. Sig. 66A. (c. 1500)

Under the greenwood tree . . .

Here shall he see No enemy

But winter and rough weather.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 5, 1. (1599)

A bad bush is better than the open field.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 58. (1670)

A thin Bush is better than no Shelter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 432. (1732)
These evil showers make the low bush better than no bield [shelter].

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 3. (1820)

The French say, "Il n'y a pas si petit buisson qui ne porte ombre" (There is no bush so small as to be without shade). There is another Scottish proverb, "Everyone bows to the bush that bields him."

BUSINESS

<sup>1</sup> Talk of nothing but business and dispatch that business quickly.

ALDUS MANUTIUS, Placard, placed on the door of his printing office at Venice. (c. 1500) See DIBDIN, Introduction to Greek and Latin Classics, p. 436.

Expedition in a little is better than much too late.

SIR WALTER RALBOH, Letter to Robert Cecil, 1595.

Dispatch is the mother of good fortune. (La presteza es madre de la diche.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 53. (1647)

Dispatch is the soul of Business, both in Peace and War, in private as well as publick.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 171. (1709)

There is nothing more requisite in business than dispatch.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act v, sc. 1. (1716)

Dispatch is the soul of business.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

Secrecy and Dispatch may prove the Soul of success to an Enterprise.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to David Cobb, 30 June, 1781.

Cecil's dispatch of business was extraordinary, his maxim being, "The shortest way to do many things is to do only one thing at once."

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 8. (1859)

A conference is a gathering of important people who, singly, can do nothing but together can decide that nothing can be done.

FRED ALLEN, Letter to W. M. Martin, 25 Jan., 1940. Martin was the President of the N.Y. Stock Exchange.

<sup>2</sup> The market-place is a place set apart where men may deceive and overreach each other. (τὴν ἀγορὰν ὁρισμένον ἔφη τέπον εἰς τὸ ἀλλήλους ἀπατᾶν καὶ πλεονεκτεῖν.)

ANACHARSIS, Sententiae. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Anacharsis, i, 105. A fore-runner of the Latin proverb, "In mercatura facienda multae fallaciae et quasi praestigiae exercentur" (In the conduct of business many deceptions are practised and near juggleries).

Stamps God's own name upon a lie just made. To turn a penny in the way of trade.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table Talk, i. 420. (1785)

<sup>3</sup> Serious business for the morrow. (σέκοθ' εἰς ἄρριον τὰ σπουδαία.)

ARCHIAS OF THEBES, to a messenger who arrived during a banquet with a letter which he said should be read at once, since it was on serious business. But Archias merely said, "Serious business tomorrow," and slipped the letter under the pillow of his couch. The letter contained a warning of a plot to assassinate him, and a few minutes later the assassins broke in and killed him. (c. 550 B. C.) "Wherefore," says Plutarch (Lives: Pelopidas, x, 4), "these words of his are a current proverb to this day among the Greeks." The Greeks had another proverb, ἑωθινὰ δίκαι (Early morning cases), of business that was quickly finished.

Put it off to another time. (εἰς ἄλλης ἀναβαλόν.)

PLATO, Symposium. Sec. 174E. (c. 380 B. C.)

I have postponed my serious business for their sport. (Posthabui tamen illorum mea seria ludo.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. vii, l. 17. (37 B. C.)

Plutarch likewise reports the story of Archias, the tyrant of Thebes, how the night before the execution of the enterprise that Pelopidas had plotted to kill him, in order to set his country at liberty, another Archias of Athens wrote him a letter, relating all the conspiracy, but this letter being delivered to him while he sat at supper, he put it aside, with this saying, which has since then passed for a proverb in Greece, "Business tomorrow." (À demain les affaires.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1580)

Somehow those fellows always do business tomorrow.

EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act ii. (1908)

It is the custom in Spain always to put off business until tomorrow.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii (1903)

<sup>4</sup> The playthings of our elders are called business. (Maiorum nugae negotia vocabantur.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. i, ch. 9. (A D 397)

<sup>5</sup> A pot belonging to partners is neither hot nor cold.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 3a. (c. 450)

A variation of the Latin proverb, "Communiter negligitur quod communiter possidentur" (That which is possessed in common is commonly neglected). Or, as the English proverb goes, "Little is done when everyone is master." FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 360 (1732), puts it, "A Pot that belongs to many is ill stirr'd and worse boil'd"

<sup>6</sup> Every bodies work is no bodies work.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Ouvrage. (1611)

I remember that a wise friend of mine did usually say, "that which is everybody's business is nobody's business."

IZAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i. ch. 2. (1653)

Every-Body's Business, Is No-Body's Business
DANIEL DEFOE. Title of a diatribe against servants. (1725) Macaulay quotes this as "an old maxim" in his essay on Hallam's Constitutional History. (1828)

Public property is never so well taken care of as private property; . . . "that which is everybody's business is nobody's business."

WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 6. (1829) More concisely, "A public hall is never swept."

What's everybody's business is nobody's business.

AUGUSTIN DALY, Horizon. Act i. (1871)

There is no one to sweep a common hall.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1781. (1875)

What I say is that everybody's business is nobody's business.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 13. (1910)

What was nobody's business became everybody's business.

GEORGE BARTON, Thrilling Triumphs of Crime Detection, p. 201. (1937)

1 Business is a dump for dreams.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

2 He that hath little business shall become wise. (καὶ ὁ ἐλασσούμενος πράξει αὐτοῦ σοφισθήσεται.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, 24. (c. 190 B. C.) Paraphrased in Aboth N., ch. 33.

3 Affairs, like salt fish, ought to be a good while a soaking.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 309. (1855)

Business makes a man as well as tries him

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 334

4 I have my clarinet in my sleeve and my breath in my mouth.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 693 (1817) I am ready for business

5 Few people do business well who do nothing else.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Aug., 1749

6 You foolish man, you don't even know your own foolish business.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, to John Amstis, the Garter King of Arms. (c. 1750) See JESSE, Memories of the Courts of the Stuarts: Nassau and Hanover.

You silly old fool, you don't even know the alphabet of your own silly business.

JUDGE WILLIAM HENRY MAULE (attr.). speaking to a witness in his court. (c. 1845)

A silly old man who does not understand even his silly old trade.

RICHARD BETHELL, first Baron Westbury (attr.), while Lord Chancellor, speaking of a witness from the Herald's College. (c. 1864)

7 The maxim of the British people is "business as usual."

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, at the Guildhall, London, Nov. 9, 1914.

8 Business is business.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir at Law. Act iii, sc. 3. (1797)

Business is business, my dear young sir.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 1. (1857)

Business is business. No man can be too particular.

BLACKMORE, Cripps the Carrier. Ch. 3. (1876)

Business is business. (Les affaires sont les affaires.)

OCTAVE MIRBEAU. Title of play, produced at Comédie Française, Paris, 20 April, 1903. The Germans say, "Geschäft ist immer Geschäft" (Business is always business).

Business is business.

BRONSON HOWARD, The Henrietta. Act i. (1887)

O. HENRY, Next to Reading Matter. (1909)

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii.

(1913) STANLEY J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. (1922) S. V. BENÉT, The Devil and Daniel Webster. (1936) etc., etc.

Business is business, and love is love.

EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act iii. (1908)

"Business is business," the Little Man said,

"A battle where 'everything goes.'"

BERTON BRALEY, Business Is Business. (1916)

The business of America is business.

CALVIN COOLIDGE: Speech, before the Society of American Newspaper Editors, Washington, 17 Jan., 1925.

9 He that doth his own business doth not defile his hand.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 11. (1591)

The Italian says, None fouls his hands in his own business.

HERBERT, A Priest to the Temple. Ch. 32. (1632)

Who doth his own business, fouls not his hands.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 421. (1640)

10 Drive thy business; let not that drive thee.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738. In 1744, amended to, "Drive thy business, or it will drive thee."

11 Those that have much Business must have much Pardon.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

12 Business is the Salt of Life.

Business and Action strengthen the Brain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1026, 1028. (1732)

Men of Business must not break their Word twice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3401.

13 Business is other people's money. (Les affaires, c'est l'argent des autres.)

MADAME DE GIRARDIN, Marguerite Vol. ii, p. 104. (1852)

Business? That's very simple—it's other people's money. (Les affaires? C'est bien simple, c'est l'argent des autres.)

ALEXANDRE DUMAS, fils, La Question d'Argent Act ii, sc. 7. (1857)

14 There is nothing doeth more weare mee out, nor as they say make the bombaste of my dublet so thinne as continuall affaires.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, Bk. ii, p. 244. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>1</sup> The Citizen is at his business before he rise.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 956. (1640)

<sup>2</sup> Into the very midst of the business. (In medias res.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 148. (c. 20 B.C.)
Generally "plunge in medias res," into the middle of things. PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés, stars it as a cliché of the worst kind.

<sup>3</sup> Drop your business, and by the back-door give the slip to the client waiting in your hall. (Rebus omisiss | atria servanem postico falle clientem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. v, l. 30. (20 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> When a man's business does not fit him, 'tis as oftentimes with a shoe—if too big for the foot it will trip him, if too small, will chafe. (Cui non conveniet sua res, ut calceus olim, | si pede maior erit, subvertet, si minor, uret.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 42. (20 B.C.)

Who likes not his business, his business likes not him.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 140. (1846) Referred to as an old saying.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 471. (1869)

<sup>5</sup> I tells 'ee I means business.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days, i, 9. (1857)

They knew he "meant business," though his words were few.

G. P. BURNHAM, Three Years, p. 34. (1875)

He looked as if he "meant business," and I mean business too.

W. D. HOWELLS, Rise of Silas Lapham. Ch. 5. (1885)

<sup>6</sup> In affairs of state, we should take pains not so much to create opportunities as to profit by those which occur. (Dans les grandes affaires, on doit moins s'appliquer à faire naître des occasions qu'à profiter de celles qui se présentent)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 453. (1665)

The first Mistake in public Business, is the going into it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758

<sup>7</sup> One busyness begetteth and bryngeth forth another.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 105. (1528)
Referred to as "an olde said saw."

<sup>8</sup> A man that cannot sit still in his chamber . . . and that cannot say no . . . is not fit for business.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 8 Aug., 1662. Referred to as a proverb

<sup>9</sup> Lord Vaughan . . . was heard to swear he would do my Lord Clarendon's business.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 16 Nov., 1667, i. e. ruin or kill him

They would now doe the queen's businesse, if she were not immortal.

NARCISSUS LUTTRELL, A Brief Historical Relation, iii, 349. (1694)

<sup>10</sup> The business goes badly. (Olla male fervet.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 38. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>11</sup> The business that trusts to luck is a bad business. (Male geritur quicquid geritur fortunae fide.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 361. (c. 43 B.C.)
It is easy to escape from business, if you will only despise the rewards of business. (Facile est autem occupationes evadere, si occupationum pretia contempseris.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 65)

<sup>12</sup> Every man as his business lies.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> A fiddling business. (Chê 'hu ch'in ti shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1747. (1875) Fiddlers are the organ-grinders of China.

<sup>14</sup> To business that we love we rise betime,
And go to 't with delight.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 4. 20. (1606)

<sup>15</sup> It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 1, 48. (1606)

This is a bloody business. A jocularity of late C. 19-20.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: This.

<sup>16</sup> We are upon a business of life and death.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>17</sup> Neither above nor below his business. (Par negotiis neque supra.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 39. (c. A. D. 116)

He that thinks his Business below him, will always be above his Business.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2333 (1732)

<sup>18</sup> We are all proud or humble, according as our business prospers or fails. (Omnibus nobis ut res dant sese. ita magni atque humiles sumus.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 380. (165 B.C.) A paraphrase of the Latin proverb, "Prout res nobis fluit, ita et animus se habet" (As our affairs go, so is our mind affected).

<sup>19</sup> You can do such a land-office business on such a small capital.

MARK TWAIN, Sketches, 1926, p. 167. (1865)

A rushing business like that of a land office in boom times.

The tap-rooms adjoining the polls were all open and doing a land-office business.

UNKNOWN, Chicago Tribune, 3 Nov., 1875, p. 1/5.

You ought to be doing a land-office business.
LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 78. (1942)

He did a land-office business.

DISNEY AND PERRY, Thirty Days Hath September, p. 32. (1942)

1
Go to your business, pleasure, whilst I go to my pleasure, business.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Country-Wife. Act ii. (1675)

Leave business to idlers, and wisdom to fools: they have need of 'em: wit, be my faculty, and pleasure my occupation; and let Father Time shake his glass.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 1. (1693)

Business was his aversion; pleasure was his business.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Contrast. Ch. 1. (1795)
The rule of my life is to make business a pleasure, and pleasure my business.

AARON BURR, Letter to Pichon. (c. 1800)

Business before pleasure.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Weekend with Death, p. 273. (1941)

Pleasure before business.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 183. (1941)

I never mix business with pleasure.

A. A. FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 209. (1941)

I never believe in mixing business with pleasure.

PETER CHENEY, Farewell to the Admiral, p. 238. (1943)

This is business. You know what business comes before.

STEWART STERLING, Down Among the Dead Men, p. 55. (1943)

2
In thy business deal only with the upright.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 18 (c. 1000)

If thou must deal, be sure to deal with an honest man

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 413. (1678)
His rendering of Ben Sira.

3
Fasting and gude bisines

Gers [help] a man fle lustes of fless.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 28748 (c. 1350)

Business may be troublesome, but Idleness is pernicious.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1027. (1732)

A shorter form is "Without business, debauchery." See under DEVIL for THE DEVIL FINDS MISCHIEF FOR IDLE HANDS. There are many other proverbial phrases connected with business, most of which will be found under their appropriate headings: "To strike a balance"; "To get more than one bargained for"; "To make the best of a bad bargain"; "To make capital of"; "To turn the scales"; "To talk shop"; "To call to account"; "To take into account"; "To pay him back in his own coin"; "To ring true," from the custom of ringing a coin on the counter to determine whether it was good; "To give the acid test," because the pawnbroker tests gold with acid; "To deliver the goods," etc., etc.

II—Business: Mind Your Own Business

4
Shall I . . . go about my business?

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, History of John Bull, p. 70. (1712)

Go about your business, I hate the sight of you.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xvi, ch. 5. (1749)

5
Blow thy own Pottage, and not mine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 998. (1732)

Mind your knitting.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

6
What good and what evil has been wrought in thy halls. (ὅττι τοι ἐν μεγάροις κακὸν τ' ἀγαθὸν τε τέτυκται.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 392. (c. 850 B. C.)

Quoted by Socrates. See DIOGENES LAERTIUS. ii, 21.

Look to your own house, what evil or good goes on there. (Aedibus in nostris, quae prava, aut recta geruntur.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 85.

(1523) "In se descendere" (Mind your own business), which Erasmus also quotes, puts the idea in a nutshell.

Seeing things afar off, but nothing near at hand (Procul videns, sed cominus videns nihil.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 143. (1814)

"Like the astronomer." Bland adds, who "Stretching to see the stars, saw not the earth" (Tendens in alta, terram non vides). and fell into the ditch; or, too desirous of looking into the future, saw nothing of the impending disaster (Cupidus futuri, fis rudis praesentium).

7
The pleasantest thing in life is to attend to one's own business. (ὅτι μὲν οὖν ἡδιστὸν ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ βίῳ τὸ τὰ αὐτοῦ πράττειν.)

PLATO (?), To Archytas. Epis. ix, sec. 357E. (385 B. C.)

Do your own business. (πράσσειν τὰ ἴδια.)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, iv, 11. (c. A. D. 52) The Vulgate is, "Vestrum negotium agatis."

Every man knowes what is best for himselfe.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, E5. (1616) Grosart.

Every Man doth his own Business best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1422. (1732)

Every man knows his own business.

HENRY FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1742)

Every man, as they say, to his own business.

J. S. KNOWLES, The Love-Chase. Act v, sc. 1. (1837)

8
I always mind my own business. (Semper meum negotium ago.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 10. (c. A. D. 55)

Neither can he, that mindeth but his own Business, finde much matter for Envy.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Envy. (1625)

Mind your business.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 11. (1639)

I have nothing to do but to mind my own business.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 16. (1711)
In a corrupt Age, the putting the World in order would breed Confusion; then e'en mind your own Business.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.
In spite of Malthus and the rest, there will be plenty of room in the world, if every man will mind his own business.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 20 Nov., 1857.
"If everybody minded their own business," the Duchess said, in a hoarse growl, "the world would go round a great deal faster than it does."

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, p. 84. (1865)

You mind your business and I will mind mine.
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 686. (1872)
I shall tell them . . . to mind their own business.

JAMES PAYN, The Burnt Million. Ch. 25.
(1890) Often called the Twelfth Commandment, the Eleventh being, "Thou shalt not be found out." See under COMMANDMENT.
Minding your own business is one of the best ways to stay healthy.

M. V. HEBERDEN, Murder Goes Astray, p. 52.
(1943)

1
Have you so much time to spare from your own business that you can attend to another man's with which you have no concern? (Tan-tumne ab re tuast oti tibi aliena ut cures ea quae nil ad te attinent?)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 75. (163 B.C.)
I attend to the business of other people, having lost my own. (Aliena negotia curo, excussus pro-priis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 19. (35 B.C.)
It is far more easy to see wittily into other men's affairs than into our own.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 264. (1576)
My own business always bores me to death; I prefer other people's.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.
(1892)

BUSY

2
He hath more to do than the ovens in Christmas.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 912. (c. 1594)
He has more business than English ovens at Christmas.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 1. (1659)
Busy as an oven at Christmas.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 63. (1846)

3
The busy Man has few idle Visitors; to the boiling Pot the Flies come not.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

4
To be too busy gets contempt.

HERBERT, Jacule Prudentum. No. 740. (1640)

5
Ever busy, ever bare.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 91. (1721)
Kelly comments, "It is not always found that they who pursue the world most eagerly get the greatest share of it."

6
I keepe hives for Bees, not houses for busi-
bodies.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 254.
(1580)

Busie will haue bondes.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 19. (1616)

Busie will have bands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1678)
Busybodies must have restraints.

A busiebody burns his own fingers.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs,
256. (1710)

Busy-bodies never want a bad Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1029. (1732)

Busy folks are always meddling.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Busy. (1736)

7
Whether there is or is not something to do, you are always doing something. (Est, non est quod agas, semper agis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 79. (c. A.D. 85)

8
The men who are really busiest have the most leisure for everything.

JAMES PAYN, The Canon's Ward. Ch. 34 (1884) There are two shorter forms, "The busiest men have always the most leisure," and "The busy man finds the most time."

9 Busily engaged in idleness. (Occupata in otio.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5. (c. 25 B.C.)
Out of breath to no purpose, in doing much doing nothing. (Gratis anhelans, multa agendo nihil agens.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5, l. 3.
This aimless running about one may not unjustly call busy idleness. (Inquietam inertiam.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 12, sec. 3.
(c. A.D. 60)

No-wher so bisy a man as he ther nas,
And yet he semed bisier than he was.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 323.
(c. 1386)

Without any sort of business, is forever busy
(Sans aucune affaire, est toujours affairé.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 30.
(1666)

Who more busy than he who has least to do.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 20. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 20. (1639) RAY,
English Proverbs, p. 66. (1670)

Some are very busy, and yet do nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4211. (1732)

I'm like my lord mayor's fool, full of business and nothing to do.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The French say, "Il n'y a pas de gens plus affaires que ceux qui n'ont rien à faire" (There is nobody busier than they who have nothing to do). See also under LEISURE

Thus idly busy rolls their world away.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 256. (1764)

Like a pig's tail, going all day, and nothing doing at night.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 271. (1869)
Busily engaged in doing nothing. (Operose nihil agentes.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 309. (1869) Quoting Seneca. "Who more busy than they who have least to do?"

He is busy with no business. (Shih wu shih.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 233. (1872)

Let him write on the doors that he is busy.
(In foribus scribat, occupatum se esse.)
PLAUTUS. (c. 200 B. C.)

THIS IS MY BUSY DAY, see under DAY.

I have both to beat the drum and row the boat. (Tu ta ku tu hua ch'uan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 2714. (1875) Too busy for pleasure.

Nor will he be in business for the mere sake of being busy (Nec in negotiis erit negotii causa.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, 8. (c. A. D. 65)

To be too busy is some danger.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 33. (1600)

Those who have most to do, and are willing to work, will find the most time.
SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, ch. 1. (1859)
Quoted as "the saying."

II—Proverbial Comparisons

For ay as bisy as bees Ben they.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Epilogue to the Marchantes Tale, l. 4. (c. 1386)

A comely olde man as busie as a Bee.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 252. (1580) A proverbial comparison used so frequently that further instances need not be cited

As busy as a parlor clock.
CARTER DICKSON, The Department of Queer Complaints: The Crime in Nobody's Room. (1940)

Busy as a one-armed paper hanger.
ERIE STANLEY GARDNER, The Case of the Rolling Bones, p. 132. (1939)

Busy as a one-armed paper-hanger with the seven-year itch
H. W. THOMPSON Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493 (1940)

Too busie like an Ape.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk ii, p. 130. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As busy as a dog in duff [dough].
G. F. JACKSON, Shropshire Word-Book, p. 128. (1879)

She was busy as an ant.
OGDEN NASH, Quartet for Prosperous Love-Children. (1933)

She is skimming her milk-bowls . . . as busy as a body-louse.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Hey for Honesty. Act iii, sc. 3. (1651)

Busy as a good wife at oven.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 203. (1670)

As busy as a cat in a tripe shop.
ROBERTSON, Gloucester Glossary, p. 186. (1890)

As busy as the devil in a gale of wind.
WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 8. (1825) See under DEVIL.

It has been a proverb, as busy as a hen with one chicken.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Wittie Faire One. Act ii, sc. 2. (1632)

As busy as a hen with ten chickens.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)
Cackled after him like a hen with one chick
THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1857)

The same as a hen with one chicken. She'll fuss and cluck as much for it as if she had the whole clutch.

K. F. PURDON, Folk of Furry Farm. Ch. 5. (1914)

Busy as a cat on a tin roof.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493. (1940) Thompson also supplies, "Busy as a fiddler's elbow." "Busy as a fish-peddler in Lent."

This ferry was as busy as a beaver dam.
H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

BUTCHER

One butcher does not fear many sheep.
ALEXANDER THE GREAT, when his officers reported the innumerable multitudes of the Persian hosts, at the battle of Arbela, 331 B. C. See TRENCH, Proverbs, ii, 38.

It is possible for a ram to kill a butcher.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1678)

The butcher lookt for his knife and 'twas in his mouth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 75. (1639)
Clarke also gives a variation, "The butcher lookt for the candle, and 'twas in his hat." Hee'd with his candell looke for his knife, When hee had it in his mouth.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 321. (c. 1640)
We look after Religion as the Butcher did after his Knife, when he had it in his Mouth.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Religion. (c. 1654)
I'm like the butcher that was looking for his knife and had it in his mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

1 He would have made a good butcher, but for the by-blow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 77. (1639)
The Hindus have a proverb, "Whoever has never seen a thief, let him look at a butcher."

2 Watch the butcher when he weighs the roast. Otherwise you'll buy his hand.

DOROTHY DISNEY, Crimson Friday, p. 127. (1943) GOLDEN THUMB, see under THUMB.

BUTTER

See also Bread and Butter

3 They that have good store of butter may lay it thick on their bread.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia etc., p. 49. (1639)
They, that have good store of Butter, may lay it on thick.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4980. (1732)

4 The squire that's butter'd still is sure to be undone.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World: Prologue. (1700) "Butter" i. e. to flatter fulsomely.

Butter him with some warlike terms.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 37. (1816)
Long speeches are stutted,
And toasts are well butter'd.

THOMAS HOOD, Public Dinner. Pt. ii. (c. 1840)

5 As irrecoverable as a Lump of Butter in a Grey-hound's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 699. (1732)
We have an old saying, as easy to get butter out of a dog's mouth, as money out of a lawyer.

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book, p. 202. (1886)

6 That, which will not be Butter, must be made into Cheese.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4387. (1732)

7 Euery promise that thou therein dost vtter, Is as sure as it were sealed with butter, Or a mouse tied with a thread.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
Surely the indentures, containing these covenants, are sealed with butter.

REGINALD SCOT, The Discoverie of Witchcraft. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1548)

I think they have seal'd this with butter.

GEORGE MIDDLETON, A Game at Chess. Act i, sc. 1. (1624)

A warrant seal'd with butter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1670)

8 There will no butter cleave on my bread.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
No butter will stick on his bread.

THOMAS FULLER, Remains, p. 329. (1636)
No butter will stick to my bread.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267. (1721)

"Spoken," Kelly adds, "when all means we use to thrive miscarry."

But now I fear it will be said,
No butter sticks upon his bread.

SWIFT, A Pastoral Dialogue. (1727)

The devil a crumb of butter was ever churned that would stick upon my bread.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 15. (1824)

HE KNOWS WHICH SIDE HIS BREAD IS BUTTERED, see under BREAD.

9

It is not all butter that the coow drops.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

All is not butter that the cow makes.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 294. (1666)

All is not butter the cow makes. (Non è tutto butyro che fa la vacca.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107. (1678)

All is not Butter that comes from the Cow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 527. (1732)

10

Be merry and melt like butter, laugh and be fat like butter: so butter answer my expectation, and be not mad butter; if it be, It shall both July and December see!

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act ii, sc. 5. (1625)

Butter is said to be mad twice a year; once in summer . . . when it is too thin and fluid; and once in winter . . . when it is too hard and difficult to spread.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1678)

Butter is mad twice a year.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

11 She brought forth butter in a lordly dish. (In phiala principum obtulit butyrum.)

Old Testament: Judges, v, 25. (c. 700 B.C.)

12

Boil stones in butter and you may sup the broth.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 75. (1721)

Good ingredients will make any dish savory.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1003. (1732)

13

Like butter in the black dog's ha'se [throat].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 236. (1721)

Past recovery.

"Did Dousterswivel know anything about the . . . bullion?"—"Had [he] kend it was there, it wad hae been butter in the black dog's hause."

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 38. (1816)

14

You are all made of butter, and sew'd with soure milk.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 368. (1721)

That is, very easily hurt.

15

He maketh as thoughe butter wolde nat melte in his mouth.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 620. (1530)

She lookth as butter wolde not melte in hir mouth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

[They] looke as though butter would not melte in their mouth.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 103. (1574)

A spirit shall look as if butter would not melt in his mouth.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Faire Maide of the Inne. Act iv, sc. 1. (1626)

As demure as if butter would not melt in his mouth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 171. (1670)
The modern usage, but with "her" instead of "his," as the reference is almost always to a young woman, who is less demure and good than she looks. "Demure" is derived from the French mûr, ripe, mature, mellow, and that was its original meaning; but it is now used exclusively in the sense of coy or affectedly modest, and so is never applied to a man.

The jade simpers as if butter would not melt in her mouth; but cheese of three half pence a pound won't choke her, as the saying is.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act iii, sc. 1. (1696)

She looks as if butter wouldn't melt in her mouth but, I warrant, cheese won't choke her.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

He looked at this moment, as if butter wouldn't melt in his mouth.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 3. (1843)

Butter wouldn't melt in our mouth, if we had any to put there, would it?

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843)

She smiles and languishes, you'd think that butter would not melt in her mouth.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 60. (1850)

Nor did I like having to be on my best behaviour and to look as if butter would not melt in my mouth.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 55. (1903)

Talking as if butter wouldn't melt in your mouth.

BERNARD SHAW, Androcles and the Lion: Prologue. (1912)

You think butter might possibly melt in her mouth, do you?

E. C. BENTLEY, Trent's Last Case. Ch. 5. (1930)

Nancy stood there, looking as if butter wouldn't melt in her mouth.

SALLY WOOD, Murder of a Novelist, p. 45. (1941)

A very common cliché among the writers of detective stories.

1
Butter's once a year in the cow's horn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1678)

When the cow is dried for calving it is usual to say, "All the butter is gone into the cow's horn."

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 5. (1846)

2
What is a pound of butter among a kennel of hounds?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5498. (1732)

His fortune went like a pound of meat in a kennel of hounds.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 10. (1880)

3
Butter is an bolsom mete, furst and eke last.
JOHN RUSSELL, The Boke of Nurture, p. 89. (c.

1450) FURNIVALL notes that the Dutch have a similar jingle, "Eat Butter first, and eat it last, And live till a hundred years be past."

According to the old English proverbe: Butter is gold in the morning, silver at noon, and lead at night.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 156.

(1588) RAY, Proverbs, p. 36. (1670). SWIFT,

Polite Conversation, i. (1738)

Some meats are said to be "Gold in the morning, silver at noon, lead at night."

THOMAS FULLER, Comment on Christ's Temptation. (1652) Many articles of food have been thus described, as well as butter, apples and cheese among them. See under APPLE.

4
So much for that, and butter for fish.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

BUTTERFLY

5
I sette noght of al the vileinye,
That ye of wommen wryte, a boterflye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 1059 (c. 1388)

6
He has been out a Hawking for Butterflies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1863. (1732)

7
The butterfly that flies among thorns will tear its wings.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 50. (1936)

8
Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 308. (1734)

The unfairness of breaking such an exquisite butterfly of art upon the wheel of his analysis.

EDMUND GOSSE, Eighteenth Century Literature, p. 113. (1889)

We don't need a wheel to break a butterfly on.
OLIVER ONIONS, The Beckoning Fair One. Ch. 9. (1911) See also under MEANS.

9
First grubs obscene, then wriggling worms.
Then painted butterflies.

ALEXANDER POPE, Phryne. (1726)

Ah, what's a Butterfly? At best
He's but a caterpillar, drest.

JOHN GAY, Fables, i, 24. (1726) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

BUTTON

10
Somebody ought to sew buttons on his face.
RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 86. (1940) To keep his mouth shut.

11
I take my friend by the button.
OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act ii, sc. 1. (1768) I detain him in conversation.

His fingers upon every one's button, and his mouth in every man's ear.

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth, l. 48. (1828)

He caught him by the button and detained him.
HARRIET MARTINEAU, A Manchester Strike. Ch. 1. (1833)

This is my coat, as it were, without buttons by which any but a vernacular wild bore can seize me.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 4. Note. (1848)

It is the advantage of fame that it is always privileged to take the world by the button.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 9. Note. (1862)

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis in his buttons, he will carry't.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 2, 71. (1598) In his stars.

A SOUL ABOVE BUTTONS, see under SOUL.

BUTTONHOLE

<sup>2</sup> The hard lodging on the boards [will] take their flesh downe a button hole lower.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), ii, 77. (1592) Will humiliate, take the conceit out of them.

On my word, I'll take you down a button-hole.

GEORGE PEELE, King Edward the First. (1593) Master, let me take you a button-hole lower.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 705. (1594)

I'll bring him a button-hole lower.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Triumph of Peace. (1633) Better mind yourselves, or I'll take ye down a button-hole lower.

H. B. STOWZ, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 4. (1850)

TAKE ONE DOWN A PEG, see under PEG.

BUYING

<sup>3</sup> He who buys and lies feels it in his purse. (El que compra y miente, en su bolsa lo siente.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25. (1605)

He that buys and lies, shall feel it in his purse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2056. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> You cannot buy what is not for sale.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 362. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>5</sup> He that buys by the penny, maintains not only himself but other people.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736 Many have been ruin'd by buying good penny-worths.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747 See also under BARGAIN.

<sup>6</sup> At the first Hand buy, At the third let lye.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6337. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> When you go to buy, don't show your silver.

HENRY H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 112. (1937)

<sup>8</sup> To buy dear is not bounty.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 162. (1640)

<sup>9</sup> Mongst many chapmen there are few that buyes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, If You Know Not Me. Pt. ii. (1606)

BUYING

<sup>10</sup> It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth. (Malum est, malum est, dicit omnis emptor: et cum recesserit, tunc gloriabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 14. (c. 350 B.C.) Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 1, 75.

(1601) DIOMEDEAN BARGAIN, see under BARGAIN.

He that blames would buy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 412. (1640) Mony men does lack, that yat wald fain have in their pack.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595) "Lack," to find lacks or faults in

He that lacks my mare would buy my mare.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 130. (1721)

He who findeth fault, meaneth to buy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2383. (1732)

He that speaks ill of the Mare will buy her.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

Never cheapen unless you mean to buy.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. iv, p. 56. (1902)

<sup>11</sup> You must ask for too much, if you want to get your due. (Iniquum petendum, ut acquum feras.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. iv, ch v, sec. 17. (c. A.D. 80) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 26. Cicero quotes the saying as a proverb, which probably referred originally to bargaining in the market, where the salesman, knowing that he would be beaten down, sets his original price too high. It would equally apply, as Quintilian applies it, to suits for damages in the courts. The Germans say, "Wer einen goldenen Wagen heischt, bekommt hie und da ein Rad davon," (Who asks for a golden wagon may now and then get a wheel)

<sup>12</sup> The timelie buier | hath cheaper his fier.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandrie: January's Abstract. (1557)

<sup>13</sup> Let the buyer beware, for he ought not to be ignorant of the nature of the property which he is buying from another. (Caveat emptor. quia ignorare non debuit quod ius alienum emit.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin law maxim. Most legal maxims are concerned with the rights of buyer and seller. Another ancient warning is the German, "Augen auf, Kauf ist Kauf" (Keep your eyes open: a sale is a sale)

They are no prouerb breakers: beware the buyer say they.

EDWARD SHARPHAM, The Fleire. (1607)

Let the buyer look to himself.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 41. (1672)

In buying needles examine the eyes. (Mai chên 'kan 'kung.)

WILLIAM DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, II. 189. (1872)

II—Buying and Selling

<sup>1</sup> If thou hast bought a thing thou hast made a profit; if thou hast sold it thou hast incurred a loss.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 51a. (c. 450)

Buying and selling is but winning and losing.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 75. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1036. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> As a nail sticketh fast between the joinings of the stones; so doth sin stick close between buying and selling.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xvii, 2. (c. 190 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> One may buy by mistake, but one never sells by mistake.

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 686. (1872) Or, as the French put it, "Il y a plus fous acheteurs que de fous vendeurs" (There are more foolish buyers than foolish sellers).

<sup>4</sup> Buy and sell and live by the loss.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 20. (1633)

Merchandising is a ticklish matter, seeing many buy and sell and live by the loss.

THOMAS FULLER, Mixt Contemplations, p. 347. (1660)

<sup>5</sup> A man must buie at the faire, and sell at home.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 21. (1616)

Buy at a fair, but sell at home.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 166. (1640)

Buy at a market, but sell at home.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670) The Germans say, "Man muss kaufen wenn es Markt ist" (One must buy when it is market time).

<sup>6</sup> Who buyeth deere, and taketh of credit, consumeth the body and looseth the seede.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 28. (1578)

<sup>7</sup> He bought the Fox-skin for Three-pence, and sold the Tail for a shilling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1814. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The buyer needs a hundred eyes, the seller not one.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 392. (1640)

Who buyes hath need of an hundred eyes, who sells hath enough of one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1670)

Buyers want an hundred Eyes, Sellers none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1035. (1732)

He who buys had need have 100 eyes, but one's enough for him that sells the stuff.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

He taught him to get . . . from customers by taking advantage of their ignorance. . . . He often repeated, 'The buyer has need of a hundred eyes; the seller has need but of one.'

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant: The Little Merchant. (1796)

The seller needs only one eye, the buyer needs a hundred. (Die verkoopt hoeft maer een oog, die koopt hoeft er hondert.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 288. (1856) A Flemish proverb. The Italians say, "Chi compra ha bisogno di cent'occhi, chi vende n' ha assai di uno"; the Germans, "Kauf bedarf hundert Augen; Verkauf hat an einem genug."

Buyers ought to have a hundred eyes.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 16. (1869)

<sup>9</sup> For a farthyng who euer did sell you

Might bost you to be better solde then bought

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

<sup>10</sup> Who always buys and sells, feels not what he spends.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 1 (1659) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5693. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> There is a difference between, will you buy, and will you sell.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 317. (1721)

"When people proffer their goods," Kelly comments, "buyers will be shy: and when people ask to buy, sellers will hold their wares the dearer." The Scots have another proverb, "When folk's ready to buy, ye can want to sell," and the Italians say, "E buon comprare quando an altro vuol vendere" (It is well to buy when someone else wants to sell).

<sup>12</sup> Are ciuile offices bought for monei? . . . If thei bei, thei must nedes sel, for it is wittily spoken, Vendere iure potest, emerat ille prius. he may lawefully sel it, he bought it before

HUGH LATIMER, Fifth Sermon before Edward VI. (1549)

They that buy justice by wholesale, to make themselves savers, must sell it by retail.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Judge. (1642)

They that buy the office will sell the act.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. iii. sec. 2. (1650)

They, that buy an Office, must sell something.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 216. (1732)

He that buyeth Magistracy, must sell Justice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2055. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> Buy cheape, sell deare.

THOMAS LODGE, A Fig for Momus. Epis. iv. (1595)

Buy in the cheapest market?—yes; but what made your market cheap? . . . Sell in the dearest? but what made your market dear?

JOHN RUSKIN, Unto This Last. Ch. 2. (1862)

'To buy in the cheapest market and sell in the dearest' was Mr. Badman's common rule in business. . . . In Bunyan's opinion, it was knavery in disguise.

J. A. FROUDE, John Bunyan, p. 104. (1880)

<sup>14</sup> If you buy everything, the result will be that you sell everything. (Omnia emis; sic fiet ut omnia vendas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 98. (c. A. D. 90)

Buy what thou hast no need of, and e'er long thou shalt sell thy necessities.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738. The Scots say, "Buy what ye dinna want, and ye'll sell what ye canna spare." The Italians, "Chi compra ciò che pagar non può, vende ciò che non vuole" (He who buys what he cannot pay for, sells what he would rather not). The Germans, "Wer kauft, was er nicht braucht, wird bald verkaufen, was er braucht."

1 When you buy others' goods, be careful not to sell your own. (Ubi emas aliena, caveas ne vendas tua.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 730. (c. 43 B. C.)

2 He that buys and sells is called a merchant.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 400. (1678)

"This proverb," says Ray, "is used in derision of those who buy and sell to their loss."

Does a man buy and sell just to be called a merchant? . . . The chief aim in trade is to make a profit.

ABRAHAM COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p. 78. (1911)

3 He that byth dere may sel dere.

THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Bk. ii, ch. 1, p. 175. (c. 1538)

The old saying is, "He that buys dear, must sell dear."

ANDREW YARRANTON, England's Improvement by Land and Sea. Pt. ii, p. 183. (1677)

4 How that Ioseph was boght and sold.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 142. (c. 1300)

Than will the pickthanke it tell

To your most ennies, you to bye and sell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

It would make a man mad as a buck to be so bought and sold.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 72.

(1592) "Bought and sold" i.e., betrayed, made a fool of.

Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 306. (1592)

Fly, noble English, you are bought and sold.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 4, 10. (1596)

You are bought and sold like sheepe in a market.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 80. (1639)

To be bought and sold in a company.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 166. (1670)

We're bought and sold for English gold.

ROBERT BURNS, Such a Parcel of Rogues. (1791)

BYGONES

5 These things will we let be, as past and done. (ἀλλὰ τὰ μὲν προτετύχθαι ἴδσομεν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 60. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated in xviii, 112; xix, 65, and elsewhere. Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, x, 12.

Let us let bygones be bygones. (τὰ μέχρι νῦν ἀφώμεν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 19, sec. 34. (c. A. D. 100)

God taketh me as I am, and not as I was,

Take you me so to, and let all things past pas.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Pray . . . that bygones betwixt me and my Lord may be bygones.

SAMUEL RUTHERFORD, Letters. Let. lxii. (1636)

Let bygans be bygans.

SIR FRANCIS NETHERSOLE, Parables, p. 5. (1648)

Forgive one another, . . . according to our proverb, "Bygones be bygones."

LORD BELHAVEN, Speech on Union, 2 Nov., 1706.

By-gones be by-gones, and fair play for time to come.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 292. (1710)

Let bygones be bygones. (Lass das Vergangne vergangen sein.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 24: Kerker. (1806)

The Spaniards say, "Erase que se era."

Let us adopt a Scotch proverb, . . . "Let bygones be bygones, and fair play for the future."

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 51. (1815)

Let bygones be bygones.

GEORGE BORROW, Romany Rye. Ch. 44. (1857)

TENNYSON, Dora. (1882) DE MORGAN, It Never Can Happen Again. Ch. 28. (1909)

SHAW, Overruled. (1912) LORD BERNERS, The Camel. (1930) AYRE, Mr. Sycamore. (c.

1934) etc., etc.

I am perfectly willing to let bygones be bygones.

M. V. HEBERDEN, Murder Makes a Racket, p.

10. (1942) PURTELL, To a Blindfold Lady, p.

244. (1942)

C

CABBAGE

6 If you wish to drink deep at a banquet and to enjoy your dinner, eat as much raw cabbage as you wish, seasoned with vinegar, before dinner, and likewise after dinner eat some half dozen leaves: it will make you feel as if you had not dined, and you can drink as much as you please. (Bibesque quantum voles.)

CATO, De Agri Cultura. Ch. 156. (c. 170 B. C.)

VARRO, in his De Re Rustica, refers to this as Cato's famous recipe. Cato says that the cabbage surpasses all other vegetables in medicinal value, and devotes many pages to a description of its various uses.

<sup>1</sup> Served up again and again, the cabbage is the death of the unhappy master. (Occidit miseros crambe repetita magistros.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 154. (c. A. D. 120)
 "Do you teach rhetoric?" Juvenal is asking, in describing the unhappy lot of school teachers. "O Vettius! what iron bowels must you have when your troop of students each in turn stands up and recites what he has just been conning in his seat, repeating the self-same things in the self-same verses! Served up again and again, such crambe is the death of the unhappy master." Crambe is a transliteration of the Greek κράμβη, meaning kale or cabbage, and Juvenal is merely paraphrasing an old Greek proverb, δὲς κράμβη θάνατος (Twice-served cabbage is death)—"cabbage" being used, in the opinion of the compiler, as the Greek and Latin equivalent of what is now called "tripe."

Crambe twyse served is deathe. (Crambe bis posita mors.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. v, No. 38. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 56. (1550) It will be noted that Taverner doesn't venture to translate crambe, but he explains that it "is a certayne kinde of wortes, or after the mynde of Athenaeus, Crambe in olde tyme was all one with that which the latin men call Raphanus [also transliterated from the Greek] and we call Radyshe." A medieval Latin form is "Crambe bis cocta, bis posita" (Cabbage twice boiled, twice served).

Who left out nothing that before I put in, which I must omitte, least I set before you, colewortes twice sodden.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 391. (1580) "Sodden" means boiled, or prepared by boiling.

Twice-sod simplicity, bis coctus!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, ii, 22. (1595)

This never cometh, but for want of other matter, being a crambe, oftentimes sodde.

ARCHBISHOP GEORGE ABBOT, Exposition Upon the Prophet Jonah, p. 301. (1600)

Poor school-masters this twice boill'd lettuce kills. C. B. STAPYLTON, tr., Juvenal. (1647)

Crambe, a Repetition of Words, or saying the same Thing over again.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Crambe. (1721) Like warmed-up cabbage served at each repast, The repetition kills the wretch at last.

WILLIAM GIFFORD, tr., Juvenal. (1802)

CACKLING

<sup>2</sup> Here is one that cackles when he has not laid, and God coming, finds his nest empty.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, Vol. ii, p. 96 (1629)
 You cackle often, but never lay an Egg.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5868. (1732)
 You're one o' that family o' poultry as does the cackling for other hens' eggs.

D. C. MURRAY, John Vale's Guardian. Ch. 39. (1890)

<sup>3</sup> I would not have your Cackling, for your Eggs.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2658. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Some cackels lyke a henne or a Jack dawe.
 THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, sig. 117B. (1553)

She can cackel like a cadowe [jackdaw].
 UNKNOWN, Marriage of Wit and Wisdom. Sc. 3. (1579)

Some persons are like hens that after laying must be cackling.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor in His Meridian Splendour, p. 43. (1660)

The peers cackle as if they had laid an egg.
 BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1847)

CAESAR

<sup>5</sup> I appeal unto Caesar. (Καίσαρα ἐπικαλοῦμαι.)
New Testament: Acts, xxv, 11. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Caesarem appello."

<sup>6</sup> Either Pontifex Maximus or an exile. (ἀρχιερεῖα τὸν νῦν ἢ φυγάδα ἔχεις.)

JULIUS CAESAR, to his mother, on starting for the election to the office of Pontifex Maximus, which he was contesting with Catulus. (63 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 206A. Plutarch also tells the story in his Life of Caesar, ch. 7. Suetonius, Julius, ch. 13, has, "I will never return except as Pontifex" (Nisi pontificem non reversurum)

A man ought either to be frugal or Caesar. (Aut frugi hominem esse oportere aut Caesarem.)

EMPEROR GAIUS CALIGULA, explaining his extravagance. (A. D. 39) See Suetonius, Caligula, ch. 37. Two Latin proverbs echo the same thought, "Aut Caesar aut nullus" (Either Caesar or nobody), and "Aut Caesar aut nihil" (Either Caesar or nothing), which Caesar Borgia took for his motto.

Caesar or nothing? We are nothing loath Thus to acclaim him; Caesar Borgia's both. (Aut nihil aut Caesar vult dici Borgia. Quidni? Cum simul et Caesar possit et esse nihil.)

JACOPO SANNAZARO, De Cesare Borgia. (c. 1500) See Carmina Poetarum Italorum, iii, 444.

<sup>7</sup> Because Caesar's wife must be free from suspicion. (ὅτι τὴν Καίσαρος γυναῖκα καὶ διαβολῆς δεῖ καθάραν εἶναι.)

JULIUS CAESAR, to the prosecutor, at the trial of Publius Clodius for sacrilege. (62 B. C.) Clodius had secured admission to Caesar's house disguised as a woman, during the celebration of a festival for women only, but was discovered and indicted for sacrilege. Caesar divorced his wife, Pompeia, at once, but at Clodius' trial testified that he knew nothing whatever about the crime with which Clodius was charged. "Why, then, did you divorce your wife?" the prosecutor asked, and Caesar replied, "Because I thought my wife ought not even to be under suspicion." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Caesar, x. 6. Suetonius tells the story at length in his Life of Caesar, secs. 6 and 74, and gives Caesar's answer as, "Quoniam meos tam suspicione quam crimine iudico carere oportere" (Because I maintain that the members of my family should be free from suspicion, as well as from guilt). PLUTARCH also retells the story in his Life of Cicero, xxix, 7, and gives Caesar's answer in the form cited above in his Moralia, sec. 206B.

All women shall be as Caesar would have his wife, not onely free from sinne, but from suspicion.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and his England (Arber), p. 329 (1580)

Caesar's wife must be above suspicion.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Bk. iii, p. 85. (1748)

Caesar's wife ought to be above suspicion. . . . Yet most would be slow to acknowledge . . . that Caesar himself ought to be so too.

J. C. HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 187. (1827)

I beg your pardon. Caesar's wife is above suspicion.

BERNARD SHAW, The Man of Destiny. (1895)

1 Come, my good man, be bold and fear not; you carry Caesar and Caesar's fortunes in thy boat. (Καίσαρα φέρεις καὶ τὴν Καίσαρος τύχην ἀνυμνέουσας.)

JULIUS CAESAR, to the master of a small boat, when caught in a heavy storm on the way to Brundisium from Apollonia. (48 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar, xxxviii, 3. Suetonius also tells the story, Julius, sec. 58. The Latin is, "Caesarem vehis Caesarisque fortunam," or "Caesarem portas et fortunam eius."

You are uneasy; you never sailed with me before, I see.

ANDREW JACKSON, to an elderly man who showed signs of fear while sailing down Chesapeake Bay during a storm. (c. 1829) See PARTON, Life of Jackson, iii, 493.

2 Every woman's man and every man's woman. (Omnium mulierum virum et omnium viro-um mulierem.)

CURIO, Speech, denouncing Caesar's vices. (c. 46 B.C.) See SUTONIUS, Lives of the Caesars: Julius, sec. 52. Suetonius comments that Curio's speech removed all doubt that Caesar "had an evil reputation, both for shameless vice and for adultery." Curio was merely Latinizing an epigram which has been preserved in the Greek Anthology, bk. xi, epig. 272: ἀνδρες εἰσι γυναῖκες, καὶ ἀνδράσιν εἰσι γυναῖκες (They are men to women and women to men).

3 Caesar, headlong in everything. (Caesar in omnia praeceps.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 656. (c. A. D. 60)

4 Caesar who conquered all things saving himself.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 342 (1580)

5 No chief has Rome so loved, nor thee so much, Caesar, as now. (Nullum Roma ducem, nec te sic, Caesar, amavit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 11. (A. D. 93) Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 23. (1599)

6 Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour. (ἀπόδοτε πᾶσι τὰς ὀφειλάς, τῷ τὸν φόρον τὸν φόρον, τῷ τὸ τέλος τὸ τέλος, τῷ τὸν φόβον τὸν φόβον, τῷ τὴν τιμὴν τὴν τιμὴν.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 7. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Reddite ergo omnibus debita: cui tributum, tributum: cui vectigal, vectigal: cui timorem, timorem: cui honorem, honorem."

Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's. (ἀπόδοτε οὖν τὰ Καίσαρος Καίσαρι καὶ τὰ τοῦ θεοῦ τῷ θεῷ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxii, 21. (c. A. D. 65)

See also Mark, xii, 17; Luke, xx, 25. The Vulgate is, "Reddite ergo quae sunt Caesaris, Caesari: et quae sunt Dei, Deo." It is quoted by RABELAIS, Gargantua, i, 19.

Render unto all men their due, but remember thou art also a man.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Humility. (1838)

I rendered to Farley the things that were James'.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Wrong Formula. (1941)

7 No bending knee will call thee Caesar now.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 1, 18. (1591)

Thou'rt an emperor, Caesar, Keisar, and Pheezar.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 3, 9. (1610) "Caesar" is believed to be the earliest Latin word adopted in Teutonic, where it became Gothic kaiser, and went into Middle English as keiser or cayser.

8 Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 236. (1600)

Imperious What's-his-name, dead and turned to stone—

No use to write or call him on the phone.

O. HENRY (W.S. PORTER), He also Serves. (1909)

Imperial Caesar, asleep in such a way, might shut his mouth and keep the wind away.

O. HENRY, The Hiding of Black Bill. (1909)

9 Hail, emperor, they who are about to die salute thee! (Ave, imperator, morituri te salutant!)

SUTONIUS, Lives of the Caesars: Claudius. Ch. xxi, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 120) The salutation used by the Roman gladiators as they filed past the imperial box before fighting in the circus. Sometimes given as, "Ave, imperator, morituri te salutamus!" (We who are about to die salute thee!)

"O Caesar, we who are about to die Salute you!" was the gladiators' cry
In the arena, standing face to face
With death and with the Roman populace.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 1. (1874)

Great Julius, on the mountains bred,
A flock, perhaps, or herd had led;
He that the world subdued had been
But the best wrestler on the green.

EDMUND WALLER, To Zelinda, l. 19. (1645)

CAIN

As the inventor of murder, and the father of art, Cain must have been a man of first-rate genius.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY: On Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts. (1827)

CAIN FIRST BUILDER OF CITIES, see under CITY

They will feel that they have been raising Cain and breaking things.

PAIGE, Dow's Sermons. Vol. i, p. 247. (c. 1849)
Topsy would hold a perfect carnival of confusion. . . . In short, as Miss Ophelia phrased it, "raising Cain" generally.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 20. (1852)

I'm a man that has lived rough, and I'll raise Cain.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 3. (1882)
Every time he got drunk he raised Cain around town.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 6. (1884)
Shouting drunk as usual, and raising Cain!

P. L. FORD, Peter Sterling. Ch. 2. (1894) The Dict. of American English notes that the phrase is a purely American one, meaning to make a disturbance, and cites an alleged joke from the St. Louis Pennant, of 2 May, 1840: "Why have we every reason to believe that Adam and Eve were both rowdies? Because . . . they both raised Cain."

RAISING NED, see under NED.

CAKE

Give cakes and ale to perfect souls.

ANT, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. i, l. 34. (c. 4000 B.C.) Offerings of cakes and ale are referred to frequently throughout the papyrus.

Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 123. (1599).

Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII Act v, sc. 4, l. 11. (1612)
You are for ale and cakes.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

That's Cake and Cheese to the Country.

JOHN DAY, He of Gals. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 68. (1606)

If you surpass him in impudence, we take the cake. (ἦν δ' ἀναίδεια παρέλθης, ἡμέτερος δὲ πυραμοῦς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 277. (424 B.C.)

The πυραμοῦς was a cake of roasted wheat and honey which was given as a prize to him who kept awake best during a night-watch, or a drinking-party. The phrase became a proverb for the prize of any victory. Aristophanes repeats it in The Thesmophoriaz-usae, l. 94: "In all craftiness we take the cake" (τοῦ γὰρ τεχνάζειν ἡμέτερος δὲ πυραμοῦς). It therefore antedates by twenty-three centuries the negro cake-walk from which many people think it derives. The "cake-walk," it should perhaps be explained, is a contest with a cake as a prize, the contesting couples walking arm in arm up and down a long room, and the cake being given to the couple which walks and turns the corners most gracefully.

I judged that the cake was ours.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 240. (1889)

You take the biscuit.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iii. (1904) INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 145. (1940)

This takes the claret.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act iv. (1906)

You Yankees assuredly take the cake for assurance.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Helping the Other Fellow. (1908)

Hartsell's wife takes the cake.

RING LARDNER, The Golden Honeymoon. (1926)
You take the cake.

CARTER DICKSON, And So to Murder, p. 160 (1940) WILLIAMS, The Corn is Green. Act ii (1940) BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p. 94

A highly geological homemade cake.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 5. (1843)

If you have any communications to make, hurry them up, hot and hasty, like buckwheat cakes at a cheap eating-house.

LORENZO DOW, Sermons, p. 51. (c. 1825)

Hurry up the cakes, i. e. be quick, look alive.

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Hurry. (1848) "This phrase, which has lately got into vogue," says Bartlett, "originated in the common New York eating-houses, where it is the custom for the waiter to bawl out the name of each dish as fast as ordered, and where the order, 'Hurry up them cakes,' is frequently heard."

He quickly hurried up his cakes, and toddled home again.

UNKNOWN, How Are You, General Lee? (1864)
Go ahade and hurry up yo' cakes.

ROWLAND E. ROBINSON, Uncle Lisha, p. 68. (1897)

There was never a cake, but it had a make [mate, fellow].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595)

Every cake hath its make, but a scrape-cake hath two.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678) A "scrape-cake" is a cake made of scrapings, and Ray adds, "Every wench hath her sweet-heart, and the dirtiest commonly the most."

There is never any Cake,

But there's some of the same Make.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6363. (1732) There's no cake, but there's another of the same make.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 10. (1762)

<sup>1</sup> I had rather my Cake burn, than you should turn it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2598. (1732) That Cake came out of my Oven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4335.

<sup>2</sup> Wolde you bothe eate your cake, and haue your cake?

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546) A man cannot eat his cake and have it still.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. (1611) Works (Grosart), ii, 47. The modern variation is, "A woman can't eat her cake and have 'It' too."

Lay out thy joy, yet hope to save it?

Wouldst thou both eat thy cake, and have it?

George Herbert, The Sizer. (a. 1633)

I can't I tro

Both eat my cake and have it too.

ROBERT HEATH, Occasional Poems, p. 19. (1650) As ridiculous as the way of children, who eat their cake and afterwards cry for it.

EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics of Men, i, 130. (1711)

She was handsome in her time; but she cannot eat her cake and have her cake.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

'Tis a point to the moral the proverb implies,

"You can't have your cake if you eat it."

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, v, 307. (1871)

I believed in eating your cake and having it.

HENRY JAMES, A Passionate Pilgrim. (1875)

One cannot eat one's cake and have it too.

T. H. HUXLEY, Letter to Herbert Spencer, 27 Dec., 1880.

There still remains the intensely human instinct, which survives all the lectures of moralists, the desire to eat one's cake and also to have it.

A. C. BENSON, From a College Window, p. 35. (1907)

"I've had my cake," said the Colonel, looking at Martha, "and et it too."

ELEANOR EARLY, A New England Sampler, p. 95. (1940)

I hope, before I'm through,

To eat my cake, and bake it, too.

MARGARET FISHPACK, Career Girl. (1940)

He always will try to eat his cake and keep it.

NGAIO MARSH, Death and the Dancing Footman, p. 55. (1941) See also, BALLARD, Say Yes to Murder, p. 91. (1942) BARBER AND

SCHABELTITZ, Drawn Conclusions, p. 184. (1942) DEAN, Layoff, p. 203. (1942) IRISH,

Three O'clock, p. 157. (1943) etc., etc. The French say, "On ne peut pas avoir le drap et l'argent" (One can't have the cloth and the money); the Italians, "Vorebbe mangiar la focaccia e trovar le in tasca?"

<sup>3</sup>

Leave room for cake. (παρακούντι καταλείπειν χώραν.)

PHILIP OF MACEDON (c. 350 B.C.), to his entourage, when they had arrived at a friend's house and he suspected that food was not plentiful. So his followers, looking for more to come, ate sparingly of what was set before them, and the dinner was ample for all. (PLUTARCH, Moralia, 124A, 178D, 707B.)

<sup>4</sup>

His bread is broken. (Panem frangito.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 729. (c. 194 B.C.) In the context, Plautus makes a play on the word "pultem," which may mean either knock or cottage. "What if I batter the door? But what if he pays no attention to the batter?" "Then his bread's broken—his cake's dough."

My treasure will be cinders. (Mon thesaur soit charbons.) i.e., My cake will be dough.

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, Prologue. (1545)

Your cake is dough, and all your fat lie in the fire

THOMAS BECON, Prayers, p. 277. (1559)

Our cake's dough on both sides.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 110. (1593)

My cake is dough; but I'll be among the rest.

Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, v, 1, 145.

Steward, your cake is dow.

BEN JONSON, The Case is Altered. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1598)

Which puts . . . me into a great fear, that all my cake will be doe still.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 27 April, 1665.

I thought all my meal dough.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 191. (1721)

Then up steps the Supreme Court and tells 'em their cake is all dough.

SEBA SMITH, Major Downing, p. 66. (1830)

She'll wish her cake dough afore she's done of him

THOMAS HARDY, Mayor of Casterbridge. Ch 13. (1886)

"All our cakes are dough." A proverbial expression, indicating the failure of any undertaking or project.

BAKER, Northants. Glossary: Cake. (1854)

The O.E.D. notes the phrase as obsolete, but it certainly is not so in the United States.

<sup>5</sup>

Let them eat cake. (Qu'ils mangent de la brioche.)

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU, Confessions. Bk. vi, eighth paragraph from end. (c. 1768) The full quotation is as follows: "At length I remembered the thoughtless saying of a great princess, who, on being informed that the country people had no bread, replied, "Then let them eat cake." (Enfin je me rappelai le pis-aller d'une grande princesse à qui l'on disait que les paysans n'avaient pas de pain.

et qui répondit: 'Qu'ils mangent de la brioche.') The saying is usually attributed to Marie Antoinette, some years after her arrival in France in 1770, but it will be noted that Rousseau's anecdote was written before that date. It is difficult to translate brioche, which is not a cake, but rather a bun or fancy bread, like Scotch scones.

Lacking bread, tarts are good. (A falta de pan, buenas son tortas.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 270.

(1856) A Spanish proverb.

Marie Antoinette made only one mistake. She should have said, "Let them eat hokum."

WESTBROOK PEGLER, Fair Enough, 5 Dec., 1934.

Those who can afford cake have seldom revelled at being obliged to eat it.

VINCENT SHEEAN, Between the Thunder and the Sun, p. 117. (1943)

CALAMITY

See also Adversity, Misfortune

1 Calamity is man's true touchstone.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Triumph of Honour. Sc. 1. (c. 1619)

Calamity is the Touchstone of a brave Mind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1045. (1732)

2 Calamities are of two kinds: misfortune to ourselves, and good fortune to others.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

3 Public calamity is a mighty leveller.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America. (1743)

4 Calamity has been my teacher. (τὰ δὲ μοι παθήματα ὄντα δάριτα μαθήματα γέγονε.)

CROESUS to CYRUS. (c. 550 B.C.) See HERODOTUS. History. Bk. i, sec. 207. The proverbial form is, "παθήματα, μαθήματα."

There is a Greek proverb to express that men learn by their sufferings more than by any other teaching, one which in the Latin, Nocumenta, documenta, finds both in rhyme and sense its equivalent.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 27. (1853)

5 Shut [your] doors and sit in [your] house. [yet] calamity will come down from the skies. (Pi mên wu li tso 'huo 'tien shang lai.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 193. (1872)

6 After calamities, more cautious. (Post acerba prudentior.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. iii, No. 59. (1523) Erasmus gives another form. "Post mala prudentior."

7 A Cynthian calamity. (Κυνθῶλης συμφορὰ.)

HELIODORUS, (c. A.D. 250) As quoted by PRORIUS, 533.14. A proverbial phrase meaning complete disaster, referring to the destruction of the Cynthians by Amphitryon, in Greek mythology.

8 So full is the world of calamity, that every source of pleasure is polluted.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 203. (1752)

9 Calamity and happiness in all cases are men's own seeking.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, pt. i, ch. 4, sec. 5. (c. 360 B.C.)

10 It's Calamity Headquarters. (Hospitium est calamitatis.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 553. (c. 194 B.C.)

11 In calamity any rumor is believed. (Ad calamitatem quilibet rumor valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 17. (c. 43 B.C.)

A novel calamity always works the graver mischief. (Gravius nocet quodcumque inexpertum accidit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 234.

In calamity even a laugh is an injury. (In calamitoso risus etiam iniuria est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 295.

The cure for calamity is equanimity. (Medicina calamitatis est aequanimitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 383.

He is more powerful who knows not the power of calamity. (Mage valet qui nescit quod calamitas valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 389.

He who dreads calamity rarely meets it. (Qui metuit calamitatem rarius accipit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 555.

Calamity easily finds whomsoever it seeks (Quemcumque quaerit calamitas facile invenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 567.

12 Calamity is virtue's opportunity. (Calamitas virtutis occasio est.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 6. (c. A.D. 45)

13 When Heaven sends down calamities it is possible to escape them. When we occasion our own calamities, it is not possible any longer to live.

T'AE KEA. Quoted by MENCIVS, iv, 1, 8. (c. 300 B.C.)

14 What region of earth is not full of our calamities? (Quae regio in terris nostri non plena laboris?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i. l. 460. (19 B.C.)

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts, And thou art wedded to calamity.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 3, 2. (1595)

I am in calamity, my dear. I would love you if you were in calamity.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. iii, ch. 30. (1754)

Whom unmerciful disaster

Followed fast and followed faster.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. (1845)

<sup>1</sup> We have some "calamity howlers" here in Washington, as well as in Kansas.

UNKNOWN, Congressional Record, 2 March, 1892, p. 1654, col. 1.

A campaign of calamity-howling.

D. G. PHILLIPS, The Plum Tree, p. 264. (1905)
"You're a calamity howler!" snapped Shaw. "The desert has wore a saddle sore on yore nerves."

CLARENCE E. MULFORD, Hopalong Cassidy. Ch. 8. (1910)

The pair of calamity prophets broke off their laments.

J. C. LINCOLN, Captain Warren's Wards, p. 3. (1911)

CALENDS, Greek, see under Never.

CALF

<sup>2</sup> That calf never heard a church-bell.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 110. (1917)
It was born and killed between two Sundays.

<sup>3</sup> The greatest Calfe is not the sweetest veale.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 307. (1636)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4569. (1732)

[He] bids us all the proverb feel,
"The largest calves are not the sweetest veal."

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), A Benevolent Epistle to Sylvanus Urban. (1790)

<sup>4</sup> They have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it. (Feceruntque sibi vitulum conflatilem, et adoraverunt.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxxii, 8. (c. 800 B.C.)
Priests . . . wenten to calveren of gold.

JOHN WYCLIF, Begging Friars, p. 12. (c. 1371)
They . . . fell off from God to worship Calves.

JOHN MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 416. (1671)

The People will worship even a Calf, if it be a Golden one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4704. (1732) The proverbial use of "golden calf" as a synonym for money.

Millions . . . who fancy that happiness may be attained by riches . . . may be numbered among the idolaters of the golden calf.

J. C. HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 164. (1827)

The worship of the Golden Calf is the characteristic cult of modern Society.

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Collections and Recollections. Ser. ii, ch. 2. (1902)

<sup>5</sup> A quiet Calf sucks its Dam, and another Cow also.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 372. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Drink, live like Greeks, eat, gorge yourselves, kill the fatted calf! (Bibite, pergraecamini, | este, ecfercite vos, saginam caedite.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 64. (c. 220 B.C.)

Bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat and be merry. (φέρετε τὸν μόσχον τὸν στυγερόν, θύσατε καὶ φαγόντες εὐφρανθήμεν.)

New Testament: Luke, xv, 23. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Adducite vitulum saginatum et occidite, et manducemus, et epulemur." This is the story of the prodigal son and of his father's rejoicing at his return. "Fatted calf" is repeated in the 27th verse, and has become proverbial for welcoming a guest with the best of everything.

Go, let the fatted calf be kill'd,

My Prodigal's come home at last.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Welcome, l. 1. (1647)
The whole family crowded round him: the fatted calf was killed; and all was joy, mirth, and jubilee.

JOHN MOORE, The Post-Captain. Ch. 8. (1810)
The fatted calf, Minister, the fatted calf.

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act i. (1897)

I'm the returned prodigal. Mrs. Matthews killed the fatted calf.

GEORGE BAGBY, Here Comes the Corpse, p. 71. (1941)

CALM

<sup>7</sup> Before and after earthquakes there is a calm in the air.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk. Ser. ii, ch. 4. (1822)

It was the calm that precedes the storm.

WILLIAM ROUGHHEAD, The Shadow on Shandy Hall. Ch. 3. (1939)

CALUMNY

See also Rumor, Scandal, Slander

<sup>8</sup> When thou hearest good or bad (of people). Put it aside as though thou hadst not heard it; Place the good upon thy tongue, But let the evil be hidden within thee.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xi. l. 8. (c. 700 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Keep thy tongue from malicious speech.

So wilt thou make thyself loved of the people
AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. x, l. 21.

<sup>9</sup> The fine dust of calumny. (Abak leshon hara.)
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 16<sup>a</sup>; Arachin, 16a. (c. 450)

<sup>10</sup> Nothing so swift as calumny. (Nihil est autem tam volucrum, quam maledictum.)

CICERO, Pro Cnaeo Plancio. Sec. 23. (54 B.C.)

Nothing moves swifter than calumny. (Fama nihil est celerius.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 119. (1869) Quoting Livy.

<sup>11</sup> Calumny always makes the calumniator worse, but the calumniated—never.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 172. (1820)

<sup>12</sup> The bearer of calumny is usually its author.
SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 612. (c. 1050)

<sup>13</sup> I never hitherunto knewe man so good and virtuous, which hath not been subject to the malice and slaunders of some one.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 106. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As there is no wool so white but the Diar can make blacke, no Apple so sweete but a cunning grafter can chaunge into a Crabbe; so is there no man so voyde of cryme that a spightful tongue cannot make him to be thought a caltife.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 330. (1580)

Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 140. (1600)

Back-wounding calumny

The whitest virtue strikes.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 2, 196. (1604)

And calumny, by working under ground, Can, unreveng'd, the greatest merit wound.

SWIFT, To a Friend Who Had Been Much Abused in Many Inveterate Libels. (1730)

1 Calumny requires no proof.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 194. (1823)

2 Whom does lying calumny affright except the man who is full of faults? (Mendax infamia terret | quem nisi mendosum?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16. l. 39. (20 B. C.) Act uprightly and despise Calumny; Dirt may stick to a Mud Wall, but not to polish'd Marble.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757

3 To spread suspicion, to invent calumnies, to propagate scandal, requires neither labour nor courage.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 183. (1751)

4 Calumnies are answered best with silence.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act ii, sc. 1. (1607)

To persevere in one's duty and be silent, is the best answer to calumny.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to William Livingston, 7 Dec., 1779.

5 Nothing is more distressing than calumny. (οὐδέν διαβολῆς ἐστὶν ἐπιπονώτερον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 576. (c. 300 B. C.)

There are calumnies against which even innocence loses courage.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon. (c. 1810)

6 The men who carry, and those who listen to calumnies, should, if I could have my way, all hang, the talebearers by their tongues, the listeners by their ears. (Homines qui gestant quique auscultant crimina, | si meo arbitratu liceat, omnes pendeant, | gestores linguis, auditores auribus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 427. (c. 195 B. C.)

The shrug, the hum or ha, these petty brands That calumny doth use.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, ii, 1, 71. (1611)

7 He [Medius] urged them not to be afraid to sting with their calumnies, pointing out that, even if the man who is stung succeeds in healing the wound, the scar of the calumny will still remain. (ἡ οὐλὴ μενεῖ τῆς διαβολῆς.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Tell a Flatterer, 65D. (c. A. D. 95) Medius was the leader of the band of flatterers who danced attendance on Alexander the Great.

Calumniate boldly, something will always stick. (Audacter calumniare, semper aliquid haeret.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum.

Pt. viii, sec. 2. (1605) Quoted as a Latin proverb, for which Bacon suggested a variation, "Audacter te vendita, semper aliquid haeret" (Praise yourself up boldly, something always sticks).

Calumniate strongly and some of it will stick. (Calumniare fortiter, et aliquid adhaerebit.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 46.

(1869) Some English equivalents: "Slander leaves a score behind it"; "Lay it on thick, some of it will stick"; "A blow from a frying-pan may not hurt, but it blacks."

Lye lustily, some filth will stick.

THOMAS HALL, Funebria Florae, p. 38. (1660)

'Tis a blessed Line in Matchiavel—If Durt enough be thrown, some will stick.

B. R., A Letter from a Catholic Gentleman to His Popish Friends. (1678)

If the whole world does not enter, yet half of it will.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 406. (1678)

"'Tis meant of calumny and reproach," Ray explains, "where many times some part is believed, though all be not."

Scurrility's a useful trick,

Approv'd by the most politic;

Fling dirt enough, and some will stick.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. ii. (1706)

If the Ball does not stick to the Wall, yet 'twill leave some Mark.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2701. (1732)

To me they meant no hurt.

But 'twas my Guest at whom they threw the dirt.

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. ii, l. 144. (1738)

The scandal of others is mere dirt—throw a great deal, and some of it will stick.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, Man and Wife: Prelude. (1769)

Throw a piece of mud against the wall: if it does not stick, it will at least leave a mark.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 255. (1817)

Captain Cornish . . . had also imbibed the vulgar but correct notion of "put it on thick, and a little will stick," so that in plaster and in compliments the proverb is verified.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 3.

(1841) An amplification of the proverb, "Plaster thick, Some will stick."

Only throw dirt enough and some of it is sure to stick.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1857)

1 Never lend a ready ear to calumnies. (Difficilem habere oportet aurem ad crimina.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 156. (c. 43 B.C.)

He who laughs at a calumny makes himself its accomplice.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs. p. 365. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

2 Calumny, the immortal daughter of self-love and idleness.

(La Médisance est la fille immortelle De l'Amour-propre et de l'Oisiveté.)

VOLTAIRE, A Madame la Marquise du Chatelet: Sur la Calomnie. (c. 1760)

CAMEL

3 The camel desired horns and lost her ears. (ἡ κάμηλος ἐπιθυμήσασα κεράτων καὶ τὰ ὦτα τρoσoπώλεσε.)

AESOP, Fables: The Camel. (c. 570 B.C.) The fable tells of a camel that besought Zeus for horns, since so many handsome animals had them, but the god not only refused the horns, but cropped the camel's ears for her presumption. The moral is that by asking too much, one may lose the little one already has.

The camel went in search of horns, and his ears were cut off.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 106a. (c. 450) Rabbi Yochanan explains that this popular saying is based upon the story of Balaam, who was slain by the Midianites when he came to claim a reward for the twenty-four thousand that fell in Israel in consequence of his advice to Balak. (Numbers, xxxi, 8.)

The camel, wishing for horns, lost even its ears. (Camelus desiderans cornua, etiam aures perdidit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chiliadis iii, cent. v, No. 8. (1523)

But for a subject to affect a kingdom, Is like the camel that of Jove begged horns.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Conspiracy of Charles Duke of Byron. Act iv, sc. 1. (1608)

The Camel going to seek horns, lost its ears.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 399. (1678) "Against those," Ray explains, "who being discontented with what they have, in pursuit of more lose what they once had." The Germans say, "Wer zu viel verlangt, verliert auch das, was er hat" (Who asks too much, loses even what he has).

The Camel going to get Horns, lost his Ears.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4439. (1732)

MANY SET OUT FOR WOOL AND COME HOME SHORN, see under WOOL.

4 The camel is dancing. (κάμηλος ὀρχεῖται.)

AESOP, Fables: The Camel and the Monkey. (c. 570 B.C.) The fable relates how, at a great meeting of beasts, the camel, seeing the monkey dance, attempted it also, and was so awkward that she was driven from the meeting. The Latin form is "Camelus saltat."

In Media the camel can dance on a bushel basket (Kab).

Babylonian Talmud: Jobamoth, fo. 45a. (c. 450) Meaning that in Media everything is possible.

5 Every crooked-necked thing is not a camel.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 616. (1817)

A Camel's all lumpy and bumpy and humpy—Any Shape does for me.

C. E. CARRYL, The Complaint of the Camel. (1909)

6 The camel laughed till he split his lip.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 330. (1938) A Bedouin proverb.

He who houses a camel must make his door higher.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 330. Arabic.

7 The camel, even when mangy, bears the burden of many asses. (κάμηλος καὶ ψωριῶσα, πολλῶν ὄνων ἀνατίθεται φορτία.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, v, 81. (c. A.D. 125)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, No. 58. (1523) The Latin is, "Camelus vel scabiosa complurium asinorum gestat onera."

8 There do come as many calves' skins to market as of bulls or kine.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 416. (1552) Referred to as "a common saying."

Old Camels carry young Camels' skins to the market.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1099 (1640)

Many old camels carry the skins of the young ones to the market.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 399. (1678)

9 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. (εὐκοπώτερόν ἐστιν κάμηλον διὰ τρήματος ραβίδος εἰσελθεῖν ἢ πλούσιον εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ θεοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 24. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Facilius est camelum per foramen acus transire, quam divitem intrare in regnum caelorum." This is a paraphrase of a proverb which is common in various forms throughout the East—in fact in all countries familiar with the camel: "To let a camel go through the hole of a needle" (Hebrew); "A camel's head will not pass through the eye of a needle" (Osmanli); "Can a camel pass through the eye of a needle?" (Tamil), and so on.

It is as hard to come as for a camel

To thread the postern of a small needle's eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 5, 16. (1595)

He had learned also how to make the Camell pass through the needles eye, namely by casting off the bunch on the back.

CHARLES FITZ-GERFAY, Elisha, p. 46. (1622)

- 1 Full many a rill, from tiny springlet fed,
Sweeps off the camel in its onward course.
SADI, Gulistan, i, 4. (c. 1250) Eastwick, tr.
- 2 Patient of thirst and toil, Son of the desert!
THOMPSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 965. (1727)
Gaza . . . bears towards [the desert] the same kind of relation as a seaport bears to the sea. It is there that you charter your camels ("the ships of the Desert") . . . for the voyage.
A. W. KINGLAKE, Eothen. Ch. 17. (1844)
Well, therefore, has the Camel . . . been termed
"the Ship of the Desert."
W. B. CARPENTER, Zoology. Sec. 278. (1847)
THE LAST STRAW BREAKS THE CAMEL'S BACK, see
under STRAW.
TO STRAIN OUT A GNAT AND SWALLOW A CAMEL,
see under HYPOCRISY.
THE BLACK CAMEL, see under DEATH.
DON'T ADMIT THE CAMEL'S NOSE, see under HABIT.

CAMP

- 3 A Man may be good in the Camp, and yet bad
in the Church.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 289. (1732)
- 4 Suffer me to follow the camp. (Da mihi castra sequi.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 348. (c. A. D.
60) A body of troops encamping together;
an army on a campaign.
I hope . . . she has more prudence than to follow the camp.
GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act
ii, sc. 1. (1706)
Multitudes follow the camp only for want of employment.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 114. (1751)
Here he and several thousand of his soldiers and camp-followers were cut to pieces.
WASHINGTON IRVING, Mahomet, ii, 265. (1850)

CANDLE

- 5 A candle lights others and consumes itself.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 283. (1855)
A candle, by consuming itself, gives light to others.
CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1938)
- 6 I light my candle from their torches.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 5, subs. 1. (1621) There is an English proverb, "Light another's candle, but don't put out your own," and the Danes say, "Man kan taende et andet Lys af sin uden Skade" (You may light another's candle at your own without loss).
- 7 How inferior for seeing with, is your brightest train of fireworks to the humblest farthing candle!
THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Diderot. (1838)

- 8 Snuff me these candles. (Adobame esos candiles.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 47. (1605)
A proverbial phrase, adobar meaning literally to put anything to rights.
Then he never snuffed a candle with his fingers.
CHARLES I OF SPAIN, Remark (c. 1540), when reading upon the tombstone of a Spanish grandee the epitaph, "Here lies one who never knew fear." See BOSWELL, Johnson, 1769.

- 9 It makes no difference if you light a lamp in the sunshine. (In sole lucernam adhibere nihil interest.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iv, Ch. xii, sec. 29
(c. 45 B. C.)
You are lending light to the sun. (τὸ φῶς ἡλιῶ δανείεις.)

PLUTARCH. (c. A. D. 110) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 57, gives the Latin as "Lumen soli mutuas." Applied to some one who is laboring to make clear what is already clear.

Of what use is a torch at midday?
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 63a. (c. 450)
To match the candle with the sun.
HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY, Sonnet to the Fair Geraldine. (c. 1540)

They neede not . . . of me to bee prayesd, vnlesse
I woulde seeme to shew, and set-furth the bright-nes of the sonne with a candell, as the prouerbe saith.

RALPH ROBINSON, tr., Utopia, p. 27. (1551)
I shal but set a Candle in the Sunshine.
WILLIAM LAMBARDE, Eirenarcha, iii, 4, 361
(1581)

It is in vaine, to set a candell in the sonne.
GEOFFREY WHITNEY, A Choice of Emblemes
107. (1586)

To help the Sunne with lanthornes.
FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 688. (c. 1594)
To enlarge or illustrate this . . . is to set a candle in the sun.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy
Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)
But it is not necessary to light a candle to the sun
ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourses on Government
Ch. 2. (c. 1675)

How commentators each dark passage shun.
And hold their farthing candle to the sun.
EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame, vii, 97. (1728)
Oh! rather give me commentators plain,
Who with no deep researches vex the brain;
Who from the dark and doubtful love to run
And hold their glimmering tapers to the sun.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register: Introduction. Pt. i. (1807)
And hold up to the sun my little taper.
LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 21.
(1824) The French say, "Montrer le soleil avec un flambeau."

10 To burn the candle at both ends. (Brusler la chandelle par les deux bouts.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chandelle.
(1611) De Lincy explains (ii, 159) that this means, "Dissiper sa fortune de toutes les façons" (To dissipate one's fortune in every way possible).

He consuming just like a candle on both ends, betwixt wine and women.

RICHARD FLECKNOX, Enigmaticall Characters, p. 64. (1658)

A good fellow lights his candle at both ends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1678)

The Candle burns at both Ends. Said when Husband and Wife are both spendthrifts.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Candle. (1730)

The butler and steward were in a confederacy, and burnt the candle at both ends.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas, iii, 116. (1750)

Apt to light their candle at both ends; that is to say, they are apt to consume too much, and work too little.

JONAS HANWAY, Travels. Vol. ii, bk.i, ch.3. (1753)

Don't set your candles alight at both ends!

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Lay of St. Cuthbert: Moral. (1842)

To double all your griefs, and burn life's candle, As village gossips say, at either end.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 140. (1848)

By sitting up till two in the morning and rising again at six . . . Frank Headley burnt the candle of life at both ends.

KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago. Ch. 10. (1857)

My candle burns at both ends;

It will not last the night;

But, ah, my foes, and oh, my friends—

It gives a lovely light.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, A Few Figs from Thistles: First Fig. (1920)

They are burning both ends of the scandal

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Why, Some of My Best Friends Are Women. (1940)

1 The smallest candle fills a mile with its rays, and the papillae of a man run out to every star.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

2 The candle which goes before gives more light than the one which comes behind. (La chandelle qui va devant éclaire mieux que celle qui va derrière.)

EUTRAPEL, Contes, fo. 3. (c. 1550)

3 Fine linnen, girls, and gold so bright, Chuse not to take by candle light.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737

4 The Morning Daylight appears plainer when you put out your Candle.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

The way to see Divine light is to put out thine own candle.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 518. (1855)

5 The more Light a Torch gives, the less while it lasts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4664. (1732)

6 A man must sumtyme set a candel befor the Devyle.

JAMES GAIRDNER, ed., The Paston Letters, ii, 72. (c. 1461) Referred to as a 'common proverb.' The devil must sometimes be humored and propitiated, as a saint is supposed to be when a candle is set up before his shrine.

She would spit her venym, thought it not euyl To sette vp a candle before the deuyl.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Though not for hope of good, yet for the feare of evill,

Thou maist find ease so proffering up a candell to the devill.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandrie: To Light a Candell Before the Devil. Ch. 53B. (1573)

Yet I'll give him good words; 'tis good to hold the candle before the devil.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, iv, 3. (1599)

Holds candle to the deuill for a while, That he the better may the world beguile.

JOHN MARSTON, Pigmalion's Image, ii, 146. (1599)

According to the Italian Proverb, That one must sometimes light a candle to the Devil.

JAMES HOWELL, Paroemiologia, p. 20. (1649)

You cannot hold a candle to the devil.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act i, sc. 1. (1672)

Here have I been holding a candle to the devil, to show him the way to mischief.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. ii, 213. (1828)

7 I burnt one candle to seek another, and lost both my time and my trauell.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 41. (1579)

To waste a candle and find a flea.

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 504. (1623)

To burn a candle worth three sous to search for a pin, twenty-five of which are worth only one sou. (Brûler une chandelle de trois sous à chercher une épingle dont le quarteron ne vaut qu'un sou.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 159 (1859)

They are like Pedley, who burnt a penny candle in looking for a farthing.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures Ch. 3. (1880)

8 Vpright as a candle standth in a socket. Stoode she that daie, so simpre de cocket.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1 (1546)

9 Who that woorst maie, shall holde the candell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

How unequally is it provided that those which worst may, are driven to hold the Candle?

GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace, p. 187. (1576)

He that worst may is alway enforced to holde the candell.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 53. (1579)

When I am worst able, forst to hold the candle.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late, p. 19. (1590)

What, must I hold a candle to my shames?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 6, 41. (1596)

He that worst may must hold the candle.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 324. (1605)

I be not worthy to hold a candle to Aristotle.

SIR EDWARD DERING, The Fowre Cardinal-Virtues of a Carmelite Fryar, p. 43. (1640)

He that worst may, still holds the candle. Au plus débile la chandelle à la main.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 159. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2361. (1732)

Others aver that he to Handel

Is scarcely fit to hold the candle.

JOHN BYROM, On the Feud Between Handel and Bononcini. (1773)

Mother couldn't hold a candle to you.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 20. (1843)

Cissy could not hold a candle to what her mother had been in her best days.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Market Harbor. Ch. 18. (1861)

Edith is pretty, very pretty; but she can't hold a candle to Nellie.

W. E. NORRIS, No New Thing. Pt. I, ch. 7. (1883)

Be of good comfort. Master Ridley, and play the man. We shall this day light such a candle, by God's grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out.

HUGH LATIMER, at the stake, to Nicholas Ridley, who was burned with him, 16 Oct., 1555. See The Martyrdom, p. 523. HUME, History of England. Ch. 37, gives a slightly different version.

To burn one's self in the candle. (Se brûler soi-même à la chandelle.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 159. (1859) "An allusion," says De Lincy, "to the habit of insects, attracted by a light, of burning themselves in it."

Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel. (οὐδὲ καλοῖσιν λύχνον καὶ τοῖσιν αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τὸν μῦθον.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 15. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Neque accendunt lucernam, et ponunt eam sub modio."

And he said unto them. Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick? (μήτι ἔρχεται ὁ λύχνος ἵνα ὑπὸ τὸν μῦθον τεθῇ ἢ ὑπὸ τὴν κλίνην. οὐχ ἵνα ἐπὶ τὴν λυχνίαν τεθῇ.)

New Testament: Mark, iv, 21. (c. A. D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Numquid venit lucerna ut sub modio ponatur, aut sub lecto? nonne ut super candelabrum ponatur?"

The open folly of those, who will rather hide a candle under a bushel, then set it on a Candlestick.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. I, p. 33. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Sutch bright lights should not be put under a bushell.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 265. (1576) Useless as a candle in a skull.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 780. (1781) Slothfully determined to hide his candle under a bushel.

LORD LYTTON, Kenelm Chillingly. Ch. 8. (1870)

He was not a youth to hide his light under a bushel.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Way of All Flesh. Ch. 2. (1901)

No bushel obscures his light,

He's knocking them left and right.

OGDEN NASH, The Life of the Party. (1933)

He wears embroidered clothes and travels by night.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 354.

(1938) A Japanese proverb. The Chinese say, "He puts on a silk dress to travel by night."

He was not one to hide his light under a bushel.

JOHN RHODE, Signal for Death, p. 146. (1941)

The candle is burned by means of its wick.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Maxim 18. (c. 1257)

I took him up with my old repartee; Peace, said I, Tace is Latin for a candle.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Virtuoso. Act i. (1676)

Tace is the Latin for "Be silent." The saying is a hint to keep silent about something, and must contain a pun or allusion which is no longer understood.

Trust none of them for they are all Thieves, but Tace is Latin for a Candle.

WILLIAM DAMPIER, Voyages, p. 356. (1697)

Brandy is Latin for a goose and Tace is Latin for a candle.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Tace, madam, is Latin for a candle; I commend your prudence.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1751)

There are some auld stories that cannot be ripped up again. . . . Tace is Latin for a candle

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 12. (1824)

Ye must tell me nothing of that. I am in the law, you know, and tace is the Latin for a candle.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 10. (1897)

I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase; I'll be a candle-holder and look on.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 38. (1594)

Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 6, 1. (1590)

You are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 179. (1597)

Out, out, brief candle.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 5, 23. (1605)

His candle burns within the socket: Homo deponatus est.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 307. (1639)

Also RAY, Proverbs, p. 167, with the comment, "That is, he is an old man. Philosophers are wont to compare man's life to the burning of a lamp."

The light of life . . . was trembling in the socket.
WALTER SCOTT, Chronicles of the Canongate.
Ch. 1. (1827)

1
Wife, make thine own candle,
Spare penny to handle.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 487. (1940) Another jingle to the same purpose is,
Provide for thy tallow ere frost cometh in,
And make thine own candles ere winter begin.

2
His Arguments should go out like the snuffe of a candle in the socket.

THOMAS WARREN, Unbelievers, p. 252. (1654)
She went out, as they say, like the snuff of a candle.

SAMUEL WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch.
9. (1841)

She went out like a candle.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p.
184. (1940)

TO SMELL OF THE CANDLE, see under LAMP.

CANDOR

See also Plain-Speaking; Sincerity

3
Love of candour without the will to learn casts the shadow called rudeness.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) Giles, tr.,
p. 107.

4
Of all Crafts to an honest Man, downright is the only Craft.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3696. (1732)

5 Frankness is a natural quality. (La franchise est une qualité naturelle.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 108. (1810)

Frankness invites frankness.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence. (1841)
There is no wisdom like frankness.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1845)
"Frank and explicit"—that is the right line to take when you wish to conceal your own mind and to confuse the minds of others.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. vi, ch. 1. (1845)
If you wish to preserve your secret, wrap it up in frankness.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays. (1863)

Frankness consists of having your back bitten right to your face.

OGDEN NASH, Hush, Here They Come. (1938)

6
Whenever one has anything unpleasant to say one should always be quite candid.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act ii. (1895)

THE CANDID FRIEND, see under FRIEND.

CANKER

7
The Canker which commonly breedeth in the fayrest Rose.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 23. (1576)

In the fayrest rose is soonest found a canker.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 88.

In the sweetest bud The eating canker dwells.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
i, 1, 43. (1594)

The most forward bud

Is eaten by the canker ere it blows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
i, 1, 46.

The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 39. (1600)

Loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet xxxv. (1609) A favorite figure with Shakespeare. See Sonnets lxx, xcv, xcix.

8
Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 2, 18. (1590) In Hamlet, v, 2, 69, Shakespeare speaks of "The canker of our nature," and in The Tempest, i, 2, 415, of "Beauty's canker."

9
I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, i, 3.
28. (1598)

CANOSSA

10
We are not going to Canossa. (Nach Canossa gehen wir nicht.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Reichstag, 14 May,
1872. It was to Canossa, in the duchy of Modena, that Emperor Henry IV went, in January, 1077, to do three days' penance, barefoot, bareheaded, in the snow, before Pope Gregory VII (Hildebrand). Hence "to go to Canossa" means to submit oneself, to eat humble pie. Bismarck used the phrase at the beginning of the "Kulturkampf" contest with the Pope in 1872, to indicate that the revived German Empire would not surrender to the claims which the Pope was making. In the end, the Pope won.

CANT

11
Cant is by some people derived from one
Andrew Cant who, they say, was a Presbyterian minister . . . who by exercise and use had obtained the Faculty, alias Gift, of talking in the pulpit in such a dialect, that it's said he was understood by none but his own
Congregation, and not by all of them.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 147. (1711)

Cant is moral assumption without moral feeling.

VAN WYCK BROOKS, *The Opinions of Oliver
Allston*, p. 76. (1942)

12
Great King of Cant!

AMBROSE BIERCE, An Impostor. (1906) Referring to Andrew Carnegie.

13
Till they first began to Cant,
And sprinkle down the Covenant.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, 2, 765. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> The grand primum mobile of England is cant; cant political, cant religious, cant moral, but always cant.

BYRON, Letter to John Murray, 7 Feb., 1821. The English and the Americans cant beyond all other nations. The French relinquish all that industry to them.

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 13. (1856)

<sup>2</sup> You have to cant a little with the world, if you want even common civil usage.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 10. (1843)

<sup>3</sup> My dear friend, clear your mind of cant. You may talk as other people do, . . . but don't think foolishly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 15 May, 1783. It is now almost my sole rule of life to clear myself of cants.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to His Wife, 2 Nov., 1835.

Let Cant cease, at all risks and at all costs; till Cant cease, nothing else can begin.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. ii, bk. iii, Ch. 7. (1837)

<sup>4</sup> The cant of criticism.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, The Idler, 29 Sept., 1759. Of all the cants that are canted in this canting world, though the cant of hypocrites may be the worst, the cant of criticism is the most tormenting.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1765)

CAN'T. You can't number the waves, squeeze blood from a turnip, skin a flint, etc., see under IMPOSSIBILITY.

CAP

<sup>5</sup> The cobbler puts off his considering cap.

ROBERT ARMIN, Foole upon Foole (Grosart), p. 40. (1605)

Now I'll put on my considering cap.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act ii, sc. 1. (1618)

They fall back, and put on their considering caps.

RICHARD LIGON, History of Barbadoes, p. 42. (1657)

Guess who it was that told me; come, put on your considering cap.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I'll put on my considering cap.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 37. (1861)

<sup>6</sup> If either of you have any inclination to pull caps for the title of Miss Belmont, you must do it with all speed.

FRANCES BURNBY, Evelina, ii, 238. (1778) To pull caps: to quarrel. Its application to women's quarrels is obvious.

Behold; our lofty Dutchesses pull caps, And give each other's reputations raps.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Odes to the Royal Academics. Ode xi. (1785)

They are all pulling caps, who's to have the first chance.

ROBERT S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour. Ch. 7. (1853)

<sup>7</sup> I'll . . . set my cap to some newer fashion.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer.

Act i, sc. 1. (1773)

Some who once set their caps at cautious dukes.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 81. (1832)

Have a care, Joe; that girl is setting her cap at you.

W. M. THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 3. (1848)

<sup>8</sup> Thy tounge . . . such spiteful clappying haue bred,

That my cap is better at ease then my hed.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

<sup>9</sup> The cap of Hades. ("Αἶδος κυνέην.")

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 845. (c. 850 B. C.) Athena borrowed it to render herself invisible.

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 74, gives the Latin as "Orci galea," and devotes a page to an explanation of the phrase. A similar proverb is "Gyges' ring" (Γυγοῦ δακτύλιος), by which he also made himself invisible. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 96, giving the Latin as "Gygis anulus," cites many examples of its use.

The Helmet of Pluto, which maketh the Politicke Man goe Invisible, is, Secrecy in the Counsell. and Celerity in the Execution.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Delays. (1625) The Latin proverb is, "Orci habet galeam" (He has the helmet of Orcus, i. e. of Pluto).

<sup>10</sup> If the fool's cap fits any body, let 'em put it on.

JOHN OZELL, Molière, iv. 10. (1714)

If any Fool finds the Cap fit him, let him wear it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2670. (1732)

If indeed thou findest . . . that the cap fits thy own head, why then . . . e'en take and clap it on.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Bk. vii, ch. 10. (1748)

Those the cap fits, let them wear it.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 4. (1843)

If anybody shows himself offended, he'll put the cap on for himself.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt, p. 38. (1866)

Put the cap on if it fits.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Springhaven. Ch. 4. (1887)

If the slipper fits.

CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act i. (1901)

Don't go putting the cap on your head—unless, of course, it fits.

DANA CHAMBERS, She'll Be Dead by Morning, p. 216. (1940) The French say, "Qui capit, ille facit" (He does it who takes it to himself).

<sup>11</sup> Hauling cast their caps into ye winde (as the prouerbe is) thinks no harme can touch them.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons on Timothy, 824. (1579)

I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iii, 4, 101. (1607)

For clean action and good delivery, they may all cast their caps at him.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act ii, sc. 1. (1611)

He may throw his cap at thee and give thee [up] for one got out of his reach.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 383. (1655)

They may cast their caps at him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 168. (1670)

"When two or more run together," Ray explains, "and one gets ground, he that is last, and despairs to overtake, commonly casts his cap after the foremost, and gives over the race. So that to Cast their cap at one, is to despair of catching or overtaking him."

He may fling up his cap after it, when a thing or business is past hope.

B. E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. C4. (1690)

TO THROW ONE'S CAP OVER THE WINDMILLS, see under WINDMILL.

1
I'll make thee pay every farthing, if thy cap be of wooll.

UNKNOWN, Long Meg of Westminster. (1582)

Slip, you will answer it, an if your cap be of wool.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 2. (1633)

The beginning of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, when velvet caps becoming fashionable for persons of prime quality, discomposed the proverb, 'If his cap be made of wool,' as formerly comprising all conditions of people how high and haughty soever.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Herts. (1662)

If his cap be made of wool.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 167. (1670)

"In former times," Ray explains, "when this proverb came first in use, men generally wore caps. . . . So that 'If his cap were made of wool,' was as much as to say most certainly, 'As sure as the clothes on his back.'"

CAPER

2
He capers like a flie in a tar-box.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216. (1670)

3
He nimbly cut a caper with one leg for joy. (Fist sur vn pied la gambade en l'air gail-lardement.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 33. (1552)

Faith, I can cut a caper.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 129. (1599)

The young spring-hall cutting a caper in her belly.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act ii, sc. 1. (1614)

By his high dancing and cutting of Capers he did . . . sprain a vein.

ANTHONY WOOD, Antiquities of Oxford, ii, 262. (1691)

He can dance, though he does not cut capers.

RICHARD STEEIE, The Spectator. No. 4. (1711)
It was as if the faint walking "ghost" of her old-time tone had suddenly cut a caper.

HENRY JAMES, The Aspern Papers. Ch.6. (1888)

CAPTAIN

4
Such as the Captaine is, such is the Souldier.
EDMUND BOLTON, tr., Florus, ii, xviii, 157. (1618)

5
Captains are casual things.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife. Act iii. (1624)

6
An old Ensigne is the honor of a captaine. (Bandiera vecchia, honor di capitano.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

An old band is a captain's honour.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 65. (1629)

7
An army all of captains, used to pray, . . . Skilled to debate their orders, not obey.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. (1875) Referring to the Continental army.

8
"Comrades," he [Saturninus] said, "you have lost a good captain, to make of him a bad general." (Compaignons, dict il, vous avez perdu un bon capitaine, pour en faire un mauvais general d'armee.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595) When he was given supreme authority.

9
Once a captain always a captain.

T. L. PEACOCK, Crotchet Castle. Ch. 9. (1831)

MRS. BRAY, Traditions of Devon, iii, 239.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 21. (1852) Cited as an old proverb.

10
O, he is the courageous captain of complements.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 19. (1595)

11
That in a captain's but a choleric word, Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 130 (1604)

12
When captaines couragious, whom death cold not daunte,

Did march to the siege of the citty of Gaunt, They mustred their souldiers by two and by three,

And the formost in battle was Mary Ambree.

UNKNOWN, Mary Ambree. (c. 1590) See PERCY, Reliques. Ser. ii, bk. ii, No. 19. According to Percy, the ballad commemorates an attempt by the Dutch and English, about 1589, to recapture Ghent (called then by the English Gaunt) from the Spaniards. Percy adds that he can find no mention in history of Mary Ambree, though Ben Jonson often mentions her.

Captains Courageous.

RUDYARD KIPLING. Title of boy's story. (1897)

CARD

<sup>1</sup> [His] great aim was to be considered as a "knowing card."

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz, p. 264. (1836)
Dr. Valentine . . . was quite a card at the Museum.

P. T. BARNUM, Struggles and Triumphs, p. 142. (1869) A drawing card.

You are the most romantic card I know.

BLACK, A Princess of Thule. Ch. 10. (1873)
The Card.

ARNOLD BENNETT. Title of novel. (1911) Published in America as Denry the Audacious, because it was thought that few Americans would know the meaning of "card" in the sense of a clever, audacious fellow.

Jim Harvey's a queer card.

ROBERT CUMMINS, Sky-High Corral, p. 116. (1924)

A queerer card I never saw turned.

E. C. BENTLEY, Trent's Last Case. Ch. 4. (1930)
See also GARDNER, The Case of the Empty Tin, p. 25. (1941) SALE, Passing Strange, p. 143. (1942)

<sup>2</sup>

I set very lytle or nought by hym yt can not face oute his ware with a carde of .x.

ROBERT WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 93. (1520)
Fyrst pycke a quarrell, and fall oute with hym then,

And soo outface hym with a carde of ten.

JOHN SKELTON, The Bowge of Courte, l. 315. (c. 1500)

Eyther he shal haue fauor for his masters sake, or els bragg it out with a carde of x.

HENRY BRINKLOW, Complaynt of Roderyck Mors, p. 45. (c. 1542)

All louers . . . are cooled with a carde of tenne.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 320. (1580)

Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, ii, l. 407. (1594)

A term at the game of Primore, to stand boldly upon a card. . . . Whence came the phrase 'to face it with a card of ten,' to face anything out by sheer impudence.

H. O. HALLIWELL: Dictionary: Face (1847)

<sup>3</sup>

Nowe thys is a sure carde.

UNKNOWN, Interlude of Thersites, p. 87. (c. 1537) Sometimes attributed to John Heywood.

A cleere conscience is a sure card.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues. (1579) See under CONSCIENCE.

To get a sure card on their side.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Percevall, p. 12. (1589)

As sure a card as ever won the set.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, v, l. 100. (1593)

He hath a sure card.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 200. (1616)

We have one sure card.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1742)

Consider me a sure card in that line.

J. P. KENNEDY, Quodlibet, p. 24. (1840)

<sup>4</sup>

Heavy newes for yow, I can tell yow, of a cowlinge carde.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act iii, sc. 2. (1577)

A certain pamphlet which he termed a cooling carde for Philautus.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 105. (1579)

His godly counsel was a cooling carde to their inordinate desires.

ROBERT GREENE, The Mirrour of Modestie. (1584) Works (Grosart), iii, 24.

There all is marr'd: there lies a cooling card

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, v, 3, 84. (1591)

For temper sake they must needs have a cooling carde plaid upon them.

UNKNOWN, Sir Gyles Goosecappe. Act ii, sc. 1. (1606) See BULLEN, Old Plays, iii, 37.

God sent us a Cooling-card this year for that heat.

KING JAMES I, Answer to the Commons. (1621)
See RUSHWORTH, Historical Collections, i. 51.

This was a shrewd cooling card to my high hopes.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue, ii. 104. (1671)

Cooling card, cold comfort, no hope.

Dictionary Canting Crew: Cooling Card.

(1690) However, O.E.D. says that cooling card is a term of some unknown game, applied figuratively or punningly to anything that 'cools' a person's passion or enthusiasm.

TO THROW COLD WATER, see under WATER.

CARDS

See also Gambling, Trumps

<sup>5</sup>

There be that can packe the Cards, and yet cannot play well.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1597)

Many can pack the cards, yet cannot play well.

JAMES HOWELL, Paroemiologia, p. 19. (1659)

"i.e. Witty men seldom wise," Howell adds.

Many can pack the cards that cannot play.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

"Many can make bricks that cannot build."

Many can pack the Cards better than they can play.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3341. (1732)

<sup>6</sup>

I would I might be suffered to shewe my cardes.

EDWARD CAMPION, Conferences Held in the Tower of London, ii, 4. (1581) The precursor of "To lay all one's cards on the table."

I'm putting all my cards on the table.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, The Case of the Late Pig. Ch. 7. (1938) HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 38. (1943)

Put all your cards on the table when someone calls your bet.

E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Cooks a Goose, p. 155. (1942)

You do believe in cards on the table, don't you?

THOMAS JOB, Uncle Harry. Act ii. (1942)

We'll place our cards on the table.

HUGH ADDIS, Night Over the Wood, p. 38. (1943)

All cards on the table, that's my slogan.

E. R. PUNSHON, The Conqueror Inn, p. 103. (1944)

1 He who cuts the cards does not shuffle them. (Quien destaja no baraja.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

There has been much discussion of the proper rendering of this proverb. It is claimed that, while "barajar" does mean to shuffle cards, it also means to quarrel or wrangle, and that "destajar" means to undertake work by the job, and that therefore the literal meaning is "He who undertakes work by the job doesn't wrangle," or, figuratively, according to Pineda, "He who loves peace will never quarrel," or "A man cannot have everything his own way."

When you have made me shuffle the Cards, then truly you'll not play.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5631 (1732)

2 You may lose as much by a card too many as by a card too few. (Tanto se pierde por carta de más como por carta de menos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 37. (1615)

Better play a card too much than too little.

JOHN SHELTON, tr. Quixote, ii, 37. (1620)

D'Urfey gives the sentence the same rendering.

3 With spots quadrangular of diamond form, Ensanguined hearts, clubs typical of strife, And spades, the emblem of untimely graves.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 217. (1785)

4 The cards beat all the players, be they never so skilful.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nominalist and Realist. (1844)

5 If Lucinda plays her cards well, we have not much to fear.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Englishman in Paris. Ch.

1. (1753) To make good use of one's opportunities.

He is playing his cards well.

FLORA ANNIE STEEL, The Potter's Thumb. Ch. 25. (1894)

6 Others, being crossed by the world by some misfortune, sought to cross the world again in renouncing of it. These, like furious gamesters, threw up their cards, not out of dislike of gaming, but of their game.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre, ii, 18. (1639)

Whenever the game did not go well they always threw up the cards.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Dialogues of the Dead, p. 256. (s. 1721)

7 The greatest skill at cards is to know when to discard. (La mejor treta del juego es sabarse descartar.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 31. (1647)

8 When in doubt follow the suit of the wise and the prudent; sooner or later they will win the odd trick. (En duda, acierto es llegarse á los sabios y prudentes, que tarde ó temprano topan con la ventura.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 31. (1647)

When in doubt win the trick.

EDWARD HOYLE, A Short Treatise on the Game of Whist: Twenty-Four Rules for Learners. (1742)

9 Tell thy cardes, and than tell me what thou hast wonne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

BACON, Promus, No. 641. (c. 1594)

Let him count his cardes and see his winnings.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 116. (1633)

When you have counted your cards, you'll find you have gained but little.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678)

When you have counted your Cards, you'll find you have little left.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5628. (1732)

10 "A clear fire, a clean hearth, and the rigour of the game." This was the celebrated wish of old Sarah Battle (now with God), who, next to her devotions, loved a good game of whist.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's Opinions on Whist. (1823)

11 To shuffle cardes, confundere.

PETER LEVINS, Manipulus Vocabulorum, p. 184. (1570)

In a trice they shuffled the cards of purpose.

THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron-Walden. (1596)

[They] had shuffled their cards so cunningly as to be out of the reach of law.

EDWARD BOWLES, Plaine English, p. 17. (1643)

He shuffles and cuts with every one who has to do with him.

EDWARD WARD, The Wooden World Dissected, p. 93. (1706)

12 See how the world its veterans rewards!

A youth of frolics, an old age of cards.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 243. (1734)

I am sorry I have not learned to play at cards. It is very useful in life: it generates kindness and consolidates society.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, 21 Nov., 1773.

You do not play then at whist, sir? Alas, what a sad old age you are preparing for yourself! (Vous ne jouez donc pas le whist, monsieur? Hélas! quelle triste vieillesse vous vous préparez!)

TALLEYRAND, Retort, when reproached for his addiction to cards. (c. 1805)

13 Let thy wisdom play bad cards with best advantage.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Solomon's Recantation, iii, 86. (1645)

If thy Cast [hand] be bad, mend it with good Play.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2723. (1732)
Everyone has to play the cards dealt them the way they see it.

HALLIDAY, Corpse Came Calling, p. 20. (1942)

1 He hath good cards to shew for it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

2 It is not out of the cards that we might do more.

SIR ROBERT WILSON, Diary, ii, 40. (1813)
Going in for anything that might be on the cards.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 11. (1849)

It don't come out altogether so plain as to please me, but it's on the cards.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 4. (1852)

3 Cards and dice . . . the devil's books and the devil's bones.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, sig. C4. (1676)

Cards, we know, are Pluto's books.

SWIFT, Death and Daphne, l. 80. (1730)

Time out of mind, they [cards] are and have been call'd the devil's books.

UNKNOWN, Agreeable Companion, p. 73. (1745)

Or lee-lang nights, wi' crabbit leuks,

Pore owe the devil's pictur'd beuks.

ROBERT BURNS, The Two Dogs. (1786)

Cards are the devil's books.

LORD LYTTON, Money. Act iv, sc. 2. (1840)

The Germans say, "Kartenspiel ist des Teufels Gebetbuch" (Card-playing is the devil's prayer-book). A Dutch proverb describes cards as "The bible of fifty-two leaves." There are many proverbial phrases based upon playing-cards, in addition to the ones cited here, such as, "To have an ace up one's sleeve," "To stack the deck," "To hold all the cards," "To give cards and spades," "To euchre," "To call a bluff," "To pass the buck," "To play one's last card," "To build a house of cards," "To be put to one's trumps." Certain of these will be found under the words italicized.

LUCKY AT CARDS, UNLUCKY IN LOVE, see LOVE.

CARE

See also Trouble, Worry

4 I care for nobody, not I,

If no one cares for me.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act i, sc. 5. (1762)

Naebody cares for me, I care for naebody.

ROBERT BURNS, I Hae a Wife. (1786)

As I walked by myself, I talked to myself,

And thus myself said to me,

Look to thyself and take care of thyself,

For nobody cares for thee.

BEADLE, Epitaphs, p. 216. Epitaph of Robert Crytoft, Hornersfield, Suffolk, England.

Making believe to think that I cared for nobody, no not I, and that nobody cared for me.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 55. (1852)

5 O thou who troublest thyself about the cares of others, to whom hast thou left thine own cares?

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 765. (1817)

6 Tempest-tossed with great waves of care. (Magnis curarum fluctuat undis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxiv, l. 62. (c. 57 B. C.)

Y-bounden in the blake bark of care.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 229. (c. 1380)

Deep-drenched in a sea of care.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1100. (1594)

7 Ther nedeth me no care for to borwe.

CHAUCER (?), A Complaint to His Lady, l. 10. (c. 1372) See also under TROUBLE.

8 Essential to a happy life is freedom from care. (Caput enim esse ad beate vivendum securitatem.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 13, sec. 45. (44 B. C.)

9 Euripides did well and wisely say

Man's life and care are twins, and born one day.

ALEXANDER CRAIG, The Misery of Man. (1606)

10 When I shall be there, I shall be without care. (Quand je serai la, je serai sans souci.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Inscription, written at the foot of the statue of Flora at Frederick's palace, Sans Souci. (c. 1750)

11 Care corrodes more than poison.

SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 141. (c. 1050)

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, iii, 3, 3. (1597)

Care's no cure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1060. (1732)

12 Care is enemy to health.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

Care's an enemy to life.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 3. (1599)

Care is beauty's thief.

SHAKERLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche. (c. 1630)

Care brings gray hairs. (Cura facit canos.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 7. (1814) A Latin proverb, often translated by the jingle. "Fretting cares make gray hairs."

13 When one is passed another care we have.

ROBERT HERRICK, Sorrows Succeed. (1648)

MISFORTUNES NEVER COME SINGLY, see under MISFORTUNE.

14 Seeking now with wine, now with sleep, to baffle Care; in vain: for that black companion presses upon and dogs your flight. (Iam vino quaerens, iam somno fallere Curam; | frustra: nam comes atra premit sequiturque fugacem.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 114. (35 B. C.)

Vile care boards even the brass-bound galley, nor fails to overtake the troops of horse, swifter than stags. (Scandit aeratus vitiosa naves | cura nec turmas equitum relinquit.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 21. (23 B.C.) Behind the horseman sits black care. (Post equitem sedet atra Cura.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 40. (23 B.C.) Care looking grim and blacke, doth sit Behinde his backe that rides from it.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne's Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1603) Florio is paraphrasing the line from Horace, which Montaigne quotes.

Care jumps up behind and gallops with him. (Le chagrin monte en croupe et galope avec lui.)

NICHOLAS BOILEAU, Epistles. Epis. v, l. 44. (c. 1685)

Quintus Horatius Flaccus was about right in his conjecture that Care sometimes indulged herself with a little equestrian exercise on a pillion.

F. F. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 38. (1850) Care sits behind the horseman on the cantle of his saddle. Ambition may also be detected clinging somewhere about his spurs.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Market Harbor. Ch. 2. (1861)

Black Care rarely sits behind a rider whose pace is fast enough.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Ranch Life, p. 59. (1888) Black care rode behind the horseman.

J. AUSTIN FREEMAN, Mr. Polton Explains, p. 97. (1940)

THE BLACK OX (CARE), see under OX.

1 O the cares of mankind! O how much emptiness there is in things! (O curas hominum! O quantum est in rebus inane!)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1. (c. 123 B.C.) This is the opening line of the first satire of Persius. (c. A.D. 58). which Scholiast alleges was stolen from Lucilius

If every man's internal care Were written on his brow.

How many would our pity share, Who have our envy now!

'Se a ciascun l'interno affano Si leggesse in fronte scritto, Quanti mai, che invidia fanno, Ci farebbero pietà!)

PIETRO METASTASIO, Giuseppe Riconosciuto Pt. i. (c. 1729) Opere, vii. 266

2 They that cast not off[f] cares beefore they come, can not cast them off[f] when they doe come.

GEORGE PETTIT, Petite Pallace, p. 207. (1576)

3 Banish care from your mind (Eicite ex animo curam.)

PLAUTUS, Casina: Prolog., l. 23. (c. 200 B.C.) What more blessed than to put cares aside! (Quid solutis est beatius curis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xxxi, l. 7. (c. 57 B.C.) Ye pallid cares, far hence away! (Pallentes procul hinc abite curae.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 6, l. 6. (A.D. 93)

Begone, old Care, and I prithee begone from me; For i' faith, old Care, thee and I shall never agree.

JOHN PLAYFORD, Musical Companion. Song 13. (1672)

Cast away care; he that loves sorrow Lengthens not day, nor can buy tomorrow.

FORD AND DEKKER, The Sun's-Darling. (c. 1635) And the night shall be filled with music, And the cares, that infest the day, Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs, And as silently steal away.

LONGFELLOW, The Day is Done. (1844)

4 A pound of care will not pay an ounce of debt.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act ii, sc. 2. (1599) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 318. (1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 361. (1732)

A pound of care pays not a dram of debt.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shomakers Holiday. Act iii, sc. 5. (1600)

Care never paid an ounce of debt.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i. 416. (c. 1650)

5 It keeps on the windy side of care.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 325. (1598) Beatrice refers to her heart.

6 Though care kill'd a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 1, 133. (1598)

Let care kill a catte, Wee'll laugh and be fatte.

UNKNOWN, The Shirburn Ballads, p. 91. (c. 1598)

Hang sorrow, care'll kill a cat.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3. (1598)

Hang sorrow! care will kill a cat,

And therefore let's be merry.

GEORGE WITHER, Christmas. (1615)

Cry you mercy killed my cat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)

Exiling fretting Care, that kills a Cat!

N. O., tr. Boileau's Lutrin, iv, 322. (1682)

Who says care will kill a cat?

SWIFT, Bec's Birth-Day, l. 7. (1726)

Care will kill a Cat; yet there's no living without it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1062. (1732) They say it was care killed the cat,

That starved and caused her to die;

But I'll be much wiser than that,

For the devil a care will care I!

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Rose, Thistle and Shamrock. (1809)

Hang expenses—care killed a cat.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 14. (1816)

I hate the dolefuls—care killed a cat.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 52. (1850)

7 Things past redress are now with me past care.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 3, 171. (1595)

What is past my help is past my care.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Double Marriage. Act i. (c. 1612)

1 Care makes your night long by disturbing your slumber. (ἡ φροντίς κόποισα μακρὰν τὰν νύκτα ποιεῖ τοι.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxi, l. 28. (c. 270 B. C.)
Nor does care grant quiet rest to the limbs. (Nec placidam membris dat cura quietem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 5. (19 B. C.)

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 3, 35. (1595)
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 5, 22. (1597)
The Prince of Wales is referring to the crown upon his dying father's pillow.

To carry care to bed is to sleep with a pack on your back.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 20. (1843)

2 Care to our coffin adds a nail, no doubt;
But every grin so merry draws one out.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Expostulatory Odes. Ode 15. (1789)

After many a good time driving nails into our own coffins, we are carted off to the crematory.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 125. (1940)

NOT TO CARE, see under INDIFFERENCE.

CARE NOT A BUTTON, STRAW, etc., see under INDIFFERENCE.

TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF, see under HEALTH.

CAREER

3 Every French soldier carries in his knapsack the baton of a Marshal of France. (Tout soldat français porte dans sa giberne le bâton de maréchal de France.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark. (c. 1810) See BLAZE, La Vie Militaire Sous l'Empire. Vol. i, ch. 5. The saying has also been ascribed to Louis XVIII, but it sounds much more like Napoleon's. Froude refers to it in his Short Studies on Great Subjects, iii, 204.

The career open to talents, that was my principle. (La carrière ouverte aux talents.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark. (c. 1817) See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.

The man [Napoleon] was a Divine Missionary, though unconscious of it; and preached, through the cannon's throat, that great doctrine, La carrière ouverte aux talents (The Tools to him that can handle them), which is our ultimate Political Evangel, wherein alone can Liberty lie.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1834)

To the very last, he had a kind of idea; that, namely, of la carrière ouverte aux talents—the tools to him that can handle them.

J. G. LOCKHART, referring to Napoleon, in an article on Sir Walter Scott in The London and Westminster Review, 1838. Carlyle, in his essay on Mirabeau (1857) quotes the phrase as from "a New England book."

CAREFULNESS

See also Caution

4 Carefulness bringeth age before the time. (Ante tempus senectam adducet cogitatus.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxx, 24. (c. 190 B. C.)

5 You will be careful, if you are wise,
How you touch men's Religion, or Credit, or Eyes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

6 Care and diligence bring luck.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1057. (1732)

Carefulness can go everywhere.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 516. (1937)

CARELESSNESS

See also Neglect

7 Want of Care does us more Damage than want of Knowledge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5414. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Want of care admits despair.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 551. (1855)

8 The blemishes which carelessness has caused. (Maculis quas incuria fudit.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 352. (c. 20 B. C.)

"Per incuriam" (Through carelessness) is a proverbial phrase.

A careless hussy makes many thieves.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1697)

CARPENTER

9 According to the old proverb, the best carpenters make the fewest chips.

THOMAS CORYAT, Crudities, i, 407. (1611)

BROME, Novella, iii, 1. (1653)

10 He is not the best wright that hewes the maniest speals [chips].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40 (c. 1595)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 146 (1721)

It's not the best carpenter makes the most chips

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 66. (1902)

That Carpenter is not the Best

Who makes More Chips than all the Rest.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 66 (1924)

11 Suche carpenters, suche chips (quoth she) folke tell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

BULLEYN, Dialogue, p. 8. (1564)

Like carpenter, like chips.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 115. (1670)

You have eaten nothing.—See all the bones on my plate: they say a carpenter's knowa by his chips.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

- <sup>1</sup>
He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, v, 3, 90. (1597)

CARPET

- <sup>2</sup>
The boss of the canning-room [will be] called upon the carpet.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 134. (1902) For a reprimand.

I'm here and he's on the carpet.

E. A. WALCOTT, Open Door. Ch. 23. (1910)

I've had him on the carpet for three hours.

ISABEL OSTRANDER, How Many Cards?, p. 145. (1920)

Hear you're going on the carpet?

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 139. (1940) The French say, "Être sur la sellette."

- <sup>3</sup>
This is the case now upon the carpet.

ROBERT WODROW, Correspondence, iii, 255. (1726) Under discussion.

He . . . contrived to bring another subject upon the carpet.

RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote, x, 11. (1773)

We had on the Carpet questions relating to our Ministers abroad.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Warren-Adams Letters, ii, 100. (1779)

CART

- <sup>4</sup>
To keep cart on wheels.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 242. (1639)
To be able to carry on business as usual.

I must walk closer with God or I cannot keep cart on wheels.

HENRY NEWCOME, Diary, p. 56. (1662)

- <sup>5</sup>
An old Cart, well used,
May last out a new one abused.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6287. (1732)

- <sup>6</sup>
He loved to heare his carter though not his cart to sing.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Servant. (1642)

- <sup>7</sup>
It aint the noisiest cart that's easiest upshot.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 27. (1843)

- <sup>8</sup>
The best cart maie ouerthrowe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4410. (1732)

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN, see under ACCIDENT.

UPSET THE APPLE CART, see under APPLE.

- <sup>9</sup>
The hind hunts the dogs. (τὰς κύνας ὠλαφοῖ δακoi.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. 1, l. 135. (c. 270 B.C.)
ERASMUS (Adagia, iv, iv, 11) gives the Latin as "Cervus canes trahit."

I'll put my cart before the horse, like Homer. (ὕστερον πρότερον Ὅμηρικῶς.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 16. (61 B.C.)
The cart often draws the ox. (ἡ ἄμαξα τὸν βοῦν πολλάκις ἐκφέρει.)

LUCIAN, Dialogues of the Dead. Ch. 6, sec. 2. (C. A.D. 180) Also MACARIUS, iv, 33. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 28, gives the Latin as "Currus bovem trahit." A variant, of course, of "The cart before the horse."

Moche uolk of religion zetteth the zuols be-uore the osken.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwy, p. 243. (c. 1340)
That techer setteth the carte before the horse that preferreth imitacyon before preceptes.

RICHARD WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 2. (c. 1520)
Muche like as if we woulde go make the carte to drawe the horse.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 154. (1528)
He would put the plough before the oxen. (Met-toyt la charrette devant les beufz.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Ch. 11. (1534) The French proverb is, "Folie est mettre la charue devant les bœufs" (It is folly to put the plough before the oxen). They have another somewhat similar proverb, "Vous bridez le cheval par le queue" (You bridle the horse by the tail).

To make the plough go before the horse.

JAMES I, Letter to the Lord Keeper, July, 1617.

To tourne the cat in the pan.

Or set the cart before the hors, well he can.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
He putteth the cart before the horse. (Lui mette il carro inanzi al cauallo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

When we misplace our wordes and set before which should be behind, we call it the English prouerbe, "the cart before the horse," the Greeks call it Histeron proteron, we name it the Preposterous.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, Arte of Englishe Poesie, p. 181. (1589)

May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 244. (1605)

The cart leads the horse; the young instruct the old.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Oye. (1611)

Excuse me, that the Muses force

The cart to stand before the horse.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. ii, canto iii, p. 27. (1705)

Woe be to all who in morals preposterously put the cart before the horse.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Belinda. Ch. 3. (1801)

Having, as usual, set the cart before the horse, and taken the effect for the cause.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 4. (1863)

She put the heart before the course.

GEORGE KAUFMAN, of a college girl who eloped. (c. 1935)

Let's keep our carts behind our horses.

A. R. HILLIARD, Justice Be Damned, p. 40. (1941)

That's getting the cart somewhat before the horse.

A. A. FAIR, Bats Fly at Dusk, p. 158. (1942)
I think that's rather putting the cart before the horse.

JOSEPH SHEARING, Airing in a Closed Carriage, p. 234. (1943)

That's putting the exhaust pipe before the radiator.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 187. (1943) On p. 190, "That's putting the exhaust pipe bang in front of the radiator."

<sup>1</sup>
I am left out of the cart's tail.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Defence, p. 265. (c. 1540)
Referred to as a common proverb.

I am cast at carts ars.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
To be in disgrace. Offenders were flogged at the tail of a cart, as it was drawn through the streets.

CARTHAGE

<sup>2</sup>
In my opinion Carthage must be destroyed.
(δοκεῖ δέ μοι καὶ Καρχηδόνα μὴ εἶναι.)

MARCUS CATO. (c. 160 B.C.) Cato's hatred and fear of Carthage were so intense that he ended every speech, every letter, every vote, and every conversation with the words, "Ceterum censeo, Carthaginem esse delendum" (In my opinion, Carthage must be destroyed), usually given as "Delenda est Carthago." Publius Scipio always countered with, "In my opinion, Carthage must be spared." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato, xxvii, 1.

CASE

<sup>3</sup>
Faith, sir, the case is altered; you told me it before in another manner; the law goes quite against you.

ROBERT GREENE, A Looking Glasse for London. Act ii, sc. 2. (1594)

I have betrayed myself with my own tongue; The case is altered.

BEN JONSON, The Case Is Altered. Act v, sc. 6. (1598)

Then is their long warre come to an end, and the case (as Ployden sayth) cleane altered.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Batchelars Banquet. (1603)

"The case is altered," quoth Plowden. This proverb referreth its original to Edmund Plowden (1518-1585), an eminent native and great lawyer of this country, though very various the relations of the occasion thereof.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Shropshire, iii, 54. (1662) HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 148, says that "Plowden was an eminent lawyer in the reign of Elizabeth. A neighbor asked him what remedy he had in law against a person whose hogs had broken into his field, and was assured that the law would amply protect him. Whereupon the farmer replied that they were his (Plowden's) hogs. 'Nay then, neighbour,' quoth Plowden, 'the case is altered.'" A variation of the "whose ox is gored" story which is given below.

That's Hackerton's cow.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 326. (1721)
Hackerton was a lawyer who, when told that his heifer had been gored by an ox, claimed the ox in lieu of damages; but when told that, in reality, the reverse of this had happened, and that the owner of the heifer claimed Hackerton's ox, replied, "The case alters there." The proverb dates back, of course, to Aesop's fable of The Partial Judge, in which an ox is gored by a bull, under the same circumstances as Hackerton's heifer. It is paraphrased in Noah Webster's American Spelling Book. The phrase, "It depends upon whose ox is gored" originated from this fable.

A Farmer once made a Complaint to a Judge. My Bull, if you please, Sir, owing a Grudge, Belike to one of your good Worship's Cattle, Has slain him out-right in a mortal Battle: I'm sorry at heart because of the Action, And want to know how must be made Satisfaction.

Why, you must give me your Bull, that's plain. Says the Judge, or pay me the price of the Slain But I have mistaken the Case, Sir, says John. The dead Bull I talk of, & please you, 's my own And yours is the beast that the Mischief has done The Judge soon replies with a serious Face: Say you so; then this Accident alters the Case

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743
It makes a difference which side of the desk you're sitting on.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 5. (1940)

<sup>4</sup>
He is quite a "case." I do assure you.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick, Clockmaker Ser. iii, p. 112. (1840)

Case, a character, a queer one; as "That Sol Haddock is a case"; "What a hard case he is." meaning a reckless scapegrace, a mauvais sujet

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Case. (1848) The French have other words for it besides mauvais sujet: individu, type, and caractère, for example, each with its special shade of meaning.

This sister of mine is a pretty rapid little case. I can tell you.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Dred. Pt. i, ch. 15 (1856)

Mr. O'Rourke is a very bad case indeed.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Marjorie Daw, p. 79. (1873)

<sup>5</sup>
As the case stands.

MIDDLETON and MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act ii, sc. 1. (1626) MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Psalm cxix.

Every case stands upon its own bottom.

SIR FRANCIS PEMBERTON, Judgment, Fitzharris case. (8 How. St. Tr., 280)

<sup>6</sup>
A rotten case abides no handling.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 1, 161. (1598)

CASH

See also Money

1 There is one word, sir, we got from China, that is oftener in the mouths of the American people than any other word in the language. It is cash, sir, cash!

F. S. COZZENS, Sayings, p. 1. (1870) "Cash" really comes from the French caisse or Italian cassa, a money-chest. As applied by Europeans to various small Chinese coins, it is a perversion of the early Portuguese cas or cass.

2 Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go.
EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát. St. 13. (1859)

3 Undoubtedly a wife with a dowry, credit and friends, birth and beauty, are the gifts of Queen Cash. (Scilicet uxorem cum dote fidemque et amicos | et genus et formam regina Pecunia donat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 36. (20 B. C.)
The Germans say, "Hast du Geld, so bist du lieb. | Und wärest du gleich ein' Hur' und Dieb" (Have you gold, so are you dear, even though you're a whore and a thief).

Birth and worth without money are more worthless than seaweed. (Et genus et virtus, nisi cum re, vilior alga est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 8. (30 B. C.)
Cash is virtue.

LORD BYRON, Letter to Douglas Kinnaird, 6 Feb., 1822.

Cash payment has become the sole nexus of man to man.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Chartism. Ch. 2. (1839)

4 Now the Friar is out of cash.
GEORGE PEELE, Edward the First, p. 57. (1593)
Out of cash they bee.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Doctor Merrie-man, p. 24. (1609)

He bets . . . freely when he is in cash.
THACKERAY, The Book of Snobs. Ch. 36. (1848)

5 Services for cash. (Opera pro pecunia.)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 172. ((c. 200 B. C.)
We purchase on Greek credit—cash. (Graeca mercamur fide . . . dant mercem.)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 199. (c. 200 B. C.)
This bank-note world.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Alnwick Castle. (1827)

CASTLE

I—Castles on Earth

6 A Castell of Comfort.
THOMAS BECON. Title. (c. 1560)
You have a castle of comfort brought in that you have me told.

GEORGE PEELE, Sir Clyomon. Sc. 13. (c. 1560)
I think long till I be at home in our Castle of comfort.

UNKNOWN, Dicke of Devonshire. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1630) See BULLEN, Old Plays, ii, 23

7 Castles that come to parley, are commonly at the poynt to render.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 38. (1574) Pettie, tr. See under WOMAN.

8 'Tis easie to resist where none invade.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. xliii, st. 25. (1591)

It is easy to rob an orchard where none keeps it.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1678)

Eith [easy] to keep the castle that was never besieged.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (1721)

It is easy to keep a Castle, that was never assaulted.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2924. (1732)

A castle's easy kept as is never stormed.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 588. (1883)

9 Castles are forests of stones.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 935. (1640)

II—Castles in the Air

10 By taking away the foundation to build in the air. (Subtracto fundamento in aere aedificare.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Sermons, ii, vi, 2. (c. A. D. 400)

Castels buylt aboue in lofty skies

Which neuer yet had goode foundation.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Steele Glas. (1575)

Richard began, on no other foundation, to build as many castles in the air as would man the great wall of China.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 14. (1852)

If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost; that is where they should be
Now put the foundations under them.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 18. (1854)

11 There is more pleasure building castles in the air than on the ground.

EDWARD GIBBON, Miscellaneous Works, i, 278 (c. 1787)

I find the gayest castles in the air that were ever piled, far better for comfort and for use than the dungeons in the air that are daily dug and caverned out by grumbling, discontented people.

R. W. EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860)

12 Spend not all your time in building castles in the air, or houses on the sand.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Bk. iv, ch. 11. (1612)

'Tis best to build no castles in the air.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, ii, 424. (1787)

13 Castles in the air cost a vast deal to keep up.

LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act i, sc. 3. (1838)

'Tis Cheap to build a Castle in the Air,

But Costly to keep up a Dwelling there.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 58 (1924)

<sup>1</sup> They built Castles in the air, and thought to do great wonders.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Plutarch, p. 171. (1580)
In conceite builde castles in the skie.

ROBERT GREENE, Orlando Furioso, 16. (1590)
Hence the fool's paradise, the statesman's scheme,
The air-built castle, and the golden dream.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 9. (1728)

<sup>2</sup> Alerand . . . was a building of castels in the ayre.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Pallace of Pleasure, i, 266. (1566)

When I build Castles in the ayr,

Void of sorrow, void of fear.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: The Author's Abstract. (1621) "That castle in the ayr, that crochet, that whimsie," Burton adds, i, iii, 1, 2.

Strange castles builded in the skies.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Poems, p. 42. (c. 1630)

To build Houses in the Air, Palaces in the Sea.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1709)

<sup>3</sup> My thoughts at night are often filled
With visions false as fair;

For in the past alone I build
My castles in the air.

T. L. PEACOCK, Castles in the Air. (c. 1830)

The bonnie, bonnie bairn who sits poking in the ase,

Glowering in the fire wi' his wee round face,
Laughing at the fuffin' lowe—what sees he there?
Ha! the young dreamer's bigging castles in the air.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Castles in the Air. (c. 1870)

<sup>4</sup> Castles in the air are very impregnable.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Hey for Honesty. Act i, sc. 2. (1651)

Castles in the air—they are so easy to take refuge in. And so easy to build, too.

HENRIK IBSEN, The Master Builder. Act iii. (1892)

Castles in the air, visionary project or scheme, day-dream, idle fancy. Common since 1575, varied occasionally with castle in the skies, and the like.

Oxford English Dictionary: Castle. The popularity of day-dreaming is attested by the fact that the phrase is proverbial in nearly every language.

III—Castles in Spain

<sup>5</sup> Thou shalt make castels thanne in Spayne,
And dreme of joye, all but in vayne.

(Faire des châteaux en Espagne.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 2573. (c. 1365)

This is the earliest known use in English of this proverbial phrase, whose origin is obscure. STORER, Peter the Cruel, p. 280, ascribes it to the lavish gifts bestowed by Don Enrique of Spain upon certain French acquaintances. Littré thinks the idea is simply that of an imaginary castle in any foreign country, since it is varied with châteaux en Asie, en Albanie, etc. It may have originated from the boastings of Spanish adventurers in France of their lordly residences, which existed only in the imagination.

He began to make castellis in Spaygne as louers doo.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 19. (1475)

He began to sighe and build castels in Spaine.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 249. (1567)

Some . . . have their wittes a wool-gathering, and as wee use commonly to say, are building of castles in Spaine.

T. B., tr., French Academie, ii, 182. (1586)

I set myself to building castles in Spain. (Je me jecte à faire des chasteaux en Espagne.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1595)

Faire des chasteaux en Espagne, to build castles in the air (say we).

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chasteaux. (1611)

To build castles in Spain.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1039. (1640)

Who doesn't build castles in Spain? (Qui ne fait châteaux en Espagne?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Latière. Bk. vii, fab.

10. (1678) The milkmaid who stumbled and dropped the pail of milk she was carrying on her head, as she was dreaming of how she would use the money she would get from its sale. See under CHICKEN.

I . . . fell asleep in the very act of building castles in Spain.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas, iii, 76. (1750)

When I could not sleep for the cold,

I had fire enough in my brain,

And builded, with roofs of gold,

My beautiful castles in Spain.

J. R. LOWELL, Aladdin, St. 1. (1868)

CAT

<sup>6</sup> If a cat crosses the street. (ἡ διάκειεν γαλῆ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 792. (c. 393 B.C.) A sign of bad luck.

If a cat cross his path he will not proceed on his way. (τῇν ὁδὸν ἐὰν ὑπερδράμῃ γαλῆ, μὴ πρότερον.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Characters. No. xvi, sec. 2. (319 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> A catt will never drowne if she sees the shore.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 590. (c. 1594)

Neither dog nor cat ever drown, so long as they can discern the shore.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 36. (1666)

Never was Cat or Dog drown'd, that could but see the Shore.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3532. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The gloved cat doesn't catch the mouse. (Chat emmoufflé ne prend souris.)

BAIF, Mimes, fo. 48. (c. 1550)

A gloued catté can catche no myse.

JAMES SANFORD, Howres of Recreation, 212. (1572)

A Cat gloued, catcheth no mise. (Gatto guantato non piglia forzi.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

A muzled Cat was never a good mouser.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 317. (1605)

Cuft Catt's no good Mouse-hunt.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. (1611)

A mufeld cat is not meete to take mice.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 287. (1623)

A gloved cat was never a good hunter.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 12. (c. 1595)

A muffed cat is no good mouser.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1670)

The proverb says, the mousing cat preys not with mittens.

SIR PAUL RYCAUT, tr., Gracian's Critick, 122. (1681)

Handle your tools without mittens! Remember that "The cat in gloves catches no mice!"

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758 The last phrase was used again in 1754.

Do not preach in gloves, for cats in mittens catch no mice.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 3. (1869)

1 It has been the providence of nature to give this creature nine lives instead of one.

BIDPAI, Fables: The Greedy and Ambitious Cat. Fable iii. (c. 300 B. C.)

A woman hath nyne lyues like a cat.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 81. (1592)

Thou hast nine lives like a cat.

JOHN MARSTON, The Dutch Courtesan Act iii, sc. 1. (1605)

There be as many lives in't, as a cat carries

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act iii, sc. 1. (c. 1625)

The Parliament, that,

With new reversions of nine lives,

Starts up, and like a cat revives.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 1629. (1678)

He had, as they say, as many Lives as a Cat.

JOHN BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii, p. 331. (1684)

They say a woman has as many lives as a cat.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A Cat has nine Lives, and a Woman has nine Cats Lives.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 34. (1732)

Even a cat, an animal known to have nine lives, cannot live without food.

GEORGE BORROW, Wild Wales. Ch. 7. (1862)

If a cat has nine lives, sir, a lie has ninety-nine.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 11. (1894)

He has as many lives as a cat and a cat's ability to land on his feet.

EDITH HOWE, Murder at Stone House, p. 95. (1942)

Wasn't there some old saying about a curious person killing an idle cat? Or was it the curious cat led nine idle lives?

CRAIG RICE, The Sunday Pigeon Murders, p. 68. (1942)

2 He pitcht upon his legs like a cat.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act iii, sc. 3. (1639)

He's like a cat; fling him which way you will he'll light on 's legs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 282. (1678)

Like a Cat, he'll still fall upon his Legs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3220. (1732)

There are some men who are fortune's favourites, and who, like cats, light for ever upon their legs.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 348. (1820)

3 Like a cat round hot milk.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 442. (1855)

"Like a cat in pattens" was said of an awkward person.

GALES, Vanished Country Folk, p. 193 (1914)

4 Did you ever know a kitling bring a mouse to the old cat?

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 50. (1917)

Children are not always willing to support their parents, in spite of the old Roman law, since proverbial, "Liberi parentes alant, aut vinciantur" (Let children support their parents or be imprisoned)

5 It is happy to the Huntsman when he haue neythyng of the Catte but the sillie skinne.

WILLIAM BUTTEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 9. (1564)

He's sure of a cat that hath her skin.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chat. (1611)

Thou canst have no more of the cat but his skinne.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Royal King. Act ii. (1637)

You can have no more of a cat but her skin

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 163. (1639)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

You'll get no more of the cat, but the skin. You can have no more of a person or thing, than they can afford.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 371. (1721)

6 The cat that is always crying catches nothing.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 240.

(1817) The Italians say, "Non fu mai cacciator gatto che miagola" (Never was a mewling cat a good mouser).

7 An old Cat laps as much milk as a young.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 318. (1605)

An old cat laps as much as a young kitlin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1670)

8 Who will carry the cat to the water? (Quien ha de llevar el gato al agua?)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1605)

Proverbial for indicating an apparently insuperable difficulty.

The cat to the rat, the rat to the rope, and the rope to the stick. (El gato al rato, el rato a la cuerda, la cuerda al palo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 16.
Don't try to sell me the cat for the hare. (No hay para qué venderme a mí el gato por liebre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 26. (1615)
What thou hast to give to the mouse give to the cat, and it will relieve thee of all trouble. (Lo que has de dar al mur, dalo al gato, y sacarte ha de cuidado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 56.
1 I dar wel seyn, if she had been a mous,
And he a cat, he wolde hir hente [catch, seize] anon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 160. (c. 1386)

2 If the cattles skin be slyk and gay,
She wol nat dwelle in house half a day,
But forth she wole, er any day be dawed,
To shewe hir skin, and goon a-cater-wawed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 351. (c. 1388)

My cats leeryng looke (quoth she) at fyrst show,
Shewth me, that my cat gothe a catterwawyng.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
The amours of cats begin by a showing of teeth.
(Les amores del gato, riñendo entran.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 222. (1856) A Spanish proverb

3 I always told you Claymore was the cat's whiskers.

TOD CLAYMORE, This Is What Happened, p. 269. (1939)

4 The lickorous [lustful] cat hath many a rap.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chat. (1611)
The liquorish cat gets many a rap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6228. (1732)

Wanton Kitlins may make sober old Cats.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5415. (1732)

5 The cat is hungry when a crust contents her.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chat. (1611)

6 I forgot, I was nigh letting the cat out of the bag again.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant. Vol. iii, ch. 2. (1796)

On the morrow they came and "let the cat out of the bag."

M. L. WEEMS, Life of Marion, p. 30. (1809)

He was afraid, being a little affected with wine, [he] would "let the cat out of the bag."

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Midshipman Easy Ch. 21. (1836)

The cat was soon out of the bag.

JOHN NEAL, Beedle's Sleigh Ride, p. 11. (1840)

It spoils stories to let the cat out of the bag too soon.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 17. (1843) In a review in The London

Magazine, vol. xxix, p. 224 (1760), an unknown writer remarks, "We could have wished that the author had not let the cat out of the bag."

Letting the cat of selfishness out of the bag of secrecy.

W. M. THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 19. (1847)

This last epithet I choose to suppress, because it would let the cat out of the bag.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 37. (1849)

The cat's out of the bag.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 103. (1910)

The kitty is out of the bag.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act ii. (1923)

[He] had let the feline out of the jute.

E. B. MARKS, They All Had Glamour, p. 134. (1944)

7 Catis eatis quihilk hissies spairs.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, 26. (c. 1595)

What the good wife spares, the cat eats.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 242. (1639)

Cats eat what hussies spare.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1683)

8 Your mother's cat has kittened in your mouth.
NATHANIEL FIELD, Amends for Ladies. Act ii. sc. 1. (1618)

The cat has kittened.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore. p. 596. (1883) Something has happened.

If he knew what I know he'd have kittens.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past p. 141. (1940)

9 What fault hath the Cat, if the mayd be mad?
(Che colpa n'ha la gatta, se la massara è matta?)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Frutes, fo. 29. (1578)

Is the catt to blame, if maides be fooles with shame?

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 41. (1591)

What faults makes the cat when the maidseruant is full of folie and carelesnesse?

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 243. (1623)

How can the cat help it if the maid be a fool?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1670)

When the Maid leaves open the Door, blame not the Cat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5595. (1732)

10 Cats hide their Claws.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1072. (1732)

The Cat invites the Mouse to a Feast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4441.

11 Honest is the Cat, when the Meat is upon the Hook.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2524. (1732)

Honest is the cat when the milk's away.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 129. (1875)

Honest is the cat when the meat is out of reach.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 20. (1880)

1 To a good cat a good rat. (A bon chat, bon rat.)

GRUTHER, Recueil des Proverbes Français. (1500) A good cat deserves a good rat. There is also the opposite, "A mauvais chat, mauvais rat."

As the proverb says, put an old cat to an old rat.
SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, The Man's the Master. Act i, sc. 1. (1668)

2 Never put the kit to watch your chickens.
W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 290. (1869) See also under WOLF.

3 It is ane olde Dog . . . that thou begyles,
Thou weines to draw the stra before the Cat.
ROBERT HENRYSON, The Morall Fabillis of Esope, p. 65. (c. 1450)

No playng with a strawe before an olde cat;
Euery tryflyng toie age can not laugh at.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
It is ill to draw a strae before an auld cat.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)
I am o'er old a cat, to draw a straw before my nose.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 180. (1721)
I am too old to be imposed upon.

He tried if Mac Vittie and Co. wad gie him siller on them . . . but they were ower auld cats to draw that strae afore them.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818)

4 To take the nuts from the fire with the dog's foot.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 586. (1640)
To pull out the chestnuts with the cat's paw
(Tirer les marrons de la patte du chat.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Etourdi. Act iii, sc. 5. (1653) The story of the monkey using the whelp's foot to pull the chestnuts out of the fire was told in 1586 by GEOFFREY WHITNEY, A Choice of Emblemes, p. 58. In Arabic, the story behind the phrase has a crab instead of chestnuts, and this form found its way into Italian in the Fables of Bidpai, the Panchatantra. Other variants in Italian and Dutch read "snake" instead of "crab" or "chestnuts." It has been conjectured that "cat" may have been a misunderstanding of the Latin catellus, "whelp," "puppy." A dog and not a cat was the victim in most of the older forms.

These he useth as the Monkey did the Cat's paw, to scrape the nuts out of the fire.

MICHAEL HAWKE, Killing Is Murder and No Murder. (1657)

The fable is well known of an ape, which, having a mind to a chestnut lying in the fire, made the foot of a spaniel to be his tongs, by the proxy whereof he got out the nut for himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Surrey, iii. 205. (1662)

Some few that . . . make use of us, as the monkey did of the cat's paw, to scrape the nuts out of the fire.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act v, sc. 4. (1664)

Pull out those chestnuts for me. (Tire-moi ces marrons.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Singe et le Chat. Bk. ix, fab. 17. (1678) The Italians say, "Sacar el ascua con mano agena" (To take out a burning coal with another's hand). A variant is, "Never burn your fingers to snuff another man's candle."

'Tis a court masterpiece to draw chestnuts out of the fire with other people's fingers.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 186. (1692) He makes her . . . become herself the cat's paw to help him to the ready roasted chestnuts.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, iii, 31. (1753)

Ready to make a cat's-paw of him or of any man, if there be a chestnut in the fire.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 9. (1855) Draw the snake from the hole with another man's hand.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 129. (1902) A Spanish proverb.

5 The Cat sees not the mouse ever.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 594. (1640) The Cat sees not every Mouse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4443. (1732)

6 Send not a cat for lard.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 646. (1640) An old cat sports not with her prey.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1028

7 When all candels be out, all cats be grey

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546) ALL CATS ARE GRAY IN THE DARK, see under DARKNESS.

8 A cat maie looke on a king, ye know.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

The German form, "Darf doch die Katze den Kaiser ansehen" (A cat may look at an Emperor), is said to have originated in a visit of Maximilian I, in 1517, to the shop of Hieronymus Resch, maker of wood-cuts, whose cat lay on the table throughout the visit, staring suspiciously at the Emperor. But, as a matter of fact, it had been printed in Germany at least as early as 1514. A French parallel, "Un chien regarde bien un évêque" (A dog may look at a bishop), is said to be an allusion to a prohibition of the second Council of Mâcon, in 585, that bishops were not permitted to keep dogs since they might bite people who came to ask for aid. More probably it is a variant of the English and German forms, which merely point out axiomatically that there are certain things which an inferior is permitted to do in the presence of a superior.

The Image of a Prince stamp't in copper goeth as currant, and a Crow may cry Aue Caesar with-out any rebuke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 256. (1580)

A Cat may look at a King, and a swaines eye hath as high a reach as a Lords looke.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late, p. 94. (1590)

A cat may look at a king, and so may I at her.
THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Wise-Woman of Hogsdon. Act ii, sc. 2. (1638)

A bawbee cat may look at a king.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 227. (1678)
A Cat may look at a King. This is a saucy Proverb, generally made use of by pragmatistical Persons.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Cat. (1730)

A Cat may look upon a King.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 35. (1732)

A cat is free to contemplate a monarch.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 4. (1843)

A cat may look at a king.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 8.

(1865) STEVENSON, Catriona. Ch. 1. (1893)

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

DAVIS, Icebound. Act ii. (1923) etc., etc

The Cat may look at a King, they say,

But would rather look at a Mouse any day.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 94. (1924)

A cat can look at a king, and a tourist can look at anything.

ELEANOR EARLY, A New England Sampler, p. 98. (1940)

1

Cat after kynde good mouse hunt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Cat and kitten chase the rat. (Chat et chaton chassent le raton.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences (c. 1550)

Cat after kind (say'th the proverb) sweet milk will lap.

UNKNOWN, Jacob and Esau. Act iv, sc. 4. (1568)
Remembring the saying, that the Eagle breedeth not the Pigeon, but that Cat will after kynde

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii. p. 15. (1574)

If the cat will after kind.

So be sure will Rosalind.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 109. (1601)

Kit after kind. A chip of the old block.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1670)

That cat is out of kind that sweet milk will not lap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108. (1678)

That that comes of a cat will catch mice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1678)

Translating an Italian proverb, "Chi da gatta nasce sorici piglia," and citing a similar one, "Chi de gallina nasce convien che rozole" (That which is bred of a hen will scratch). The Germans say, "They are as good cats that scare the mice away as those that devour them"; the Japanese, "The borrowed cat catches no mice"; the Scots, "A bleet [timid] cat makes a proud mouse."

Cat will to kind, as they say, and wicked men will be true to their principles.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables. Fab. 155. (1692)

Cat after Kind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1070. (1732)

2

A husband gave a mdn of meat to his wife, bidding her cook it for his dinner. The woman roasted it and ate it all herself, and when her husband asked for the meat, she said the cat had stolen it.

JAMI, The Chain of Gold. (c. 1460) See CLOUSTON, Flowers from a Persian Garden, p. 80. Should china fall . . . or anything but stocks . . . The cat expects hard knocks.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Fly Leaves: Sad Memories. (1872)

The cat did it. A common shift on puss of unwitnessed smashes.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. i, p. 433. (1902)

3
As Confucius said, "The cat who has an extra mousehole in range of its eye, is less likely to go hungry than the cat with its whiskers stuck patiently in one mousehole only."

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 230. (1941)

4
Eith [easy] to learn the Cat to the Kirm [churn].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 93. (1721)

It is ill done to teach the cat the way to the kirm
WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 35. (1820)

5
There are more ways of killing a cat than choking her with cream.

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 20. (1855)

She knew more than one way to skin a cat.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 65 (1889)

There are more ways than one to skin a cat.

R. A. HABAS, Morals for Moderns, p. 166 (1939) RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse. p. 117. (1942)

There is more than one way to kill a cat besides soaking him in butter.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 492. (1940)

There's more ways o' killin' a cat than chokin' it to death with butter.

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 97. (1942)

There are more ways than one of killing a cat

PETER CHEYNEY, Farewell to the Admiral, p. 70. (1943)

There's more ways to kill a cat than throwing the grand piano at it.

MATTHEW HEAD, The Smell of Money, p. 141 (1943)

6
You got the wrong cat by the tail that time.
KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 41. (1940) See also under BEAR.

7
To bugge [buy] a belle of brasse . . .
And hangen it vp-on the cattles hals [neck].

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman: The Vision of the Field Full of Folk, l. 168. (1377)
Langland relates the whole fable of the mice who decided to hang a bell to the cat's neck, in order to be warned of her approach, and concludes, "But when the bell was brought and on a collar hung, there was no rat in the rout, for all the realm of France, that durst have bound the bell about the cat's neck."

The cattys nec to bylle [bell].

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems, i, 274. (1388)

When the nobles of Scotland proposed . . . to take Cochrane, the favourite of James the Third, and hang him, Lord Gray asked, "It is well said, but who will bell the cat?" "I shall bell the cat."

ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, FIFTH EARL OF ANGUS, (1482) Douglas made good his word by leading an attack on Cochrane, and was afterward known as "Bell-the-Cat Douglas."

See RAMSAY, Reminiscences, ch. 5; BUCHANAN, Rerum Scotticarum Historia, xii, 41.

They are . . . loth to hang the bell aboute the cattes neck.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Clout, l. 163. (c. 1529) Hang the bell about the cats necke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Not one will aduerture to hang the bell about the cats necke.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works (1630), p. 28. (1623)

Wishing some one would shew undaunted valour, to tye the bell about the Cat's neck.

E. F., History of Edward II, p. 14. (1627)

Is it merely to deliberate? Wise counsellors abound.

Is there need of doing something? Not one is to be found.

(Ne faut-il que délibérer?

La cour en conseillers foisonne:

Est-il besoin d'exécuter?

L'on ne rencontre plus personne.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Conseil Tenu Par les Rats. Bk. ii, fab. 2. (1668) The fable of the rats who would bell the cat. GIRARDIN, La Fontaine et les Fabulistes, i, 428, compares this fable to the scene in the Cyclops of Euripides, where Ulysses proposes to blind the Cyclops by jabbing a hot brand into his eye. All the satyrs, full of ardor, dispute who shall go first, but when the moment comes, they all find some pretext for staying in the rear. The Italians say, "Appicare chi vuol il sonaglio a la gatta?"

Who shall hang the bell about the cat's neck?

PETER MOTTEUX, tr. Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1712)

A fine manly fellow, who has belled the cat with fortune.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 17 July, 1830.

1 It is bad to buy a cat in a sack. (C'est mal achat de chat en sac.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii. 157

PIG IN POKE, see under PIG.

2 The cat knows whose beard it licks. (Ad cuius veniat scit catus lingere barbam.)

EGBERT VON LÜTTICH, Fecunda Ratis, 4. (c. 1023) Li Proverbe au Vilain (c. 1190) gives the saying in old French, "Li chaz set bien cui barbe il leche."

Wel wot hure cat, whas berd he lickat.

FÖRSTER, ed., Trinity College Homilies. (c. 1225) In English Studies, 31. The proverb is given in Hending, Douce MSS., Harleyan

Miscellany, Sloane MS., and other collections of medieval writings.

Wele wotith the cat whos berde she likkith.

JOHN SKELTON, Garland of Laurell, l. 1438. (1523)

Kindly he kyst hir, with woords not tart nor tough,

The cat knoweth whose lips she likth well enough.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

The cat knows whose lips she licks.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4442. (1732)

3 The Cat dare not fetch the mouse out of the Lions den.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory, p. 218 (1580)

4 When I find Republicans . . . voting solidly for an Irish-Catholic Democrat, then I know there is a cat in the meal-tub.

McMAHON, Speech, House of Representatives, 8 April, 1878. Cong. Rec., p. 2350/1.

Is this the cat in the meal-tub of refunding?

BUCKNER, Speech, House of Representatives, 10 May, 1880. Cong. Rec., p. 3193/1.

NIGGER IN THE WOODPILE. see under NEGRO

5 Don't awake a sleeping cat. (Il ne faut pas réveiller le chat qui dort.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) See also under DOG

6 When I play with my cat, who knows if she amuses herself with me more than I with her? We entertain each other with mutual apish tricks. (Quand je me joue à ma chatte, qui sait si elle passe son temps de moy, plus que je ne fois d'elle? Nous nous entretenons de singeries reciproques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

Quoted by ISAAC WALTON. The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.

7 His new friend, however, proved . . . to be like a singed cat, much better than he looked.

J. C. NEAL, Charcoal Sketches, p. 48. (1837)

"Like a singed cat," better than she looks.

JAMES MITCHELL, Nantucketisms, p. 42. (1848)

I reckon you're a kind of singed cat, as the saying is—better'n you look.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 1. (1876)

8 He that will play with cats, must expect to be scratched.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 249. (1710)

They that bourd [jest] wi' cats, maun count on scarts [scratches].

ALFRED HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 141. (1832)

9 But go and come with gossip's cheer, Ere Gib our cat can lick her ear.

GEORGE PEZLE, The Famous Chronicle of King Edward the First. (1593)

Ere a cat could lick her ear.

CHARLES COTTON, Vergil Travestied. Bk. iv. (1664)

Before the cat can lick her ear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 168. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 960. (1732)

1
The more you rub a cat on the rump, the higher she sets her tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1678)

No need . . . of adulation or flattery to quicken [fools] to a ranker growth; for, "The more you stroke the cat's tail, the more he raises his back."

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, iv, 78. (1853) It will be noted that the Archbishop reverses the proverb.

2
I will keep no more cats then will catch mice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678) No more in the family than will earn their living.

I will keep no Cats that will not catch Mice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2638. (1732)
I'll no more cats than can slay mice.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 52. (1861)

In the ordinary merchantman there are decidedly 'no more cats than can catch mice.'

F. T. BULLEN, The Cruise of the Cachalot, p. 25. (1898) No larger crew than absolutely necessary.

3
I . . . forced myself to be pleasant to the four men who were there, each one looking precisely like the cat after it had eaten the canary!

F. A. ROE, Army Letters, p. 26. (1871)

You look like you'd swallowed the canary.

DASHIELL HAMMETT, The Maltese Falcon. Ch. 4. (1930)

With the air of a cat that had swallowed a canary
SOMERSET MAUGHAM, The Mixture as Before, p. 72. (1940)

I could see her getting that cat-that-ate-the-canary look on her face.

FITZSIMMONS AND ADAMS, This—Is Murder, p. 148. (1941)

Looking as innocent as a cat who's just swallowed the family parrot.

H. S. KFELE, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 62. (1941).

She was looking around the dinner table with that cat-swallowed-the-canary smile.

VIRGINIA RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 116. (1942)

His satisfied, cat-that-has-just-eaten-the-canary expression had been rather revolting.

McKNIGHT MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 91. (1943)

A cat containing a canary looks the way you look now.

F. C. DAVIS, Let the Skeletons Rattle, p. 141. (1944)

4
I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iv, 2, 64. (1597)

The cat is in the cream-pot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 233. (1678)

The cat shuts its eyes while it steals cream.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, iv, 77. (1853)

5
Here is that which will give language to you, cat.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 86. (1611)

Old Liquor able to make a Cat speak.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, iii, 272. (1719)

It's enough to make a Tom cat speak.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 12. (1829)

It would make a cat laugh.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 148. (1851)
WEYMAN, Shrewsbury. Ch. 35. (1898)

6
But drynke, styll drynke, And let the cat wynke.

JOHN SKELTON, Elynor Runnyng, l. 306. (c. 1520)

Ab, ah, sirs, let the cat wink.

UNKNOWN, The World and the Child. (1522)
In HAZLITT, Old Plays, i, 265.

It was always that ye cat winked whan her eye was oute.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 241, col. 1. (1528)

Somwhat it is, I see, when the cat wynkth, And bothe hir eyne out, but further stryfe to shonne,

Let the cat winke, and leat the mouse ronne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

The prouerbe olde That the catte winkid when her eye was out.

UNKNOWN, Jacke Jugeler, p. 80. (c. 1550)

The cat winked when both her eyes were out

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

No wonder the cat wink'd, when both her eyes were out.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The cat ofte winks, and yet she is not blind

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Whole Crew of Kind Gossips, p. 20. (1609)

Though the cat winks a while, yet sure she is not blind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1678)

And so let the cat be winking.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 45. (1709)

When the Cat winketh,

Little wots the Mouse, what the Cat thinketh

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6432. (1732)

7
A cat . . . much baited and straitened, turn to be a lion.

JOHN SKELTON, tr. Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 14. (1620)

A baited cat may grow as fierce as a lion.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 305. (1710)

8
I am pent up in frowsy lodgings, where there is not room enough to swing a cat.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker. 8 June. London. (1771) That is, a cat-o'-nine-tails.

Mrs. Crupp had indignantly assured him that there wasn't room to swing a cat there; but as Mr. Dick justly observed to me, sitting down on the foot of the bed, nursing his leg, "You know, Trotwood, I don't want to swing a cat. I never do swing a cat. Therefore what does that signify to me!"

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Vol. ii, ch. 6. (1849)

Room to swing a cat in.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 179. (1906)

1 That woman grins like a Cheshire cat.

W. M. THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 24. (1855) An old simile, whose origin has never been satisfactorily explained. See Notes and Queries, 1852, v, 402.

A large cat was lying on the hearth and grinning from ear to ear. "Please would you tell me," said Alice, . . . "why your cat grins like that?" "It's a Cheshire-Cat," said the Duchess.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 6. (1865) It was this and other references to the Cheshire cat by Carroll in Alice which popularized the simile.

They called me the Cheshire Cat because I usually turned up smiling.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 66. (1941)

2 Cats always will lie soft. (αὐ γὰρ αἱ μαλακῶς κρησονται καθεύδειν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xv, l. 28. (c. 270 B. C.)

3 Whenever the cat of the house is black,
The lasses of lovers will have no lack.

T. F. THISTLETON-DYER, English Folk-Lore, 108. (1878)

4 The cat loves fish, but does not wish to wet its foot. (Catus amat pisces. sed non vult tingere plantam.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 138. A Medieval Latin proverb, of before 1200, cited also by Henderson.

The cat loves fish, but does not wish to touch the water. (Catus amat piscem, sed non vult tangere flumen.)

UNKNOWN, Trinity College Homilies, 0, 11, 45, Förster. (c. 1225) The English rendering, the earliest known, is, "Cat lufat visch, ac he nele feth wete." The Harleian Miscellany has a slightly different version of the Latin. "Catus vult piscem sed non vult tangere limpham." The proverb was turned into a dull fable by ODO OF CHERITON, a twelfth-century versifier.

For ye be lyk the sweynte [slothful] cat,
That wolde have fish; but wostow what?
He wolde no-thing wete his clowes.

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame, Bk. iii, l. 693. (c. 1383)

As a cat wolde etē fisshes

Withouthē wetinge of his cles.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 1108. (c. 1390)

The catte wyll fyshe eate, but she wyll not her feete wette.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translation of Erasmus, fo. 47. (1539)

The cat would lick milke, but she will not wet her feet.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. O1. (1583)

Ye breid of the cat, ye wald fain eat fish, but yee have no will to weet your feet.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,'
Like the poor cat i' the adage.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 44. (1605)

The cat loves fish, but she's loath to wet her feet. (Le chat aime le poisson, mais il n'aime pas à mouiller la patte.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1670) The Germans say, "Die Katze moechte die Fische wohl, sie mag aber die Füße nicht netzen."

Fain would the Cat Fish eat,
But she's loth her Feet to wet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6130. (1732)

What cat's averse to fish?

THOMAS GRAY, On the Death of a Favourite Cat. (1748)

He will never catch any trout who keeps his arms dry. (No se cojen truchas, a brajas enjutas.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 284 (1856) A Spanish proverb

5 I know how the cat jumps.

SAMUEL WOODWORTH, The Forest Rose. Act i, sc. 2. (1825)

I would like to be there, were it but to see how the cat jumps.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 7 Oct., 1826. To see which direction events are taking. In the Croker Papers, i, 11, 319. Scott is quoted as saying, "Had I time, I believe I would come to London merely to see how the cat jumped."

In these politics there's never any telling which way the cat will jump.

SEBA SMITH, Major Downing, p. 6. (1830)

That cat won't jump.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Sawy, Ch. 4. (1843) NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 260. (1940) MARK TWAIN (Innocent Abroad, ch. 4 (1869), has, "That cat won't fight, you know."

He understood . . . which way the cat jumped
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies, p. 289 (1863)

Easy enough to see which way the cat would jump.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 27 (1907)

I would like to be there, were it but to see how the cat jumps.

NICHOLAS BLAKE, The Corpse in the Snowman, p. 87 (1941)

6 Many men of lawe . . . bi here suteltes [by their subtleties] turnen the cat in the panne

JOHN WYCLIF, Works (1871), iii, 332. (a. 1484)

"To turn the cat in the pan" has two meanings, (1) to make things appear the reverse of what they really are, and (2) to change sides from motives of self-interest. The origin of the phrase is unknown. See O.E.D.

These vile cheaters turned the cat in the pan, giving to divers vile, patching thefts . . . the name of a law.

GILBERT WALKER, Dice Play, p. 18. (1532)

Ther was a prouerbe I knew wan,
Callyd "turnyng the cate in the pan."

UNKNOWN, The Pilgrim's Tale, l. 691. (c. 1542)
God saith, "Cry, cease not," but they turn cat in pan, and say, "Cease, cry not."

THOMAS BECON, Invective Against Swearing.
(1543)

A subtille turning the catte in the panne, or wresting of a false thing to some purpose.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium. (1572)
Turning the Cat in the Pan, full of Leiger-du-maine.

THOMAS NEWTON, tr. Lemnie's Touchstone of Complexions, p. 208. (1576)

I'll, with the proverbe, Turne the cat i' the band.
HENRY HUTTON, Follie's Anatomie.. (1619)

There is a cunning, which we in England call,
The turning of the cat in the pan; which is, when that which a man sayes to another, he laies it, as if another had said it to him.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1620)
How foully do they . . . turne cat in pan.

THOMAS STOUGHTON, The Christians Sacrifice, vii, 91. (1622) Change sides, "turn-coat."

You are a Villain, have turn'd Cat-in-pan, and are a Tory.

JOHN CROWNE, City Politiques, ii, 1. (1675)

I turned the cat in pan once more,
And so became a Whig, sir.

UNKNOWN, The Vicar of Bray. (c. 1700)
This precious Basil will turn cat in pan with any man.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality, Ch. 35. (1816)

1
Like a cat in a strange garret, frightened at every step.

UNKNOWN, Woodstock (Vt.) Observer, 16
March, 1824.

"Like a cat in a strange garret." Amazed.

JAMES MITCHELL, Nantucketisms, p. 42. (1848)
I'd be a cat in a strange garret.

P. STAPLETON, Major's Christmas, p. 102. (1886)
When . . . he arrived in Boston, he felt . . . like a cat in a strange garret.

C. C. MUNN, Uncle Terry, p. 110. (1900)
THE CAT HAS ONLY ONE TRICK, see under FOX.
TO LOOK LIKE SOMETHING THE CAT DRAGGED IN,
see under LOOK.

TO FIGHT LIKE KILKENNY CATS, see under FIGHT-ING.

II—When the Cat's Away

2
There be no goodness of shepe, yf the shep-herde be awaye. (Ouium nulla utilitas, si pastor absit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vii, No. 26.
(1508) Taverner, tr. fo. 45. (1550) Taverner adds: "Seruauntes do nothyng well, where ye mayster is absent. Scollers do no good, when the teacher is gone."

3
Weill wats [wots] the mouse, the cat's oot of the house.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (c. 1595)
Weel kens the mouse when the cat's out o' the house.

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 263. (1678)

Well kens the mouse that the cat's out of the house.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 342. (1721)
The servant lasses . . . grew out of all bounds [after the death of their mistress], verifying the proverb, "Well kens the mouse when the cat's out of the house."

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 37. (1821)

4
When the Cat is abroad, the Mise play.
(Quando la gatta non è in casa, i sorsi bal-lano.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)
Literally, "When the cat is not in the house, the mice dance." The same form in Spanish.
The Germans say, "Katz aus dem Haus, rührt sich die Maus" (Cat outside the house, repose for the mouse). The proverb is common to all European countries.

There's an old proverb—when the cat's away,
the mouse may play.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, *A Woman Kill'd With
Kindness*. Act iv, sc. 4. (1607)

When the cat is away, the mice play.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1670)

When the Cat's gone, the Mice grow sawcy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5572. (1732)
Such is life. The cat's away and the mice they play.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 54. (1852)

While the devil is away, [let us] wash [our] clothes.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439
(1938) A Japanese proverb.

When the husband's away the Kews will play
DOROTHY HUGHES, The Bamboo Blonde, p
179. (1941)

When the cat's away, the mice will play around.
STEWART STERLING, *Down Among the Dead
Men*, p. 54. (1943)

5
The mowse goth a-brode, wher the cat is not lorde.

RICHARD HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 132.
(c. 1530)

6
When the cat is outside the house,
Mice and rats have their innings.
(Quand le chat est hors la maison, Souris et rats ont leur saison.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol ii,
p. 158. (1859)

7
Sport as you may while the master's away.
(Delude ut lubet, erus dum hinc abest.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 811. (c. 200 B.C.)
The mows lordchvpyth [plays the lord], where a cat ys nawt. (Mus debaccatur, ubi catus non dominatur.)

UNKNOWN, Harleian Miscellany, 3362. (c. 1470)

8
When the Catte is not at home, the Myce daunce.

JAMES SANFORD, Hours of Recreation, p. 220.
(1572)

The cat absent, the mice dance. (Absent le chat les souris dansent.)

BAIF, Mimes. (c. 1575) Also in modern Greek, λειν' ὁ γάρος, καὶ χορεύουν τὰ ποντίκια. See NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 73.

While the cat runs over the roofs, the mice dance across the floors. (Quand le chat court sur les toits, les souris dansent sur les planchers.)

BALZAC, Eugénie Grandet. Ch. 3. (1833) This is the commonest form of the French proverb, but there are variations: "Quand le chat court sur les toits, les souris dansent au logis" (at home); "Les rats se promènent à l'aise là où il n'y point des chats" (The rats promenade at ease where there are no cats); "Là où chat n'est, souris se reveillent" (Where the cat is not, the mice are awake).

1 When the cat's away, the rats come out to stretch.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 606. (1875)

2 Playing the mouse in absence of the cat.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 2, 172. (1598)

III—Cat and Dog

3 Between dogs and cats there is a good war. (De chiens et chats la guerre est belle.)

BAIF, Mimes, fo. 50. (c. 1500)

FIGHT LIKE CAT AND DOG, see under FIGHTING.

4 The cat and dog may kiss, yet are none the better friends.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 499. (1855)

5 She and her sister led a cat and dog life together.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre. Ch. 10. (1847)

Who lives like cat and dog never has repose or estate.

(Qui vit comme chat et chien Jamais n'a repos ne bien.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. ii, p. 158. (1859) A shorter form is "Vivre comme chien et chat."

They were like cat and dog. (Comme chat et chien.)

GEORGES SIMENON, Au Rendez-Vous des Terre-Neuves. Ch. 1. (c. 1937)

6 A dog will remember a three days' kindness three years, while a cat will forget a three years' kindness in three days.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

7 It is the Marriage of a Cat and Dog together.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3025. (1732)

8 None but Cats and Dogs are allowed to quarrel in my House.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3643. (1732)

TO AGREE LIKE CATS AND DOGS, see under AGREEMENT.

9 By biting and scratching cats and dogs come together.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 320. (1605)

Biting and scratching is scots folk's wooing.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 24. (1595)

Biting and scratching gets the Cat with Kitten.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 984. (1732)

10 Cats and dogs: Worthless securities.

S. A. NELSON, A B C of Wall Street, p. 133. (1900)

"To pay in cats and dogs" is to pay, not in cash, but in inconvenient or useless commodities.

RICHARD THORNTON, American Glossary, p. 153. (1912)

CATCH

11 The Gentleman had got a great Catch of her, as they say.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act iii, sc. 1. (1662)

She intended to have me, if she could catch, and it was indeed a kind of catch.

DANIEL DEFOE, Colonel Jack, p. 203. (1722)

Miss M. is absolutely on the catch for a husband.

JANE AUSTEN, Lady Susan. Ch. 14. (1814)

He would be a great catch.

JOHN GALT, Lowrie Todd, iv, 9, 174. (1830)

She was considered quite a catch.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack, ch. 51. (1840)

12 He that can catch and hold, he is the man of gold.

EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, 243. (1654) See under GETTING AND KEEPING.

13 Was none in sight But cacche who that cacche might.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 240. (1393)

They catche that catche may, kepe and holde fast.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnifycence, l. 1773. (c. 1520)

Catch that catch may.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 171. (1546)

By hooke or by crooke, catch that catch may.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Griffie, Graffe (1611)

Men, women, and all woo, catch that catch may.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act. i, sc. 1. (c. 1612)

Let him catch this that catch can.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fayre. Act ii. (1614)

In a world where all must catch that catch can.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 197. (1752)

There's catch as catch can, hit or miss, luck is all.

KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act ii, sc. 8. (1761)

The last words seem to mean "Catch who catch can."

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 11. (1821)

Each shall slay his man, catch who catch can.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 5. (1855)

- <sup>1</sup>
To lie at catch for an advantage.
SIR THOMAS RYVES, The Poor Vicars Plea, p. 141. (1605) To set a trap.
I have to do with an adversary who lieth at catch for the least advantage.
THOMAS FULLER, The Appeal of Injured Innocence. (1659) See Hist. Camb. Univ., p. 405.
You lie at the catch, I perceive.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. (1877) Pt. i, p. 88. (1678)

CATER-COUSIN

- <sup>2</sup>
They be cater cosyns: and almoste neuer a sonder.
WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 223. (1519)
They are good friends.
We should find you cater-cosens.
THOMAS LODGE, A Defence of Poetry, 9, 29. (1579)
His master and he . . . are scarce cater-cousins.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 2, 139. (1597)
They are not now cater cousins [inimicitia est inter eos].
RICHARD BERNARD, tr., Andria, Act v, sc. 7. (1598)
They are not cater-cousins.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 168. (1670)
He and I were never cater-cousins.
TOBIAS SMOLLETT. (1759) See HILL, Boswell, i, 349.

CATTLE

- <sup>3</sup>
Old cattle breed no longer, doted trees deny fruit, the tired earth becomes barren.
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 485. (1629)
Old cattle breed not.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 169. (1639)
<sup>4</sup>
God does not principally take care for such cattle.
JOHN MILTON, The Doctrine of Divorce, iv, 28. (1643) Such trash.
What have any of you cursed cattle to do with thinking what's right?
H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch.33. (1850)
Do you suppose I am going to speak of these cattle that way?
MARK TWAIN, Journalism in Tennessee. (c.1871)
<sup>5</sup>
The cattle upon a thousand hills. (Iumenta in montibus et boves.)
Old Testament: Psalms, i. 10. (c. 400 B. C.)

CAUSE

- <sup>6</sup>
All men are well-disposed to the weaker cause. (τοῖς ἡσυχαιοτέροις γὰρ πάντες τὴν ἐνέχυρον φέρει.)
AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 489. (c. 485 B. C.) See also DOG: UNDER DOG.
<sup>7</sup>
They never fail who die in a great cause.
BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act ii, sc. 2. (1820)

Great causes are never tried on their merits.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)

<sup>8</sup>
The causes of events are always more interesting than the events themselves. (Semper causae eventorum magis movent, quam ipsa eventa.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ix, epis. 5. (49 B. C.)

To know truly is to know by causes. (Vere scire, esse per causas scire.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. ii, bk. ii, aphor. 1. (1605) Quoted.

<sup>9</sup>
If you greaze a Cause well, it will stretch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2753. (1732)
See also under BRIBERY.

<sup>10</sup>
We would call no one a lobster without good and sufficient claws.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Between Rounds. (1906)

<sup>11</sup>
We are all ready to be savage in some cause. The difference between a good man and a bad one is the choice of the cause.

WILLIAM JAMES, Letters, ii, 28. (1895)

<sup>12</sup>
The greatest events may be often traced back to slender causes.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 141. (1751) See also under TRIFLES.

<sup>13</sup>
The parent of the universe . . . fixed for eternity the causes whereby he keeps all things in order. (Parens rerum . . . fixit in aeternum causas, qua cuncta coercent.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 7. (C. A. D. 60)
Even from the first beginnings of the world descends a chain of causes. (A prima descendit origine mundi | causarum series.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vi, l. 611.

He clepeth God the firste cause.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 87. (1393)

The Universal Cause
Acts to one end, but acts by various laws.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 1. (1733)

The Universal Cause
Acts not by partial but by gen'ral laws.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 35.

Thou Great First Cause, least understood.

POPE, Universal Prayer. (1738)

By the First Cause is meant that which produces all things, and is itself produced of none.

HENRY L. MANSEL, Bampton Lectures, ii, 30 (1858)

<sup>14</sup>
A bad cause should be silent. (Mala causa silenda est.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 1, l. 147. (A. D. 13)
It is a bad cause that asks for mercy. (Mala causa est quae requirit misericordiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 353. (c. 43 B. C.)

'Tis a bad cause that none dares speake in.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 199. (1639)

It's a bad Cause indeed that none dares speak in.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2840. (1732)

It's an ill cause that the lawyers think shame o'.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Scots Proverbs. (1737)
He that has the worst Cause, makes the most Noise.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2153. (1732)
A bad cause will ever be supported by bad means and bad men.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. 2. (1776)
He who hath an ill cause, let him sell it cheap.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 399. (1855)

1
Everyone was eloquent in behalf of his own cause. (Proque sua causa quisque disertus erat.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 112. (c. A. D. 8)
What need we any spur but our own cause?
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, ii, 1, 123. (1599)

A man is a lion in his own cause.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 12. (c. 1595) Cited also by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 6 (1721), who adds, "No man so zealous for, or assiduous in, a man's business as himself." A Scottish form is, "A man's aye crusest [keenest] in his ain cause," or "A cock is crouse in his own midding."

He is a Lion in a good Cause.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1907. (1732)
Causes are good or bad as they are ours or our neighbours'.

GILBERT PARKER, The Seats of the Mighty. Ch. 18. (1896)

2
Cause célèbre. (A celebrated case.)
FRANÇOIS DE PETEVAL, Causes Célèbres et Intéressantes. Title of work in twenty volumes, published at Paris in 1734. Usually in modern usage a law-suit involving scandal.

3
Who pleads another's cause arraigns himself. (Alienam qui orat causam se culpatur.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 48. (c. 43 B. C.)

This cause is to be fought, not pleaded.
PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act i, sc. 2. (1636)

He is one that will not plead that cause, wherein his tongue must be confuted by his conscience.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Advocate. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1642)

4
A good cause fears no judge. (Bona causa nullum iudicem verebitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 98. (c. 43 B. C.)
A good cause needs not to be patron'd by passion, but can sustain itself upon a temperate dispute.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 5. (1643)

The cause is good, and the word "Fall on."
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 312. (1721)
"Spoken facetiously," says Kelly, "when we begin dinner."

The Proverb is, one Cause is good Until the other's understood.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, Oct., 1731.
A good Cause makes a stout Heart, and a strong Arm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 140. (1732)

5
I often wished that all my causes were apple-pie causes.

JOHN SCOTT, LORD ELDON, Remark, after adjudging a complaint made to him by the undergraduates of University College, Oxford, of which he was resident Fellow. (1767)
The complaint was that an apple-pie which could not be eaten had been sent to the refectory by the cook, but when Lord Eldon ordered the cook to produce the pie, the latter informed him that he and his assistants had eaten it. Whereupon Lord Eldon gave judgment for the cook, saying to the students, "You complained that the pie could not be eaten, but the pie has been eaten, and therefore could be eaten."

6
There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 1, 3. (1599)
Nothing ever came to pass under the sun of which there is not a just preceding cause.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1614) Quoting Plato.

Everything is the cause of itself.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals. (1856)
Everything must have a cause. (Fan shih pi yü yin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 3. (1875)

7
Hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 13. (1599)

8
For my sake, do get it into your minds that my cause is a just one. (Mea causa causam hanc iustam esse animum inducite.)

FERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos: Prologue, l. 41. (163 B. C.)

A just cause is strong.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Tricke to Catch the Old One. Act iii, sc. 3. (1607)

Our cause is just, our union is perfect.

JOHN DICKINSON, Declaration on Taking up Arms, 1775. Formerly attributed to Jefferson. but is in Dickinson's handwriting in the original manuscript draft of the resolutions.

9
Every cause of a cause is cause of thing caused.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love, ii, 285. (c. 1400)

Cause causeth (quoth he) and as cause causeth mee,
So will I doo.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
See also under NECESSITY.

Cause me no causes.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act i, sc. 3. (1625)

10
Before they made common cause with either French or English.

H. H. WILSON, History of British India, i, 209. (1844)

The two parties . . . united their strength in a common cause.

MACAULAY, History of England, i, 101. (1848)
Epirus will make common cause with Thessaly.

MARY HOWITT, tr. Bremer's Greece, ii, 14, 114. (1863)

1 Happy the man who has been able to understand the causes of things. (Felix, qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 490. (29 B. C.)

2 "The lost cause" . . . was a lamentable failure.

UNKNOWN, N.Y. Herald, 2 July, 1868, p. 4/1.

Referring to the cause of the South in the Civil War.

They receive the representatives of "the Lost Cause" with every possible honor.

B. P. POORE, Reminiscences, ii, 526. (1886)
"The Lost Cause," meaning the under dog in the "late unpleasantness."

NORA DAVIS, The Northerner, p. 4. (1905)
He was elected . . . on account of his devotion to the "Lost Cause."

CORRA HARRIS, Eve's Husband, p. 40. (1910)
Why should I go round championing a lost cause?

C. F. ADAMS, And Sudden Death, p. 155. (1940)
HOME OF LOST CAUSES, see under OXFORD.

II—Cause and Effect

3 Whatever moves is moved by another. (Quod movetur ab alio movetur.)

THOMAS AQUINAS, Summa Theologicae. Ch. 1. (c. 1265)

4 Cesse cause, ay cesseth maladye.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii. l. 483. (c. 1380)

The cause taken away, the effecte vanisheth.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 193. (1576)

Do away with the cause, you do away with the sin. (Quitada la causa, se quita el pecado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii. ch. 67. (1615)
The cause having ceased, the effect ceases also (Cessante causa, cessat et effectus.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Commentarie upon Littleton. (1628) Stating in another form a maxim of the law, "Sublata causa tollitur effectus" (The cause being taken away, the effect is removed).

For 'tis a maxim that will se'dom miss,
Remove the cause and the effect will cease.

EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues, ii, 42. (1710)

5 Cause and effect, the chancellors of God.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)
Cause and effect, means and ends, seed and fruit, cannot be severed, for the effect already blooms in the cause.

EMERSON, Essays: Compensation.
Cause and effect are two sides of one fact.

EMERSON, Essays: Circles.

6 The effect speaks, the tongue needs not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 711. (1640)

7 In seeing the stubble one may judge what the grain was. (ἀλλ' ἔμπης καλὰ μιν γέ σ' ὄτομαι εἰσορόωντα | γυγνώσκειν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 214. (c. 850 B. C.)

8 Their cause is hidden, but our woes are clear. (Causa latet, mala nostra patent.)

OVID, Heroides. Eleg. xxi, l. 53. (c. 10 B. C.)

The cause is hidden, but the result is known. (Causa latet, vis est notissima.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 287. (c. A. D. 7)

9 That which follows ever conforms to that which went before. (τὰ ἔξης δὲ τοῖς προηγησαμένοις οὐκείως ἐπὶ γίγνεται.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sc. 45. (C. A. D. 174)

A sufficient and effectual cause being granted, an answerable effect thereof is also granted.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface. (1614) Quoting Aristotle.

The effect has its cause.

OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON).
Lucile. Pt. ii, canto iii, st. 8. (1860)

10 Sutch as the cause of every thing is, sutch wilbe the effect.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 57. (1576)

How is it possible that of an il cause, can come a good effect?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 234.

11 To produce effects beyond the cause; which is indeed to make something out of nothing.

FRANCIS ROUSE, The Heavenly University, x. 143. (1639)

12 Thou art the cause, and most accursed effect. SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 2, 120. (1592)

And now remains

That we find out the cause of this effect;

Or rather say, the cause of this defect,

For this effect defective comes by cause.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 100. (1600)

After this, therefore on account of this. (Post hoc, ergo propter hoc.) False argument from cause to effect from mere precedence of circumstance.

RICHARD WHATELY, Elements of Logic, p. 135. (1826)

CAUTION

See also Prudence

13 The over-cautious and industrious often prove losers.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 50b. (c. 450) Choboth Halebaboth (Preface) has: "The greatest caution is not to be over cautious." And IBN GABIROL, Choice of Pearls No. 576, says: "Over-circumspection engenders loss."

Too much taking heed is loss.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 888. (1640)

He that is over-cautious will accomplish little. (Wer gar zu viel bedenkt, wird wenig leisten.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 72. (1804) The French say, "Trop de précaution nuit" (Too much caution is harmful). See also under TIMIDITY.

1 Slowly, softly, if you wish to go far. (Pian piano, si va lontano.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 205. (1856) An Italian proverb. The French say, "Pas à pas on va loin" (Step by step one goes far). The Italians also say, "Chi va piano, va sano; chi va sano, va lontano" (He who goes slowly goes safely; he who goes safely goes far).

2 Be cautious as though you were standing on the brink of a precipice or walking on thin ice. CHÈN, Book of Filial Duty, p. 18. Quoting from Shiking (Book of Songs). c. 600 B.C.

3 They who are cautious and humble make but few slips. (Ee yok sat chee chea sun ee.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (c. 500 B.C.) Marshman, tr. Legge has it: "The cautious seldom err."

Excessive precaution does no harm. (Abundans cautela non nocet.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Commentarie upon Littleton. (1628) A legal maxim.

He who turns to look a second time will lose nothing. (Hui t'ou tsai k'an, pu tè shih san.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1919. (1875)

The lawyer's maxim, ex abundante cautela.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 94. (1942)

4 Stand away from a horse's heels. (Procul à pedibus equinis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 95. (1523)

Take heed of an ox before, an ass behind, and a monk (or knave) on all sides.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1678)

Take heed of The wrath of a mighty man, and the tumult of the people; Mad folk in a narrow place; A young wench, a prophetess, and a Latin-bred woman; A person marked, and a Widow thrice married; Foul dirty ways, and long sickness; Wind that comes in at a hole, and a reconciled Enemy; a step-mother; the very name of her sufficeth.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1146. (1640)

Take heed of enemies reconciled, and of meat twice boiled.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1678)

Take heed, girl, of the promise of a man; for it will run like a crab.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 493. (1855) From the Spanish.

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP, see under LOOK.

5 Distrust and caution are the parents of security.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733. The Italians say, "La diffidenza è la madre della sicurtà" (Caution is the mother of security); the Germans, "Vorsicht ist die Mutter der Porzellankiste" (Caution is the mother of the porcelain chest). Moltke's motto was "Erst wägen, dann wagen" (First weigh, then attempt), and a medieval Latin proverb points out that "Non de ponte cadit, qui cum sapientia vadit" (He does not fall from the bridge who walks with discrimination). A similar admonition is, "Take time in turning a corner."

6 As wary as a blind Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 745. (1732) Wary is the word.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5421.

A little wariness prevents great weariness.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 110. (1814)

7 Know, one false step is ne'er retriev'd, And be with caution bold.

THOMAS GRAY, On the Death of a Favourite Cat, l. 38. (c. 1747)

8 Take heed is a faire thing.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

ARMIN, Nest of Ninnies, p. 29. (1608)

Take heed is a good reed.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act iii, sc. 2. (1599) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 312. (1605) RAY, Proverbs, p. 102. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6315. (1732)

Good take-heed doth surely speed.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 266. (1639)

Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

Good heed hath good hap.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 719. (1681)

Take good heed will surely speed.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Heed. (1736)

9 The way in which the icy blast would come down . . . was a "caution."

C. F. HOFFMAN, Winter in the West, p. 234. (1835) A "caution" is something that staggers or astonishes.

The way in which they kill pigs here is, to use a Yankee phrase, quite a caution.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Diary. Vol. i, p. 236. (1839)

He is, as his neighbors say, a "caution."

WILLIAM BROWN, America, p. 21. (1849)

His wife was what the Yankees call a "caution."

MORTIMER COLLINS, The Vivian Romance, iii, 2, 26. (1870)

10 He is safe from danger who even in safety takes precaution. (Caret periculo qui etiam cum est tutus cavet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 130. (c. 43 B.C.) A cautious mind is the half of wisdom. (Incertus animus dimidium est sapientiae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 320.

How take precautions when heart seeks one thing and words another? (Quo caveas, cum animus aliud verba aliud petunt?)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 615.

1 Measure thrice what thou buyest, and cut it but once.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678) A shorter form is, "Measure thrice before you cut once." The Italians say, "Misura tre volte, e taglia una"; the Dutch, "Meet drie-maal eer gij eens snijdt.")

Measure thy cloth ten times; thou canst cut it but once.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 75. (1852) A Russian proverb.

2 Each must take care of his coat and hat; Caution is needful, be sure of that.

(Ko chao i mao; hsiao hsin wei yao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1920. (1875)

In a narrow road look out for a dagger. (Lu fêng hsia ch'u hsü fang chien.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1932.

Never go to bed without a look at the kitchen. (Lin shui ch'u fang tsou yi 'hui.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1947. To guard against fire.

Deviate an inch and lose a thousand miles. (Ch'ia chih 'hao li, shih chih ch'ien li.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1951.

He wear strings on a felt hat. (Tai chan mao an shêng.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1939. Over cautious.

3 Caution is the confidential agent of selfishness.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Chicago. 12 Feb., 1909.

CELIBACY

See also Bachelor

4 There are sore troubles in the celibate life, but sorer is the futile watch which jealous husbands keep. (Poenaëque graves in caelibe vita, | et gravior cautis custodia vana maritis.)

AUSONIUS, Elogues. No. ii, l. 6. (c. A. D. 390)

See Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 359.

One was never married, and that's his hell; another is, and that's his plague.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 7. (1621)

Marriage has many pains, but celibacy has no pleasures.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, xi, 74. (a. 1784)

Marriage may often be a stormy lake, but celibacy is almost always a muddy horsepond.

T. L. PEACOCK, Melincourt. Ch. 7. (1817)

5 Certainly, the best workes, and of greatest Merit for the Publike, have proceeded from the unmarried, or Childlesse Men.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life. (1612)

The Noblest workes and Foundations have proceeded from Childlesse Men.

BACON, Essays: Of Parents and Children. (1612)

6 To trail a light harrow.

WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven, i, 213.

(1828) Alluding to the comforts of celibacy. He trails a light harrow, his hat covers his family.

C. C. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 79.

(1855) A variant is, "When a man's single, he carries all his troubles under one hat," or "When a man's single, he lives at his ease."

7 Nothing is better than a celibate life. (Melius nil caelibe vita.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 88. (20 B. C.)

8 The most lightly burdened arrive first at the destination.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. i, Apologue 9. (c. 1257)

If Christians be forced to run races for their lives, the unmarried have the advantage, lighter by many ounces.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 12. (1642)

Strive to be the greatest Man in your Country, and you may be disappointed; Strive to be the best and you may succeed: He may well win the race that runs by himself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

Space is ample east and west,
But two cannot go abreast.

R. W. EMERSON, The Over-Soul. (a. 1867)

The race is run by one and one and never by two and two.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tomlinson. (1891)

Down to Gehenna or up to the Throne,
He travels the fastest who travels alone.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners. (c. 1898)

Who travels alone, without lover or friend.

But hurries from nothing to nought at the end.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Reply to Kipling (c. 1900)

Who drags the fiery artist down?

Who keeps the pioneer in town?

Who hates to let the seaman roam?

It is the wife, it is the home.

CLARENCE DAY, JR., Wife and Home. (c. 1930)

To be loved is to be hindered.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 442

(1938) A Japanese proverb.

9 Thrice-blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that which, withering on the virgin thorn,

Grows, lives and dies in single blessedness.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 1, 74. (1596)

Mope away your lives in single retchidness.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), The Shakers. (1860)

10 By persistently remaining single a man converts himself into a permanent public temptation.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act ii. (1895)

<sup>1</sup> I never married, and I wish my father never had. (μὴ γάμος αἰθε δὲ μὴδ' ὁ πατήρ.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 309.)

I'm Smith of Stoke, aged sixty-odd,
I've lived without a dame
From youth-time on; and would to God
My dad had done the same.

THOMAS HARDY, Epitaph on a Pessimist. (a. 1902)

<sup>2</sup> Eternal vigilance is the price of celibacy.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 104. (1906)

CENSURE

See also Criticism

<sup>3</sup> Every man's censure is first moulded in his own nature.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1172. (1650) BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 351. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> I lose my patience, and I own it too,
When works are censur'd, not as bad, but new.

(Indignor quicquam reprehendi, non quia crasse compositum illepidave putetur, sed quia nuper.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 76. (20 B. C.) Pope, tr., l. 115.

<sup>5</sup> I find the pain of a little censure, even when it is unfounded, is more acute than the pleasure of much praise.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vii, p. 299. (c. 1800)

<sup>6</sup> No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure 'scape.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 2, 197. (1604)

<sup>7</sup> The carping censures of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 5, 68. (1592)

A Carper can cavil at any thing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 33. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> Censure's to be understood

Th' Authentick mark of the Elect.

SWIFT, Ode to the Athenian Society. St. 4. (1691)

CERBERUS

<sup>9</sup> These realms huge Cerberus makes ring with his triple-throated baying. . . . To him the seer flung a morsel drowsy with honey and drugged meal. He, opening his triple throat in ravenous hunger, catches it when thrown and, with monstrous frame relaxed, sinks to earth and stretches his bulk over all the den.

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 417. (19 B. C.) Hence, "A sop to Cerberus," to stop his mouth and keep him quiet for a moment.

If I can give that Cerberus a sop, I shall be at rest for one day.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 4, l. 17. (1695)

To Cerberus they give a Sop

His triple-barking Mouth to Stop.

JONATHAN SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 213. (1733)

I must give the Cerberus a sop, I suppose.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Nabob. Act i. (1773)

I will throw down a napoleon, as a sop to Cerberus.

HORACE SMITH, Gaieties and Gravities. (1825)

Give Cerberus a non-employment wage, the dog is hungry.

HORACE GREGORY, New York, Cassandra. (1933)

She had offered it as a sop to Cerberus.

MARGERIE ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 82. (1940)

CEREMONY

<sup>10</sup> Ceremony is not Civility; nor Civility Ceremony.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

<sup>11</sup> A Man without Ceremony had need of great Merit in its Place.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 315. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

<sup>12</sup> Ceremony keeps up all things.

JOHN SELDEN, Table Talk: Ceremony. (c. 1650)

<sup>13</sup> I never stood on ceremonies.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, ii, 2, 13. (1601)

I never stand upon ceremony.

JANE AUSTEN, Northanger Abbey. Ch. 8. (1798)

<sup>14</sup> The sauce to meat is Ceremony.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 36. (1605)

CERTAINTY

<sup>15</sup> That's certain as death and hay-fever.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923) See also under SURE.

<sup>16</sup> Never take anything for granted.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 5 Oct., 1864

<sup>17</sup> An engagement ain't always a lead-pipe cinch.

O. HENRY, The Sphinx Apple. (1907)

It was a dead cert.

F. W. CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 238. (1941)

<sup>18</sup> Positive men err most of any men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3900. (1732)

Positiveness is an Evidence of poor Judgment.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3901. (1732)

To be positive: to be mistaken at the top of one's voice.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>19</sup> I will maintain it before the whole world. (Je le soutiendrai devant tout le monde.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv, sc. 3. (1670)

<sup>1</sup> Supposing is good, but finding out is better.
MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 324. (1907)
Quoted as a favorite maxim of his.

II—Certainty and Uncertainty

<sup>2</sup> What is more unwise than to mistake uncertainty for certainty, falsehood for truth? (Quid enim stultius quam incerta pro certis habere, falsa pro veris?)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 68. (44 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Certainty is the mother of Quietness and Repose; and Uncertainty the cause of variance and contentions.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Commentarie upon Littleton, iii, 302. (1628)

<sup>4</sup> He is a fool who leaves certainties for uncertainties. (νήπιος, ὅστις ἔτοιμα λιπῶν ἀνέτοιμα διώκει.)

HESIOD, Fragments. (c. 800 B. C.) Frag. 18, p. 278, Loeb. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 505D.

We lose certainties whilst we seek uncertainties. (Certa mittimus, dum incerta petimus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 685. (c. 200 B. C.)

Who that leaueh surety and leaneth vnto chaunce, Whan fooles pype, by auctoritee he maie daunce.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

He that leaves certainty and sticks to chance, When fools pipe, he may dance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6439. (1732)

I would not advise you to neglect a certainty for an uncertainty.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters. Let. 82. (1711)

It is no wise man that will quit a certainty for an uncertainty.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 57. (1758)

Never quit certainty for hope.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 7. (1855)

A BIRD IN THE HAND IS WORTH TWO IN THE BUSH, see under BIRD.

<sup>5</sup> The difference between certainly and perhaps is not much after all. ('Wei chi 'yu 'o siang ch'ü chi ho.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 20. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

<sup>6</sup> The conviction of certainty is a sure proof of nonsense and extreme uncertainty. (La persuasion de la certitude est un certain témoignage de folie et d'incertitude extreme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

<sup>7</sup> The only certainty is that nothing is certain. (Solum certum nihil esse certi.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. (A. D. 77)

As quoted by MONTAIGNE. Bk. ii, ch. 14.

The French say, "Rien n'est sûr que la chose incertaine."

Nothing is more certain than uncertainties.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 11. (1594)

There is nothing certain in this life. (No hay cosa segura en esta vida.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 15. (1605)

Nothing is so certain as the unexpected.

CHARLES LOWE, Prince Bismarck. Ch. 9. (1885)

MACLAREN, Expositor's Bible: Ephesians. (1909)

There is a proverb that "nothing is certain but the unforeseen," and in fact few things turn out as we expect them.

J. A. FROUDE, Oceana. Ch. 7. (1886)

There is nothing certain to happen, says the proverb, but the unforeseen.

MACLAREN, Expositor's Bible: Matthew. (1905)

The only certain thing is that there is nothing uncertain.

O. HENRY, The Venturers. (1910)

Nothing is certain but uncertainty.

BERNARD SHAW, Back to Methuselah. Act i. (1921)

CHAIN

See also Fetters

<sup>8</sup> The cord breaketh at the last by the weakest pull.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions and Troubles. (1612) Quoted as a Spanish proverb The thread breaks where it is weakest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1740)

No chain is stronger than its weakest link.

CONAN DOYLE, The Affair of the Porlock Letter. (1887) HOWIE, Murder for Christmas, p. 122. (1941)

The weakness of even one link in the chain is fatal to the strength of the whole.

W. M. RAMSAY, The Expositor, 7 Jan., 1908

The strength of a chain is no greater than its weakest link.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 89. (1910)

A chain is no stronger than its weakest link.

IONE SHRIBER, A Body for Bill, p. 298. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> Chayns of Gold, bynd more strongly then those of yron.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii. p. 94. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Chains of Gold are stronger than Chains of Iron
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1079. (1732)

FETTERS OF GOLD, see under FETTERS.

<sup>10</sup> Make ye fast from heaven a chain of gold. (συνῆν χρυσέην ἐξ οὐρανόθεν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, l. 19. (c. 850 B. C.) The full text is, "Make ye fast from heaven a chain of gold, and lay ye hold thereof, all ye gods and goddesses; yet could ye not drag to earth from out of heaven Zeus the counselor most high, not though ye labored sore But whenso I were minded to draw of a ready heart, then with earth-itself should I draw you and with sea withal. . . . By so much am I above gods and above men."

Homer by "the golden chain" refers to nothing else than the sun, and means that so long as the heavens and the sun go round everything exists and is preserved, among both gods and men, but if the motion should stop, as if bound fast, everything would be destroyed.

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 153D. (c. 390 B.C.)

It is not true, as I think, that the generations of mankind were let down from high heaven by some golden chain.

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 1153.

(c. 45 B.C.)

The Homeric chain. (Sa chaine Homericque.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1545)

And this is that Homer's golden chain, which reacheth down from heaven to earth, by which every creature is annexed, and depends on his Creator.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621) Referring to God's love for the world.

Now lately Heaven and Earth, another World Hung o'er my Realm, link'd in a golden Chain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1004. (1667)

And fast by, hanging in a golden Chain, This pendent world, in bigness as a Starr Of smallest Magnitude close by the Moon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1051.

There is a Chain let down from Jove, But fasten'd to his Throne above; So strong, that from the lower End, They say, all human Things depend: This Chain, as Antient Poets hold, When Jove was Young, was made of Gold.

SWIFT, Prometheus, l. 31. (1724)

Now, from my soul, I hug these welcome chains.

EDWARD YOUNG, Busiris. Act v, sc. 1. (1719)

Servitude that hugs her chains.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music. (1769)

Old chains gall less than new.

UNKNOWN, The Spectator, 12 Jan., 1907.

Men rattle their chains to show that they are free.

UNKNOWN. An English proverb.

CHALK

I talk to you of garlic, and you talk of onions. (Ego tibi de aliis loquor, tu respondes de cepis.)

EVASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iv, No. 35.

(1508) HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 100, quotes this as "Ego de caseo loquor, tu de creta respondes" (I talk of cheese, you of chalk), evidently to bring it more closely into line with the English proverb. I speak of one thing, you reply with something wholly irrelevant.

You talke of chalke, and we of cheese.

JAMES MASSE, tr., Celestina, p. 212. (1631)

Chalke is na sheares.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 26.

(1595) From tailors who mark their cloth with chalk before they cut it. A thing may be proposed, but never executed.

Making black of white, Chalk of Cheese.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse: To the Reader. (1579) See under BLACK.

Lo, how they feignen chalk for chese!

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 17. (1393)

And thus ful ofte chalk for chese

He changeth with ful litel cost.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 2346.

They take chalk for chese, as the saying is.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Cicero's Three Books of Duties: Preface. (1556)

Your factories . . . go ahead on the English a long chalk.

T.C. HALBURTON, The Clockmaker, p. 26. (1837)

Sir Alured's steed was by a long chalk the best.

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: St. Romwold. (1840)

The Indus ranks foremost by a long chalk.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, System of the Heavens. (c. 1850)

As though I could not discern cheese from chalk.

HUGH LATIMER, Remark. (c. 1550) See FOXE, Book of Martyrs, iii, 413.

Thoughe I have no learning, yet I know chese from chalke.

UNKNOWN, John Bon and Mast Person, l. 152. (c. 1550) See HAZLITT, Early English Poetry, iv, 15.

As the proverb is, They know not Chaffe from Corne, or Chalke from Cheese.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 49. (1574) Pettie, tr.

"You think yourself a clever fellow, I know, Scott."—"Ayl! I'm fairlish; I can tell chalk fro' cheese."

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 5. (1849)

No more like together than is chalk to coals.

SIR THOMAS MORE, English Works, p. 674. (a. 1535)

This definition agreeth as well with your key, as Chalke and Cheese.

ROBERT BARNES, Works (1573), p. 258. (1541)

As a lyke to compare in taste, chalke and cheese, Or a lyke in colour to deeme ynke and chalke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Do not these thynges differ as muche as chalcke and chese?

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, Hatchet of Heresies. (1565)

Tom is no more like thee, than Chalke like Cheese.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, The Letting of Humours Blood, vi, 75. (1600)

As analogous as Chalk and Cheese, or a Cat and a Cartwheel.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 16. (1708)

No more to be compared to him than chalk to cheese.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 24. (1826)

We're as different as chalk from cheese.

EDEN PHILLIPOTS, Marylebone Miser. Ch. 6. (1926)

Her sister had been as different from her as chalk from cheese, or rather as cheese from chalk.

F. B. YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 14. (1942)

CHANCE

See also Accident, Fortune, Gambling, Hap, Luck

<sup>1</sup> Chance is beloved of Art, and Art of Chance. (τέχνη τύχην ἠστερεξε καὶ τύχη τέχνην.)

AGATHON, Fragments. (c. 415 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, vi, 4, 5. We cry, though it seems to our dearest of foes, "God, give us another chance."

RICHARD BURTON, Song of the Unsuccessful. (1900)

<sup>2</sup> Chance fights ever on the side of the prudent. (πάσαι γὰρ εὐφρονόουσι συμμαχεῖ τύχη.)

EURIPIDES, Peirithous. Frag. (c. 420 B.C.) Adapted.

Chance usually favors the prudent. (Le hasard est ordinairement heureux pour l'homme prudent.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 147. (1810)

<sup>3</sup> A wise man turns chance into good fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 475. (1732)

Chance is a Dicer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1080.

<sup>4</sup> His owne chaunce no man knoweth

But as Fortune it on him throweth.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 1569. (1390) Hence: You never know your luck.

<sup>5</sup> He that leaveth nothing to Chance will do few things ill, but he will do very few things.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 247.

<sup>6</sup> Chances rule men and not men chances. (συμφορὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐρχοῦσι καὶ οὐκ ἄνθρωποι τῶν συμφορῶν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, sec. 49. (c. 445 B.C.) Chance rules; in this life no man can call his life his own. (Fors dominatur; | neque vita ulli propria in vita est.)

ACCURUS, Medea. Frag. 411, Loeb. (c. 140 B.C.) Chance rules all things. (Fors omnia regere.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 51. (c. 40 B.C.) Chance rules all. (Fors omnia versat.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. ix, l. 5. (37 B.C.)

Chance everywhere has power. (Caus ubique valet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 425. (c. 1 B.C.) Chance, disposer of all things human and divine. (Rerum humanarum divinarumque potestas | Fors.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 120. (c. A.D. 60) How Chance whirls round the affairs of men! (Quantus casus humana rotant!)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1123. (c. A.D. 60)

Blind chance sweeps the world along. (Cum caeco rapiantur saecula casu.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 1446. (c. A.D. 60)

Chance is another master. (Magister alius casus.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. (A.D. 77) Chance and whim govern the world. (La fortune et l'humeur gouvernent le monde.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 435. (1665) There is a master who, without an effort, surpasses us all, and that master is chance.

EMILE GABORIAU, Le Dossier 113. Ch. 11. (1867)

<sup>7</sup> A leap-frog chance.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i. (1614)

He didn't have no more chance than a rabbit.

RING LARDNER, Haircut. (1926)

You haven't got a Manchurian's chance.

OGDEN NASH, Suppose I Darken Your Door. (1935) A variation of "a Chinaman's chance." "As little chance as a snowball in hell" is another proverbial comparison.

She hadn't a Chinaman's chance.

DOROTHY DISNEY, Crimson Friday, p. 206. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> What Chance has made yours is not really yours. (Non est tuum, fortuna quod fecit tuum.)

LUCILIUS. (c. 140 B.C.) As quoted by SENECA. Ad Lucilium, viii, 10.

<sup>9</sup> Chance contrives better than we ourselves. (ταυτόματον ἡμῶν καλλίω βουλευέται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. (c. 300 B.C.) Quoted by Montaigne, bk. i, ch. 33, as the saying of an ancient Greek who had thrown a stone at a dog and missed it, but killed his step-mother. The French is, "La fortune a meilleur avis que nous."

<sup>10</sup> That Power Which erring men call Chance.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 587. (1634)

Chance is a nickname of Providence. (Le hasard est un sobriquet de la Providence.)

CHAMFORT, Maximes et Pensées. (c. 1700)

The ancients . . . exalted Chance into a divinity

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844) Chance is perhaps the pseudonym of God, when he did not wish to sign. (Le hasard c'est peut-être le pseudonyme de Dieu, quand il ne veut pas signer.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, Le Jardin d'Épicure, p. 132. (1897)

A Frenchman named Chamfort, who should have known better, once said that chance was a nickname for Providence.

ERIC AMBLER, A Coffin for Dimitrios, p. 3. (1939)

<sup>11</sup> It is no wonder, says an old writer, that chance has such power over us, since we live by chance. (Ce n'est pas merveille, ce dict un ancien, que le hazard puisse tant sur nous, puisque nous vivons par hazard.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1580)

<sup>12</sup> All the affairs of men hang by a slender thread, and sudden chance ruins what once was strong. (Omnia sunt hominum tenui pendencia filo. | et subito casu quae valuer, ruunt.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 3, l. 35. (A.D. 13)

SWORD OF DAMOCLES, see under SWORD.

1 Some chippes of sorry chaunce did light in the heape of his happynesse.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, l. 142. (1576)

2 This is the plain truth: every one ought to keep a sharp eye for the main chance. (Vera dico: ad suum quemque hominem quaestum esse aequomat callidum.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 186. (c. 200 B.C.)

Lette mee v'ande to the maine chaunce.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 104. (1579)

Always have an eye to the mayne.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 430.

"Let's make haste away, and look unto the main"—"Main chance, father, you meant."

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 1, 208. (1590)

Have a care o' the main chance.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, ii, 502. (1663)

[It is] essential to provide for the main chance.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 6 Jan., 1625.

'Tis good to have an eye to the main chance.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Eye. (1699)

Look to the main chance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670)

Be careful still of the main chance, my son.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Persius' Satires. Sat. vi, l. 158. (1693)

But ever with Prudence takes care of the Main.

JONATHAN SWIFT, On Psyche, l. 8. (1731)

Her dad kept a sharp eye out for the main chance.

J. S. ROBB, Streaks of Squatter Life. (1846)

[Defoe] was a man of business . . . with a shrewd eye to the main chance.

WILLIAM MINTO, Daniel Defoe, p. 133. (1879)

It takes his mind off the main chance.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 12. (1910)

Iris was a gold-digger with an eye for the main chance.

PETER CHENEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 64. (1941)

He always had an eye to the main chance.

F. W. CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 2.

(1941) INNES, Appleby on Ararat, p. 211.

(1941) THAYER, Hallowe'en Homicide, p. 120. (1941)

3 All chance direction, which thou canst not see.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 290. (1733)

4 The Postmaster is a poor chance, a rough, coarse looking creature.

ANNE ROYALL, A Southern Tour, l. 62. (1830)

5 Something must be left to chance.

W. C. RUSSELL, Overdue. Ch. 2. (1903) Quoted as "a condition of Lord Nelson's tactics."

6 Blind and rash is he who lets chance lead him. (Caeca est temeritas quae petit casum ducem.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 145. (c. A. D. 60)

He who trusts all things to Chance, makes a Lottery of his Life.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2407. (1732)

LEAVE CERTAINTY FOR CHANCE, see CERTAINTY

7 Whom chance often passes by, it finds at last. (Quem saepe transit casus, aliquando invenit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 328. (c. A. D. 60)

Everything may happen. (Omnia fieri possent.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 9. (a. A. D. 65)

A chance may win that by mischance was lost.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Times Go by Turns. (c. 1590)

8 If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 3, 143. (1606)

We profess

Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies Of every wind that blows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 550. (1610)

9 By chance, as the man killed the devil.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

10 Whatever chance may bring, we will bear it philosophically. (Quod fors feret feremus aequo animo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 138. (161 B.C.)

11 How often things occur by the merest chance, which we dared not even hope for! (Quam saepe forte temere | eveniunt quae non audeas optare!)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 757. (161 B.C.)

A lucky chance, that oft decides the fate

Of mighty monarchs.

THOMSON, Seasons: Summer, l. 1286. (1727)

12 A considerable quantity is expressed by "a smart chance"; and our hostess at Madison said there was a smart chance of Yankees in that village.

DAVID THOMAS, Travels in the West, p. 230. (1819)

"Smart chance" for good deal, large quantity.

ADIEL SHERWOOD, Gazetteer of Georgia, p. 139. (1827)

He did have . . . a smart chance of lands and field-niggers.

WILLIAM GILMORE SIMMS, Guy Rivers, p. 99. (1834)

I have fed a heap [of corn] to my cattle and got a right smart chance left.

ALBERT DEANE RICHARDSON, Beyond the Mississippi, p. 132. (1867)

13 Through divers mishaps, through so many perilous chances. (Per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 204. (19 B.C.)

14 Chance and valor are blended in one. (Fors et virtus miscentur in unum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 714. (19 B.C.)

15 Use thou thy chance. (Utere sorte tua.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 932. (19 B.C.)

Grasps the skirts of happy chance.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxiv. (1850)

He [seized] the skirts of happy chance.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 244. (1943)

1
Chance is a word void of sense; nothing can exist without a cause.

VOLTAIRE, Dictionnaire Philosophique: Hasard. (1764)

To a sensible man, there is no such thing as chance. (Für den Vernünftigen Menschen giebt gar keinen Zufall.)

LUDWIG TIECK, Fortunat. (c. 1826)

Things do not happen in this world—they are brought about.

WILL H. HAYS, Speech, during campaign of 1918. See New York American, 10 Dec., 1922.

2
Ye stond to yure cheance.

UNKNOWN, Land of Cokaygne, 184. (c. 1295)

Stand to thy chaunce.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 86. (1579)

I'll take my chance.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, i, 1, 151. (1595)

You must take your chance.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 1, 38. (1596)

We must take the chance.

TENNYSON, The Princess, iii, 127. (1847)

CHANGE

See also Variety

3
Change doth unknit the tranquil strength of men.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Question. (1877)

4
The changes and chances of this mortal life.
Book of Common Prayer: Collects, ii. (1548)

Change of fortune is the lot of life.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 336. (1855)

5
When it is not necessary to change, it is necessary not to change.

LUCIUS CARY, A Discourse on the Infallibility of the Church of Rome. (1660)

6
To wander from Zeca to Mecca, and from pail to bucket, as the saying is. (Andar de Ceca y Meca, y de zoca en colodra, como dicen.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. i, ch. 18. (1605)

The Zeca was the holy place in the Mosque at Cordova and, with the western Moslems, ranked next to Mecca as a goal for pilgrims. "To go from pillar to post," or "from bad to worse."

So when a raging fever burns,
We shift from side to side by turns;

And 'tis a poor relief we gain

To change the place, but keep the pain.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 146 (1707)

There is a certain relief in change, even though it be from bad to worse; as I have found in travelling in a stage-coach, that it is often a comfort to shift one's position and be bruised in a new place.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller: Preface. (1824)

7
Man changes often, but gets better seldom. (Man aendert sicht oft, und bessert sich selten.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 305. (1856) A German proverb.

8
Men seyn, "What may ever laste?"

CHAUCEUR (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. iii, l. 1147. (c. 1383)

9
Only the very wisest and the very stupidest never change.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 3. (c. 500 B.C.) GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World, No. 123, quotes Confucius as saying, "They must often change who would be constant in happiness or wisdom." See also EMERSON, under CONSISTENCY.

10
I have put the change upon her.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double Dealer. Act v, sc. 17. (1693) I have deceived or misled her.

He put the Change upon the unthinking Senate.

EDMUND HICKERINGILL, Priest-Craft, i, 51. (1705)

You cannot put the change on me as easy as you think.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 3. (1821)

11
We shall all be changed, In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. (πάντες δὲ ἀλλαγούμεθα, ἐν ἀτόμῳ, ἐν ῥιπῇ ὀφθαλμοῦ.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 51-52 (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Omnes immutabimur. In momento, in ictu oculi."

12
Even . . . as ye chop and change.

MILES COVERDALE, Confutation of Standish. (1540)

From boy to man, from man to boy, would chop and change degree.

HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY, How No Age is Content. (c. 1540)

O, who would trust this world . . . That . . . chops and changes ev'ry minute.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems, i, 9. (1635)

13
If he's a change, give me a constancy.

DICKENS, Dombey & Son. Bk. i, ch. 18. (1848)

14
Change is inevitable in a progressive country.

Change is constant.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 20 Oct., 1867

15
Change in everything is sweet. (μεταβολὴ πάντων γλυκεί.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 234. (c. 410 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 63, with the Latin, "Iucunda rerum omnium vicissitudo," who quotes ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, i, 11, 20, where the proverb is repeated. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 24, with the rendering, "Change of thynges is pleasaunt," and the comment, "Where shyft of thynges is not, mans mynde anone shall waxe wery and dul. . . . Nothyng can be so swete, but shall be abhorred, yf it be any long whil used."

Change is generally pleasing to the rich. (Plerumque gratae divitibus vices.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 13. (23 B.C.)

Changes are lightsome and fools like them.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 98. (1902)

1 Who changeth state, changeth conditions. (Chi muta stato, muta conditione.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

2 Three removes are as bad as a fire.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

I never saw an oft-transplanted tree,
Nor yet an oft-removed family,
That throve so well as those that settled be.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 329. (1869)

Two flittings are as bad as a fire.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Glossary: Flit. (1790)

An elephant moves when eating, a house eats when moving.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 879. (1842)

Three flittings, they say, is equal to a fire; but a "thorough repair" is equal to three fires.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, Letters, 25 Sept., 1852.

The French say, "Trois déménagements valent un incendie"; the Germans, "Dreimal umgezogen ist einmal abgebrannt."

They belonged to what Abigail Adams called the mobility.

JENNY BALLOU, Period Piece, p. 31. (1940)

They were always moving.

See also STONE: ROLLING STONE.

3 Take your change out of that!

JOHN GALT, Laurie Todd. Bk. iv, ch. 11. (1830)

Take your revenge.

I should certainly have "taken my change" out of the airs she continually gave herself.

THOMAS DEQUINCEY, Secret Societies. (1847)

4 Change of pasture makth fat calves.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1081. (1732)

To morrow to fresh Woods, and Pastures new.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 193. (1637) Often misquoted "to fresh fields."

Rouse departed to fresh woods and pastures new.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 147. (1940)

5 He changes squares into circles. (Mutat quadrata rotundis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 100. (20 B.C.)

6 I am not what I once was under the reign of kindly Cynara. (Non sum qualis eram bonae | sub regno Cynarae.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 1, l. 3. (23 B.C.)

Title of poem by Ernest Dowson.

Presume not that I am the thing I was.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 5, 60. (1598)

Nor the exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 6. (1600)

I am not what I have been; what I should be.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act ii, sc. 1. (1756)

I am not now That which I have been.

BRYON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 185. (1812)

Do not think that years leave us and find us the same!

OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON), Lucile. Pt. ii, canto ii, sec. 3. (1860)

7 The more it changes, the more it's the same thing. (Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose.)

ALPHONSE KARR, Les Guêpes: Les Femmes, Jan., 1849. Edition Levy, vi, 304. In 1885, in the preface of a brochure entitled Messieurs les Assassins, a reprint of one published in 1864, Karr lamented, "Of all that I have written, if anything survives me, it will be two little phrases, three lines in all, very light baggage (deux petites phrases composant trois lignes à elles deux, bagage bien léger). One of the phrases was "Plus sa change," the other, "Abolissons la peine de mort mais que messieurs les assassins commencent."

Changes from Tweedledum to Tweedledee: "plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose."

BERNARD SHAW, The Revolutionist's Handbook. Sec. 1. (1903)

The more it changes, the more it is the same, this accursed case.

H. C. BAILEY, Mr. Fortune Objects: The Long Dinner. (1920)

8 To pretend to change anyone is an illusion: he picks up his first trail at the first occasion. (Prétendre ainsi changer est une illusion: | L'on reprend sa première trace | À la première occasion.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 9. (1694)

9 It is as ordinary to see a man change his tastes as it is extraordinary to see him change his inclinations. (Il est aussi ordinaire de voir changer les goûts, qu'il est extraordinaire de voir changer les inclinations.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 252. (1665)

F. G. Stevens renders this, "Change of disposition is as rare as change of pursuit is common."

10 One change always leaves the way prepared for the introduction of another. (Sempre una mutazione lascia l'addentellato per la edificazione dell'altra.)

MACHIAVELLI, II Principe. Ch. 2. (1513)

11 We have changed all that. (Nous avons changé tout cela.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 4. (1666) Sganarelle, the pretended physician, tells a patient that his liver is on the left side and his heart on the right. The patient protests that this is contrary to what he has always understood; he thought the heart was on the left and the liver on the right. "Oui," says Sganarelle, "cela étoit autrefois ainsi, mais nous avons changé tout cela" (Yes, it used to be that way, but we have changed all that).

<sup>1</sup> All great changes make the state totter. (Toutes grandes mutations esbranlent l'estat.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

<sup>2</sup> Changes never answer the end.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 352. (1740)

<sup>3</sup> Nature loves to change the fashion of her laws. (Natura . . . permutatas gaudet habere vices.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 90. (c. A. D. 60)

Nature's mighty law is change.

BURNS, Let Not Women E'er Complain. (1794)

<sup>4</sup> The common saying is, the chaunge is seldome made for the better.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 246. (1576)

It is a maxim here [at Venice], handed down from generation to generation, that change breeds more mischief from its novelty than advantage from its utility.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI, Observations on a Journey through Italy. (1789)

<sup>5</sup> All things make room for others and nothing remains still. (πάντα χωρεῖ καὶ οὐδὲν μένει.)

HERACLEITUS, Maxim. (c. 500 B. C.) As quoted by PLATO, Cratylus, sec. 402A. ROGERS, Students' History of Philosophy, p. 15, quotes Heracleitus as saying, "There is nothing permanent except change."

Human affairs are always changing for better or worse. (Semper in advorsa mutantur.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 104 (c. 40 B. C.)

All things change, nothing perishes. (Omnia mutantur, nihil interit.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 165. (A. D. 7)

There is nothing in the whole world which keeps its form. (Nihil est toto, quod perstet, in orbe.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 177.

Everything changes. Thou thyself art undergoing a continuous change. (πάντα ἐν μεταβολῇ.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 19. (c. A. D. 174)

All things change and we change with them. (Omnia mutantur nos et mutamur in illis.)

LOTHAIRE I OF GERMANY, attr., Apothegm.

(c. 840) See BORBONIUS, Deliciae Poetarum Germanorum, i, 585. A second line is sometimes added, "Astra regunt homines, sed regit astra Deus" (The stars rule men, but God rules the stars). The two verses are printed as "common and very true words of wisdom (dicteria)" in the preface of CELLARIUS, Harmonia Macrocosmica. (1661) The usual form of the proverb is given, however, by RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicle, fo. 99B (1577), "Tempora mutantur nos et mutamur in illis" (Times change and we change with them). It is quoted in this form by JOHN OWEN, Epigrammata, i, 58. (1624)

Times change and men deteriorate. (Tempora mutantur et homines deteriorantur.)

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale x. (c. 1440)

But times do change and move continually:

So nothing here long standeth in one stay:

Wherefore, this lower world who can deny

But to be subject still to Mutabilitie?

EDMUND SPENSER, Mutabilitie. Canto ii, st. 47. (c. 1596)

All things change them to the contrary.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 90. (1594)

Nought may endure but mutability.

P. B. SHELLEY, Mutability. St. 4. (c. 1822)

To live is to change, and to be perfect is to have changed often.

J. H. NEWMAN, Christian Doctrine, p. 40. (1845)

O visionary world, condition strange,

Where naught abiding is but only Change.

J. R. LOWELL, Commémoration Ode. (1865)

All things must change

To something new, to something strange.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Keramos, l. 32. (1877)

Times change and people change their ideas.

C. W. GRAFTON, The Rat Began to Gnaw the Rope, p. 121. (1943)

<sup>6</sup> Once change a thing, to get it back to its pristine state isn't easy. (Res mutata, in pristinum statum, redire non facile potest.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 184. (1778) "You can't unscramble eggs."

<sup>7</sup> Change of women makes bald knaves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 45. (1678)

Changing Countries or Beds cures neither a bad manager, nor a Fever.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

<sup>8</sup> Every change of scene becomes a delight. (Omnis mutatio loci iucunda fiet.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxviii, sec. 4. (a. A. D. 65)

Everything I see seems to me a change of scene.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters i, 29. (1716)

<sup>9</sup> Nothing of him that doth fade

But doth suffer a sea-change

Into something rich and strange.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 400. (1611)

<sup>10</sup> Swift is change—nay, not so swift the changing course of the wide-winged fly. (ὥκεια γὰρ οὐδὲ ταχυπτερέου μύλας | οὕτως ἡ μετέστας.)

SIMONIDES, Dirges. Frag. 22. (c. 475 B. C.)

Cited by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, cv, 9. The "wide-winged fly," probably the dragon-fly

<sup>11</sup> Sweet turns to bitter, hate to love. (τὰ ἁρμονία πικρὰ γίνεταί καθ' οὗ φιλία.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 615. (c. 408 B. C.)

There are ups and downs in all things. (Omnium rerum vicissitudo est.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 276. (161 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 62, who devotes over a page to similar phrases from the works of Sophocles, Homer, Aesop, Euripides, Theognis, and many others. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 23, with the comment: "This sentence of Terence signifieth that in mens thynges nothinge is perpetuall, no thyng stable, but all passe and repasse euen lyke to the ebbynge and flowynge of the Ocean sea, whereunto ye englyshe prouerbe alludeth that sayth: After a lowe ebbe commeth a floude."

Times go by turns, and chances change by course,
From foul to fair, from better hap to worse.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Times Go by Turns. (c. 1590)

The ever-whirling wheel

Of Change, the which all mortall thyngs doth sway.

EDMUND SPENSER, Mutabilitie. Canto i, st. 1. (c. 1596)

I see you are no changeling.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Let the great world spin for ever down the ringing grooves of change.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 182. (1842) The phrase, "ringing grooves of change" is said to have been due to a misconception on the part of Tennyson. He had been present at the opening of the Manchester-Liverpool railway, and, owing to his short-sightedness, thought that the train ran in grooved rails. See Notes and Queries, ser. viii, vol. ii, p. 387.

The old order changeth, yielding place to new.

TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 291. (1842) Also The Coming of Arthur, l. 508; The Passing of Arthur, l. 408.

How changed from him whom we knew!
(Quantum mutatus ab illo!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 274. (19 B.C.)

Wynteris wether and wommanys thout,
And lordis love, chaungit oft.

UNKNOWN, Songs and Carols (Warton Classics). (c. 1450)

Six things are alwayes mutable, the fauor of princes, the loue of a woman, the chance of dise, hunting of foules, and tyme and spring of bowtes.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 24. (1578)

Wherevnto alludeth our old English prouerbe Wynters wether and womens thocht,
And gentlemens purposes chaungeth oft

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), vii, 293. (1590)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

More changeable than the chameleon.
(χαμαιλέοντος ἀνταβολώτερος.)

ARISTOTLE, Historia Animalium. Bk. ii. (c. 340 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades sec. 23, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iv, 1, who gives the Latin, "Chamaeleonte mutabilior." Aristotle's book shows, in some respects, an extraordinary accuracy of observation. He knew, for example, that whales are mammals, and that a chameleon assumes the color of any object it might be lying on.

More variable than a wethercocke.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle of Lancastre and Yorke, 38. (1548)

Thou as a weather-cocke dost change.

ROBERT TOFTE, tr. Blazon of Iealousy, 81. (1615)

As oft change from hew to hew
As dooth the cocks of Inde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

By what means can I hold this Proteus who changes his shapes? (Quo tencam voltus mutantem Protea nodo?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 90. (20 B.C.)

Proteus, in the Odyssey, iv, 351 et seq., has the power of assuming different shapes in order to escape being questioned.

More changeable than Proteus himself. (ποικιλώτερος αὐτοῦ Πρωτεύς.)

LUCIAN, On Sacrifices. Ch. 5. (c. A.D. 170)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 74, with the Latin, "Proteo mutabilior."

For Proteus, that coude him chaunge
In every shap, hoomly and straunge.

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 6319. (c. 1365)

I can . . . change shapes with Proteus

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 2, 192. (1590)

I have as many shapes as Proteus had.

UNKNOWN, Sir John Oldcastle. Act i, sc. 2. (1600)

As changefull as the moone men used to say
EDMUND SPENSER, Mutabilitie. Canto ii, st. 50. (c. 1596)

More changeable than a snake. (ποικιλώτερος ὄφρας.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, vii, 69. (c. A.D. 130)

CHAPTER

Not having supposed her refusal to be in the chapter of possibilities.

FRANCES BROOKE, Emily Montague, ii, 55. (1769)

Consider how propitious the chapter of accidents is to them.

Beauties of Chesterfield, p. 46. See also under ACCIDENT.

Turning down the leafe in her Booke when shee heares nam'd Chapter and Verse.

JOHN EARLE, Microcosmographie, Ch. 43. (1628)

She can give chapter and verse for her belief
THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip, ii, 13. (1867)

And so forward, mutatis mutandis, to the end of the chapter.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE. (c. 1704) As quoted by Dr. Johnson.

You always were a fool, and always will be to the end of the chapter.

THOMAS C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 2. (1843)

CHARACTER

1 I am a man who is pleasant of face, open-handed, a lord of food.

ANTEP, Philosophy. No. 8. From his stele in British Museum (c. 2200 B.C.) Budge, tr. An easy-minded soul, and always was. (ὁ δ' εὐκόλος μὲν ἐνθάδ', εὐκόλος δ' ἐκεῖ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 82. (405 B.C.) Frere, tr.

A nice unparticular man.

THOMAS HARDY, Far from the Madding Crowd. (1874)

GOOD FELLOW, see under FELLOW.

2 Our characters are the result of our conduct. (ἐκ τοῦ ἐνεργεῖν περὶ ἕκαστα αἱ ἕξεις γίνονται.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iii, ch. v, sec. 12. (c. 335 B.C.)

Character is habit long continued. (ἥθος ἔθος ἐστὶ πολυχρόνιον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children. Sec. 3B. (c. A.D. 95)

Habits form character, and character is destiny.

JOSEPH KAINES, Address: Our Daily Faults and Failings. (c. 1920) "Character is destiny" is attributed to Heracleitus, by Mullach, in his Fragments of Greek Philosophy.

Character, that sublime health which values one moment as another.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days. (1870)

Character is that which can do without success.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Character

Character is what you are in the dark.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, Sermons: Character. (c. 1883)

Character is the diamond that scratches every other stone.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 204. (1902)

Character is a by-product; it is produced in the great manufacture of daily duty.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Arlington, 31 May, 1915.

Character is the mathematical outcome of a countless ancestry.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 143. (1940)

3 A man should endeavor to be as pliant as a reed, yet as hard as cedar-wood.

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 20b. (c. A.D. 450)

It is good to be firm by temperament and flexible by consideration. (Il est bon d'être ferme par tempérament, et flexible par réflexion.)

VAUVENARQUES, Réflexions. No. 191. (1746)

See also under BENDING.

4 Good neither for the sword nor for the guest.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 741. (1817) Cowardly and stingy.

5 Not to wealth is renown given but to character. (Non opibus bona fama datur, sed moribus ipsis.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B.C.)

6 To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable; and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasion, hurry never; . . . this is my symphony.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, My Symphony. (c. 1847)

7 Character must be kept bright, as well as clean. LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 Jan., 1750.

8 Who does not hate the low-minded, the empty, the light-minded, and trifling? (Quis non odit sordidos, vanos, leves, futes?)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, sec. 38. (c. 45 B.C.)

9 The more peculiarly his own a man's character is, the better it fits him. (Id enim maxime quemque decet, quod est cuiusque maxime suum.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 31. (c. 45 B.C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1, who illustrates the saying by relating Aesop's fable of the ass which, wishing to emulate his master's dog, ran to his master and gayly placed his front feet on his shoulders, only to find that, while the dog was received with caresses, he, the ass, was given a beating.

10 The ideal of courtesy, wit, grace, and charm. (Specimen fuisse humanitatis, salis, suavitatis, leporis.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 19, sec. 55 (45 B.C.) of Caesar.

Curteys she was, discreet, and debonaire, And compaignable, and bar hir-self so faire, Sin thilke day that she was seven night old, That trefwely she hath the herte in hold.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 51. (c. 1387)

11 Let the character be formed by poetry, established by the laws of right behavior, and perfected by music.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. viii, ch. 8. (c. 500 B.C.) Legge, tr.

12 The fayrest thing to adorne a Prince, is loyaltie: In a Clerke humilitie, In a Prelate wisdom, In a knight manhood, In a rich man, liberalitie. In a Learned man, eloquence, In a marchant to keepe his promise alwayes. In a seruant, obedience toward his maister, In a fayre woman, besometh obedience toward her husband, Also in a woman, chastitie, In wyne a good smel, In cloth good colour.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 35 (1578)

<sup>1</sup> Character and intellect: the two poles of our capacity. One without the other is but half-way to happiness. (Genio y ingenio: los dos ejes del lucimiento de prendas. El uno sin el otro, felicidad á medias.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 2. (1647)

<sup>2</sup> He was not a sweet-tempered man. (οὐ γὰρ τι γλυκύθυμος ἀνὴρ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 467. (c. 850 B. C.) Referring to Achilles.

God never made a more crabbed elfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Crouching at home, and cruel when abroad.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 1. (1666)

He was a scoundrel and a coward: a scoundrel for charging a blunderbuss against religion and morality; a coward, because he had not resolution to fire it off himself, but left half a crown to a beggarly Scotchman to draw the trigger after his death.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1754. Referring to Henry Saint-John, first Viscount Bolingbroke, whose works were edited by David Mallet after his death.

A very unclubbable man.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1764. Referring to Sir John Hawkins. Johnson must have been proud of the phrase, for he repeated it to Fanny Burney, who recorded it in her diary, 3 Aug., 1778, as "Sir John was a most unclubbable man." CONAN DOYLE, The Greek Interpreter (1893), speaks of the Diogenes Club as containing "the most unclubbable men in town."

A demd damp, moist, unpleasant body.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 34. (1838)

The sociability of a rattlesnake and the bedside manner of a frozen turnip.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Handbook of Hymen. (1907)

A labor-baiting, poker-playing, whiskey-drinking, evil old man.

JOHN L. LEWIS, Statement to the Press, Washington, 27 July, 1939, referring to Vice-President John N. Garner.

<sup>3</sup> He was worse than provincial—he was parochial.

HENRY JAMES, of H. D. Thoreau. See BROOKS, New England: Indian Summer, p. 295.

<sup>4</sup> Force of character and weakness of character are ill named; they are in truth nothing but good or bad physique. (La force et la faiblesse de l'esprit sont mal nommées: elles ne sont en effet que la bonne ou la mauvaise disposition des organes du corps.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maxims. No. 44. (1665) When our character deteriorates our taste also deteriorates. (Quand notre mérite baisse, notre goût baisse aussi.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maxims. No. 379.

<sup>5</sup> A man whose character was great rather than good. (Vir ingenii magni magis quam boni.)

LIVY, Fragments. Frag. 54, Herz. (c. 9 B. C.)

Quoted by SENECA, De Ira, i, 20, who denies that there can be any such separation in character: it will be either good or else not great.

<sup>6</sup> To each of us is allotted character, as garrison-commander. (ἐκάστῳ τὸν τρόπον συνήκισαν | φρούραρχον.)

MENANDER, The Arbitrants, l. 881. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Listen to a man's words and look at the pupil of his eye. How can a man conceal his character?

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 15, sec. 2. (c. 300 B. C.)

'Tis character persuades, not empty words (τρόπος ἔσθ' ὃ πείθων τοῦ λόγουτος, οὐ λόγος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry, 33F. (C. A. D. 95) Quoting a fragment of unknown authorship. Repeated, 801C.

What art thou, that thou art; that God knoweth thee to be and thou canst be said to be no greater. (Quod es, hoc es: nec maior dici vales quam Deo teste sis.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk ii, ch. 6, sec. 3. (c. 1420)

We pass for what we are. Character teaches above our wills.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance. (1841)

Human character evermore publishes itself.

EMERSON, Essays: Spiritual Laws.

A man passes for what he is worth. What he is engraves itself on his face in letters of light

EMERSON, Essays: Spiritual Laws.

Use what language you will, you can never say anything but what you are.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)

Don't say things. What you are stands over you the while, and thunders so that I cannot hear what you say to the contrary.

EMERSON, Social Aims. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> A man's own character shapes his fortune. (Sui cuique mores fingunt fortunam.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus: Atticus. (c. 50 B. C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 30. Referred to as a "true saying." In his comment, Erasmus cites a somewhat similar proverb, "To a good man fortune supplies good things in abundance" (Viro bono fortuna suppeditat bona)

"Mores," of course, can be translated in many ways, manners, morals, way of life, conduct. TAVERNER, in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 37, renders it, "A man's own manners do shape him his fortune," and adds that a man's fortune is due not to chance, but to his own "qualities, touches, conditions and proceedings."

- 1 Character is much easier kept than recovered.
THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. xv. (1777)
- 2 He was pepper, not a man. (Piper, non homo.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A. D. 60)
So over violent, or over civil,
That every man, with him, was God or Devil.
JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 557. (1681)
The Porcupine, whom one must Handle, gloved,
May be Respected, but is never Loved.
ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs. (1924)
- 3 Not by age but by character is wisdom attained. (Non aetate, verum ingenio, apiscitur sapientia.)
PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 367. (c. 194 B. C.)
- 4 If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shined.
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 281. (1733)
- 5 A good character is for remembrance.
PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 35. (c. 3550 B. C.)
A good character is a man's protection.
UNKNOWN, Petrograd Papyrus, 1116A, rector 31. (c. 2000 B. C.)
- 6 He was valiant in war and wise in counsel, a thing most difficult to achieve. (Quod difficultum in primis est, et proelio strenuus erat et bonus consilio.)
SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 7. (c. 40 B. C.)
Of Jugurtha.
- 7 High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 1, 18. (1595)
When he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 94. (1597)
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch
Uncapable of pity.
SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 4.
- 8 And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character [inscribe].
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 59. (1600)
- 9 Ladies, your most obedient—(Aside) Mercy on me, here is the whole set! a character dead at every word. . . . I'm called away by particular business. But I leave my character behind me.
R. B. SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act ii, sc. 2. (1777) See also under REPUTATION.
- 10 It is safest to be moderately base.
SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to the Electors. (1826)
- 11 Trust nobility of character more than an oath.
(καλοκαγαθίαν ὅρκον πιστοτέρην ἔχει.)
SOLON, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES
LAERTIUS, i, 60.

- 12 Long beardes hartlesse, Painted hoodes witlesse,
Gay coates gracelesse, Makes England thriftlesse.
JOHN STOW, Chronicles of England: Edward III, 359. (1580) Quoted as a taunting rhyme made by the Scots against the English. Cited also by PUTTENHAM, Arte of English Poesie, 184. (1589)
If long, she is lazy, if little, she is lowde,
If fayre, she is sluttish, if foule, she is proud.
JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 189. (1591)
Fair & foolish, litil & loud,
Long & lusty, black & proud.
Fat & merry, lean & sad,
Pale & pettish, red & bad.
High cullor [color] choler showes;
And shee's unholosome that lyk sorrell growes.
Nought ar the peeuish, proud, malitious,
But worst of all the Red shrill, jealous.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs; Of the Culloris of Women, p. 105. (c. 1595) Repeated with minor variations in VAUGHAN, Directions for Health. (1600) TOPTE, Blazon of Jealousie, 34 (1615) RAY, Proverbs, 51 (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6409. (1732) Most of the others agree that "Long and lazy" go together.
That was the Proverb. Let my mistresse be Lasie to others, but be long to me.
ROBERT HERRICK, Long and Lasie. (1648)
Long and lazy, little and loud,
Fatt and fulsome, prety and proud.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)
"In point of women."
You are long enough, and lazy enough; put your hand to the bridle.
R. D. BLACKMORE, Maid of Sher. Ch. 13. (1872)
With a red man rede thy rede;
With a browne man breake thy bread;
At a pale man drawe thy knyfe;
From a black man keep thy wyfe.
THOMAS WRIGHT, Passions of the Minde. (1601)
An old rhyme of unknown authorship declares, "The red is wise, the brown trusty; | The pale peevish, the black lusty"; and there is a Latin proverb, "Raro vidi breves humiles, rufosque fidells" (Rarely have I seen the short man humble, or the red-haired faithful).
- 13 Rugged Caucasus on his flinty rocks begat thee, and Hyrcanian tigers gave thee suck (Duris genuit te cautibus horrens | Caucasus. Hyrcanaeque admorunt ubera tigris.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 366. (19 B. C.)
My breast is not of iron nor my heart of stone.
I was not born from a rock nor suckled by Hyrcanian tigers. (Non est nobis ferreum pectus nec dura praecordia, non ex silice natos Hyrcanae nutriere tigrides.)
ST. JEROME, Epistles. No. xiv, sec. 3. (A. D. 374)
- 14 She's loose i' the hilts.
JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act ii, sc. 5. (1623)
NO BETTER THAN SHE SHOULD BE, see BETTER.

CHARITY

See also Gifts and Giving; Philanthropy

<sup>1</sup> The living need charity more than the dead.

GEORGE ARNOLD, Jolly Old Pedagogue. (c. 1860)

<sup>2</sup> Whoever practises charity and justice fills the world with loving-kindness.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 49b. (c. 450)

<sup>3</sup> What is faith? What you do not see.

What is hope? A great thing.

What is charity? A great rarity.

(Quid est fides? Quod non vides.

Quid est spes? Magna res.

Quid est charitas? Magna raritas.)

ISAAC BARROW (?), Extemporaneous Replies, to questions by the Bishop's Chaplain, while a student of Trinity College, Cambridge. (c. 1634) BISHOP DANIEL SANDFORD, Memoirs, credits the replies to Richard Bentley, the second and third being given as "Quod non habes" (What you have not), and "Maxima raritas" (The greatest rarity). See Facetiae Cantabrigienses.

Alas for the rarity of Christian charity Under the sun!

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs. (c. 1843)

<sup>4</sup> Be Charitable before wealth make thee covetous, and loose not the glory of the Mite. If Riches encrease, let thy mind hold pace with them; and think it not enough to be Liberal, but Munificent.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. I, sec. 5. (1682)

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis brave scrambling at a rich man's dole.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 39. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5069. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Did universal charity prevail, earth would be a heaven, and hell a fable.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. I, No. 160. (1820)

<sup>7</sup> Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. (ἐὰν ταῖς γλώσσαις τῶν ἀνθρώπων λαλῶ καὶ τῶν ἀγγέλων, ἀγάπην δὲ μὴ ἔχω, γέγονα χαλκὸς ἢ κύμβαλον ἀλαλάζον.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 1. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Si linguis hominum loquar, et angelorum, charitatem autem non habeam, factus sum velut aes sonans, aut cymbalum tinniens." The entire chapter is devoted to the praise of charity.

Charity suffereth long and is kind. (ἡ ἀγάπη μακροθυμεῖ, χρηστεύεται.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 4. The Vulgate is, "Charitas patiens est, benigna est." and the verse concludes, "Charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up."

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity. (νυνὶ δὲ μένει πίστις, ἐλπίς, ἀγάπη· τὰ τρία ταῦτα, μέζων δὲ τούτων ἡ ἀγάπη.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 13. The Vulgate is, "Nunc autem manent, fides, spes, charitas: tria haec; maior autem horum est charitas."

Charity is equal to all the other precepts put together.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 9a. (c. 450)

Greater is he who does charity than if he should offer all the sacrifices.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 49b.

<sup>8</sup> 'Tis long before he is served who waits for another man's leavings.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Escuelle. (1611)

He that is fed at another's hand, may stay long ere he be full.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 441. (1640) A rendering of the Italian proverb, "Chi per altrui mano s'imbocca, tardi si satolla."

Who depends upon another man's table often dines late.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 164. (1678)

Dependence is but a poor trade.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1268. (1732)

He that feeds upon Charity, has a cold Dinner and no Supper.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2103.

He that waits upon another's Trenchers, makes many a little Dinner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2339.

He that depends upon another for subsistence, breakfasts ill and sups worse. (Quien a mano egena espera, mal yanta y peor cena.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 268. (1814)

<sup>9</sup> This seems to me to be ambition, not charity. (Haec mihi videtur ambitio, non eleemosyna.)

ERASMUS, Convivium Religiosum. (c. 1519)

Erasmus is speaking of charitable bequests.

Charity and Pride have different aims, yet both feed the Poor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1084. (1732)

He is not charitable, that will not be so privately

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1932.

That is what I call being charitable with lemon sauce.

P. A. TAYLOR, Six Iron Spiders, p. 191. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> Proportion your Charity to the strength of your Estate, or God will proportion your Estate to the Weakness of your Charity.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757

<sup>11</sup> Charity excuses not Cheating.

Charity may be mistaken, but shall never be rewarded.

Charity will rather wipe out the Score, than inflame the Reckoning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 1086-8.

<sup>1</sup>
A man may give his body to be burnt, and yet not have charity.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 2. (1642)

<sup>2</sup>
Sow for yourselves in charity, reap in accordance with abundance.

Old Testament: Hosea, x, 12. (c. 725 B.C.) As quoted in the Talmud, Sukkah, fo. 49b. The King James Version is, "Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy."

Tithe and be rich.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1145. A good tither is a good thriver.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. (1678)
The charitable give out at the door, and God puts it in at the window.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 353 (1678)
The Germans say, "Charity gives herself rich, covetousness hoards itself poor."

He who bestows his goods upon the poor, Shall have as much again, and ten times more.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1678)

Charity—the only thing we can give away without losing it.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet. (1836)
Giving in charity never lightens the purse. (El dar limos-na. nunca mengua la bolsa.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 257. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

See also GIFT: GIVING AND RECEIVING.

<sup>3</sup>
It is good to be charitable; but to whom? that's the point. (Il est bon d'être charitable; Mais envers qui? c'est la le point.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Villageois et le Serpent. Bk. vi, fab. 13. (1668) This is the fable of the snake which tries to bite the man who had warmed it before his fire. In Aesop, Phaedrus, and all the versions of the Middle Ages, the snake bites its host and kills him. In La Fontaine, it tries to bite but gets killed itself, for the fabulist wished to give a lesson not only to imprudent charity, but also to ingratitude, which, he says, always has a miserable end. Lessing tells the fable from the snake's point of view, which was that the man had taken it home in order to strip off its beautiful skin.

<sup>4</sup>
In necessary things, unity; in doubtful things, liberty; in all things, charity. (In necessariis, unitas; in dubiis, libertas; in omnibus, caritas.)

MELANCHTHON. (c. 1540) The attribution is by W. L. Bowles, who had it inscribed over the door of his house in Salisbury Close At the Croyden Church Conference, 1877. Canon Farrar ascribed it to Rupertus Meldenius.

<sup>5</sup>
I have given bread to the hungry man, and water to him that was athirst, and apparel to the naked man.

NU, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. 125, l. 9. (c. 4000 B.C.)

Bread is to be shared.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 34. (c. 3550 B.C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

Eat not bread whilst another stands by [hungry] and thou dost not stretch out thy hand to him with bread in it.

ANI, Teaching. No. 42. (c. 2000 B.C.) Budge, tr. I am the food of the hungry man who has no possessions, and open-handed to the destitute.

ANTEP, Philosophy. No. 10. From his stele in British Museum. (c. 2200 B.C.) Budge, tr.

I gave bread to the hungry, beer to the thirsty, and I set the shipwrecked man on his way.

ANTEP, Philosophy. From stele No. 141 British Museum.

Wel is him that god man fedes!

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 1693. (c. 1300)
Tresour he hathe that pouere fedithe.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wijf Taughte Hir Doughtir, l. 15. (c. 1430)

It is better that ten drones should be fed than one bee be famished.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, p. 33 (1660)

<sup>6</sup>
Charity shall cover the multitude of sins. (ἀγάπη καλύπτει πλῆθος ἀμαρτιῶν.)

New Testament: I Peter, iv, 8. (c. A.D. 63) The Vulgate is, "Charitas operit multitudinem peccatorum."

Their ugliness-concealer, which you call a nose mask, but which the ancients called charity [because it covers a multitude of sins]. (Leur cache-laid, que vous nommez touret de nez, les anciens le nomment chareté.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 26. (1552)
The phrase in brackets is an interpolation by Motteux.

Charity creates a multitude of sins.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man Under Socialism. (1895)

According to the old proverb, "Charity covers a multitude of skins."

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Chair of Philanthromathetics. (1908)

<sup>7</sup>
Charity is a naked child, giving honey to a bee without wings.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Bk. ii. (1640)
Charity is a virtue of the heart, and not of the hands.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 166. (1713)

<sup>8</sup>
His charities exceeded the depth of his pocket. therefore was he always short of money.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. ii, Apologue 4. (c. 1258)

If you are charitable you cannot be rich; if you are rich you cannot be charitable.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 353 (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>9</sup>
Charity, Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 2, 68. (1592)

Charity itself fulfils the law.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 364. (1595)

He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 4, 31. (1598)

1 I am in charity with all the world.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

In charity to all mankind, bearing no malice or ill-will to any human being.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Letter to A. Bronson, 30 July, 1838.

With malice toward none; with charity for all.
ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1865.

2 He is truly great who hath a great charity.
(Vere magnus est, qui magnam habet caritatem.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 5. (c. 1420)

3 The charite of manye schal wexe coold.

JOHN WYCLIF, New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 12. (1382) The King James Version reads, "The love of many shall wax cold." The Greek word for "love" in the New Testament is ἀγάπη, which, in the Vulgate, is rendered sometimes by dilectio, to love, and sometimes by caritas, dearness, love founded on esteem. Wyclif regularly rendered dilectio by "love" and caritas by "charity," but in the King James Version, only "love" was used.

'Tis the general complaint of these times that Charity grows cold.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 4. (1642)

As cold as charity.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 185. (1678)

Cold . . . and frozen as charity.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Soldier's Wife. (1795)

Organized charity, scrimped and iced.

In the name of a cautious, statistical Christ.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, In Bohemia. (c. 1880)

II—Charity Begins at Home

4 The knee is nearer than the shin. (ὀρόν κνήμης ἔγγιον.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. viii, sec. 2. (c. 335 B.C.) Quoting an old saying. Cited by CICEAO, Ad Familiares, xvi, 23.

The shin is farther off than the knee. (ἀπὸ τοῦ ἰγνίου ἔσχατον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xvi, l. 18. (c. 270 B.C.)

The Latin equivalent is "The coat is nearer than the cloak" (Tunica proprior pallio). There is a Welsh proverb very like the Greek. "The elbow is nearer than the wrist" (Nes elin nag arddwrn.)

I am nearest to myself. (Proximus sum egomet mihi.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 635. (c. 166 B.C.) The Germans have the same proverb, "Ich bin mir selbst der Nächste."

Near is my Shirt, but nearer is my Skin.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1709)

"Let a Man's Shirt sit never so close to his Back, his Skin will be still nearer and dearer to him than his Linnen," Dykes comments. "There are several facetious Sayings and Comparisons to this Purpose; as, of the Coat as being nearer than the Cloak, the Smock than the Petticoat: But the Moral of the whole is this, that Charity begins at Home."

5 Charity begins, but doth not end, at home.

THOMAS FULLER, The Appeal of Injured Innocence. (1659)

Though Charity should begin at home, it should not end at home.

EDMUND HICKERINGILL, Priest-Craft, i, 25. (1705)

Charity begins at Home, but should not end there.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1085. (1732) Rowley: I believe there is no sentiment he has such faith in as that "charity begins at home." Sir Oliver: And his, I presume, is of that domestic sort which never stirs abroad at all.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act v, sc. 1. (1777)

Our charity begins at home.

And mostly ends where it begins.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Horace in London. Bk. ii, ode 15. (1813)

Charity begins at home and usually stays there.

H. B. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493. (1940)

6 Ile christen my own child first.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

'Tis good christening a man's own child first

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1670)

Charity . . . begins at home, you know; and ever, while you live, christen your own child first.

THOMAS D'URFELY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act. iii, sc. 2. (1694)

The priest christens his own bairn first.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 310. (1721)

"An apology for serving ourselves before our neighbours," Kelly explains.

Will you fill me a dish of tea?—I'm just going to fill one for myself; and, you know, the parson always christens his own child first.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Parson christen him own piccaninny first.

E. V. LUCAS, London Times, 15 Mar., 1927.

Quoting a Jamaican proverb.

7 A man's first charity should be to his own family, if poor.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 55.

Help thi kynne, Christ bit [biddeth], for ther begynneth charitie.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xviii, l. 61. (1362)

Charity schulde bigvne at hem-self.

JOHN WYCLIF, Of Prelates. (c. 1380)

After the rule of charite,

Which first beginneth of him selve.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v. (1390)

For perlyte loue and also charitie

Begynneth with hym selfe for to be charitable.

ALEX. BARCLAY, The Skyp of Folyis, l. 277. (1509)

From home itself. (Ab ipso lare.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chill. i, cent. vi, No. 83. (1523) To begin at home.

Charity well directed should begin at home. (Charité bien ordonnée commence par soi même.)

MONTLUC, La Comédie de Proverbes, iii, 7. (1550) The Spaniards have the same proverb, "La caridad bien ordenada comenza de si propia." The Italians say, "Fa buona a te e tuoi, E poi a gli altri se te puoi" (Do good to yourself and yours, and then to others if you can); the Dutch, "De liefde begint eerst met zich zelven" (Charity begins first with ourselves).

Charitie shulde begyn fyrst at a mans owne selfe.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translation of Erasmus, fo. 15. (1550)

Charity beginneth first at it selfe.

THOMAS WILSON, A Discourse upon Usurye, p. 235. (1572)

Charity and beating begins at home.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit without Money. Act v, sc. 2. (1616)

Good sister Meriel, Charity begins at home.

RICHARD BROME, A Joviall Crew. Act ii. (1641)

Charity begins at home, is the voice of the world: yet is every man his greatest enemy.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt ii, sec. 4. (1642)

I like not this charitie reversed, when it begins farre off & neglects those at home.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1642)

Some to steal from a Charity think it no Sin Which at home (says the Proverb) does always begin.

SWIFT (?), Blue-Skin's Ballad, l. 48. (1724)

Charity begins at home, and justice begins next door.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 27. (1843)

Charity begins at home. (Prima caritas incipit a seipso.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 337. (1869) "Drown not thyself to save a drowning man."

I prefer charity to hospitality because charity begins at home and hospitality ends there.

OGDEN NASH, I'll Stay out of Your Diet. (1942)

CHARM

1 It's a sort of bloom on a woman.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act i. (1908) In Act iii, it is referred to as "that damned charm."

2 To me more dear, congenial to my heart, One native charm, than all the gloss of art

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 253. (1770)

She could turn on the charm at will—one of those people.

MATTHEW HEAD, The Smell of Money, p. 26. (1943)

3 Ich haue saued with his charme

Of men and of wymmnen meny score thousand.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, bk. xx, l. 19. (1393)

4 Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 34. (1712)

5 Charm ache with air and agony with words.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 1, 26. (1598)

I'll charm the air to give a sound.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 1, 129. (1606)

The charm dissolves apace.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, v, 1, 64. (1611)

6 She was a charmer.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 4, 57. (1605)

Speak, sweet Charmer, will you be always true?

THOMAS D'URFELY, Madam Fickle. Act ii, sc. 2. (1676)

Thus the sweet charmers warbled o'er the main.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. xii, l. 232. (1725)

How happy could I be with either

Were t'other dear charmer away.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 13. (1727)

7 He saw her charming, but he saw not half

The charms her downcast modesty conceal'd.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 229. (1730)

8 All charming people, I fancy, are spoiled. That is the secret of their attraction.

OSCAR WILDE, The Portrait of Mr. W. H. (c. 1890)

When men give up saying what is charming, they give up thinking what is charming.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii. (1892)

CHASE

See also Hunting

9 This will be a long chase; a stern chase always is.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Midshipman Easy. Ch. 29. (1836)

A stern chase is proverbially a long one.

J. A. BRIDGES, Victorian Recollections, p. 140 (1919)

10 Taking random shots at crows with clods and potsherds. (An passim sequeris corvos testaque lutoque.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 61. (c. A. D. 58)

Nay, if thy wits run the wild-geese chase, I have done.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 75 (1595)

We may . . . talk satire, and let our wits run the wild-geese chase over Court and country

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act i, sc. 1. (1606)

His anger leads him a thousand wild-geese chases.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Pilgrim. Act v, sc. 1. (1621)

My mind now began to misgive me that the disappointed coachmaker had sent me on a wild-geese errand.

DICKENS, Uncommercial Traveller Ch. 22 (1868)

This is a wild goose chase.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 2. (1815)
You have made me run many a wild goose chase.

AUGUSTIN DALY, Horizon. Act i. (1871)

A wild guess chase entirely, skipper.

STEWART STERLING, Down Among the Dead Men, p. 164. (1943)

CHASTITY

See also Purity; Virgin; Woman:
Her Virtue

1
Count your chastity more precious than your life. (τὸ σωφρονεῖν τιμώσα τοῦ βίου πλέον.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens. l. 1013. (c. 485 B. C.)

Virtue and chastity is to bee preferred beefore worlde or wealth, beefore freind or father, beefore love or living, beefore life or death.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 124. (1576)

2
Who is the chaste woman? She about whom scandal fears to lie. (Quae casta est? De qua mentiri fama veretur.)

BIAS, Sententiae. (c. 570 B. C.) See AUSONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 5.

3
Be warm, but pure; be amorous, but be chaste.
LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 306. (1809)

4
Loosed her girdle too long tied. (Zonam soluit diu ligatam.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. ii, l. 13. (c. 57 B. C.) The "zona" was a belt worn about the loins by unmarried women, loosed on the marriage night.

His guileful hand ungirdled my chaste zone (Castaque fallaci zona recincta manu.)

OVID, Heroides. Bk. ii, l. 116. (c. 10 B. C.)

She gave him the dainty girdle, which but now had girt her waist. (Dat terentem zonam, qua modo cincta fuit.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 320. (c. A. D. 8)

Beneath this stone I lie, the famous woman who loosed her zone to one man only. ("Αδ' ἐγὼ ἀπερίβρωτος ὑπὸ πλακί τῆδε τέθαμμαι, μούνη ἐνὶ ζῶναι ἀνδρὶ λυσαμένη.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 324

5
She may no whyle in chastitee abyde
That is assailed up-on ech a syde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 255 (c. 1388)

A fair womman, but she be chaast also.
Is lyke a gold ring in a sowes nose.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 782

Remembreth yow of the proverbe of Salomon. that seith: "he lykneþ a fair womman, that is a fool of hir body, lyk to a ring of gold that were in the groyn of a sowe."

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale, Sec. 9

6
Chastity and Beauty, which were deadly foes,
Live reconciled friends within her brow.

SAMUEL DANIEL, To Delia. (1592)

7
Nothing is so chaste as nudity. Venus herself, as she drops her garments and steps on to the model-throne, leaves behind her on the floor every weapon in her armory by which she can pierce to the grosser passions of man.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 99. (1894)

8
Both ease and disease, make women oft times unchaste.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 26. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A woman's chastity consists, like an onion, in a series of coats.

HAWTHORNE, Journal, 16 March, 1854.

9
It is wrong to carry women off, but to be zealous to avenge rape is foolish: wise men take no account of such things, for plainly the women would never have been carried away, had not they themselves wished it.

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 4. (c. 445 B. C.)
A Persian's opinion of the folly of the Greeks invading Asia because of the flight of Helen with Paris.

10
Men are virtuous because women are; women are virtuous from necessity.

E. W. HOWE, A Letter from Mr. Biggs. (1911)

11
Chastity is a virtue with some, with the majority almost a vice.

JAMES HUNERER, Painted Veils, p. 143. (1920)

12
In the rumbling of our intestines and the emptiness of our stomach is the only way of preserving chastity. (Intestinatorum nostrorum rugitu et inanitate ventris aliter pudicitia tuta esse non possit.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistles Epis xxii, sec. 11 (A D 384)

13
Chastity enables the soul to breathe a pure air in the foulest places (Par la chasteté l'âme respire un air pur dans les lieux les plus corrompus.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT Pensées. No 78 (1810)

14
I imagine that in the reign of Saturn chastity lingered upon the earth. (Credo pudicitiam Saturno rege moratam | in terris.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 1. (c. A. D. 120) The Reign of Saturn: the Golden Age. See under ANTIQUITY

Whole towns worship the dog, but no one worships Diana [i. e. Chastity] (Oppida tota canem venerantur, nemo Dianam.)

JUVENAL, Satires Sat xv, l. 8

15
Virtue in women is often merely love of their reputation and of their repose. (L'honnêteté des femmes est souvent l'amour de leur réputation et de leur repos.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 205. (1665)

There are few good women who are not weary of their trade. (Il y a peu d'honnêtes femmes qui ne soient lasses de leur métier.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 367.

1 Virtue flies when love once blows the sail.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche. (c. 1636)

2 Fifteen arms went round her waist.

(And then men ask, Are Barmaids chaste?)

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. (1911)

3 Chaste beauty is like the bellows, whose breath is cold, yet makes others burne.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Chimney-corner. (1613)

4 Chaste is she whom no one has solicited. (Casta est, quam nemo rogavit.)

OVIN, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 43. (13 B.C.)

An unattempted woman cannot boast of her chastity. (Une dame non tentée ne se pouvoit vanter de sa chasteté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

She is chaste who was never ask'd the Question.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iii, sc. 3. (1695)

The nymph may be chaste that has never been try'd.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

5 If she is chaste when there is no fear of detection, she is truly chaste; she who sins not because she dares not, does it. (Siqua metu dempto casta est, ea denique casta est; | quae, quia non liceat, non facit, illa facit!)

OVIN, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 3. (13 B.C.) The last line cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 408.

6 By no art can chastity, once injured, be made whole. (Nulla reparabilis arte | laesa pudicitia est.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 103. (c. 10 B.C.)

Though God can do all things, he cannot raise a virgin up after she has fallen. (Cum omnia Deus possit, suscitare virginem non potest post ruinam.)

ST. JEROME, (HIERONYMUS), Epistles. Epis. xxii, sec. 5. (A.D. 384)

For certes, na-more may maydenhede be restored than an arm that is smiten fro the body may retourne agayne to wexe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 76. (c1389)

Jewels being lost are found againe, this never.

'Tis lost but once, and once lost, lost for ever

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sest. ii, l. 85. (1593)

And one false step entirely damns her fame. . . . She sets like stars that fall, to rise no more.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act i. (1714)

The trav'ller, if he chance to stray,

May turn uncensured to his way;

Polluted streams again are pure,

And deepest wounds admit a cure;

But woman no redemption knows;
The wounds of honour never close.

EDWARD MOORE, Fables for the Female Sex. No. 15. (1744)

When lovely woman stoops to folly,
And finds too late that men betray,
What charm can soothe her melancholy?
What art can wash her guilt away?

The only art her guilt to cover,
To hide her shame from every eye,
To give repentance to her lover,
And wring his bosom, is—to die.

GOLDSMITH, Song: Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 24. (1766)

7 Do not some men say that women alwaies live chastly inough, so that they live charily inough?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Camma, p. 26. (1576)

Offences are not measured by the proportion but by the secrecie: Si non caste, tamen caute: if not chastely, yet charely.

ROBERT GREENE, Penelope's Web. (1587) The Latin proverb is, "Caute, si non caste" (Carefully, if not chastely), or, in the modern idiom, "If you can't be good, be careful."

If not chastely, yet charily.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Malcontent. Act iv, sc. 1. (1604)

I learned this old saying in Latin, Caute, si non caste; live charily, if not chastely.

UNKNOWN, The Tinker of Turvey, p. 36. (1630)

He who is not chaste, let him be cautious. (Que si no es casto, sea cauto.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 126. (1647)

8 Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. (Mulierem fortem quis inveniet? procul, et de ultimis finibus pretium eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi. 10. (c. 350 B.C.)

A goode woman is worth, if shee were solde,

The fairest crowne that's made of purest golde

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 484. (1623)

A good woman is a hidden treasure; who discovers her will do well not to boast about it (Une honnête femme est un trésor caché; celui qui l'a trouvé fait fort bien de ne s'en pas vanter.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 552. (1665)

9 Not that I mistrust her virtue, but she is a woman. (Non que ie me defie de sa vertus. . . . mais elle est femme.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 32. (1545)

Rabelais is quoting a letter written by Hippocrates to his friend, Dionoys, asking him to keep an eye on his wife while he was away from home.

Thus are all women women. (Ainsi sont toutes femmes femmes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 32. (1545)

Constant you are; But yet a woman.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, ii, 3, 111. (1597)

1 When a chaste lady desires pleasure she gets it properly. (Chên fu ai sê, na chih i li.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1448. (1875)

2 Chastity keeps holiday, while lust is always very much occupied. (Vacat pudicitia, libido occupatissima est.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 55)

3 Instinctive chastity guards the laws of procreation. (Generisque leges inscius servat pudor.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 914. (c. A. D. 60)

4 Run, run, Orlando; carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste and unexpressive she.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 9. (1600)

The very ice of chastity is in them.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 4, 18. (1600)

Chaste as the icicle

That's curdled by the frost from purest snow

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 3, 66. (1607)

As chaste as unsunn'd snow.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 5, 14. (1609)

As chaste as a picture cut in alabaster.

HENRY WOODFALL, Darby and Joan. (c. 1734)

Chaste as morning dew.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 600. (1742)

A woman, cold as ice and pure as snow.

J. C. MORISON, Life of Gibbon, p. 160. (1878)

5 I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere one chaste man.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 82. (1601)

6 What woman noble born would dare live on Dishonored when her fair repute is gone?

(ἤν γὰρ κακῶς κλυθεὶς οὐκ ἀνδραγαθὴ, ἦτις πορρωτὶ καὶ κακῶς πεφύκεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 721. (c. 409 B. C.)

7 Chastitie is the only Jewell which women ought to be chary of.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Minos and Pasiphae, p. 226. (1576)

What joy can a woman injoy havinge lost her chastitie, which ought to be the joy Jewell and Gemme of al Gentilwomen?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 19. (1576)

Her maydenhead . . . this inestimable gemme

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander.

Sestiad ii, l. 76. (c. 1593)

My chastity's the jewel of our house.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, 2,

46. (1602) A favorite Elizabethan metaphor.

8 A woman who has sacrificed her chastity will hesitate at no other iniquity. (Neque femina, amissa pudicitia, alia abnuerit.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 116)

9 I have been so misused by chaste men with one wife

That I would live with satyrs all my life.

ANNA WICKHAM, Ship Near Shoals. (1925)

CHAUVINISM

10 I am French, I am Chauvin. (Je suis français, je suis Chauvin.)

THÉODORE and HIPPOLYTE COGNARD, La Carde Tricolore. Produced in Paris, 19 March, 1841. In the play, Chauvin is a young recruit, who is always singing couplets with the above refrain. Said to have been drawn from Nicolas Chauvin, of Rochefort, a veteran soldier of the First Republic and Empire, whose demonstrations of patriotism were celebrated, and finally ridiculed, by his comrades. After the fall of Napoleon, chauvinism was applied in ridicule to his old soldiers who professed a sort of idolatrous admiration for him. The French quality which finds its parallel in British "jingoism," q. v.

What the French may have contributed to the progress of culture within the last twenty years is nothing in comparison to the dangers caused within the same space of time by Chauvinism.

UNKNOWN, Poll Mall Gazette, 17 Sept., 1870.

We cannot fasten an ism on him (except Spread-Eagleism).

G. F. TRAIN, Spread-Eagleism. (1859) American Chauvinism.

CHEAPNESS

11 If goods are cheap, purchase much.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 63b. (c. 450)

12 He that is too much in any thing, so that he giveth another occasion of society, maketh himself cheap.

FRANCIS BACON. (a. 1626) O.E.D.: Cheap.

Making the king cheap and ridiculous.

SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary, 15 Jan., 1668.

I shall feel rather cheap there, after all that's been said and done.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin.
Ch. 9. (1850)

13 What is not needed is dear at a farthing.
(Quod non opus est, asse carum est.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.) As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucillum, xciv, 27, who gives the preceding lines, "Eras non quod opus est, sed quod necesse est" (Buy not what you need, but what you must have). Cited also by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 99, and included by Taverner in his translation, fo. 67, with the rendering, "That needeth not, it is to deare of a fardynge," and the comment, "Cato (which is the auctour of this proverbe) teacheth the husbände man to be a seller and no byer, and to bye only suche thynges as he must needes use. For suche thynges, couth he, as thou needest not be ouer dere of a farthyng, as who shulde say, be a thyng neuer so chepely bought, yet it is deare, yf it be not necessary."

Never, from a mistaken economy, buy a thing you do not want because it is cheap; or, from a silly pride, because it is dear.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Jan., 1749.

Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Charles Clay.

(1817) One of ten "canons of conduct." An English variant is, "A thing you don't want is dear at any price."

That which costs little is very dear as soon as it is superfluous. (Ciocche costa poco è molto caro, toste che è superfluo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 185.

(1856) An Italian proverb. See also under BARGAIN.

1 With daunger oute we al our chaffare;
Greet prees at market maketh dere ware,
And to greet cheep is holde at litel prys.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 521. (c. 1388)

Marché, a bargaen or a marketstede or cheepe, as good cheepe, bon marché.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Française: Introduction. (1530)

Good cheap is dear.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 263. (1640)

Good cheap is dear, for it tempts one to buy what he needs not.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, 8. (1659)

Good Cheap is Dear at long-run.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1704. (1732)

2 Whatever the price, what is necessary is cheap. (Quantiquanti, bene emitur, quod necesse est.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xii, epis. 23. (45 B.C.)

All good things are cheap: all bad are very dear. H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 March, 1841.

Cheap things are not good; good things are not cheap (Pien I pu shih 'huo; shih 'huo pu pien I).

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 180. (1875)

3 Sell-cheap kept shop on Goodwin Sands, and yet had Store of Custom.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

4 It is cheap enough to say, God help you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2922. (1732)

The dearer it is, the cheaper it is to me; for I shall buy the less.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4472.

5 Magnificence cannot be cheap, for what is cheap cannot be magnificent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, v., 458. (c. 1777)

You cannot make a cheap palace.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

6 In those days food could be had for dirt. (Illo tempore annona pro luto erat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A.D. 60)

That is, it was "dirt-cheap."

They aforded their wares doggecheape.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of England: Ireland, iii. (1577)

And though what's vulgarly baptiz'd a rep,
Shall in a hundred pounds be deem'd dog-cheap.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Farewell Odes to the Royal Academicians. No. 9. (1786)

I sold myself . . . cheap, dirt cheap!

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 37. (1838)

They were as cheap as dirt.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 40. (1850)

7 He will never have a thing good cheap [at a bargain] that is afraid to ask the price.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1670)

He'll ne'er get a Pennyworth, that is afraid to ask a Price.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2427. (1732)

8 I've heard that they so temper Eastern clay
That they in forty years one cup prepare:

Hundreds are made in Bagdad in a day.

And hence the lowness of the price they bear.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 34. (c. 1258)

Ill ware is never cheap.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Bad ware is never too cheap.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., 8. (1659)

The French say, "On n'a jamais bon marché de mauvaise marchandise" (One never has a good bargain with bad ware).

The cheap Buyer takes bad Meat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4446.

(1732) The Japanese say, "Cheap purchase is money lost."

9 The English say, It is as cheap sitting as standing, my masters.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 277. (1666)

'Tis as cheap sitting as standing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Sittin' is about as cheap as standin'.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843)

10 Lyht chep luthere yeldes [Bought cheap yields poor return].

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, 30. (c. 1300)

Cited in many of the old manuscripts, and finally quoted by JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114, as "Light cheap lither yield. That which costs little will do little service; for commonly the best is best cheap"; i.e. the best is the best buy.

The best is best cheape.

JOHN RAYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

DRAKE, 14. (1616)

Count best the best cheape, wheresoeuer ye dwell.

THOMAS TUSSEN, Fine Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 38. (1573)

He that sells cheapest shall have most customers, though, at last, best will be best cheap.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Complete Armour. Verse ii, ch. 3. (1655)

The best is best cheap. For it doth the buyer more credit and more service.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1670)

"Best is best cheap"—you very wisely cry.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Lousiad. Canto v. (1786)

Cheapest, say the prudent, is the dearest labor.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

The best is always the cheapest. (Le meilleur marché, c'est la première qualité.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 366. (1856) George Saintsbury in his charming Notes on a Cellar-Book (1920) relates how an elderly aunt quoted this proverb at him when he mildly protested against the expensiveness of some wine which she had ordered. The Germans say, "Besser ist besser" (The best is best). William Morris's maxim was "Not how cheap, but how good."

CHEATING

1 Cheating play never thrives.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 336. (1855) Another form is, "Cheats never prosper." The French say, "De grand villain grande chute" (A great villain, a great fall).

2 False coin is passed most easily upon the shrewd banker.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 631. (1817) The over-shrewd are most easily cheated.

3 Where's Brummel? Dish'd. Where's Long Pole Wellesley? Diddled.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 77. (1824)

4 If you would not be cheated, ask the price at three shops.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 353. (1938) A Chinese proverb

5 Thou shalt not steal: an empty feat, When it's so lucrative to cheat.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, The Latest Decalogue. (c. 1849)

Don't steal; thou'lt never thus compete Successfully in business. Cheat.

AMBROSE BIERCZ, The Devil's Dictionary: The Decalogue Revised. (1906)

6 He is not cheated who knows he is being cheated. (Non decipitur qui scit se decipi.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes. (1628)

7 You can chizzle them out of your property

C. A. DAVIS, Letters of J. Downing, p. 181. (1834) To cheat them out of their property. A word widely used in the South and West, originating probably in Louisiana from the French verb ciseler, meaning to cut, to trim.

He will chisel you out of everything you've got. EDWARD EGGLESTON, The Circuit Rider. Ch. 4. (1874)

We know that there are chisellers. At the bottom of every case of criticism and obstruction we have found some selfish interest, some private axe to grind.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Radio Address, 22 Oct., 1933. The first official use of the word as applied to employers who were supposedly not keeping their pledges to cooperate with the National Recovery Administration.

8 Three things are men most likely to be cheated in, a horse, a wig, and a wife.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

He'll cheat without scruple, who can without fear.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

9 Call me Cousin, but cozen me not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1046. (1732)

10 Cheat me in the Price, but not in the Goods.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1090. (1732)

He that cheateth in small things, is a Fool; but in great things, is a Rogue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2066

He that will cheat at Play,

Will cheat you any Way.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6302.

11 Many men swallow the being cheated, but no man can ever endure to chew it.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 247.

If thou art cheated by a great man, lose thy money, and say nothing

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentium, i, 19. (1702)

The row is for the stupid, the complaint is for the fool; the honest man, when he is cheated, retires and says not a word. (Le bruit est pour le fat, la plainte est pour le sot; l'honnête homme trompé s'éloigne et ne dit mot.)

LA NOUË, La Coquette Corrigée. Act i, sc. 3. (1757)

12 In the kingdom of a cheater, the wallet is carried before.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 467 (1640)

13 It is a double pleasure to cheat the cheater. (C'est double plaisir de tromper le trompeur.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 15 (1664)

Another French form is, "A trompeur, trompeur et demi" (To a cheat, a cheat and a half). See also under RETRIBUTION

In plain English, cheat instead of being cheated.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 4. (1850)

14 For a man to put the cheat upon himself.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia, ii, 10. (1823)

The first and worst of all frauds is to cheat one's self.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Anywhere. (1839) The Danes say, "Den sviges vaerst, som sviger sig selv" (He is most cheated who cheats himself)

<sup>1</sup> Woe to those who make the bushel short and the weight light, whose scales are uneven, and whose measure defraudeth.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, lxxiii, 1. (c. 622)

<sup>2</sup> It's cheating to take what you could not restore. (Fraus est accipere quod non possis reddere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 202. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> I would cheat mine own father at cards.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> They cheat . . . worse than Cross I win, Pile you lose; but there are some left that can lose upon the square.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Epsom Wells. Act ii, sc. 1. (1672)

A game which a sharper once play'd with a dupe, intitled, "Heads I win, tails you lose."

J. W. CROKER, Croker Papers, iii, 59. (a. 1857)

It's heads Law wins, tails they lose.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, It Never Can Happen Again. Ch. 38. (1909)

<sup>5</sup> She cheats horse and foot.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Richard West, 2 Oct., 1740.

CHEEK

<sup>6</sup> Vmwhile cheke by cheke.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicle, i, 223. (1338) In closest intimacy.

Rydyngche cheke by cheke.

BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux. Ch. 55. (c. 1530)

They rode togyther cheke by cheke

BERNERS, Arthur of Little Britain, p. 352.

Cheek by iowle with the Emperour.

MEREDITH HANMER, Ecclesiastical Histories, p. 164. (1577)

I'll go with thee, cheek by jole.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 2, 338. (1596)

Mercie and Justice, marching cheek by joule

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Du Bartas, i, 1. (1598)

The devil . . . Sits cheek by jowl, in black to chear his heart

Like thief and parson in a Tyburn cart.

DRYDEN, The Loyal Brother: Prologue. (1682)

He with his master, jig by jowl,

Unto old Gillian hy'd.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, v, 293. (1719)

To stand cheek-for-chowl confronting us.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 27. (1822)

Destitution . . . must be content often . . . to jog cheek by jowl with crime.

MISS BRADDON, The Trail of the Serpent, ii, 1. (1861)

<sup>7</sup> He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him (Dabit percutienti se maxillam.)

Old Testament: Lamentations, iii, 30. (c. 600 B. C.)

Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek.

turn to him the other also. (δοῦναι σε ἑαπείσει εἰς τὴν δεξιὰν συναγόμεναι [σου], στρέψον ἀντὶ καὶ τὴν ἀλλήν.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 39. (c. A. D. 65)

Also Luke, vi, 29. The Vulgate is, "Si quis te percusserit in dexteram maxillam tuam, praebe illi et alteram."

Wisdom has taught us to be calm and meek,

To take one blow, and turn the other cheek;

It is not written what a man shall do

If the rude caitiff smite the other too!

O. W. HOLMES, Non-Resistance. (1850)

Turning the other cheek is a kind of moral jiu-jitsu.

GERALD S. LEE, Crowds. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1913)

<sup>8</sup> The man . . . gives cheek.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 22. (1840)

On account of his having so much cheek.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 54. (1840)

These men . . . very like they'll be cheeky

HENRY KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn. Ch. 26 (1859)

She told him she wondered at his cheek.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 48. (1860)

He can't have the cheek to ask for more.

W. B. WOODGATE, The O.V.H., p. 264. (1870)

If he gives me any of his cheek I'll knock him down.

GEORGE MOORE, A Mummer's Wife, p. 133. (1884)

CHEER

<sup>9</sup> That nycht thai maid thame merve cher.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce, xiv, 453. (1375)

Make hem good chere.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Love, l. 82. (c. 1386) Perhaps from the French "Faire bonne chère," to fare well, enjoy good cheer, eat abundantly.

She for his parte, made vs cheere heauen hye

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

He is gone to make good cheer with his neighbours. (Lui è andato a far bona cera con li soi visini.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 12. (1578)

<sup>10</sup> The poete saith hou that a poure horde

Men may enriche with cheerful wil and worde.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Booke of Curteseye, 27. (c. 1477)

In a thyn table, good cheere is best sawse.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, 131. (c. 1495)

A cheerful look makes a dish a feast.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No 66. (1640)

If you would have guests merry with cheer, be so yourself, or so at least appear.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

I care not a rush for the decorations of the table so that the cheer be good.

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 23. (1827)

<sup>11</sup> Be ay of chere as light as leef on linde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale, l. 1155. (c. 1388)

1 There is not always good Cheer where the Chimney smoaks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4930. (1732)

2 Better is one monthes cheere, than a churles hole lyfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

3 As men seyen and reporte, at the leste,
Nat many deyntees, but good chere maketh a feste.

JOHN LYDGATE, Isopes, l. 434. (c. 1430)

Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 26. (1593)

THE FEWER THE BETTER CHEER, see under DINING.

4 I accompt the cheere good, which maintayneth health.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 234. (1580)

5 Be of good cheer. (θάραει.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xxii, l. 56. In the next line is, "I am of good cheer" (θαράω), and the phrase is frequently repeated by other writers.

Son, be of good cheer (θάραει, τέκνον.)

New Testament: Matthew, ix, 2. (c. A. D. 65)

Repeated in xiv, 27. The Vulgate is, "Confide fili." Eric Partridge, Dictionary of Cliches, says that it was this use in Matthew which gave currency to the phrase.

Be of good cheer.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i. l. 879; bk. iii, l. 332. (c. 1380)

He badde his felowes to be of goode chier.

UNKNOWN, Merlin, xviii, 282. (c. 1450)

A second voice was at mine ear . . .

A murmur, "Be of better cheer."

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 427. (1842)

6 Say Marie doghtir what chere with the?

UNKNOWN, York Mysteries, xiv, 85. (c. 1440)

What chere make you, fayre loue Jehannet?

BERNERS, Arthur of Little Britain, 28. (c. 1530)

Here, master: what cheer?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 1, 2. (1610)

CHEERFULNESS

See also Merriment, Mirth, Optimism

7 I have tried too in my time to be a philosopher; but . . . cheerfulness was always breaking in.

OLIVER EDWARDS See BOSWELL, Johnson, 17 April, 1778.

Cheerfulness, as the poet said, has an incurable habit of breaking in.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 1. (1941)

8 So of cheerfulness, or of good temper, the more it is spent, the more of it remains.

R. W. EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860)

9 Cheerfulness in doing renders a deed more acceptable.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1642)

There is no Christian duty that is not to be season'd and set off with cheerfulness.

JOHN MILTON, The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, i, 7. (1643)

Cheerfulness is just as natural to the heart of a man in strong health as colour to his cheek.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters, iv, v, 19, 25. (1856)

10 Lay aside life-harming heaviness
And entertain a cheerful disposition.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 2, 3. (1595)

A cheerful Temper, joined with Innocence, will make Beauty attractive.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 192. (1709)

Good humour may be said to be one of the very best articles of dress one can wear in society.

THACKERAY, On Tailoring and Toilets. (c. 1855)

How often it seems the chief good to be born with a cheerful temper.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success. (1870)

A good disposition is Goddes happiest gift.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Testament of Beauty Bk. ii, l. 905. (1930)

CHEERFULNESS IS THE PRINCIPAL INGREDIENT IN HEALTH, see under HEALTH.

CHEESE

11 It's hard cheese for a man to owe everything to his father-in-law.

ELIZABETH BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 42. (1876)

12 After cheese comes nothing.

JAMES CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 136. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 27. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 769. (1732)

After cheese, nothing to be expected.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. vi, sec. 5. (1655)

'Tis to this day a noted saying, That after cheese comes nothing.

MOTTEUX, Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1693) An interpolation by Motteux.

Cheese, that the table's closing rites denies,
And bids me with the unwilling chaplain rise.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 255. (1716)

13 The miser's cheese is wholesomest.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

14 Ye may see no greene cheese but your teeth must water.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

He sees no green cheese but his mouth waters after it.

JAMES CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 39. (1639)

You can't see green cheese but your teeth must water.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1670)

Grene cheese is not called grene by the reason of colour, but for the newness of it.

ANDREW BOORD, Dyetary of Helth. Ch. 13. (1542)
MOON MADE OF GREEN CHEESE, see under MOON.

<sup>1</sup> It is against the old verse, Caseus est nequam.—Yea, but it digesteth all things except itself.

JOHN LYLY, Sapho and Phao. Act iii, sc. 2.
(1584) Caseus est nequam, cheese is harmful.
My cheese, my digestion.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 3, 44.
(1601)

Cheese to digest all the rest, yet itselfe neuer digested.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 161. (1629)
Cheese it is a peevish elf,
It digests all things but itself.

(Ca-eus est nequam, quia, digerit omnia sequam.)
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 40. (1678)
Digestive cheese.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 101. (1692)
They say, cheese digests everything but itself.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>2</sup> Toasted cheese hath no master.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 82. (1678)
To cat the cheese in the trap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186.
If you would have a good cheese and have'n old,
You must turn'n seven times before he is cold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 6477. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Admired "Pets of the Ballet" . . . in a print-shop window 'Thought them the cheese as works of art.

ALBERT SMITH, Man in the Moon, i, 201. (1847)
"You look like a Prince in it, Mr. Lint."—"It is the cheese," replied Mr. Lint.

THACKERAY, Codlingsby. Ch. 3. (c. 1850)
That's the cheese.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 125. (1902)
Hulme gives three explanations of this bit of slang: (1) Cheese is really the French word chose, meaning "thing," and the correct rendering is C'est la chose; (2) that chiz is Bengalee for "thing" and that the expression has been imported from the East (this is the derivation favored by the Oxford English Dictionary); and (3) that "choice" was in Anglo-Saxon times "chese." This is the explanation which Hulme prefers.

He had bitten his way into the big cheese.

O. HENRY, The Unprofitable Servant. (1911)

<sup>4</sup> It was such a deep ceremonial curtsey as you never see at present: she and her sister both made these "cheeses" in compliment to the newcomer, and with much stately agility.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 22. (1857)
Called "making cheeses" because the petticoats are swirled to the floor somewhat in the form of a cheese.

Miss Knight performed a cheese worthy almost of Caroline, and swept away.

LEWIS WINGFIELD, Abigel Rowe, ii, 6, 157. (1883)

<sup>5</sup> Cheese . . . that will spend well, or according to the common Phrase, will eat Bread up.

JOSIAH TWANLEY, Dairying, p. 71. (1784)

<sup>6</sup> Cheese it, the same as Stow it.

J. H. VAUX, Flash Dictionary: Cheese It. (1812)
Cheese it, mates! 'ere comes the bobbies!

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Fortune's Fool, i, 33. (1882)
Cheese it—the cop!

O. HENRY, The Easter of the Soul. (1908)

<sup>7</sup> Cheese is wholesome when it is given with a sparing hand. (Caseus est sanus quem dat avara manus.)

UNKNOWN, Regimen Sanitatis Salerni. (c. 1100)
"Cheese and bread make the cheeks red" says another proverb, and the Germans assert that "Cheese is gold in the morning, silver at noon, and lead at night," a statement which has also been applied to the apple. The Spaniards say, "Cheese from the ewe, milk from the goat, butter from the cow."

Cheese and salt meat should be sparingly eat.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

Bread and butter and good cheese

Are a true buckler against disease.

(Pain et buerre et bon fromage)

(Contre la mort est le vray targe.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 198. (1859) As might be expected, the French have a number of proverbs lauding the value of cheese. One is, "Bread and cheese is medicine for the well" (Fromage et pain est médecine au sain), and still another, "He who does not eat cheese will go mad" (C'il qui mange du fromage, S'il ne le fait, il enrage).

<sup>8</sup> An apple-pie without some cheese
Is like a kiss without a squeeze.

UNKNOWN, Old English rhyme. (c. 1750)

But I, when I undress me,

Each night, upon my knees

Will ask the Lord to bless me

With apple pie and cheese!

EUGENE FIELD, Apple Pie and Cheese. (1889)

TO KNOW CHALK FROM CHEESE, see under CHALK.

CHERRY

<sup>9</sup> Eat peas with the king and cherries with the beggar. Peas are best when young, cherries when ripe.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 100. (1721)

<sup>10</sup> One Cherry tree sufficeth not two Jays. (Unicum Arbustum, non alit duos Erithacos.)

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, 269. (1576) See also under RIVALRY.

<sup>11</sup> A cherry year, A merry year.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1678)

A Cherry Year, A merry Year.

A Plumb Year, A dumb Year.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6139. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> As it is sayde in a commune prouerbe, I

counsell not seruautis to ete churyes with their bettyrs. Fer they wyl haue the rype and leue them the harde.

UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures. Ch. 20. (c. 1530)

Mean men are not to eat cherries . . . with great lords, least the stones of the best flie faster at their eyes then . . . the worst into their mouths.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Manger. (1611)
As for the outlandish proverb, "He that eateth cherries with noblemen, shall have his eyes spurted out with the stones," it fixeth no fault in the fruit.

FULLER, Worthies of England, ii, 112. (1662)
Those, that eat Cherries with great Persons, shall have their Eyes squirted out with the Stones.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5026. (1732)
There is a German proverb which says that "It is unadvisable to eat cherries with potentates."

JOHN DORAN, Table Traits, p. 209. (1854)
TWO BITES AT A CHERRY, see under BITE.

CHESTNUT

1
A chestnut. I have heard you tell the joke twenty-seven times, and I am sure it was a chestnut.

WILLIAM DIMOND, The Broken Sword. A melodrama first produced in 1816, and memorable only as the origin of "chestnut" in the sense of a stale joke. Captain Xavier, the principal character, forever repeating the same yarns, is telling about one of his exploits connected with a cork-tree, when Pablo corrects him, "Chestnut you mean, captain."

One of the latest slang terms is the word "chestnut."

UNKNOWN, Detroit Free Press, 25 Sept., 1886.
It's the old, old, ancient, moth-eaten chestnut.

H. S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 229. (1941)
PULL CHESTNUTS OUT OF THE FIRE, see under CAT.

CHEW

2
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 171. (1599)
I gin Judy White the sack right off the reel, without stopping to chew the matter a bit.

ANN STEPHENS, High Life in New York, i, 51. (1843)

Chew at it and think it over.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 53. (1883)

You let me chew on that for a few days.

J. C. LINCOLN, Captain Warren's Wards, p. 340. (1911)

If you want more to chew on, what the devil is everyone in such a stew about?

H. C. BRANSON, I'll Eat You Last, p. 47. (1941)

CHICKEN

See also Cock, Hen

3
The little chickens, as they dip
Their beaks into the river,

Hold up their heads at every sip,
And thank the Giver.

MARY ALLEN, Poems for Youth. (1810)
There's Solomon Braggs holding up his head like a hen drinking water, but there's nothing in it.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 28. (1880)

4
If you have not a capon, feed on an onion.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chapon. (1611)
He that gives thee a capon, give him the leg and the wing.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
Chickens feed capons. . . . Chickens come to be capons.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111. (1678)
Capons were at first but chickens.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1056. (1732)

5
I wish that every peasant may have a chicken in his pot on Sundays. (Je veux que le dimanche chaque paysan ait sa poule au pot.)
HENRY IV of France, when he was crowned king. (1598)

Chicken today. Feathers tomorrow.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 193. (1942)

6
There is a nest of chickens, whiche he dooth brood,
That will sure make his heare grow through his hood.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

7
You ought to consider you are now past a chicken.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 216. (1711)
Pursue your trade of scandal-picking,
Your hints that Stella is no chicken.

SWIFT, Stella's Birthday, l. 42. (1720)
I swear she's no chicken; she's on the wrong side of thirty, if she be a day.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Recollect, sister, that you are no chicken.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Old Maid. (1761)

An infant at law? A mere chicken?

WILLIAM COBBETT, Political Register. No. 12 (1809)

I'm no spring-chicken.

A. W. TOURGÉE, A Fool's Errand, p. 259. (1879)
HARBEN, Westerfelt, p. 260. (1901)

The barman was no chicken.

THORNE SMITH, The Passionate Witch, p. 243 (1941)

Chickens come home to roost

A. B. CUNNINGHAM, The Bancock Murder Case, p. 241. (1942) See also under RETRIBUTION.

II—Don't Count Your Chickens Before They Are Hatched

8
He bade me have a care for the future, not to count my chickens before they are hatched.

AESOP, Fables: The Milkmaid and Her Pail (c. 570 B.C.) L'Estrange renders it, "to make sure of the bear before I sell the skin." Although it is asserted that the locus classicus of the modern phrase "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched," is the old Greek proverb, αὐτὸς οὐκ ἔσθ' ἔτι τρώκεν (The kid is not yet born), Aesop's fable is much closer to it. A farmer's daughter, returning from milking with a full pail on her head, fell to musing: "The milk in this pail will provide me with cream which I will make into butter, which I will sell in the market, and buy a dozen eggs, which will hatch into chickens, which will lay more eggs, and soon I shall have a large poultry yard. I'll sell some of the fowls and buy myself a handsome new gown, and go to the fair, and when the young fellows try to make love to me, I'll toss my head and pass them by." Whereupon she tossed her head, and down went the pail. She had been counting her chickens before they were hatched. Many authorities think this fable an interpolation by a much later hand. The story of The Barber's Fifth Brother, in the Arabian Nights, is built around the same idea, which is common to many languages. The Hindus say, "Don't bargain for fish which are still in the water"; the Dutch, "Don't cry herrings till they are in the net"; the Italians, "Don't reckon your eggs before they are laid"; the Persians, "Don't give away the deer until it is caught," etc. There are many variants besides those given below: "Don't build the sty till the litter comes"; "Don't spread the cloth till the pot begins to boil"; "Don't take off your boots till you see the water," and so on, all stressing the dangers of acting over hastily. "Don't sell the skin till you have caught the bear" is common to most European languages. The Italians say, "Non vender la pelle dell' orso prima di pigliarlo"; the Germans, "Die Bärenhaut soll man nicht verkaufen ehe der Bär gestochen ist"; the Dutch, "Verkoop den huid niet, voor gij den beer hebt gevangen." Oldest of all is a line from The Eloquent Peasant, by an unknown Egyptian scribe of perhaps 2000 B.C.: "Do not rejoice over what has not yet happened" (M h'w n ntt n hprt)—as it is usually transliterated.

I would not haue you to counte his Chickens so soone before they be hatcht.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Ephemerides of Phialo, fo. 19A. (1579)

Why doe we reckon our chickens before they be hatcht?

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. G2. (1583)

Take heed we don't reckon our chickens before they are hatcht.

JAMES HOWARD, The English Mounseieur. Act iii, sc. 2. (1663)

To swallow gudgeons ere they're catch'd,
And count their chickens ere they're hatch'd.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto III, l. 923. (1664)

Count not your chickens before they are hatch't.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670)

Reckon not your Chickens before they are hatch'd.

Neither ought we to reckon our Eggs before they are lay'd.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 259. (1709)
You are a little too hasty; you reckon your chickens before they are hatch'd.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Colloquies, p. 39. (1725)
We must not reckon our chickens before they are hatched, though they are chipping the shell now.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 20 May, 1829.

A victory may be snatcht,
But never count your little chicks
Before they're safely hatched.

SERGEANT MEREWETHER. (1906) See LADY NEVILL, Reminiscences, p. 306.

Counting your chickens before they are hatched.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 22. (1941)
They're counting their chickens a little early.

McKNIGHT MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 103. (1943)

Don't count your chickens, or maybe you won't hatch none.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, The Chinese Shawl, p. 123. (1943)

1
It is a common saying that it is best first to catch the stag, and afterwards, when he has been caught, to skin him. (Vulgariter dicitur, quod primum oportet cervum capere, et postea, cum captus fuerit, illum excoriare.)

HENRY DE BRACON, De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliae. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 2, sec. 4 (c. 1240)

FIRST CATCH YOUR HARE, see under HARE.

I solde the skinne before the Beaste was taken, rec[k]oning with-out mine hoast, and setting downe that in my bookes as ready money, which afterwards I found to be a desperate debt.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 273. (1580)

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 3, 93. (1598)

They divide the skinne of the bear among them e'er they ha't.

UNKNOWN, Political Ballads, 20. (1647) Percy Society, No. 11.

He had caught a great cold, had he had no other clothes to wear than those which were to be made of a skin of a bear not yet killed.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Cornwall, i. 304. (1662)

Never sell the bear's skin until you have killed the bear. (Jamais vendre le peau de l'ours qu'on ne l'ait mis par terre.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'Ours et les Deux Compagnons. Bk. v, fab. 20. (1668) PHILIPPE DE COMMINES, Mémoires, iv, 2, puts this fable into the mouth of the Emperor Frederic, when King Louis XI of France proposed to seize the lands of the Duke of Burgundy. The Danish version is, "Don't sell the skin till you have caught the fox."

You sell the bear skin on the back.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 376. (1721)

Indeed the devil may be said to sell the bearskin, whatever he buys.

DANIEL DEFOE, History of the Devil, Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1726)

Make not your Sauce, before you have caught the Fish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3324. (1732)

The Italians say, "Non gridar i pesci fritti prima d'esser presi" (Don't cry tried fish before they are caught).

Smells a little too much of selling the bear's skin before he has hunted him.

WALTER SCOTT, The Legend of Montrose. Ch. 3. (1819)

1 If the Ceremoniall law forbade the Jews to seeth a kid in the mothers milk, the law of good husbandry forbids us to eat a kid in the mothers belly, spending our pregnant hopes before they be delivered.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Expecting Preferment. (1642)

He eats the calf in the cow's belly. Applied to those who spend their rent before it is due.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 138. (1721)

I ever made shift to avoid anticipations: I never would eat the calf in the cow's belly, as Lord M's phrase is.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iii, 122. (1748)

Interest . . . goes on increasing until it reaches . . . one hundred per cent. This is what is called "eating the calf in the cow's belly."

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 277. (1875)

A very common bucolic saying, precisely expressive of what is called "discounting" in commercial talk, is eating the calf in the cow's belly.

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book, p. 58. (1886)

2 Count not four, except you have them in a wallet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 960. (1640)

Count not four, till they be in the bag.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 229. (1666)

3 Gut no fish till you get them.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 114. (1721)

Lead away ourselves to be gutting our fish before we get them.

DAVID M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 20. (1824)

Soon enough to cry chuck when it is out of the shell.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 288. (1721)

"Chuck" is the hen's call to the chicken.

4 Gentlewoman, to studie for a seconde wife before I knowe my first, were to resemble the good Huswife in Naples, who tooke thought to bring foorth hir chickens before she had Hens to lay Egges.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 415.

(1580) ARBER, ed. The Germans say, "Aus ungelegten Eiern werden spät junge Hühner" (Chickens are slow in coming from unlaidd eggs).

5 You are over hasty; your harvest is still in the blade. (Nimium properas: et adhuc tua messis in herba est.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 263. (c. 10 B.C.) The corn is yet in the blade. (Seges altera in herba est.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 26. (c. A.D. 58)

Cited as a proverb by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 89.

Hope not too surely for early harvest.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 89. (c. 900)

Burning the great logs for the sale of the ashes, and eating his corn whilst it was but grass. (Brulant les grosses souches pour la vente des cendres, . . . & mangeant son bled en herbe.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1545)

Thou talkest of harvest, when the corn is green.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act ii, sc. 6. (c. 1589)

Thou goest a glenyng er the cart haue caried

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Hee goeth a gleaning before that the cart haue carried.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, 175. (1633)

6 Do not boast till you see your enemy dead. (μήπω μεγ' εἴπης, πρὶν τελευτήσαντ' ἴδης.)

SOPHOCLES. Frag. (c. 450 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, iv, 8, where Winstedt (Loeb) translates it, "Don't holloa till you are out of the wood."

Buy your slaves before you order them about. (πασσόμενος ἐπιτάσσει.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv. l. 90. (c. 270 B.C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 24, gives the Latin as "Praecipito postque satiaveris esca," and the derivative proverb as "Ubi paveris impera" (Where you fear command).

Ye triumphe before the vitorye. (Ante victoriam encomium canis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 54.

(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 63. (1550) Says Taverner: "Such there be not a fewe whiche glorie of thynges to sone, before they haue fully broughte them to effecte." HENDERSON (Latin Proverbs, p. 23) gives the proverb as, "Ante victoriam ne canas triumphum" (Before the victory do not sing of the triumph).

He that will sell lawne before he can folde it, He shall repent him before he have sold it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

Ye be over the style er ye come at it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

Boil not the Pap before the child is born.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1002. (1732)

She was a fool to throw out her dirty water before she got clean.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

Don't stitch your seam before you've tacked it.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 50. (1917)

Don't lift the lid too soon.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 533. (1937)

CHILD

See also Boy, Father, Girl, Youth

<sup>1</sup> Children are voices of immortality to a man, though he be dead. (παῖδες γὰρ ἀνδρὶ κληδόνες σωτήριοι | θανόντι.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 505. (458 B.C.) Rearing children, and so handing on life like a torch from one generation to another. (ἐκ-τρέφοντας παῖδας, καθάπερ λαμπάδα τὸν βίον παραδίδοντας ἄλλοις ἐξ ἄλλων.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. vi, sec. 776B. (c. 345 B.C.) Forgetteth not this sentence, That it is an execrable thing wilfully to deprive ones self of immortality, which he doth who seeketh not to have wife and children.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 4. (1574) If we have none to foul the bed, we shall have none to burn paper at our graves.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2171. (1875)

Be vexed with yourself if you have neither branch nor leaf; do not accuse the sun of partiality.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1698.

Better establish a branch than cut off a line.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 377. If you haven't a child of your own, adopt one.

<sup>2</sup> When the child knows that he has sucked [enough], behold, he finds his mouth and cries out, "Give me bread."

ANI, Teaching. No. 68. (c. 2000 B.C.)

Prove yourself to be the man I have ever known you to be "from the days" as the Greeks say "when your finger-nails were tender." (Praesta te eum, qui mihi a teneris, ut Graeci dicunt, unguiculis es cognitus.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. i, epis. 6, sec. 2. (56 B.C.) That is, from infancy.

<sup>3</sup> Ever since I began to wash. (ἐξ ὅτου ἔγω ῥύπτομαι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 17. (425 B.C.) Cradle straws are scarce out of his breech.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)

Your Mamma's Milk is scarce out of your Nose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6055. (1732)

Theresa, a big, clean-lookin' child that I see grow up fr'm hello to good avnin'.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Shaughnessy. (1898)

A squirt who isn't dry behind the ears yet.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 125. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> Children should be seen and not heard. (παῖδες φωνὴν γρύζαντος μὴδὲν ἀκοῦσαι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 963. (423 B.C.) Quoted as an old rule.

For hyt ys an old Englysch sawe: "A mayde schuld be seen, but not herd."

JOHN MIRK, Mirk's Festial, i, 230. (c. 1043)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51 (1670) has "Maidens must be seen and not heard," and SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i, (1738) has, "They say maids should be seen and not heard."

"Little people should be seen and not heard" is a stupid saying.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy Though Married. Ch. 17. (1866)

Impudently proclaim the monstrous principle that little children should be seen and not heard.

SHAW, Misalliance: Introduction. (1914)

In silence I must take my seat, . . .

I must not speak a useless word,

For children must be seen, not heard.

B. W. BELLAMY, Open Sesame. Vol. i, p. 167. (1915) Quoted as from Table Rules for Little Folks.

<sup>5</sup> The legislators in the Laws forbid allowing children to have paroxysms of crying, but this prohibition is a mistake; violent crying contributes to growth, for it serves in a way as exercise for the body. (γυμνασία τοῖς σώμασιν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 15, sec. 6. (c. 330 B.C.)

One must think Archytas's rattle a good invention, which people give to children in order that while occupied with this they may not break any of the furniture; for young things cannot keep still. (οὐ γὰρ δύναται τὸ νέον ἡσυχάζειν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. viii, ch. 6, sec. 1. (c. 330 B.C.) Archytas, the reputed inventor of the rattle, was a mathematician of Tarentum, c. 400 B.C.

When children stand quiet, they have done some ill.

HERRBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 506. (1640) I remember a wise old gentleman who used to say, "When children are doing nothing, they are doing mischief."

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xv, ch. 2. (1749) As soon as the children are good the mothers are scared, and think they are going to die.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life. Ch. 7. (1860) When children stand still,

They have done some ill.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 47. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> Nothing is more stupid than to beget children (οὐδὲν ἡλιθιώτερον τεκνοποιῆσαι.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 21, sec. 15. (330 B.C.) Aristotle remarks that this maxim was no doubt coined by a man who happened to have bad children.

Begetting children is a delightful duty. (Procreare liberos lepidumst onus.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 682. (c. 200 B.C.)

Beget them with pleasure, and bring them up with pain.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 67. (1576)

God bad us for to wexe and multiplie.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 28. (c. 1338)

Many who multiply the most have not sufficient intelligence to add.

A. E. WISSAM, New Decalogue of Science, p. 18 (1922)

<sup>7</sup> It is not possible that a child of these tears

should be lost. (Fieri non potest, ut filius istarum lacrimarum pereat.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (A. D. 397) Reply to his mother, when she wept for her son's heresies.

1 He who has issued from thee teacheth thee reason.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63a. (c. 450)

The first service a child doeth his father is to make him foolish.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 465. (1640)

2 The talk of the child in the street is that of his father and mother.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 56b. (c. 450) Or, "The child says nothing but what is heard by the fire." Therefore be careful what you say before children.

What children hear at home soon flies abroad.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Enfant. (1611)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5492. (1732)

The groundsel [threshold] speaks not, save what it heard at the hinges.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 297.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4583, refines this to, "The Groundsel speaketh but what it heard of the hinges."

The child says nothing but what it heard by the fire.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 302.

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4449. (1732)

The bairn speaks in the fields what he heard by the slett [fireside].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 318. (1721)

Children tell abroad what they hear their fathers say by the fireside. (Dizen los niños en el solejar, lo que oyen a sus padres en el hogar.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 88. (1814) Another Spanish form cited by CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 265, is, "Lo que el niño oyó en la hogar, eso dice en el portal" (What the child heard by the hearth he tells at the door).

Bairns and fules speak at the Cross what they hear at the ingle side.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

The child says what the father says.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 10. (1902)

3 Hold you hands off other folks' bairns, till you get some of your own.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 408. (1855)

4 There's only one pretty child in the world, and every mother has it.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 119. (1917)

See also under POSSESSIONS.

5 Gyue thy chyld when he wyl kraue,
And thy whelp whyt hyt wyl haue,
Than mayst thou make, in a stounde,
A foul chyld and a feyre hounde.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 7240. (1303)

Give a child till he craves, and a dog while his tail doth wave, and you'll have a fair dog, but a foul knave.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 82. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6456. (1732)

Give a bairn his will, and a whelp his fill, and none of these two will thrive. The whelp will be fat and lazy, and the child perverse and froward.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (1721)

Give a child his will and a whelp his fill, both will surely turn out ill.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 70. (1880)

Give a pig when it grunts and a child when it cries and you will have a fine pig and a bad child.

H. R. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 492. (1940)

6 For god it woot, that children ofte been Unlyk her worthy eldres hem bifore.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale, l. 99. (c. 1388)

Nature alway tendeth to the best: so that of good parentes, ought naturally to come good children: and if it fall out sometyne otherwise, the fault is not to be imputed to nature.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 16. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The same tree may bear sweet and sour fruit; the same mother may have clever and stupid children.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 283. (1872)

7 The children of Mercurie and of Venus
Been in hir wirking ful contrarious;
Mercurie loveth wisdom and science,
And Venus loveth ryot and dispence.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 697 (c. 1388)

If we suffer them not to royst and to riot, to spill and to spoyle, to swashe and to lashe, to lend and to spende, . . . they will an end of our lives to have our livings.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 139. (1576)

8 The dutifulness of children is the foundation of all virtues. (Pietas fundamentum est omnium virtutum.)

CICERO, Pro Cnaeo Plancio. Ch. xii, sec. 29. (54 B. C.)

Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For God hath made them so;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For 'tis their nature, too.

But, children, you should never let
Such angry passions rise;
Your little hands were never made
To tear each other's eyes.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Quarrelling and Fighting. (1720) The last word of the fourth line is persistently misquoted "to."

Speak, when you are spoke to; come, when you are called.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4244. (1732)

Come when you're called,
And do as you're bid;

Shut the door after you,
And you'll never be chid.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Contrast. Ch. 1. (1804)
A child should always say what's true
And speak when he is spoken to,
And behave mannerly at table;
At least as far as he is able.

R.L. STEVENSON, Whole Duty of Children. (1885)

Is it not strange that he who has no children brings them up so well?

CONFUCIUS, Analecfs. (c. 500 B.C.) TEHYI
HSIEH, Confucius Suid It First, p. 85. The Latin proverbial phrase, "Sine prole" (Without offspring) is frequently denoted by the initials S.P.

Bachelors wives, and maides children be well taught.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 304. (1614)

The maydes chylde is euer best taughte.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, 138. (1549)
Bachelors wiuens and maidens children are pretty things to play withall.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 118. (1637)
Bachelors' wives and maids' children are finely tutored.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Every one can keep House better than her
Mother, till she trieth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1443. (1732)
A bachelor's children are always young.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 22. (1866)
Old maids' children and bachelors' wives are always perfection

UNKNOWN, The Sphere, 30 Mar., 1920, p. 316.

When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things. (ὅτε ἦμην νήπιος, ἐλάλουν ὡς νήπιος, ἐφρόνουν ὡς νήπιος, ἐλογίζεμην ὡς νήπιος· ὅτε γέγονα ἀνὴρ, κατήργηκα τὰ τοῦ νηπίου.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 11. (A. D.
57) The Vulgate is, "Cum essem parvulus, loquebar ut parvulus, sapiebam ut parvulus, cogitabam ut parvulus. Quando autem factus sum vir, evacuavi quae erant parvuli."

I account him to be of great wisdom which can conforme his manners to his age, having an eye to the saying of the Apostle, when I was a childe
I spoke like a childe, but being man grown. I cast away al childish tricks.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 173. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Don't give the child a knife. (μὴ παῖδι τῆς μάχαιραν.)

DIAGENIANUS, Adagia, vi, 46. (c. A. D. 125) An old Greek proverb which ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 18, renders, "Ne puero gladium," and adds, "an allegorical proverb, warning that authority should not be placed in incompetent or stupid hands."

Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 3, 11. (1592) See under KING.

Childhood and youth are vanity. (Adolescentia enim et voluptas vana sunt.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 10. (c. 250 B. C.)
Childhood is health.

GEORGE HERBERT, Holy Baptism. (c. 1630)

I detest a child that is wise too soon. (Odi puerulum praecoci sapientia.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 10. (1511)

Chyldren now adayes are borne wyse.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 67. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Ah, there are no children nowadays. (Ah, il n'y a plus d'enfants.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Malade Imaginaire. Act ii, sc. 8,
l. 118. (1673)

There are no longer any children nowadays.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 145. (1902)

Who hath no chyldren, feedeth them wel. (Chi non ha figliuoli, bene gli pasce.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578) The complete proverb is, "Chi non ha moglie ben la veste; Chi non ha figliuoli ben il pasce" (Who has not a wife clothes her well; who has not children feeds them well).

Who hath no children feedes them fatt.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, 46. (1611)

He that hath no children feedeth them fat

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, 58. (1633)

Teach your child to hold his tongue, he'll learn fast enough to speak.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734
Let thy child's first lesson be obedience, and the second be what thou wilt.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739
Children and Princes will quarrel for trifles

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752
A Child thinks 20 Shillings and 20 Years can scarce ever be spent.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754

Our whole Life is but a greater and longer Childhood.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3830

Experience teacheth, that . . . of a shreude boy, proueth a good man.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, 12. (1548)

An untoward gyrl makes a good woman

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), x, 239
(1592) "Alluding to this prophane and old prouerbe."

A shrewd boy maketh a good man.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 9. (1633)

Verified the proverb, that an untoward boy may make a good man.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain
Bk. x, sec. 4. (1655)

An unhappy lad may make a good man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111. (1670)
The Germans say, "Die ärgsten Studenten werden die frömmsten Prediger" (The most unruly students prove the most pious preachers).

<sup>1</sup>
A child correct behind, and not before.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 123. (1640)
A child's service is little, yet he is no little fool that despiseth it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 208.
A naughty child is better sick than whole.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 235.
To a child all weather is cold.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 734.

<sup>2</sup>
The offspring of those that are very young, or very old, lasts not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 886. (1640)
The children of very young and very old men . . . last not long.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)
Late children, early orphans.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.
Franklin repeated the proverb in a letter to John Alleyn (1768) advising early marriage.

To have January chicks.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1678)
The old pearl-oyster produces a pearl. (Lao fêng shêng chu.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Proverbs, ii, 180. (1872)
Said of a man who has a child in old age. Many Chinese proverbs refer to children as pearls.

<sup>3</sup>
Auoyd your children: small pitchers have wide ears.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
See under PITCHER.

Children have wide Ears, and long Tongues
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1097. (1732)

<sup>4</sup>
Ye haue many god children to looke vpon.
And ye blesse them all. but ye basse but one.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

<sup>5</sup>
Many kisse the childe for the nurse's sake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
See under KISSING.

PRaise the child and you make love to the MOTHER, see under MOTHER

<sup>6</sup>
Better children weepe then olde men.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 23. (1616)

Better bairnes greit nor bearded men.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)

Better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. v, 3, 11. (1601)

Woe to the house where there is no chiding

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum (1640)
Better bairns greet as bearded men Better you make your children cry with seasonable correction, than they make you cry by their after mis-carriage.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 62 (1721)
Better that bairns weep than bearded men.

WALTER SCOTT, Tales of a Grandfather Ch 32 (1827)

Better your children weep than you. (Besser die Kinder weinen, als du.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 331. (1856) A German proverb. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 78, quotes a variation: "Es ist besser, das Kind weine denn der Vater" (Better the child weep than the father). The Danes say, "Bedre er at Barn graeder end gammel Mand" (Better the child weep than the old man), or "Bedre at Barn graeder end at Moder sukker" (Better the child should cry than the mother sigh).

<sup>7</sup>
A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping; Rahel weeping for her children. (Vox in excelso audita est lamentationis, luctus, et fletus Rachel plorantis filios suos.)
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxxi, 15. (c. 700 B. C.)
Repeated in Matthew, ii, 18.

Why mournest thou, Rachel, shedding bitter tears?

Because I see my children slain I shed tears. (τίπτε, Ῥαχὴλ, γόωσα πικρὸν κατὰ δάκρυον εἶβεις; ὁλλυμένην ὁρώσα γονὴν κατὰ δάκρυον εἶβω.)

AGATHIUS SCHOLASTICUS, On Rachel. (c. 550)
See GREEK ANTHOLOGY, i, 43.

Barbarous, not brave, is he who kills a child (Crudelis est non fortis qui infantem necat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 123. (c. 43 B. C.)
The death of a bairn is not the skailing [breaking up] of a house. The death of a child bears no proportion to the death of a husband or wife

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 329. (1721)
The only Way to be sure of not losing a Child is never to have any.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4694. (1732)

<sup>8</sup>
The burnt child dreads the fire.

BEN JONSON, The Devil is an Ass Act i, sc. 2. (1616) See under EXPERIENCE

<sup>9</sup>
Is it well with the child? (Recte . . . circa filium tuum?)

Old Testament: II Kings, iv, 26 (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup>
Children have neither past nor future; they enjoy the present, which very few of us do. (Les enfants n'ont ni passé ni avenir; et, ce qui nous arrive guère, ils jouissent du présent.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme (1688)

<sup>11</sup>
A rascal of a child—that age is without pity (Un fripon d'enfant—cet age est sans pitié.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 2. (1678)
Infancy loves nothing. (L'enfance n'aime rien)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xi, fab. 2.

A child's love, water in a basket (Amor de niño agua en castillo)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 222 (1856) A Spanish proverb

<sup>12</sup>
A child is fed with milk and praise.
MARY LAMB, The First Tooth (1809)

1 He is fortunate who has children;
He is not unfortunate who has none.
(Il est heureux qui a des enfants,
Et n'est pas malheureux qui n'en a point.)
LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i. 217.
(1859) Quoting a proverb of c. 1450. See also under FATHER.

2 Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's Hour.
LONGFELLOW, The Children's Hour. (1859)

3 Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. (ἄφετε τὰ παῖδια ἔρχεσθαι πρὸς με, μὴ κωλύετε αὐτά, τῶν γὰρ τοιούτων ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ.)

New Testament: Mark, x, 14. (c. A.D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Sinite parvulos venire ad me, et ne prohibueritis eos: talium enim est regnum Dei." Repeated in Matthew, xix, 14, and
Luke, xviii, 16.

The kingdom of heaven is of the childlike, of those who are easy to please, who love and who give pleasure.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon. (1892)

4 When some one asked Agesilaus what he would advise that children be taught, he answered, "That which they should do when they are men." (On demandoit à Agesilaus ce qu'il seroit d'avis que les enfants apprinssent: "Ce qu'ils doivent faire estants hommes.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i. ch. 24. (1580)

5 How different is the man you are from the child you were. (Dissimiles hic vir et ille puer.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ix, l. 24. (c. 10 B.C.)

When I was as you are now, towering in the confidence of twenty-one, little did I suspect that I should be at forty-nine, what I now am.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Bennet Langton.
See ROSWELL, Life, 1758.

6 Poor child of a day! (ὦ τάλας ἐφάμερε.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 157. Sandys. (c. 480
B.C.)

7 He longed for children, but hated women.
(Cupienti liberorum, osori mulierum.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 74. (c. 194 B.C.)

8 My jewels are Phocion and his triumphs.
(ἐμοὶ δὲ κόσμος ἐστὶ Φωκίων.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion. Ch. xix. Of the wife of Phocion, "when an Ionian woman who was her guest displayed ornaments of gold and precious stones." (c. 330 B.C.)

It is reported of Cornelia, that virtuous Roman Lady, great Scipio's daughter, Titus Sempronius' wife, and the Mother of the Gracchi, that being by chance in company with a strange gentlewoman, . . . who did naught but brag of her fine

Robes and Jewels, and provok'd the Roman Matron to shew hers: Cornelia kept her in talk till her children came from school, and these, said she, are my Jewels.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 3. (1621) Repeating the story told by Seneca. (c. 180 B.C.)

I marvelle nothing, that the most prudent dame Cornelia shewed to her neighbour, that asked for her chaines and jewels, her learned and vertuous children.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 68. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Pointing to such, well might Cornelia say,
When the rich casket shone in bright array.
"These are my jewels!"

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 210. (1819)

9 Even a child is known by his doings. (Ex studiis suis intelligitur puer.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 11. (c. 350 B.C.)

When a pumpkin begins to sprout, we can tell whether it will rot or grow sound.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 48A. (c.
450) Genesis Rabbah, xi, 1, has, "While the thorn is still young it produces prickles"

It is soon apparent which trees will bear fruit.
(Protinus apparet, quae plantae frugiferae futurae.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 13. (1523) A natural bent for good or evil is easily perceptible in youth.

The childhood shews the man

As morning shews the day.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. iv, l. 220. (1671)
The Child is father of the Man.

WORDSWORTH, My Heart Leaps Up. (1802)

The fine pullet shows its excellence from the egg
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 48. (1817)
From the morning one can tell whether the night will be clear.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 50.

The influences which contribute to form the character of the child endure through life. . . . "The child is father of the man"; or, as Milton puts it, "The childhood shows the man, as morning shows the day."

SAMUEL SMILES, Character, p. 33. (1871)

One has often heard it said that the boy is father to the man. . . . That the girl is mother of the woman should have been equally obvious long ago.

ARTHUR E. HERTZLER, The Doctor and His Patients, p. 24. (1940)

Whatever is to be a hook, bends early. (Was ein Häkchen werden soll, krümmt sich beizeiten.)

UNKNOWN. An old German proverb, perhaps the prototype of many similar ones: "Timely crooks that tree that will be a cammock."
i. e. gambrel, a bent piece of wood used by butchers to hang carcasses on; "It pricketh betimes that shall be a sharp thorn"; "Whatever is to be a nettle, burns early" (Was ein Nessel werden soll, brennt beizeiten).

<sup>1</sup> Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it. (Proverbium est: Adoleſcens iuxta viam suam, etiam cum ſenuerit, non recedet ab ea.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)
As each one wiſhes his children to be, ſo they are. (Ut quiſque ſuom volt eſſe, itaſt.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 399. (160 B. C.)

They who in youth to manners ne'er attend,
Will in advancing years ſmall gain acquire;
Wood, while 'tis green, thou mayſt at pleaſure bend;

When dry, thou canſt not change it ſave by fire.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 3. (c. 1258)

But certeynly, a yong thing may men gye,
Right as men may warm wex with handes plye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 185 (c. 1388)

As that tree which bloſſometh not in ſpring tyme, bringeth foorth no fruite in harveſt: ſo hee ſhall never come to live honeſtly, when he is a man, who is not vertuouſly exerciſed, while he is a childe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 53. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The tender youth of a childe is like the tempering of new waxe, apt to receive any forme.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 37. (1579)

Give me a child for the firſt ſeven years, and you may do what you like with him afterwards.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 472. (1902)

Quoted as a Jeſuit maxim.

Give us the child for eight years, and it will be a Bolſheviſt forever.

NIKOLAI LENIN, Speech, to the Commiſſars of Education, Moſcow, 1923.

AS THE TWIG IS BENT, ſee under TREE.

<sup>2</sup> Let not a man be envious that hath no children. . . . For a father, though great, may be grieved; as to the mother of children. ſhe hath leſſe peace than another.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 9 (c. 3550 B. C.)
Prisſe Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

<sup>3</sup> Put another man's child in your boſom, and he'll creep out at your elbow. That is, cheriſh or love him, he'll be naturally affected toward you.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1670)

Put another Man's Child into your Boſom, and he'll creep out at your Sleeves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2982. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Children to bed and the goole to the fire.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 168. (1670)

It was high time (as the vulgar proverb hath it) to put the children to bed, and lay the goole to the fire.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL, Divi Britannici, 278. (1675)

We have all of us heard in our infancy of "putting the children to bed, and laying the goole to the fire." This was one of the jocular ſayings of our forefathers.

SIR RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 263. (1710)

<sup>5</sup> Children pick up words as pigeons pease, And utter them again as God ſhall pleaſe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 213. (1670)

<sup>6</sup> Let not a child ſleep upon bones.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)

That is, upon anyone's lap.

<sup>7</sup> As the nurſery proverb goes—"The children in Holland take pleaſure in making What the children in England take pleaſure in breaking."

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel: Introductory Epistle. (1822)

<sup>8</sup> 'Tis the eye of childhood

That fears a painted devil.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 2, 53. (1606)

<sup>9</sup> The bearing and the training of a child Is woman's wiſdom.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 455. (1847)

<sup>10</sup> Yong children and chickens would ever be eating.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Huswiferie. (1573)

Children and chickens muſt be always picking

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6078. (1732)

Children and chickens always have the ſtomach ready. (Les enfants et les poulets Ont toujours l'eſtomac prêt.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 370. (1856) A French proverb.

<sup>11</sup> With one child you may walk, with two you may ride,

When you have three at home you muſt hide
UNKNOWN A Corniſh proverb quoted in Notes and Queries, 3rd ſer., v, 209. (1864)

When you've got one, you may run,
When you've got two, you may goo,
But when you've got three, you muſt ſtop where you be.

UNKNOWN. An Oxfordſhire proverb quoted in Folk-Lore, Vol. xxiv, p. 76. (1913) Another jingle runs, "Waly, waly! bairns are bonny. One's enough and twa's too mony."

A child is a ſhackle which ties its parents for the three worlds.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439 (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>12</sup> Sely [bright, clever] chyld is ſone y-lered [taught].

UNKNOWN. Proverbs of Hendyng. St. 9. (c. 1170)

Sely child wol alday ſone lere.

CHAUCER, The Canterbury Tales: The Prior-esses Tale, l. 60. (c. 1386)

Sillie bairns are eith [easy] to lear.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (c. 1595)

God's bairn is eith to lear. A child endowed with grace and good nature will be eaſily taught.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (1721)

Quick child is soon taught.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 322. (1869)

1 Some care not how others' children cry,
So they themselves can prosper well.

UNKNOWN, Shirburn Ballads (1907), p. 22. (c. 1600)

He cares not whose bairn greet if his laugh.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 137. (1721)
He cares not whose Child cries, so his laugh.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1823. (1732)
SECOND CHILDHOOD, see under AGE.

IT'S A WISE CHILD THAT KNOWS ITS OWN FATHER,
see under FATHER.

II—Children: A Blessing

2 And when with envy time transported,
Shall think to rob us of our joys,
You'll in your girls again be courted,
And I'll go wooing in my boys.

GILBERT COOPER (?), Winifreda. (a. 1726) See Miscellaneous Poems by Several Hands. (1726) Claimed for Cooper by JOHN AIKEN, Collection of English Songs, and WALTER THORNBURY, Two Centuries of Song. Included in PERCY, Reliques, i, iii, 13.

A mother's pride, a father's joy.

WALTER SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 15. (1813)

3 Children are poor men's riches.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Enfant. (1611)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 4. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1094. (1732) Because eventually they can support their parents. The Danes have the same proverb, "Börn er fattig Mands Rigdom."

Children are the parents' riches.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 23. (1616)

There is no wealth where there are no children
(Sili pōe seo né, dá yō bli seo né.)

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 166. (1936)

Children are poor men's treasures.

GURNEY CHAMPTION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439
(1938) A Japanese proverb.

4 Children are a man's crown. (ἀνδρὸς μὲν στέφανοι παῖδες.)

HOMER (?), Apothegms. No. 13. (c. 850 B.C.)
Repeated in The Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 324.

5 Children are the sweetest things of all to own.
(ἡδίστα μὲντοι κτημάτων πάντων τέκνα.)

MENANDER, The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut, l. 691. (c. 300 B.C.)

Of all nature's gifts to the human race, what is sweeter to a man than his child'ren? (Quid dulcius hominum generi ab natura datum est quam sui cuique liberi?)

CICERO, Post Reditum ad Quirites. Ch. i, sec. 2. (57 B.C.)

6 Her children arise up, and call her blessed.
(Surrexerunt filii eius, et beatissimam praedicaverunt.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 28. (c. 350 B.C.)

7 Children are an heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. (Fructus ventris.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 3. (c. 250 B.C.)
Thy children [shall be] like olive plants round about thy table. (Filii tui sicut novellae olivarum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxviii, 3.

Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them. (Beatus vir qui implevit desiderium suum ex ipsis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 5.

Happy is he that is happy in his children

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1787. (1732)

8 They say bairnes are blessings.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, I, 3, 28. (1602)

9 He that has no children knows not what is love.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 89. (1666)

Children are the keys of Paradise.

R. H. STODDARD, The Children's Prayer. (1851)

Where children are not heaven is not.

A. C. SWINBURNE, A Song of Welcome (1871)

10 Just as the moon is the light of the night and the sun of the day, so are good children the light of their family.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

11 Wise child is fader blisse.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred, l. 224. (c. 1250)

III—Children: A Curse

12 The more children you have the more griefs you have. (ὅσῳ γὰρ ἂν πλείονα τέκνης τοσοῦτω καὶ πλείους λύπας συνάγεις.)

AESOP, Fables: The Dove and the Crow (c. 570 B.C.)

Alas! thrice wretched he who weds, though poor.
And children gets.

(ὦ τρισκακοδαίμων, ὅστις ὦν πένης γαμεῖ καὶ παιδοποιεῖθ'.)

MENANDER, Plokion. Frag. 404. (c. 300 B.C.)
CAECILIUS STATIUS, Plocium, l. 169 (c. 175 B.C.), puts this into Latin. "Is demum infortunatus est homo, i pauper qui educit in egestatem liberos."

Some tormentor invented children, and I approve the opinion of Euripides, who said that they which had no children are happy by being unfortunate. (Quem filios invenisse tortorem. . . . in quo Euripidis mei sententiam probro, qui carentem liberis infortunio dixit esse felicem.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (A.D. 524) The reference is to EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 420.

Children bring with them innumerable cares (Innumeras curas secum adferunt liberi.)

ERASMUS, Procus et Puella. (c. 1522)

Care be hath that childry'n schalle kepe.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wiif Taught Her Doughtir, l. 145. (c. 1430)

Children reflect constant cares, but uncertain comforts.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 27. (1630)

Children are uncertain comforts, but certain cares.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 240. (1639)

Children are certain cares, but uncertain comforts.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1095. (1732) The Danes say, "Börn er vis Sorg, men uvis Glaede" (Children are certain sorrow, but uncertain joy).

Children increase the Cares of Life; but mitigate the Remembrance of Death.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1098. (1732)

Children are a constant torment and nothing more.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 4.

(1890) The Spaniards say, "Quien tiene hijos o ovejas no le fattan quezas" (He who has sons or sheep will not want vexations).

Besides, they always smell of bread and butter.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 39. (1817)

1 Better it is to die without children, than to have them that are ungodly. (Utile est mori sine filiis quam relinquere filios impios.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xvi, 3. (c. 190 B.C.)

Better that the young wife should bring forth a serpent than bear an ungrateful son.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 10. (c. 1258)

Unruly children make their sire stoop.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 4, 30. (1595)

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is

To have a thankless child!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 310. (1605)

He'd be sharper than a serpent's tooth, if he wasn't as dull as ditchwater.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1865)

2 Les Enfants Terribles. (The Terrible Children.)

GAVARNI (PAUL CHEVALIER). Title of series of drawings. (c. 1860)

3 He that hath children, all his morsels are not his own.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 425. (1640)

Better add a peck of rice to our lot,

Than another mouth to eat what we've got.

(Ning 't'ien yi tou, mo 't'ien yi k'ou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1570. (1875) See also under FAMILY.

4 Children when they are little make parents fools, when they are great they make them mad.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 938. (1640)

Children blessings seem, but torments are;

When young, our folly, and when old, our fear.

THOMAS OTWAY, Don Carlos. (1676)

Children, when little make Parents Fools; when great, mad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1100. (1732)

RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 120. (1747) The Italians say, "Fanciulli piccioli, dolor di testa; fanciulli grandi, dolor di cuore" (Little children, head-ache; big children, heart-ache); the Danes, "Smaae Börn, smaae Sorger; store Börn, store Sorger" (Little children, little sorrows; big children, big sorrows).

Children suck the Mother, when they are young; and the Father, when grown up.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1099. (1732)

Children begin by loving their parents. After a time they judge them. Rarely, if ever, do they forgive them.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act. ii. (1893)

5 Briefly die their joys

That place them on the truth of girls and boys.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 5, 106 (1611)

6 Children are horribly insecure; the life of a parent is the life of a gambler.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Francis Jeffrey. (c. 1803)

IV—Children and Fools

7 Children and fools have merry lives.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 298. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69 (1670), who adds, "They are not concern'd either for what is past, or for what is to come"

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1093. (1732)

8 Children and fools are diviners. (Enfans et sots sont devins.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

9 Our common prouerbe . . . Children, drunkers and fooles, can not lye.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 62. (1539)

Men say also, children and fooles can not lye

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt i, ch. 11. (1546)

Chyldren and fooles tel truth (Puttl e matti indouinano.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 33 (1578)

TATHAM, Scots Figgaries. Act iii. (1652)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1092 (1732)

'Tis an old said saw, Children and fools speak true.

JOHN LYLY, Endimion Act iv, sc. 2 (1591)

Fooles and babes tell true.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, More Knaues Yet, p. 36 (c. 1610)

Children and fools speak truth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1670)

COLMAN, Man and Wife. Act iii. (1769)

The Germans say, "Kinder und Narren sagen die Wahrheit." It is a proverb, that children and fools talk truth.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Ellis. (1805)

Only children tell the truth.

DAVID BELASCO, The Return of Peter Grimm Act i. (1911)

V—Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child

1 Evils not punished at the beginning grow greater. (τῶν μὴ κατ' ἀρχὰς κολαζομένων ἐπὶ μέισον αὐξάνει τὰ κακά.)

AESOP, Fables: The Boy and His Mother. (c. 570 B.C.) The mother neglecting to punish her son for his first theft, he goes from bad to worse and is finally condemned to death. Just before he is executed, he pretends he has something to whisper in her ear, and bites her ear off, saying, "If she had punished me when I first stole as a boy, I would not be here now under sentence of death."

2 Withhold not thy son from the rod.

ARIKAR, Teachings. Col. 6, l. 81. (c. 550 B.C.) He that spareth his rod hateth his son. (Qui parcit virgae, odit filium suum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 24. (c. 350 B.C.) He loves his son who chides him with the rod. (Diligat hic natum, virga qui corripit illum.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 52. (c. A.D. 600)

Se [as] he sparad his wyrde [yard, rod], he hated his child.

AELFRIC, Homilies. Bk. ii, l. 324. (c. 1000) Salamon seide . . . Qui parcit virge, odit filium. The English of this latyn is . . . Who-so spareth the sprynge [rod] spilteþ his children.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, Text B, passus v, l. 38. (1377)

Salamon sayth, Qui parcit virge odit filium, "who sparith the yarde he hatyth the chyld."

JAMES YONGE, The Gouvernauce of Prynces, p. 161. (1422)

There is nothyng that more dyspleaseth God Than from their chyldren to spare the rod.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfyceunce, l. 1955. (1526)

The Chinese say, "Beat your child once a day; if you don't know why, the child does."

A boy is never the worse for a flogging.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh. Ch. 53. (1850)

Waiting to be whipped iz the most uninteresting period of boyhood life.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW). Proverbial Philosophy. (c. 1875)

3 Stripes and corrections are at all times wisdom.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxii, 6. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

He that loveth his son will continue stripes on him, that he may have joy of him at the last

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxx, 1.

Gold must be hammered, and the child must be beaten.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 4. (c. 1000)

Gold needs to be hammered; so does a youth.

MOSES GOLDMAN, Proverbs of the Sages. No. 276.

Children are never too tender to be whipped:—like tough beefsteaks, the more you beat them the more tender they become.

E. A. POE, Fifty Suggestions. (1850) In Graciam's Magazine, May-June.

4 Birchen twigs break no ribs.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 75. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 61. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6380. (1732)

5 Let alone makes mony lurdan [worthless].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 74. (c. 1595)

Let alone makes many a lown.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 233. (1721)

Want of correction makes many a bad boy.

6 He that will not use the rod on his child, his child shall be used as a rod on him.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1642)

7 As the Poet sayth, The rod doth not make less the mothers love.

STEPANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 58. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Love well, whip well.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1763.

The French say, "Qui aime bien, chétie bien."

If you love your child don't spare the rod. (Lien erh to yü pang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2146.

If you love your son, give him the cudgel; if you hate him, cram him with delicacies.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 279. (1872)

8 He that cockers his child, provides for his enemy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 790. (1640)

A man may have too much of his mother's blessing.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 161. (1639)

A child may have too much of his mother's blessing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 122. (1670)

"Mothers are oftentimes too tender and fond of their children," Ray comments, "who are ruined and spoiled by their cockering and indulgence."

A bleat cat makes a proud mouse.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 25. (1721)

"When parents and masters are too mild and easy," Kelly explains, "it makes their children and servants too saucy and impertinent."

Too much sugar in youth makes decayed teeth in age. (Viel Zucker in der Jugend macht ungesunde Zaehne im Alter.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 361. (1856) A German proverb.

I have a brother to whom my poor mother spared the rod, and who . . . has turned out but a spoilt child.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 3. (1855)

If you wish your children to be well, let them be always three-tenths hungry and cold.

ARTHUR A. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 325. 1872)

A spoilt child never loves its mother.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, Notes from Life, p. 123. (1885)

<sup>1</sup> He never spoils the child and spares the rod,
But spoils the rod, and never spares the child.

THOMAS HOOD, The Irish Schoolmaster. St. 12.
(c. 1840)

That sour tree of knowledge—now a birch.

THOMAS HOOD, The Irish Schoolmaster. St. 6.

<sup>2</sup> When children are in their swathe cloutes, then are they subiect to the whip.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 60. (1579)

<sup>3</sup> The man that's never been flogged has never been taught. (ὁ μὴ δαπαῖς ἀρρωστὸς οὐ παιδεύ-εται.)

MENANDER, Rapismene (The Girl Who Gets Flogged). Frag. 422. (c. 300 B.C.) "As the Greek poet said of old, 'A man who has not been flogged is not educated.'"—*London
Times*, 29 June, 1929, p. 13, col. 5.

Spare the Lash, and spoil the Scholar.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1709)

<sup>4</sup> Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying. (Erudi filium tuum, ne desperes: ad interfectionem autem eius ne ponas animum tuum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 18. (c. 350 B.C.)
Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child; but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him.
(Stultitia colligata est in corde pueri, et virga disciplinae fugabit eam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 15.

Withhold not correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die.
Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell. (Noli subtrahere a puero disciplinam: si enim percusseris eum virga, non moriatur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 13, 14.

The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame.
(Virga atque correptio tribuit sapientiam: puer autem, qui dimittitur voluntati suae, confundit matrem suam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxix, 15. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> A boy who suffers not at the hands of his teacher suffers at the hand of Time.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Apologue 16. (c. 1257)

<sup>6</sup> The bamboo stick produces obedient children.
(Kun pang t'ou shang ch'u 'hao tzu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
2133. (1875)

<sup>7</sup> It is better to bind your children to you by respect and gentleness, than by fear. (Pudore et liberalitate liberos | retinere satius esse credo quam metu.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 57. (160 B.C.)

Children ought to be led to honorable practices by encouragement and reasoning, and most certainly not by blows or ill-treatment, for these are fitting rather for slaves than for free-born.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Children. Sec. 12. (c. A.D. 98)

Knowing that as by sparing the rod he may seeme to hate his childe, so by wearing it too much, he may abate his courage, and make him dull and desperate.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 70. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A wilde coult the harder he is rained, the hotter he is.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 204. (1576)
The fairest Iennet is ruled as well with the wande as with the spur, the wildest child is as soone corrected with a word as with a weapon.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 150. (1579)
As ye Phisition by minglyng bitter poysons with sweete lyquor, bringeth health to the body, so the father with sharp rebukes, sesoned with louing lookes causeth a redresse and amendment in his childe.

LYL, Euphues and His Ephoebus, p. 150.

Those meats which are healthful for children should be sugared over, and those made bitter that are hurtful for them. (On doit ensucrer les viandes salubres à l'enfant, et enfieller celles qui lui sont nuisibles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i. ch. 25. (1580)

That which cannot be accomplished by reason, wisdom, and discretion, can never be accomplished by force. . . . I have never seen any effect in rods but to make children's minds more base, or more maliciously headstrong. (Que ce qui ne peult faire par la raison, et par prudence et adresse, ne se faict jamais par la force. . . .
Je n'ay veu aultre effect aux verges, sinon de rendre les ames plus lasches, ou plus malicieusement opinastres.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580)

Better a snotty child than his nose wiped off.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 829. (1640)

Why does the nurse tell the child of Rawhead and Bloudy-bones, to keep it in awe?

SELDEN, Table-Talk: Priests of Rome. (c. 1650)

Children have more need of models than of critics. (Les enfants ont plus besoin de modèles que de critiques.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 261. (1810) The French also say, "Les enfants sont ce qu'on les fait" (Children are what you make them).

<sup>8</sup> They spare the rod and spoil the child.

RALPH VENNING, Mysteries and Revelations,
p. 5. (1649)

Love is a Boy by Poets styl'd,
Then spare the Rod, and spoil the Child.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, i, 844. (1664)

Spare the Rod, and spoil the Child.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4238. (1732)

Spare the rod and spile the child, as the Good Book says.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 1. (1876)

At that time it was universally admitted that to spare the rod was to spoil the child, and St. Paul had placed disobedience to parents in very ugly company.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 5.
(1901)

He never spared the rod or spoiled the broth.

STANLEY WALKER, *The Uncanny Knocks of
Mr. Doherty*. (New Yorker, 12 July, 1941)

CHIMNEY

<sup>1</sup> It is easier to build two chimneys than to maintain one.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 892. (1640)
 'Tis easier to build two Chimneys than maintain one in Fuel.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757. The Scots say, "It's easier to big [build] lums [chimneys] than to keep them reeking."

<sup>2</sup> A house is much more to my taste than a tree,
 And for groves, O! a good grove of chimneys for me.

CHARLES MORRIS, The Contrast. (1840)

<sup>3</sup> There is not always good cheer where the chimney smokes.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 65. (1620) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4930. (1732)

A smoaking Chimney in a great House is a good Sign.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 415. (1732)

CHIN

<sup>4</sup> A clove chin eek hadde she.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 550 (c. 1365)

A round and dimpled Chin.

WARNER, Albions England, iv, 20. (1586)

The pointed chin is held to be a sign of acuteness and craft.

THOMAS HOLCROFT, tr., Lavater's Physiognomy, xi, 61. (1793)

His double chin, his portly size.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 2. (1832)

<sup>5</sup> You haven't done a — thing but lay around on the grass and eat peanuts and hear Bott chin.

JOHN HAY, The Bread-Winners, p. 161. (1883)

"Chinning" in hospital with some sick soldier.

WAIT WHITMAN, November Boughs, 80. (1888)

Why in hell don't you quit chinning?

C. E. MULFORD, The Orphan, p. 40. (1908)

I've been chinning up your sporting editor

H. S. HARRISON, Queed, p. 85. (1911)

Lots of folks dropping in to chin.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Main Street, p. 247. (1920)

<sup>6</sup> He must needs swym, that is holde up by the chin.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. See under SWIMMING.

They are holden up by the chinne to harden them.

LAURENCE TOMSON, Calvin's Sermons: Timothy, 222. (1579)

A languishing purpose to hold me up by the chin.

EARL STRAFFORD, Letter to Laud, 7 Aug., 1638.

<sup>7</sup> Take it on the chin.

HUGH PENTECOST, The Twenty-fourth Horse, p. 46. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> A chuck under the chin is worth two kisses.
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> You have to keep your chin up.

P.A.TAYLOR, The Six Iron Spiders, p. 226. (1942)

CHIP

<sup>10</sup> He that hewis ouer his heued, the chip falles in his ine.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicle, 91. (c. 1330) See under AMBITION

Me list nat to hewe chippes ouer myn hede.

JOHN LYDGATE, in Anglia, ix, ii, 112. (c. 1430)

<sup>11</sup> Hew to the line of right, let the chips fall where they may.

ROSCOE CONKLING, Speech, at Republican National Convention, Chicago, 5 June, 1880, nominating General U. S. Grant.

Let the chips fall where they might.

TIMOTHY FULLER, Reunion with Murder, p. 178. (1941)

Seek the truth out and find it and let the chips fall where they may.

CHANDLER, The High Window, p. 109. (1942)

Stick to the wine and let the chippies fall where they may.

RYERSON AND CLEMENTS, Glamour Preferred (1940)

<sup>12</sup> Jack has passed in his chips, as he would phrase it.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, The Third of March Century Magazine, Dec., 1888, p. 215/2

[He] quite recently "passed in his chips."

WELCH, Recollections, 1830-1840, p. 156. (1891)

He passed in his chips last night.

C. E. MULFORD, Bar-20, p. 130. (1907)

<sup>13</sup> There is what you call a chip over the bug.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Caught. (1909) In The Rose of Dixie, he has, "What's the chip over the bug?"

<sup>14</sup> Chip-of-the-old-flint. (πίπρας ἀπὸ κομμ' ἀτερ-ἀμνω.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl x, l. 7. (c. 270 B. C.)

Am I not a child of the same Adam, . . . a chip of the same block with him?

ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, i, 205. (1621)

He's a chip of the old block.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act i. (1633) A son like his father, usually in a favorable sense.

How well dost thou appear to be a chip of the old block?

JOHN MILTON, Apology for Smectymnuus. Sec 7. (1642)

A true chip of the old block.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Works (Grosart), i, 166.

(1644) COKE, Elements of Power and Subjection, p. 266. (1660)

I look upon you as a gem of the old rock.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. (1658)

Kit after kind. A chip of the old block.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1670)
 CAT AFTER KIND, see under CAT.

A shive [slice] of my own loaf.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 188. (1670)

A chip of the old block, is the vulgar nick-name of a father-like boy.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 30. (1709)
Not merely a chip of the old block, but the old block itself.

EDMUND BURKE, referring to William Pitt on the occasion of his first speech, 26 Feb., 1781.

See WRAXALL, Memoirs. Vol. ii, ch. 2, p. 78.

She's a chick of the old cock.

APHRA BEHN, Sir Patient Fancy, Act iv, sc. 4. (1678)

A chip of the old block. Patris est filius.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 265. (1693)

There was my father, . . . a true chip of the old Presbyterian block.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 15. (1824)

The crab is its mother's child—a chip of the old block.

ALBANY FONBLANQUE, England Under Seven Administrations, ii, 318. (1833)

I'm beginning to think you're a chip of the old block.

BERNARD SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act ii. (1893) O'HARA, Appointment in Samara, p. 194. (1934) WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 79. (1941)

His son has been called a block of the old chip.
H. C. BAILEY, Orphan Ann, p. 19. (1941)

Sort of block off the old chip.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Smoking Chimney, p. 74. (1943)

<sup>1</sup> The English say, like a chip in pottage.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 182. (1666)

Like a chip in a pottage pot, doth neither good nor harm.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 168. (1670)

A note under his hand! that is a chip in porridge; it is just nothing.

JOHN DRYDEN, Limberham. Act iv, sc. 1. (1678)

A sort of Chip in Pottage, which (he hopes) will not do Popery much good, nor the Church of England much harm.

UNKNOWN, Vox Cleri Pro Rege, p. 56. (1688)

You'll be like chips in porridge,—neither good nor hurt.

THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1872).

A person who does neither good nor harm is "like a chip in porridge": almost always said as a reproach.

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It in Ireland, p. 141. (1910)

<sup>2</sup> He takes not the chips for excellent things, but reckons of them as of chips.

WILLIAM WHEATLY, Prototypes. Bk. ii, ch. 25. (c. 1630)

All the honours . . . of this world are but chips.

THOMAS BROOKS, A Golden Key to Open Hidden Treasures. (1675)

We had in the ship . . . fresh mutton . . . but all was chip to me.

DUDLEY NORTH. (1725) NORTH, Lives, ii, 303.

They roast everything to a chip.

ARTHUR YOUNG, Travels in France, p. 23. (1792)

They were burned to a chip.

J. M. JEPHSON, Tour in Brittany. Ch. 14. (1859)

<sup>3</sup> A provocation to a fight . . . is placing a chip upon a man's shoulder and daring another to knock it off.

UNKNOWN, The Siege of Fort Atkinson. Harper's Magazine, xv, 640/2. (1857)

The way that dog went about with a chip on his shoulder.

KATE FIELD, Our Summer's Outing. Harper's Magazine, Oct., 1887, p. 658/1.

Napoleon was whipped because he carried a chip on his shoulder.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xx, 45. (1905)

A chip on each flannel-shirted shoulder.

C. E. MULFORD, Cottonwood Gulch, p. 178. (1925)

Why must you go around with a chip on your shoulder?

BUDD SCHULBERG, What Makes Sammy Run, p. 245. (1941)

The trouble with you is that you've got a chip on your shoulder.

M. S. MICHEL, Sweet Murder, p. 57. (1943)

CHIT-CHAT

<sup>4</sup> 'Tis the custom of foolish people . . . in their chit-chat to be always biting people's reputations behind their back.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 52. (1710)

The common Chit-Chat of the Town.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 197. (1710)

Such a bewildering Chit-chat.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, iii, 210. (1742)

The frivolous chit-chat of idle companions.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, i, 112. (1746)

Play-wrights, and officers of chit-chat.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 24. (1761)

One was sure to hear all the chit-chat and gossip of the day.

CHARLES LEVER, Jack Hinton. Ch. 11. (1843)
See also under GOSSIP.

An additional scrap of local chit-chat.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 23. (1844)

CHIVALRY

See also Knight

<sup>5</sup> The age of chivalry is gone; that of sophisters, economists, and calculators has succeeded.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790) Works, v, 149.

Cervantes smiled Spain's chivalry away.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto xiii, st. 11. (1823)

"The age of chivalry is past," said Miss Dacre "Bores have succeeded to dragons."

DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1831)

The world's male chivalry has perished out.

But women are knights-errant to the last.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vii, l. 224. (1856)

Some say that the age of chivalry is past, that the spirit of romance is dead. The age of chivalry is never past so long as there is a wrong left unredressed on earth.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Life. Vol. ii, ch. 28. (c. 1870)
Chivalry is an ingredient.

Sadly lacking in our land.
Sir, I am your most obedient,

Most obedient to command!

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i. (1877)
Wasn't it terrible there wasn't any more chivalry in the world?

FRANKLIN CHARLES, The Vice Czar Murders, p. 60. (1941)

1 He that was of chivalrye the flour.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankelcyns Tale, l. 360. (c. 1388)

The flour of that Chyualry of Fraunce set forward.

ROBERT FABYAN, Cronycles of Englande and of Fraunce, vii, 234. (1494)

Fayre braunch of noblesse, flowre of chevalrie.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto viii, st. 26. (1590)

His host, the flower of Grecian chivalry.

JOHN DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, i, 120. (1700)
All the flower of chivalry was in his train.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, tr., Coplas de Manrique. St. 39. (1832)

2 Chivalry is only a name for that general spirit or state of mind which disposes men to heroic and generous actions.

KENELM H. DIGBY, The Broad Stone of Honour, p. 89. (1822)

The whole of . . . chivalry is in courtesy.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: History. (1841)

CHOICE

See also Dilemma

3 The obvious choice is usually the quick regret.
MAX BRAND, Dr. Kildare's Search, p. 35. (1943)

4 Thilke man that asketh conseil of a purpos, yet hath he free chois, wheither he wole werke by that conseil or noon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 15. (c. 1387) "Liberum arbitrium" is the proverbial Latin phrase for free choice.

His chois mighte nat be amended.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 362.

5 In alle thise thinges thou shalt chese the beste, and weyve alle othere thinges.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 24. (c. 1387)

Choose what is best; custom will make it agreeable and easy. (Optimum elige; suave et facile illud faciet consuetudo.)

FRANCIS BACON, Latinizing a maxim of Pythagoras. (c. 1597)

6 Choose for yourself and use for yourself.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 230. (1639)

I say, do not choose.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Spiritual Laws. (1841)

I do not choose to run for President in 1928.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Statement to Press, (1927)
"I do not choose" means in the Yankee language "I am determined not to."

C. W. THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 345. (1929) There was a great deal of controversy as to what Coolidge really did mean, but he never explained it.

7 Sparta has fallen to your lot, do it credit.
(Σπάρταν ἔλαχες, ταύταν κόσμει.)

EURIPIDES, Telephus. Frag. (c. 420 B.C.)
Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, iv, 6, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 1, with the Latin, "Spartam nactus es, hanc orna," and three pages of comment. The phrase became proverbial for what in English is "Hobson's choice," that is, no choice at all. Winstedt (Loeb) translates it with that phrase.

I had Hobson's choice, either be a Hobson or nothing.

LORD JOHN SOMERS, A Collection of Scarce and Valuable Tracts, vii, 87. (1649)

A man is said to have Hobson's choice when he must either take what is left him, or choose whether he will have any part or no. This Hobson was a noted carrier in Cambridge in King James's time, who, partly by carrying, partly by grazing, raised himself to a great estate, and did much good in the town. The Italians say, "Bere o affogare."

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1670)

If in this case there be no other (as the Proverb is) than Hobson's choice . . . which is, chuse whether you will have this or none.

SAMUEL FISHER, The Rustick's Alarm to the Rabbies. (1660)

The Masters were left to Hobson's choice, to choose Bennet and nobody else.

ANTONY WOOD, Athenae Oxonienses, ii, 331. (1691)

Where to elect there is but one,

'Tis Hobson's choice. Take that or none.

THOMAS WARD, England's Reformation. (c. 1700)
Tobias Hobson . . . was the first in this island to let out hackney horses. . . . When a man came for a horse, he was led into the stable, where there was great choice, but he was obliged to take the horse which stood next to the stable-door; . . . from whence it became a proverb when what ought to be your election was forced upon you, to say, "Hobson's choice."

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 509 (1712)
The Oxford English Dictionary also refers to Hobson as Tobias, but The Dictionary of National Biography states that his first name was really Thomas, that he was born about 1544 and died at Cambridge in 1631. He made several gifts to the town and was commemorated by Milton in two epitaphs. A phrase with a similar meaning, "Robin Hood's Choice," either this or nothing, is cited in Vox Græculi. (1623) See COLLIER, Bibliogr. Cat., ii, 481.

Can any woman think herself happy, that's obliged to marry only with Hobson's choice?

COLLEY CIBBER, The Non-Juror. Act i. (1718)

The said Hobson's choice was no choice.

ROGER NORTH, Francis North, i, 163. (c. 1730)
It's a case of Hobson's choice.

JULES ROMAINS, Verdun, p. 47. (1940)

They kindly give you a Hobson's choice.

BAYARD KENDRICK, Odor of Violets, p.90.(1941)

SIX OF ONE AND HALF A DOZEN OF THE OTHER, see under SIX.

1
When the admirals [of the Greek fleet, after the battle of Salamis in 480 B. C.] came and gave their divers votes at the altar of Poseidon, to judge who was first and who second among them, each of them voted for himself, but the greater part of them united in giving the second place to Themistocles. So they each gained but one vote, but Themistocles far outstripped them in votes for the second place.

HERODOTUS, History. Bk.viii.ch.123.(c.445 B. C.)
A second-best voyage. (δεύτερος πλοῖς.)

PHILO, De Abrahamo. Sc. 123. (c. A. D. 40)
Philo is quoting a proverbial phrase, made familiar to him perhaps by Plato, and repeated in De Decalogo, 84.

2
Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her. (Μαριάμ γάρ τὴν ἀγαθὴν μερίδα ἐξελέξατο ἥτις οὐκ ἀφαιρεθήσεται αὐτῇς.)

New Testament: Luke, x, 42. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Maria optimam partem elegit, quae non auferetur ab ea."

The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Sons of Martha. (c. 1900)

3
Where there is no choice, we do well to make no difficulty.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Sir Gibbie. Ch. 11. (1879)

4
Many be called, but few chosen. (πολλοὶ γὰρ εἰσι κλητοὶ ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί.)

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 16; xxii, 14. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Multi enim sunt vocati, pauci vero electi."

Many are chilled, but few are frozen.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 489. (1940)

5
Unless Virtue guide us, our Choice must be wrong.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 256. (1693)

6
Or fight or fly,
This choice is left you to resist or die.

POPE, tr., Homer's Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 79. (1726)

7
It is not, said Panurge, the worst of the basket. (Ce n'est, dist Panurge, pas le pis du panier.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 51. (1552)
Hence, "The pick of the basket."

They can . . . pickle and choose out the best.

HEINRICH BULLINGER, tr., Fiftie Godlie Sermons, 190. (1577)

What made thee pick and chuse her out?

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Bk. iii, canto i, l. 1195. (1678)

Contingence is blind, and does not pick and chuse.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Freedom of Will. Pt. ii, sec. 3. (1754)

8
Where bad's the best, naught must be the choice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678)

Where bad's the best, bad must be the Choice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5633. (1732)

There's but bad Choice where the whole Stock is bad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4889. (1732)

Pick and choose and take the worst.

H. FRIEND, Flowers and Flower Lore, p. 228. (1884) CHOICE OF EVILS, see under EVIL.

9
There's small choice in rotten apples.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 138. (1594)

No Choice among stinking Fish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3554. (1732)

10
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 175. (1611)

I can't see that there's a pin to choose between me and the man who murders in sudden anger.

EDNA LYALL, Knight Errant. Ch. 21. (1887)

11
You pays your money and you takes your choice.

UNKNOWN, Punch. Vol. x, p. 16. (1846)

Whichever you please, my little dears:

You pays your money and you takes your choice.

You pays your moneys and what you sees is

A cow or a donkey, just as you pleases.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 205. (1904)

You pay your money and you take your choice.

LESLIE FORD, Farewell Party. Ch. 6. (1938)

GARDNER, Case of the Empty Tin, p. 70.

(1941) BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p.

239. (1942) FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room

28, p. 124. (1942) GARDNER, The Case of the Buried Clock, p. 133. (1943) BAILEY, Mr.

Fortune Finds a Pig, p. 10. (1943) etc.. etc.

CHRIST

12
He did not die with Christian ease,

Asking pardon of his enemies.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Everlasting Gospel. (c. 1810)

He is what we should call an artist and a bohemian in His manner of life.

BERNARD SHAW: Androcles and the Lion: Preface. (1912)

13
Jesus! with all thy faults I love thee still.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Further Extracts from the Note-Books, p. 117. (a. 1902)

14
Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels. (τὸν δὲ βραχύ τι παρ' ἀγγέλους ἡλάττωμένον Ἰησοῦν.)

New Testament: Hebrews, ii, 9. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Eum autem, qui modico quam Angeli minoratus est."

Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever. (Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ἐχθὲς καὶ σήμερον ὁ αὐτός, καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 8. The Vulgate is, "Iesus Christus heri, et hodie: ipse in saecula."

Stand up, stand up for Jesus.

Ye soldiers of the cross;

Lift high His royal banner,

It must not suffer loss.

GEORGE DUFFIELD, Stand Up for Jesus. (1858)

<sup>1</sup> Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man! (Ἰδοὺ ὁ ἄνθρωπος.)

New Testament: John, xix, 5. (c. A. D. 100)

The Vulgate is "Ecce homo."

<sup>2</sup> When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean. (Πελάτος δὲ ἀκούσας ἐπηρώτησεν εἰ ὁ ἄνθρωπος Γαλιλαῖός ἐστιν.)

New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 6. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Pilatus autem audiens Galilaeam, interrogavit si homo Galilaeus esset."

Thou hast conquered, O Galilean! (Vicisti, Galilaea!)

EMPEROR JULIAN THE APOSTATE. Said (but without authenticity) to be his dying words as he tried to draw out the arrow which had mortally wounded him during a battle against the Persians. See THEODORET, Historia Eccles., iii, 20. GIBBON, Roman Empire, ch. 23, affirms that Julian remained a Platonist to the last.

You have conquered, O Nazaraean! or, as some will have it, Content thyself, O Nazaraean! (Tu as vaincu, Nazareen, à peine eust il d'autres, Contenté toy, Nazareen.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 19. (1580)

Quoting Julian the Apostate.

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown grey from thy breath.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hymn to Prosperine, l. 35. (1878)

<sup>3</sup> The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. (αἱ ἀλώπεκες φωλεοὺς ἔχουσιν καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατασκηνώουσιν, ὁ δὲ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἔχει ποῦ τὴν κεφαλὴν κλῆν.)

New Testament: Matthew, viii, 20. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Vulpes foveas habent. et volucres caeli nidos: filius autem hominis non habet ubi caput reclinet."

<sup>4</sup> These Christs that die upon the barricades, God knows that I am with them, in some things.

OSCAR WILDE, Sonnet to Liberty. (1893)

CHRISTIANITY

See also Cross, Religion

<sup>5</sup> I have sent for you that you may see how a Christian can die.

JOSEPH ADDISON, shortly before his death, 17 July, 1719, to his step-son, Lord Warwick. Come and see how a marshal of France can die. (Venez voir comment meurt un maréchal de France.)

MARSHAL NEY, at the close of the battle of Waterloo. (1815)

<sup>6</sup> The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. (κληματίζσαι τε πρῶτως ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ τοὺς μαθητὰς Χριστιανούς.)

New Testament: Acts, xi, 26. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Cognominarentur primum Antiochae discipuli, Christiani."

Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. (ὁ δὲ Ἀγρίππας πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον ἐν ὀλίγῳ με πείθει Χριστιανὸν ποιεῖσαι.)

New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 28. The Vulgate is, "Agrippa autem ad Paulum: In modico suades me Christianum fieri."

<sup>7</sup> Christianity . . . has never worked on more than one cylinder.

MICHAEL ARLEN, The Flying Dutchman, p. 272. (1939)

<sup>8</sup> The egg's no chick by falling from the hen, Nor man a Christian till he's born again.

JOHN BUNYAN, Book for Boys and Girls. (1686)

<sup>9</sup> The man of God is better by having his bows and arrows about him.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

It is a school of which Mr. Kingsley is the ablest doctor; and its doctrine has been described . . . as "muscular Christianity."

UNKNOWN, Edinburgh Review, Jan., 1858. Vol. cvii, p. 190. "Muscular Christianity" had been applied from about 1857 to the ideal of religious character exhibited in the writings of Rev. Charles Kingsley.

Nigel . . . was also a sportsman. His Christianity was muscular.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 14. (1880)

<sup>10</sup> You are Christians of the best edition. (Vous estez Chrétiens triez sus le volet.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 50. (1548)

"Triés sur le volet" is an idiomatic expression meaning choice, exclusive. The translation is that of Motteux.

I am an old Christian, and that is enough for me to be an earl. (Yo cristiano viejo soy, y para ser conde esto me basta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 21, 28, 47.

(1605) An old Christian was a Spaniard whose genealogy was free from any admixture or taint of Moorish blood.

<sup>1</sup> Bend thy neck, meek Sicambrian: adore what thou hast burned, burn what thou hast adored.

ST. REMI, at the baptism of Clovis I, A. D. 496.

See GREGORY OF TOURS, Ecclesiastical History of the Franks, ii, ch. 31. By a curious change of meaning, "meek" has become "proud," in the French proverb, "Fléchis le cou, fier Sicambre!"

<sup>2</sup> Christianitie doeth not consist in lowde and shrill crying, Lord, Lord.

BISHOP EDWIN SANDYS, Sermons. Vol. vi, p. 22. (1585)

A compleat Christian must have the works of a Papist, the words of a Puritan, and the Faith of a Protestant.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 25 Aug., 1635.

To be like Christ is to be a Christian.

WILLIAM PENN. Said to have been his last words. (1718)

A Christian is the highest style of man.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night-Thoughts. Nt. iv, l. 788. (1742)

A Christian is God Almighty's gentleman.

A. W. AND J. C. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

See also under GENTLEMAN.

The religion of Jesus is a threat; that of Mohammed is a promise.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings. (c. 1818) See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.

Mohammed's truth lay in a holy Book, Christ's in a sacred life.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Mohammedanism. (1844)

Christian. One who follows the teachings of Christ in so far as they are not inconsistent with a life of sin.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Christianity was the religion of slaves.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday. p. 52. (1939)

<sup>3</sup> It is spoke as a Christian ought to speak.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 1, 103. (1601)

Christ bless thee, brother, for that Christian speech!

SOUTHEY, Roderick. Sec. 5, l. 45. (1814)

<sup>4</sup> Christians are made, not born. (Fiunt, non nascuntur Christiani.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 18, sec. 4. (A. D. 197)

<sup>5</sup> "Look," they say, "how these Christians love one another" (for themselves hate one another); "and how they are ready to die for each other" (for themselves will be readier to kill each other). (Vide, inquit, ut invicem se diligant; ipsi enim invicem oderunt: et ut pro alterutro mori sint parati; ipsi enim ad occidendum alterutrum paratiores erunt.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 39, sec. 7. (A. D. 197)

<sup>6</sup> The Christians to the lion! (Christianos ad leonem!)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 40, sec. 2. (A. D. 197) Tertullian is saying that the mob pretends that the Christians are responsible for every disaster to the state or misfortune of the people. "If the Tiber reaches the walls, if the Nile does not rise to the fields, if the sky doesn't move [if there is no rain] or the earth does, if there is famine, if there is plague, the cry is at once, 'The Christians to the lion!'"

Rain is lacking, the Christians are the cause. (Pluvia deficit, causa Christiani sunt.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei, ii, 3. (415)

Quoted as a proverb.

The Christians made Aurelius's army to prosper . . . ; yet Christianos ad leones.—Throw the Christians to the lions.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons. Vol i, p. 466. (1629)

<sup>7</sup> Scratch the Christian and you find the pagan—spoiled.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Children of the Ghetto. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1892)

CHRISTMAS

See also YULE

<sup>8</sup> So long is Christmas cryed that at length it comes.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Noel. (1611)

They talk of Christmas so long, that it comes

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 839.

(1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 26. (1670) The French say, "Tant crie l'on Noël qu'il vient"

<sup>9</sup> On Christmas day in the morning.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Sketch Book: The Sunny Bank. (1820) Quoting an old Worcestershire song.

<sup>10</sup> I heard the bells on Christmas Day

Their old, familiar carols play,

And wild and sweet

The words repeat

Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Christmas Bells. (1864)

<sup>11</sup> A hot Christmas makes a fat church-yard.

JOHN SWAN, Speculum Mundi, p. 161. (1635)

A green Christmas is neither handsome nor healthful.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Time-Serving. (1642)

A black Christmas makes a fat churchyard.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 62. (1846) See also under WINTER.

A dark Christmas sends a fine harvest.

DYER, English Folk-Lore, p. 54. (1878) For other weather proverbs connected with Christmas, see INWARDS, Weather Lore.

<sup>12</sup> Coming! ay, so is Christmas.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Coming! ay zo be Christmas.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Maid of Bath. Act i. (1771)
Miss always reported that she saw the offer coming, but Mama observed that "Christmas was coming too."

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 62. (1854)
The wind's a-comin', an' so's Christmas.

FRANK R. STOCKTON, Christmas Wreck. (1886)

1
At Christmas play and make good cheere,
For Christmas comes but once a yeere.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 12. (1573) CAMDEN,
Remains, p. 320. (1605) WITHER, Christmas Carol. (1662) O'HARA, Appointment in Sa-mara, p. 37. (1934)

Bounce buckram, velvet's dear;
Christmas comes but once a year,
And when it comes it brings good cheer,
But when it's gone it's never the near.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 211. (1670)
HALLIWELL, DENHAM and others repeat this jingle with minor variations. There is an Irish version:

Christmas comes but wanst a year,
And when it comes it brings good cheer,
And when it goes it laves us here,
And what'll we do for the rest o' the year?
The Italians say, "Natale non viene che una volta l'anno."

New Year comes but once a twelvemonth.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital. (1898) Quoting a Scottish proverb. There is another, "St.
Andrew's day will not come for another year."

2
They keep Christmas all the year.

EDWARD WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 25. (1672)

CHURCH

3
Commonly, wheresoever God buildeth a church, the devil will build a chapel hard by.

THOMAS BECON, A New Catechism, p. 361. (1560)
Where Christ erecteth his church, the devil in the same churchyard will have his chapel.

RICHARD BANCROFT, Sermon Against Puritans,
Preached at Paules Crosse, 9 Feb., 1588.
Where God hath a church, the deuill hath a chappell.

THOMAS DEKKER, Works (Grosart), iv, 220.
(1609)

Blind zeale . . . is religions ape. . . . For where God hath a temple, the diuel will have a cheppel.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy,
iii, iv, 1. 1. (1621)

God never had a church but there, men say,
The Devil a chapel hath rais'd by some wiles
I doubted of this saw, till on a day
I westward spied great Edinburgh's Saint Giles.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, A Proverb. (c. 1639)

For where God built a church there the Devil would also build a chapel. . . . Thus is the Devil ever God's ape.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk: Of God's Works.
No. 67. (c. 1540)

No sooner is a Temple built to God, but the Devil builds a Chapel hard by.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 676. (1640)
Where God hath his Church, the Devil will have his chappell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1670) A proverb in many languages. The Italians say,
"Non si tosto si fá un templo à Dio come il diavolo si fabbrica una capella appresso";
the Germans, "Wo der liebe Gott eine Kirche baut, da baut der Teufel eine Kapelle."

Wherever God erects a house of prayer,
The Devil always builds a chapel there:
And 'twill be found upon examination,
The latter has the largest congregation.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman, 1.
1. (1701)

God never had a House of Pray'r,
But Satan had a chapel there.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 327. (1748)
Quoting "an old proverb."

Dear Mother, dear Mother, the church is cold,
But the ale-house is healthy and pleasant and warm.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Little Vagabond. (1794)
Nowhere does the devil build his little chapels more cunningly than close under the shadow of the great temple of Christian liberty.

G. H. KNIGHT, Master's Questions, p. 90. (1903)
The prison is shut day and night, yet it is always full; the temple is always open, and always empty.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

4
Tharfor men seye, an weyl ys trowed,
"The nere the cherchen the fyrther fro God."
ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, *Handlyng
Synne*, l. 9242. (c. 1303)

The nerer the chyrche the fer fro Crist.

FÖRSTER, ed., Doct. MSS., 52, 15. (c. 1350)
Berkeley MSS, iii, 32 (1639) have, "Neerest to the well furthest from the water. Like nearest to the church furthest from God."

The nere to the churche, the ferther from God.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i. ch. 9. (1546)
The French say "Près de l'église, loin de Dieu," or "Près du monastère, à messe le dernier" (Near the monastery, last at Mass);
the Germans, "Je näher der Kirche, je weiter von Gott"; the Italians, "Piu presso la chiesa, piu lontano da Dio."

To Kerke the narre, from God more farre,
Has bene an old-sayd sawe.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender,
July, l. 97. (1579)

Neirest the kirk, farrest fra God.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)
Come, set forward to the church.—And verily the proverb,—The nearer the church the further from God.

CYRIL TOURNEUR, The Atheist's Tragedie. Act
i, sc. 4. (1611)

The nearer the Church the further from God.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 47. (1620) ANDREWS, Sermon on the Nativity. (1622)

It is common for those who are farthest from God, to boast themselves most of their being near to the Church.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Jeremiah viii. (1710)

The nearer the church—the proverb is somewhat musty.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 19. (1824)

The saying The nearer the church, the farther from God is old and widely known: the English tradition, which is often scanty, dates from 1300 and the proverb is also found in German, Dutch, Swedish (Finland), French, Italian, and no doubt other languages. In the more easterly portions of Europe . . . a similar proverb declares The nearer to church, the later in (Jo naermere kirken, jo senere dertil). Another related form is The nearer Rome, the worse Christian (Quo Romae propiores, tanto christiani tepidiores), which is first found in the early years of the sixteenth century in Germany, and although it breathes the hostile spirit of the German Reformation, a still more violent and personal expression of the same mood is found a generation earlier: "The nearer the Pope, the worse Christian."

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 21. (1931)

<sup>1</sup> The church-tower is a finger which shows us heaven. (Der Kirchthurm ist ein Finger der gen Himmel zeigt.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 331. (1856) A German proverb.

<sup>2</sup> We are ready to proclaim in Italy this principle. A free church in a free state. (Libera chiesa in libero stato.)

CAMILLE CAVOUR, Speech, in the Italian Parliament, 27 March, 1861. They were also his last words to the priest in attendance upon him when he died. The same phrase in French was used by the Count de Montalambert at a Catholic Congress at Malines, 20 Aug., 1863, and he is sometimes credited with originating it.

<sup>3</sup> What is a church?—Our honest sexton tells. " 'Tis a tall building, with a tower and bells."

GEORGE CRABBE, Borough. Let. ii, l. 11. (1810)

A Church is God between four walls. (Une église, c'est Dieu entre quatre murs.)

VICTOR HUGO, Ninety-Three. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch. 2. (1874)

<sup>4</sup> Contrary to the proverb, church work went on the most speedily.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. i, ch. 13. (1639)

This siege was churchwork, and therefore went on slowly.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1639)

Church work is a cripple in going up [building], but rides post in coming down! [destroying a church]

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. i, sec. 5. (1655)

The fifty new churches will very much amend the prospect; but church-work is slow.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 383. (1712)

Church-work goes on slowly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1106. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> The church has a strong stomach. (Die Kirche hat einen guten Magen.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 9. (1806)

<sup>6</sup> There are more houses than Parishes Churches.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 37. (1579)

There are more parsons than parish churches.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases, 25. (1894)

<sup>7</sup> Though you see a Church-man ill, yet continue in the Church still.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 700. (1640)

<sup>8</sup> Nothing lasts but the Church.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 663. (1640)

<sup>9</sup> What the Cheque [Exchequer] takes not, the Church takes.

JAMES HOWELL, Parley of Beasts, 18. (1660)

What the church takes not, the exchequer carries away.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 555. (1855) A Spanish proverb.

The kirk is aye greedy.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 314. (1721)

The church, the state, and the poor, are the 3 daughters which we should maintain, but not portion off.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743

<sup>10</sup> Set up thy fine monumental buildings to God, for this will make to live the name of him that builds them.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xv. (c. 2500 B. C.) Budge, tr.

<sup>11</sup> There was I, waiting at the church.

FRED W. LEIGH, Waiting at the Church. (1906)

<sup>12</sup> The Church is an anvil which has worn out many hammers.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Acts of the Apostles, i, 136. (1908)

<sup>13</sup> A beggarly people, a church and no steeple.

EDMUND MALONE, referring to St. Ann's church, Dublin. (c. 1800) See PRIOR, Life of Swift, p. 381.

New church, old steeple, Poor town, and proud people.

HARLAND AND WILKINSON, Lancashire Legends, p. 202. (1873) Referring to the village of Bowness.

<sup>14</sup> It is better to be of no Church, than to be bitter for any.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 535. (1693)

To be of no church is dangerous.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton. (1778)

<sup>1</sup> Pater-noster built churches, and Our Father pulls them down.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678) "I do not look upon the building of churches as an argument of the goodness of the Roman religion," say Ray. "It is easier to part with one's goods than one's sins."

<sup>2</sup> The church is not so large but the priest may say service in it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1678)

The kirk is mickle, but you may say mass in one end of it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 314. (1721) "Spoken," says Kelly, "when people say something is too much, intimating that they need take no more than they have use for."

If the kirk is ower muckle we can sing mass in the quire.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Let. 13. (1824) Helping himself to wine in the goblet out of which he had been drinking beer.

<sup>3</sup> Let the church have leave to stand in the churchyard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1678) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3192. (1732)

Let the kirk stand in the kirkyard. Everything in its place.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 131. (1832)

<sup>4</sup> Her ladyship was at a church with a chimney in it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>5</sup> Disputations do not so much appease the schisms of the church, as stir them up, and cause heresies. (Les disputes n'endormir pas tant les schismes de l'Eglise, que les esveiller, et animer les heresies.)

EMPEROR THEODOSIUS. (C. A. D. 380) As quoted by MONTAIGNE, i. 56. The Latin proverbial phrase is "Odium theologicum" (Theological rancor).

Than shulde pees be in the chirche withouten strif of doggis in a poke.

JOHN WYCLIF, Works (Arnold). ii. 358. (c. 1380)

The itch of disputation will prove the scab of the church. (Disputandi pruritus ecclesiarum scabies.)

SIR HENRY WOTTON, Panegyrick to King Charles. (a. 1639) See Reliquiae Wottoniana, i. 135. Sometimes written, "Disputandi prurigo est ecclesiae scabies."

The itch of disputing is the scab of the Church. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1135. (1640) He directed the stone over his grave to be thus inscribed:

Hic jacet hujus Sententiae primus Author:

Disputandi pruritus, ecclesiarum scabies.

Nomen alias quare.

Here lies the author of this sentence: "The itch of disputation will prove the scab of the Church." Inquire his name elsewhere.

ISAAC WALTON, Life of Sir Henry Wotton. (1651)

It is not good to move any stirrs in a quiet church.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium, p. 643. (1660)

The itch of disputation will break out Into a scab of error.

ROWLAND WATKYNs, Flamma Sine Fumo: The New Illiterate Late Teachers. (1662)

Many a long dispute among Divines may be thus abridg'd, It is so: it is not so: It is so: It is not so.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

<sup>6</sup> If it were not for death and funerals, I think the institution of the church would not stand longer.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 16 Nov., 1861.

Your church is a baby-house made of blocks.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

<sup>7</sup> The farther from stone, the better the church.

WALTER WHITE, Eastern England, i. 4. (1865) Referred to as "the old proverb."

The poorer the church, the purer the church.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 396. (1869)

CHURCHYARD

<sup>8</sup> Here's an acre sown indeed, With the richest, royal'st seed.

FRANCIS BEAUMONT, On the Tombs in Westminster Abbey. (c. 1610)

There is an acre sown with royal seed.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying. Ch. 1. (1650)

I like that ancient Saxon phrase, which calls

The Burial-ground God's-Acre.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, God's-Acre. (1841)

<sup>9</sup> Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,

The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 4. (1750)

I went over to the store where the rude four-flushers of the hamlet lied.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Ethics of Pig. (1908)

<sup>10</sup> No Church-yard is so handsome, that a man would desire straight to be buried there.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 967. (1640)

No churchyard is so handsome anywhere As will straight move one to be buried there.

ROWLAND WATKYNs, Flamma Sine Fumo. (1662)

<sup>11</sup> A piece of a Church-yard fits every body.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1025. (1640)

<sup>12</sup> A poor weak, palsy-stricken, churchyard thing.

JOHN KEATS, Eve of St. Agnes. St. 18. (1820)

<sup>13</sup> The churchyard's peace. (Ruhe eines Kirchhofs.)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iii, sc. 10. l. 220. (1787)

<sup>14</sup> The country home I need is a cemetery.

MARK TWAIN, Remark. (c. 1900) See PAINE, Mark Twain.

CHURL

<sup>1</sup> Of churles, bothe man and wyff, can departe noo goode fruyte.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Blanchardyn and Eglantine, 173. (c. 1489) And Caxton adds, "Men sayen that of a kerle may nought come but poyson and fylth, that maketh the place to stynke where he haunted inne."

<sup>2</sup> A churles feast is better than none at all.

GREENE AND LODGE, A Looking Glasse for London, l. 1191. (1594) Referred to as a proverb.

<sup>3</sup> For hit was said of folkes yeres agoon

A chorles chorle [churl's churl] is ofte woo begoon.

JOHN LYDGATE, Churl and Bird. St. 40. (c. 1430)

<sup>4</sup> Hit is an old sawe gyue a chorle rule and there by he wylle not be suffysed.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur. Bk. x, ch. 61. (1485) SET A BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK, see under BEGGAR.

This proverb in Esau may he understand:

Claw a churl by the tail and he will file your hand.

UNKNOWN, Jacob and Esau. Act ii, sc. 3. (1568)

<sup>5</sup> One low churl, compact of thankless earth,

The fatal byword of all years to come.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Godiva, l. 66.

CIGAR

<sup>6</sup> What smells so? Has somebody been burning a rag, or is there a dead mule in the backyard? No, the man is smoking a five-cent cigar.

EUGENE FIELD, The Tribune Primer. (1882)

A bunch of spinach, carfare grade.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Complete Life of John Hopkins. (1908) Carfare, five cents.

What this country really needs is a good five cent cigar.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Remark, while presiding over the U.S. Senate, as Vice-President, during a debate on the needs of the country. (1917)

What this country needs is a good five-cent earthquake.

ODETS, Awake and Sing. Act ii, sc. 1. (1935)

What this country needs is a good five-cent saga.

DAVID McCORD, Of Time and the Reader. (1941)

What this country needs is a good five-cent nickel.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, as quoted in Liberty, 2 Jan., 1943, p. 61.

<sup>7</sup> A good cigar is as great a comfort to a man as a good cry to a woman.

LORD LYTTON, Darnley. Act ii. (1845)

The sweet post-prandial cigar.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, De Berny. (a. 1874)

<sup>8</sup> Woman in this scale, the weed in that, Jupiter, hang out thy balance, and weigh them both.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do With It, Bk. I, ch. 6. (1858)

A woman is only a woman, but a good Cigar is a Smoke.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Betrothed. (1886)

<sup>9</sup> I do not believe that there was ever an Aunt Tabithy who could abide cigars.

DONALD G. MITCHELL (IK MARVEL), Reveries of a Bachelor. Ch. 3. (1850)

The light ones may be killers,

And the dark ones may be mild;

Not the wrappers, but the fillers,

Make cigars or woman wild.

KEITH PRESTON, Popular Fallacies. (1924)

<sup>10</sup> It was my last cigar, it was my last cigar;

I breath'd a sigh to think, in sooth,

It was my last cigar.

UNKNOWN, My Last Cigar. (c. 1860) A popular college song for many years. A parody, My First Cigar, was written in 1867 by W. C. Rommel, then a student at Princeton University.

CIGARETTE

<sup>11</sup> Cigarette smoking is like drinking beer out of a thimble.

ELIZABETH AMY DILLWYN, who died at Swansea, Wales, aged 90, in 1935.

<sup>12</sup> Have you a coffin nail on you.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Higher Abdication. (1907) The Anti-Cigarette League had announced that every cigarette smoked was a nail in one's coffin.

He was a cigaretteur.

O. HENRY, The Fool-Killer. (1908)

<sup>13</sup> A cigarette is the perfect type of a perfect pleasure. It is exquisite and it leaves one unsatisfied. What more can one want?

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray Ch. 6. (1891)

CIPHER

<sup>14</sup> It was said . . . that all Cambridge scholars call the cipher aught and all Oxford scholars call it nought.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Frank. Pt. iii, p. 143. (1801)

<sup>15</sup> Than sattu summe, as siphre doth in awgrym. That noteth a place, and no-thing avaieth.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeles, iv 53. (1399) Awgrym: arithmetic.

Although a sipher in augrim have no might in signification of it selve, yet he yeveth power in signification to other.

USK, The Testament of Love, ii, 286. (c. 1400)

Our presidentes . . . doo serue but as Cyphers in Algorisme, to fill the place.

JAMES HARRISON, An Exhortation to the Scots. p. 229. (1547)

You are . . . like cyphers, which supply a place. but signifie nothing.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, p. 310. (c. 1590)

Mine were the very cipher of a function.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 39. (1604)

Like a cipher,
Yet standing in rich place, I multiply.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, i, 2, 6. (1610)
Only like a great Cypher set to no purpose before a long row of other significant Figures.

JOHN MILTON, The Readie and Easie Way to Establish a Free Commonwealth, p. 429. (1659)

Significant Figures, as distinguished from the cipher, which is of itself quite insignificant.

CHARLES HUTTON, A Course of Mathematics, i, 4. (1827)

1
If one be hard in conceiuing they pronounce him a dowlte, . . . if without speech, a Cipher.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 46. (1579)
He is a cipher among numbers.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 29. (1633)

Being little more than a cypher in the house.

THACKERAY, Henry Esmond. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1852)

2
The O [cipher] of Philoxenus. (τὸ Φιλοξένου οὐ.)

PHILOXENUS, Letter to Dionysius. (c. 400 B.C.)

The story is that Philoxenus refused to praise Dionysius' tragedies, and Dionysius punished him by committing him to a stone-quarry outside of Syracuse, from which Philoxenus escaped. Thereupon Dionysius urged him to return, promising that he would find him a generous host, but in reply Philoxenus merely sent a letter containing nothing but a row of ciphers, meaning "You are nothing to me. Go weep, go wail, go hang!" (οἶμωζε, δόλυσζε, γόγγυζε). Hence "The O of Philoxenus" became proverbial for any emphatic refusal. See SCHOLIAST on Aristides, xlii, 309D. EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, iii, 373.

The elder Dionysius was not content with being the greatest tyrant of his age, but because he could not sing verses better than the poet Philoxenus or get the better of Plato in dialectic, enraged and embittered, he cast Philoxenus into the stone-quarries, and sending Plato to Aegina, sold him into slavery.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Tranquillity. Sec. 471E. (C. A. D. 95)

THE O OF GIOTTO, see under CIRCLE.

CIRCE

3
Wee have been in the very jawes of Scilla, and drunke of Circe's cup.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 245. (1574) Pettie, tr. Circe was an enchantress whose cup transformed those who drank from it into swine. See HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x.

I think you all have drunk of Circe's cup.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 270. (1592)

I did not even mistrust the cup of Circe.

WRYTE-MELVILLE, Inside the Bar. Ch. 1. (1861)

CIRCLE

4
Do not disturb my circles. (Noli disturbare circulos meos.)

ARCHIMEDES, to the Roman soldier who, during the siege of Syracuse, 212 B.C., burst into his study to find him figuring some circles. The soldier was unable to obtain any satisfactory reply to his questions, and in disgust put the absorbed mathematician to death. See VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia, bk. viii, ch. 7.

5
I'll draw circles around dad.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

6
We all of us live too much in a circle.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (1845)

7
Our life is an apprenticeship to the truth that around every circle another can be drawn.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles (1841)

St. Augustine described the nature of God as a circle whose centre was everywhere and its circumference nowhere.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841) CONDER, The Basis of Faith, ii, 67. (1877)

8
Every man is the center of a circle, whose fatal circumference he can not pass.

JOHN JAMES INGALLS, Eulogy on Benjamin Hill, U.S. Senate, 23 Jan., 1882.

9
We are swinging round the circle.

ANDREW JOHNSON, Speech, on the Presidential Reconstruction tour, August, 1866.

10
Under the graver's hand, the minutest seal equals the perfection of colossal figures.

PHILO, De Opificio Mundi. Sec. 6. (C. A. D. 40)
Whether you draw a larger or a smaller circle, its size affects its area, not its shape. (Utrum maiorem a minore circulum scribas, ad spatium eius pertinet, non ad formam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, sec. 27. (C. A. D. 64)

In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measures, life may perfect be.

BEN JONSON, A Pindaric Ode. St. 7. (1616)

Circles are prais'd, not that abound
In largeness, but th' exactly round:
So life we praise, that doth excel

Not in much time, but acting well.

EDMUND WALLER, Long and Short Life. (1645)

Pope Benedict XI is said to have asked Giotto, the famous Italian painter, in 1303, for a proof of his skill. Giotto sent him in reply a perfect circle drawn with a free sweep of his brush. Hence the proverb, "Round as the O of Giotto."

Facile it seems to him who doth not know

What years were spent for Giotto's careless O.

J. R. LOWELL, Impromptu, at a Harvard Commencement dinner.

1 You drag me round and round in a circle.
(πάλαί με περιέλκει κύκλω.)

PLATO, Charmides. Sec. 174B. (c. 375 B.C.)
He had been rushing around in circles.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 237. (1942)

CIRCUMSTANCES

2 When men are easy in their circumstances, they are naturally enemies to innovations.

ADDISON, The Freeholder. No. 42. (1716)
His circumstances were narrow.

WILLIAM GODWIN, Caleb Williams, p. 292. (1794)
Born of noble family . . . reduced in its circumstances.

LORD BROUGHAM, Albert Lunel. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1844)

A country gentleman in good circumstances.

J. A. FROUDE, Caesar. Ch. 5. (1879)

3 Circumstances determine the cause.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 58b (c. 450)

4 Men are the sport of circumstances, when The circumstances seem the sport of men.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto v, st. 17. (1818)

I am the very slave of circumstance.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act iv, sc. 1. (1821)

Man, without religion, is the creature of circumstances.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

Man is the creature of circumstance.

ROBERT OWEN, The Philanthropist. (1836)

5 His sacrifice he hide, and that anon
Ful piteously, with alle circumstaunces.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 1405 (c. 1386)

It was done with great circumstance.

W. H. PRESCOTT, Philip the Second, ii, ii, 3, 231. (1855)

6 The wild man of the woods is nothing to him
—not a circumstance.

CROCKETT, Yaller Flower Almanac, p. 19. (1836)

It wasn't a circumstance to this.

ANN SOPHIA STEPHENS, High Life in New York, i, 86. (1843)

It isn't a circumstance to what it used to be.

SYLVESTER JUDD, Margaret. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1845)

Job's luck wasn't a circumstance.

J. H. BEADLE, Western Wilds, p. 615. (1878)

7 In ev'ry thing I hold this Maxim still.
The Circumstance doth make it good or ill.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea, l. 292. (1593)

Every case has two sides, a good side and a bad, with all kinds of alleviating circumstances.

LION FEUCHTWANGER, Paris Gazette, p. 540. (1940)

8 Circumstances alter cases.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), The Old Judge. (1837) DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 9. (1870) HEBERDEN, Aces, Eights and Mur- der, p. 9. (1941) STERLING, Down Among the Dead Men, p. 219. (1943) etc., etc.

Circumstances alter cases even with the best of us.

JAMES PAYN, In Market Over. Ch. 39. (1895)

Is it not one of your proverbs that circumstances alter cases?

J. S. FLETCHER, The Diamonds. Ch. 9. (1923)

Circumstances alter women.

FRANCIS ILES, Before the Fact. Ch. 11. (1932)

THE CASE IS ALTERED, see under CASE.

9 I endeavor to subdue circumstances to myself, and not myself to circumstances. (Mihi res, non me rebus, subiungere conor.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 19. (20 B.C.)

Man is not the creature of circumstances, circumstances are the creatures of men. We are free agents, and man is more powerful than matter.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 7. (1827)

You think me the child of my circumstances: I make my circumstance.

R. W. EMERSON, The Transcendentalist. (1842)

10 What the discordant harmony of circumstances would and could effect. (Quid velit et possit rerum concordia discors.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 12, l. 19. (20 B.C.)

The changeful chance of circumstances. (Varia sors rerum.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. ii, sec. 70. (c. A.D. 109)

A certain concurrence of circumstances.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Dec., 1746.

The happy combination of fortuitous circumstances.

WALTER SCOTT, Answer to the Letter of Captain Clutterbuck: The Monastery. (1820)

This fearful concatenation of circumstances.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument, on the murder of Captain White. (1830) Works, vi, 88

Fortuitous combination of circumstances.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Vol. ii, ch. 7. (1865)

11 Circumstances are things round about; we are in them, not under them.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Samuel Johnson and John Horne. (1824)

12 Leave frivolous circumstances.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, v, 1, 27. (1594)

13 I am governed by circumstances. . . . I cannot govern them.

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: Versailles. (1768)

F. M. the Duke of Wellington presents his compliments to Mr. —, and declines to interfere in circumstances over which he has no control.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Letter, written in 1839, with reference to a business complication in which his son was involved. According to George Augustus Sala (Echoes of the Week, London Illustrated News, 23 Aug., 1884) this is the first recorded use of the phrase. See FRASER, Words on Wellington, p. 10.

Circumstances beyond my individual control.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 20. (1849)
Erased by circumstances over which I had no control.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 55. (1852) The phrase is repeated several times by Mr. Guppy.

"Circumstances over which he had no control," was the miserable creature's plea in extenuation.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1865)
Circumstances to which he was unequal.

J. A. FROUDE, History of England. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1856)

Circumstances over which you have no control.

E. M. ROYLE, The Squaw Man. Act i. (1905)

<sup>1</sup>
The hollow orb of moving circumstance.

TENNYSON, The Palace of Art. St. 64. (1832)

This running sea of circumstance.

EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

Breasts the blows of circumstance.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxiv. (1850)

Tyrannical Circumstance!

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

Nor can he count the airy threads that weave the web of circumstance.

H. RIDER HAGGARD, She. Ch. 18. (1887)

CITY

<sup>2</sup>
I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city. (οὐκ ἀσήμου πόλεως πολίτης.)

New Testament: Acts, xxi, 39. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Non ignotae civitatis municeps."

Verdunoy renders the phrase, "Citoyen d'une ville qui n'est pas sans importance."

Surely in toil or fray, Under an alien sky,
Comfort it is to say, "Of no mean city am I!"

KIPLING, The Seven Seas: Dedication. (1896)

<sup>3</sup>
Not houses finely roofed,
Nor the stones of walls well-built,
Nor canals and dockyards, make the city,
But men who use their opportunity.

(οὐκ οἰκίαι κάλως τετεγάρσμεναι λίθοι τε τειχέων εὖ δεδομήμενοι

οὐδὲ στένωποι καὶ νῶρι

ἀ πόλις, ἀλλ' ἄνθρωποι χρήεσθαι τοῖς αἰ πάρεσσι δυνάμενοι.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 28. (c. 595 B.C.)

As quoted by ARISTIDES, Rhodian Oration.

This, the most famous of Alcaeus's epigrams, is given in various forms. Aristides himself, in The Four Great Athenians, cites a different version: "Not stone and timber, nor the craft of the joiner, make the city; but wheresoever are men who know how to keep themselves safe, there are walls and there a city." EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 339.

'Tis men that are a city's tower in war. (ἄνδρες γὰρ πόλιος πύργος Ἀρεῖος.)

ALCAEUS, To His Country. Frag. 41. (c. 595 B.C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 347. Sometimes rendered, "Fighting men are the city's fortress."

A city will be well fortified which is surrounded by brave men and not by bricks. (οὐκ ἂν εἴη ἀτειχιστος πόλις ἄτις ἄνδρεςσι, καὶ οὐ πλίνθοις ἐστεφάνωται.)

LYCURGUS, when asked about fortifying a Spartan city. (c. 590 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Lycurgus. Ch. 19, sec. 4.

Insolence is the ruin of cities, but brave men stand as their strongest bulwark. (ἀλκὰ δὲ τεῖχος ἀνδρῶν | θύιστον ἵσταται.)

PINDAR, Paeans. No. ii, l. 36. (c. 480 B.C.)

It is men who make a city, not walls, or ships without crews. (ἄνδρες γὰρ πόλις, καὶ οὐ τεῖχη οὐδὲ νῆες ἀνδρῶν κεναί.)

NICIAS, Speech, to his army after his defeat by the Syracusans. (413 B.C.) See THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. vii, ch. 77, sec. 7.

While her [Athens'] sons still live her ramparts are impregnable. (ἀνδρῶν γὰρ ὄντων ἔρκος ἐστὶν ἀσφαλές.)

AESCHYLUS, Persians, l. 349. (472 B.C.)

These are the walls of Sparta. (ταῦτά ἐστιν τὰ Λακεδαιμονίων τεῖχη.)

AGESILAUS THE GREAT, KING OF SPARTA, pointing to its citizens in full armor, when some one wished to know why Sparta was without walls. (c. 395 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Spartans, sec. 210E. When shown a walled city, he said, "It is for women, not men, to live in."

A wall usually causes a soft habit of soul in the inhabitants of a city by inviting them to seek refuge within it instead of repelling the enemy; instead of securing their safety by keeping watch night and day, it tempts them to believe that their safety is ensured if they are fenced in with walls and gates and go to sleep, . . . little knowing that ease is really the fruit of toil.

PLATO, Laws. Bk. vi, sec. 779A. (c. 345 B.C.)

As regards walls, those who aver that cities which pretend to valor should not have them hold too old-fashioned a view. . . . It is true that against an evenly matched foe it is not honorable to try to secure oneself by the strength of one's fortifications; but as it does and may happen that the superior numbers of the attackers may be too much for the human valor of a small force, if the city is to survive and not to suffer disaster or insult, the securest fortification of walls must be deemed to be the most warlike.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 10, sec. 6. (c. 330 B.C.)

If the citizens are of sound character, I consider the town splendidly fortified. (Si incolae bene sunt morati, pulchre munitum arbitror.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 554. (c. 200 B.C.)

Better a castell of bones than of stones. Where valiant men are, . . . neuer will I . . . cumber myself with dead walls.

HENRY SAVAGE, in HOLINSHED, Chronicles (1808), vi, 256. (c. 1350)

The people are the city.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 1, 200. (1607)

What constitutes a State?

Not high-crown'd battlement or labour'd mound.

Thick wall or moated gate; . . .

No:—men, high-minded men,— . . .

Men who their duties know, . . .

These constitute a State.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, An Ode in Imitation of Alcaeus. (a. 1794)

A great city is that which has the greatest men and women,

If it be a few ragged huts it is still the greatest city in the whole world.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Broad-Axe. Sec. 4. (1856)

Men, not walls, make a city.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, No. 669. (1937)

1 But alas! the crown of the city is destroyed. (οὐδ' ἀπὸ μὲν στέφανος πόλεως δλωθεν.)

ANACREON, Fragments. Frag. 65. (c. 500 B.C.)
Quoted by SCHOLIAST on PINDAR, Olympian Odes, viii, 42 (c. 460 B.C.): "When they set about to make a crown for Ilium," with the explanation that crown is metaphorical for wall, since the walls of a city are its crown.
See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 171.

2 Match me such marvel save in Eastern clime—

A rose-red city, half as old as time.

JOHN WILLIAM BURGON, Petra. (c. 1850)

Burgon's Petra—the rose-red city half as old as time.

MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 135. (1940)

3 I love capitals. Everything is best at capitals.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1749.

The centre of a thousand trades.

WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 246. (1781)

I am a citizen of the world.

DIOGENES, on being asked what his city was. (c. 350 B.C.) See under COSMOPOLITAN.

4 Cities give not the human senses room enough.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)

Cities give us collision. It is said, London and New York take the nonsense out of a man.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Culture. (1860)

Cities force growth and make men talkative and entertaining, but they make them artificial.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming. (1870)

5 The first requisite to a man's happiness is birth in a famous city. (χρῆται τῷ εὐδαίμονι πρώτον ὑπάρχει τὴν πόλιν εὐδόκιμον.)

EURIPIDES, Encomium Upon Alcibiades. (c. 420 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 1, sec. 1. The saying, according to Plutarch, has also been attributed to Sotius, one of Plutarch's Roman friends.

As for me, I live in a small city, and I prefer to dwell there, that it may not become smaller still. (ἡμῖς δὲ μικρὰν οἰκοῦντες πόλιν, καὶ ἵνα μὴ μικρότερα γένηται φιλοχυρῶντες.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 2, sec. 2. (c. A.D. 110)

6 City-Gates stand open to the Bad as well as the Good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1108. (1732)

7 Cities seldom change Religion only.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 76. (1640)

Cities are taken by the ears.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 968.

8 Far from the city, far from health. (Loing de cité, loing de santé.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Bk. ii, p. 340. (1859)

9 A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. (οὐ δύναται πόλις κρυβῆναι ἐπάνω δρους κειμένη.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 14. (c. A.D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Non potest civitas abscondi supra montem posita."

10 Towred Cities please us then,
And the busie humm of men.

JOHN MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 117. (1632)

The Crowd, and Buz, and Murmuring

Of this great Hive, the City.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish. (c. 1656)

Cities humming with a restless crowd.

WILLIAM COWPER, Retirement, l. 21. (1781)

In the busy haunts of men.

FELICIA HEMANS, Tale of the Secret Tribunal, l. 203. (1808)

'Midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 26. (1812)

Artists speak of everything urban

As the W.C.T.U. speaks of rye and bourbon,

And they say cities are only commercial marts,

But they fail to realize that no marts, no arts

OGDEN NASH, The City. (c. 1935)

11 Where now the city stands, there was once naught but the city's site. (Hic, ubi nunc urbs est, tum locus urbis erat.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 280. (c. A.D. 8)

12 Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, . . . the city of the great King. (Mons Sion . . . civitas Regis magni.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xlviii, 2. (c. 250 B.C.)

City of magnificent vistas.

PIERRE CHARLES L'ENFANT, the architect-engineer who planned the city of Washington.

D. C. (1791) Afterwards corrupted to "City of magnificent distances."

The zenith city of the unsalted seas.

JAMES PROCTOR KNOTT, Speech, House of Representatives, 27 Jan., 1871. referring to Duluth, Minn.

The City of Diurnal Night.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Best Seller. (1909)
Referring to Pittsburgh, Pa.

13 Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God. (Gloriosa dicta sunt de te, civitas Dei.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxvii, 3. (c. 250 B.C.)

Of the City of God. (De Civitate Dei.)

ST. AUGUSTINE. Title of a book. (427)

<sup>1</sup> A merciful citizen is the solace of his country. (Misericors civis patriae est consolatio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 408. (c. 43 A. C.)

<sup>2</sup> Do not dwell in a city whose governor is a physician.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 397. (1678)

That city is in a bad case, whose physician has the gout.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 397. (1678)

Unhappy the province whose physician suffers from the gout and whose chancellor of the exchequer is one-eyed.

A. COHEN, Ancient Hebrew Proverbs, p. 107. (1911)

Do not dwell in a city where a horse does not neigh nor a dog bark.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 402. (1678) If we would be safe from danger, we must not dwell in a city where there is neither horse against an enemy, nor dogs against thieves.

<sup>3</sup> Cities are the sink of the human race. (Les villes sont le gouffre de l'espèce humaine.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. i. (1762)

<sup>4</sup> An age builds up cities: an hour destroys them. (Urbes constituit aetas: hora dissolvit.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. iii, ch. 27. (C. A. D. 62)

From precedents we see that towns can die. (Cernimus exemplis oppida posse mori.)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i, l. 414. (C. A. D. 416)

<sup>5</sup> The city is the teacher of the man. (πόλις ἀνδρα διδάσκει.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 95. (c. 475 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 784B.

Fields and trees teach me nothing, but the people in a city do. (τὰ μὲν οὖν χωρία καὶ τὰ δένδρα οὐδέν μ' ἐθέλει διδάσκειν, οἱ δ' ἐν τῷ ἄστεϊ ἀνθρώποι.)

SOCRATES, explaining why he rarely left the city. (C. 400 B. C.) See PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 230.

<sup>6</sup> That city is the best to live in, in which those who are not wronged, no less than those who are wronged, exert themselves to punish the wrongdoers.

SOLOON, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 18, sec. 5.

<sup>7</sup> A great city is a great solitude. (ἡρεμία μεγάλη ἥτις ἡμεγάλη πόλις.)

STRABO, Geographica. Bk. xvi. (c. 2 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 54, who gives the Latin, "Magna civitas, magna solitudo." Another form of the Greek is, μεγάλη πόλις μεγάλη ἡρεμία.

Magna ciuitas, magna solitudo: because in a great town, friends are scattered.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship. (1625)

A great City, a great Solitude.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 191. (1732)

There is no solitude so terrible and dreary as that felt in the very heart of a vast, unsympathizing city.

A. R. SMITH, The Fortunes of the Scattergood Family. Ch. 15. (1845)

<sup>8</sup> Ther is ane ald prouerb that says, that the herand [errant] damysele, and ane spekand [spoken] castel, sal neuyr end vith honour.

UNKNOWN, Complaynt of Scotlande. xiii. (1549)

A city is half won when they within demaunde for parle.

PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, iii, 48. (1567)

A city that parleys is half gotten.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

The French say, "Toute ville qui parlemente est à moitié rendue."

Valour that parleys is near yielding.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Neither a fortress nor a maid will hold out long after they begin to parley.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

THE WOMAN WHO DELIBERATES IS LOST, see under WOMAN.

<sup>9</sup> To the city and the world. (Urbi et orbi.)

UNKNOWN, Motto, affixed to the gates of the Vatican; also the formula accompanying Papal rescripts. See ADDIS, Promulgation, in Catholic Encyclopedia.

II—City and Country

<sup>10</sup> Better to hear the lark sing than the mouse cheep.

ROBERT BRUCE, OF SCOTLAND, attr. (c. 1300)

Better to live in the country than the city.

The proverb of the Douglasses. See D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs.

<sup>11</sup> To fly from the town to the country as though from chains. (Evolare rus ex urbe tanquam ex vinculis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 6. (55 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> The Citie is to me a prison, and solitarinesse a Paradise.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 27. (1574)

<sup>13</sup> The Chicken is the Country's, but the City eateth it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 113. (1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 4. (1670)

The Chickens are the Country's, but the City eats them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4447. (1732) See also SOWING AND REAPING.

<sup>14</sup> The city is recruited from the country.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Manners. (1844)

Farmer Jake Bentley talks some o' movin to the city so he kin keep a son.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast. (1930)

1 Country in town. (Rus in urbe.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, No. 57, l. 21. (c. A. D. 103)

2 The city cares not what the countrey thinks.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from Any Whence: Countrey Newes. (1613)

3 It was divine nature that gave us the country, and man's skill that built the cities. (Divina natura dedit agros, ars humana aedificavit urbes.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (c. 35 B. C.) I found in Holy Scripture that Cain was the first builder of cities. (Je trouue en l'Ecriture Sacree que Cayn fut premier batisseur de villes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 34. (1552) God the first Garden made, and the first City, Cain.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden. (1656) God made the country, and man made the town.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 749. (1783) Varro expressed an eminently Roman sentiment in that beautiful sentence which Cowper has introduced into English poetry, "Divine Providence made the country, but human art the town."

W. H. LECKY, History of European Morals, i, ch. 2. (1869)

The Borough . . . reminds us of a saying of Tennyson, that if God made the country, and man made the town, then it was the devil who made the country-town.

ALFRED AINGER, Crabbe, p. 118. (1903)

Sentimentalists object to towns initially because they are made artificially.

OGDEN NASH, The City. (1940)

God made the country, man made the town. Pity men couldn't learn better.

HELEN MACINNES, Above Suspicion, p. 112. (1941)

CIVILIZATION

4 Civilization degrades the many to exalt the few.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table-Talk: Pursuits. (1868)

5 Wealth may not produce civilization, but civilization produces money.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit. (1887)

Civilization and profits go hand in hand.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech, New York, 27 Nov., 1920.

6 Is civilization only a higher form of idolatry, that man should bow down to a flesh-brush, to flannels, to baths, diet, exercise, and air? MARY B. EDDY, Science and Health, p. 174. (1875) Those who admire modern civilization usually identify it with the steam engine and the electric telegraph.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903) It is only an uncivilized world which would worship civilization.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 22. (1940)

7 The civilized man has built a coach, but has lost the use of his feet.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841) As long as our civilization is essentially one of property, of fences, of exclusiveness, it will be mocked by delusions.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon. (1850)

A sufficient measure of civilization is the influence of good women.

EMERSON, Essays: Civilization. (1870)

8 The highest civility has never loved the hot zones. Wherever snow falls there is usually civil freedom. Where the banana grows, . . . man is sensual and cruel.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Civilization. (1870)

9 The more advanced the civilization, the less powerful the individual.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Social Pressure. Ch. 3. (1874)

10 A decent provision for the poor is the true test of civilization.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1775) BOSWELL, Life, ii, 130. Civilization is a progress from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity toward a definite, coherent heterogeneity.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Ch. 16, par. 138. (1862)

Civilization is the making of civil persons.

JOHN RUSKIN, The Crown of Wild Olive. (1866)

Civilization is the humanisation of man in society.

ARNOLD, Mixed Essays: Preface. (1879)

Civilization begins at home.

HENRY JAMES, Siege of London. Ch. 5. (1883) Civilization is paralysis.

PAUL GAUGUIN, (c. 1890) See COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 43. Krafft-Ebing, the German neurologist, devised a characteristic definition: "Civilization is syphilization."

11 No one is so savage that he cannot become civilized, if he will lend a patient ear to culture. (Nemo adeo ferus est, ut non mitescere possit, si modo culturae patientem com-monet aurem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 39. (20 B. C.)

12 Jesus wept; Voltaire smiled. Of that divine tear and of that human smile is composed the sweetness of the present civilization.

VICTOR HUGO, Centenary Oration on Voltaire, 30 May, 1878.

13 Civilization was thrust into the brain of Europe on the point of a Moorish lance.

R. G. INCERSOLL, Address, New York, 24 Jan., 1888.

14 Not but wut abstract war is horrid,
I sign to thet with all my heart,—
But civlyzation doos git forrid
Sometimes upon a powder-cart.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. I, No. 7. (1846)

CLARITY, see Clearness

CLAW

<sup>1</sup> He loueth to be flattered and clawed by the sleue.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Skyp of Folys (1874), ii, 29. (1509)

Nor suffer ourselves to bee clawed with flatterye.
NICHOLAS GRIMALDE, tr., Cicero's Offices, i, 41. (1553)

I must laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, i, 3, 18. (1598)

<sup>2</sup> I clawe oft where it doth not itche.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges (Spens. Soc.), p. 30. (1514)

He clawed himself where it did not itch. (Se grattoyt ou ne luy demangeoyt point.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

Thou makest me claw where it itcheth not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
And straight (through feare) where he clawes it doth not yth.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra, sig. D3. (1578)

The French King . . . said somewhat sharply,
I pray thee good fellow clawe me not where I itch not.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie, iii, xxiii. (1589) See also SCRATCHING.

<sup>3</sup> Clawe my backe, and I wyll clawe thy toe.

JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoise, p. 486. (1530) Of mutual flattery.

We saye, clawe me, clawe ye.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Exposition I John, 72. (1531)
Let coxcombs curry favour with a fee.

Extoll their braines, with Claw me, I'll claw thee.
HENRY HUTTON, Follie's Anatomie, p. 31. (1619)
"Claw me and I will claw thee"; wink at mine, and I will not see thy faults.

JOHN ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 186. (1629)
Ay, claw me, and I'll claw you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

<sup>4</sup> They curry Kinges, and her back claweth.

UNKNOWN, Pierce the Ploughmans Crede, l. 365. (c. 1394)

"Take heed of him that by thi back thee claweth": for none is worse than a friendly foe.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Poetical Works (1868), p. 138. (a. 1541)

CLEANLINESS

<sup>5</sup> They [the Egyptians] set cleanliness above seemliness. (προτιμῶντες καθαρὸν εἶναι ἢ εὐπρεπέστερον.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. ii, ch. 37. (c. 445 B. C.)

Physical cleanliness leads to spiritual purity.

Babylonian Talmud: Abodah Zarah, fo. 20b. (c. 450)

The doctrines of religion are resolved into carefulness; carefulness into vigorousness; vigorous-ness into guiltlessness; guiltlessness into abstemiousness; abstemiousness into cleanliness; cleanliness into godliness.

Talmud: Mishnah. (c. A. D. 400) Bettelheim, tr. RABBI PHINEHAS-BEN-JAIR, in his commentary on the Talmud, condenses this to, "Religious zeal leads to cleanliness, cleanliness to purity, purity to godliness," elaborating on the Talmudic precept, "Poverty comes from God, but not dirt."

Cleanness of the body was ever deemed to proceed from a due reverence to God.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1605)

Slovenliness is no part of religion; neither this, nor any text of Scripture, condemns neatness of apparel. Certainly this is a duty, not a sin; "cleanliness is indeed next to godliness."

JOHN WESLEY: Sermons: On Dress. No. 88. (c. 1780) The text referred to is I Peter, iii, 3-4:

"Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning, . . . but let it be the hidden man of the heart," etc. Wesley puts the last phrase into quotation marks, but he gives no indication as to its source.

If . . . cleanliness is godliness, I fear
A hopeless reprobate, a hardened sinner,
Must be that Carmelite now passing near.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend: Pt. v, At the Foot of the Alps. (1851)

Mrs. Joe . . . had an exquisite art of making her cleanliness more uncomfortable and unacceptable than dirt itself. Cleanliness is next to Godliness, and some people do the same by their religion.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 4. (1861)

"Cleanliness is next to godliness"; but washing should be only for the purpose of keeping the body clean, and this can be effected without scrubbing the whole surface daily. Water is not the natural habitat of humanity.

MARY B. EDDY, Science and Health. Ch. 12. 1875.
Cleanliness which comes next to godliness, if not before it.

SHAW, Man and Superman: Preface. (1903)

They say Cleanliness is next to Godliness, Mable. I say its next to impossible.

EDWARD STREETER, Dere Mable. (1918)

<sup>6</sup> Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? (Quis potest facere mundum de immundo conceptum semine?)

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 4. (c. 350 B. C.)

What is man, that he should be clean? (Quid est homo, ut immaculatus sit?)

Old Testament: Job, xv, 14.

How can he be clean that is born of a woman? (Aut apparere mundus natus de muliere?)

Old Testament: Job, xxv, 4.

What can be made clean from an unclean thing? (Ab immundo quid mundabitur?)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiv, 4. (c. 190 B. C.)

Unless the vessel is clean, whatever you pour into it turns sour. (Sincerum est nisi vas, quodcumque infundis acrescit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 54. (20 B. C.)

- 1
Be thou clean. (καθαρίσθητι.)
New Testament: Luke, v, 13. (c. A.D. 65)
Christ to the leper. The Vulgate is "Mundare."
God loveth the clean.
MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. 9. (c. 625)
Above all things, keep clean. It is not necessary to be a pig in order to raise one.
R. G. INGERSOLL, About Farming in Illinois. (1877)

- 2
[A] spotless kitchen, so exquisitely clean that you might, as the phrase goes, "have eaten your dinner off the floor."
JAMES PAYN, Lost Sir Massingberd. Ch. 32. (1864)
3
Much to health will cleanliness avail.
WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chace, i, 158. (1735) A more modern form is, "Cleanliness is a fine life-preserver."

- 4
Cleanliness hath . . . been esteemed the chief corporal perfection in women.
SWIFT, The Lady's Dressing Room. (1733)

- 5
To have not only clean hands, but clean minds. (Non solum manus, sed etiam mentes puras habere.)

- THALES OF MILETUS. (c. 600 B.C.) As quoted by VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. vii, ch. 2, sec. 8. See also under HAND.

- Whoever eats bread without first washing his hands is as though he had sinned with a harlot.

- Babylonian Talmud: Sotah*, fo. 4b. (c. 450)
Thyn hondis wash, thy teeth make whyte,
And let no filthe upon thee bee,
Thy nailes blak if thou mayst see,
Voide it away deliverly.

- And kembe thyn heed right jolily.
GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 2280. (c. 1365)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

- 6
"As clean as a whistle." a proverbial simile, signifying completely, entirely.

- WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven, ii, 256. (1828)

- Head taken off as clean as a whistle.

- W. S. MAYO, Kaloolah. Ch. 5. (1849)

- You're as clean as a whistle.

- DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend Bk. i, ch. 15. (1865)

- 7
As clean and smooth as a peeled onion.

- O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Clarion Call. (1908)

- As clean as a hound's tooth.

- O. HENRY, Suite Homes and Their Romance. (1910)

- 8
As clean as a clock.

- HENRY MORZ, An Antidote against Idolatry. (1669) "As clean as a clock," says Notes and Queries, ser. v, i, 454, "is a common phrase in Yorkshire, referring to the shining and clean-looking black beetles (always called clocks in the North) which are to be found under every piece of cow-dung which has been dropped a few hours."

- 9
Clean as a penny.

- WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 338. (1681) "Clean as a penny" is a common simile for any one that is neatly and cleanly dressed.—BAKER, Northants Glossary: Penny. (1854)

- 10
Clean as a new pin of every penny of debt.

- WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 19 April, 1829.

- As clean as a new pin.

- T. S. ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night i, p. 7. (1854)

- The galley, which he kept as clean as a new pin.

- R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 10. (1883) The French say, "Propre comme un sou neuf" (Clean as a new sou).

- 11
Yt [his purse] ys as clene as a byrdes ars.

- UNKNOWN, Mankind, l. 475. (c. 1470)

CLEARNESS

- 12
So clear that even a blind man could see it. (δῆλον ὅτι καὶ τυφλῷ γινῶναι δοκεῖ τουθ'.)

- ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 48. (388 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 93, who gives the shorter Latin, "Apparent even to a blind man" (Vel caeco appareat.)

- Even a blind man can see that. (δῆλόν τε δὴ καὶ ἄγενη.)

- PLATO, The Republic. Bk. v, sec. 465D. (c. 375 B.C.)

- Clear even to the proverbial blind man. (καὶ τυφλῷ γε δῆλον.)

- PLATO, The Republic. Bk. viii, sec. 550D.

- This is plain even to a child. (δῆλον τοῦτό γε ἡδὴ καὶ παιδί.)

- PLATO, Symposium. Sec. 204B. (c. 375 B.C.)

- 13
Clarity is so clearly one of the attributes of truth that very often it passes for truth.

- JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. (1842)

- Clarity, the greatest of legislative and judicial virtues, like the sunshine, revealing and curative

- CHARLES E. HUGHES, Address, Feb., 1931.

- 14
Clearness ornaments profound thoughts. (La clarté orne les pensées profondes.)

- VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions et Maximes. No. 4. (1746)

- 15
To be intelligible is to be found out.

- OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act. i. (1892)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

- 16
That's clear as mud.

- R. H. BARRHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Merchant of Venice. (1842)

- 17
As clear as a whistle.

- JOHN BYROM, Epistle to Lloyd. (1773)

My throat was as clear as a whistle.

ASA GRAY, Letters, ii, 710. (1880)

<sup>1</sup> Clear as the day.

MILES COVERDALE, Christian State of Matrimony, sig. D8. (1541) SHACKLOCK, Hatchet of Heresies, fo. 76. (1565)

Clear as noon day.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 190. (1740) STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 6. (1883)

Clear as day-light.

ARNOLD BENNETT, Prohack. Ch. 20. (1922)

<sup>2</sup> Clearer than the noonday. (Orieris ut lucifer.)

Old Testament: Job, xi, 17. (c. 400 B.C.)

Cleerer than the sonne at noone dayes.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 66. (c. 1578)

As clear as the sun.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 159. (1680) BUNYAN, Jerusalem Sinner Saved. (1688) FIELDING, Tom Jones, Bk. xii, ch. 7. (1749)

<sup>3</sup> As clear as a steel engraving.

O. HENRY, Man About Town. (1906)

<sup>4</sup> Clear as a bell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 203. (1670)

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 23. (1838)

<sup>5</sup> Her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. (κρυσταλλινον.)

New Testament, Revelation, xxi, 11. (c. A.D. 90) The Vulgate is, "Sicut crystallum."

Clear as crystal. (Vairs come cristal.)

UNKNOWN, De Gombert et des II. Clercs, l. 11. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, i, 223. Another ballad of about the same date, Le Lai d'Aristote, l. 227, has, "Cler de cristal."

Clear as crystal.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi. l. 376. (a. 1300) SCOT, Witchcraft. Bk. xiii, ch. 6. (1584) SYLVESTER, Du Bartas. Wk. i, day. iii, l. 141. BROME, Travels, p. 36. (1700) DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 14. (1870) E. V. LUCAS, Wanderer in Paris. Ch. 1. (1909)

Crystall clere.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 343. E. E. T. S. (c. 1430)

That makes it as clear as crystal.

CONAN DOYLE, The Resident Patient, (1893)

CLERGY

See also Preacher

<sup>6</sup> Clergyman. A man who undertakes the management of our spiritual affairs as a method of bettering his temporal ones.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>7</sup> Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm. (Nolite tangere christos meos: et in prophetis meis nolite malignari.)

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xvi, 22. (c. 400 B.C.) Also Psalms, cv, 15. The text upon which "Benefit of clergy" (Beneficium clericorum aut clericum) was grounded. It was originally the privilege, granted to clergymen arraigned for felony, of exemption from trial by a secular court. In 1274 the privilege of exemption from sentence was extended to all persons who could read, and could be pleaded on the first conviction; in 1691 the privilege was extended to women. The person claiming "benefit of clergy" had to read from a book handed to him, and if he did so successfully he could not be put to death, but was branded on the hand. This privilege was abolished in 1827. In America, the Congress passed an act in 1790 prohibiting benefit of clergy in any case of conviction of a capital crime. "Clergy of the belly" could be claimed by a pregnant woman, and execution of sentence deferred until her child was born.

If a felon demand his clergy, and read well and distinctly, and the count who is judge thereof do put him from his clergy wrongfully, error shall never be brought upon this attainder.

FRANCIS BACON, Maxims of the Law. Regula xvii. (c. 1626) Bacon has several other references to "benefit of clergy" in his Elements of the Common Lawes of England, of which the Maxims are a part.

Every Man, to whom this benefit is granted, though not in Orders, is put to read at the Bar, after he is found guilty, and convicted of such Felony, and so burnt in the hand, and set free for the first time, if the Ordinaries Commissioner or Deputy standing by do say, Legit ut Clericus.

THOMAS BLOUNT, Law Dictionary. (1670)

When want of learning kept the laymen low, And none but priests were authorized to know; When what small knowledge was, in them did dwell;

And he a god who could but read or spell.

JOHN DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 372. (1682)

Then [1818] the Crier of the Court called out to the Convict, 'kneel down and pray your Clergy.'

CHARLES KNIGHT, Passages of a Working Life, i, 204. (1864)

Without Benefit of Clergy.

RUDYARD KIPLING. Title of story. (1888) Meaning, in this sense, without being married.

<sup>8</sup> The clergy are as like as peas.

R. W. EMERSON, The Preacher. (1867)

<sup>9</sup> Many wear God's cloth that know not their Master.

JOSEPH HALL, Meditations. Ch. 4. (1606)

<sup>10</sup> "Clergymen's sons always turn out badly" . . . Because the children are surfeited with severe religion.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy Though Married. Ch. 19. (1886)

An Eton boy . . . when asked why the sons of Eli turned out badly, replied, "The sons of clergymen always turn out badly."

DEAN W. R. INGE, Outspoken Essays. Ser. ii, p. 264. (1922)

<sup>1</sup> A country clergyman with a one-story intellect and a one-horse vocabulary.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2. (1858)

<sup>2</sup> Many a one's coat saves their doublet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 251. (1721)

"Spoken when clergymen use you saucily, who, in deference to their profession, you will not beat."

<sup>3</sup> Three classes of clergy: Nimrods, ramrods, and fishing-rods.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. iv, p. 159.

(1904) Men fond of hunting, shooting, or fishing. THREE SEXES, see under SEX.

<sup>4</sup> Clericalism, that is the enemy! (Le cléricalisme, voilà l'ennemi!)

ALPHONSE PEYRAT, Speech, 1859.

<sup>5</sup> It's kittle shooting at corbies and clergy.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

As for your Priesthood, I shall say but little, Corbies and Clergy are a shot right kittle.

ROBERT BURNS, The Brigs of Ayr. (1787)

<sup>6</sup> Cleric pride,
Whose reddening cheek no contradiction bears.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iv, l. 62. (1735)

There is not in the universe a more ridiculous nor a more contemptible animal than a proud clergyman.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. x, ch. 10. (1752)

That pride to pampered priesthood dear.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 44. (1812)

<sup>7</sup> If you have offended a cleric, kill him; else you will never have peace with him.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, iv. 79. (1853) A Bohemian proverb.

<sup>8</sup> Clergy and women are all one. (Clercs et femmes sont tout ung.)

UNKNOWN, Proverbes Communs. (c. 1450) A medieval Latin proverb declares, "Stupor mundi clerus Britannicus" (The British clergy are the wonder of the world).

CLEMENCY, see Mercy

CLERK

<sup>9</sup> When the curate licks the knife, it must be bad for the clerk.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 560 (1855) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>10</sup> 'Tis we commons make the lords, and the clerk makes the justice.

ALEXANDER BROME, The Leveller. (1660)

It's the clerk makes the justice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1678)

Making good the old proverb that the clerk makes the justice, while the master does nothing.

DANIEL DEFOR, The Compleat English Gentleman. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1729)

It is the Justice's Clerk, that makes the Justice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3024. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Clerkes ben ful subtil and ful queynte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 89, (c. 1386)

<sup>12</sup> "The gretteste clerkes been noght the wysest men,"

As whylom to the wolf thus spak the mare.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale, l. 134. (c. 1386) The fable of the wolf and the mare may be found in most Latin Aesopian collections.

Wherfor, late men deme what they wylle, grettest clerks are nott alway wysest men.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters, iii, 153. (1476)

It is true that I long syth haue redde and herde that the best clerkes ben not the wyseth men.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe (Arber), xxvii, 63. (1481)

The greatest clerks are not the wisest men. (Magis magnos clericos non sunt magis magnos sapientes.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 39. (1534)

Quoting a Latin proverb, cited by MONTAIGNE, i, 24. REGNIER, Satires, iii, last line, puts it into French, "Les plus grands clerics ne sont pas le plus fin."

The grettest clerkes be not the wysest men.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 258. (1576) GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) JONSON, Tale of a Tub, i, 2. (1633) FULLER, Church-History, iii, 1. (1655) SCOTT, Kenilworth Ch. 31. (1821) etc., etc.

The greatest Clearkes are not the wisest men, who digge still at the roote, while others gather the fruite.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 237. (1580)

The Greatest Clearkes doe commonlye dissemble their knowledge.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 339.

I see that the greatest clerks are not the wisest men.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, to the Bishop of St. David's, when he preached on the text, "Lord teach us to number our days." The Queen told him that "he might have kept his arithmetic for himself," and added the proverb. (a. 1603) See CREIGHTON, Queen Elizabeth, p. 284.

<sup>13</sup> Maisterlesse men, or rather S. Nicolas clerkes that lacke liuing.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 155. (1553) Poor scholars.

I haue heard of men robbed by S. Nicolas clerkes.

JOHN FOXE, Acts and Monuments of These Latter and Perilous Dayes, 2287. (1570) Highwaymen.

If they meet not with Saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 1, 67. (1597)

Who should I meet with but our old gang, some of St. Nicholas's Clerks.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act i, sc. 1. (1662)

CLEVERNESS

See also Intelligence

<sup>1</sup> Cleverness is serviceable for everything, sufficient for nothing. (L'esprit sert bien à tout, mais ne remplace rien.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal. 16 Feb., 1868.

<sup>2</sup> Cleverer than a cuckoo. (μυχανικώτερος κόκκυκος.)

ARISTOTLE. (c. 335 B. C.) The attribution is by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 14, who gives the Latin, "Astutior coccyce." The allusion is to the success of the cuckoo in getting other birds to hatch its eggs.

<sup>3</sup> Clever men are good, but they are not the best.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Miscellanies, i, 190. (1828)

<sup>4</sup> The clever delight in water, the virtuous in hills; the clever are restless, the virtuous calm; the clever enjoy life, the virtuous prolong life.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. vi, ch. 21. (c. 500 B. C.) LEGGE, tr. Each finds pleasure in that part of Nature which resembles himself. The Germans say, "Vermögen sucht Vermögen" (Cleverness seeks cleverness).

<sup>5</sup> "Somebody's sharp." "Who is?" asked the gentleman, laughing. I looked up quickly, being curious to know. "Only Brooks of Sheffield," said Mr. Murdstone. I was glad to find it was only Brooks of Sheffield; for at first I really thought that it was I.

CHARLES DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 2. (1849)

I know that man: he comes from Sheffield.

SYDNEY GRUNDY, A Pair of Spectacles. (1890) "He comes from Sheffield," i. e., he is clever or cunning, either with good or with bad meaning. RAY has "He is Yorkshire," said of a shrewd man, and the Italians say, "E Spolelina" (He is of Spoleto) with the same meaning <sup>6</sup> Clever men are the tools with which bad men work.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. (1821)

<sup>7</sup> Be good, sweet maid, and let who can be clever.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, A Farewell. (c. 1860) This is the version given in the final edition of Kingsley's poems, in 1889. The 1882 edition had, "Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever," and the line is often so quoted, but the later version is, of course, the better, since no one can be clever simply by willing to be. A modern variation is, "Be good, dear child, and let who will wear diamonds."

We shall counsel to our Chloë

To be rather good than clever.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Une Marquise. (1880)

If all good people were clever,
And all clever people were good,
The world would be nicer than ever
We thought that it possibly could.

But somehow, 'tis seldom or never
The two hit it off as they should;
The good are so harsh to the clever,
The clever so rude to the good.

ELIZABETH WORDSWORTH, St. Christopher and Other Poems: The Clever and the Good. (1898)

<sup>8</sup> It's clever, but is it art?

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Conundrum of the Workshops. (1890)

<sup>9</sup> The wish to appear clever often prevents one from being so. (Le désir de paraître habile empêche souvent de le devenir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 199. (1665)

The supreme cleverness consists in knowing perfectly the price of things. (La souveraine habileté consiste à bien connaître le prix des choses.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 244. Less literally, "The greatest of all gifts is the power to estimate things at their true worth."

It is great cleverness to know how to conceal one's cleverness. (C'est une grande habileté que de savoir cacher son habileté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 245.

To be clever in the afternoon argues that one is dining nowhere in the evening.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald on the Academy. (1904)

<sup>10</sup> Ready cleverness has overcome all things by determination. (Omnia conando docilis solertia vicit.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. i, l. 95. (c. 25 B. C.)

Cleverness avails more than force. (Mielz valt engiens que ne fait force.)

UNKNOWN, Du Vilain Qui Conquist Paradis par Plait, l. 175. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 214.

Cleverness is better than force. (Enseignement, que engin mieulx vault que force.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 27. (1532) The old French ballad, Du Vilain qui Conquist Paradis par Plait, has "Mielz valt engiens que ne fait force" (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 214.

<sup>11</sup> Clever to my own hurt. (Meas poenas ingeniosus.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 342. (c. A. D. 9.)

Clever to a fault.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology. (1855)

"Nobody can deny as he's clever." "Ay, too clever by half."

WILLIAM WESTALL, Birch Dene, p. 144. (1889)

Too clever is dumb.

ODDEN NASH, When the Moon Shines Over and Over. (1933)

1 The Athenians do not mind a man being clever, so long as he does not impart his cleverness to others. ('Αθηναῖοι γὰρ τοὶ . . . οὐ σφόδρα μέλει, ἂν τινα δεινὸν οἶωνται εἶναι, μὴ μέντοι διδασκαλικὸν τῆς αὐτοῦ σοφίας.)

PLATO, Euthyphro. Sec. 3D. (c. 375 B.C.)

2 One gains little by cleverness. (On gagne peu de choses par habileté.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 85. (1746) The French also say, "La plus grande finesse est de n'en avoir point" (The greatest cleverness is to have none at all).

CLIFF

3 He, like an unmoved ocean-cliff resists; like an ocean-cliff which, when a great crash comes, stands steadfast in its bulk amid many howling waves; in vain the crags and foaming rocks roar about, and the sea-weed, dashed upon its sides, is whirled back.

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 586. (19 B.C.)

As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form, Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 189. (1770)

CLOAK

4 The fairest cloak has its wrong side.

THOMAS CARLYLE. (1830) See FROUDE, Life. ii, 127.

5 Shall I walke in a Plimouth Cloake, (that's to say) like a rogue, in my hose and doublet, and a crabtree cudgell in my hand?

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act iii, sc. 2. (1608)

I must tell you if you but advance your Plimworth cloke.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act i, sc. 1. (1625)

A plimmouth cloake, otherwise call'd a battoone.

FRANCIS LENTON, Characterismi, sig. F7. (1631)

"A Plymouth Cloak." That is, a cane or staff. . . . Many a man coming home from far voyages, may chance to land here [at Plymouth], and be unable . . . to recruit himself with clothes.

FULLER, Worthies of England: Devon. (1662)

"Thou wilt please to lay down that Plymouth cloak of thine," and he pointed to the cudgel

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Hol Ch.7. (1855)

6 To take Hector's cloak.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Northumberland, ii, 542. (1662) Fuller explains the phrase: "When Thomas Percy, earl of Northumberland, anno 1569, was routed in the rebellion against Queen Elizabeth, he hid himself in the house of Hector Armstrong, of Harlow, . . . who for money betrayed him to the Regent of Scotland. . . . 'To take Hector's cloak,' is continued to this day . . . when they would express a man that betrayeth his friend who trusted him"

7 I have a good cloke, but 'tis in France.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2602. (1732)

8 Doost thou think to liue till his olde doublet will make thee a new trusse?

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act iii, sc. 6. (1592)

Old treacle new losange.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 659. (1594)

Often hath it bein sein that Eva's old Kirtle hath maid old Adam a pair of new breeches.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 85. (c. 1595)

An old cloak makes a new jerkin.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 3, 18. (1601)

9 Ye, for your wyt is cloked for the rayne.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 618. (c. 1520)

Whatsoever was said by the Recorder in his excuse was taken as a cloke for the rain, and a dissimulation or a mock.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 701. (1548)

'Tis good to have a cloak for the rain; a bad shift is better than none at all.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, iv, iii, 179. (1599)

Bruce, I tell you plain,

Is no sound cloak to keep John from the rain.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, The Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntington, iii, 1. (1601)

A quean hath ever a cloak for the rain.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. No. 86. (1611) An expedient for every turn of fortune.

CLOCK

10 The devil is a false sexton, and sets the clock too slow, that the night comes ere we be aware.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 317 (1629)

The clock goes as it pleases the clerk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4451 (1732)

11 To put back the clock, and to try to restore things as they were.

A. C. BENSON, Upton Letters, 61. (1907)

You can't turn back the hands of the clock

ERLE STANLEY GARDNER, The Case of the Turning Tide, p. 36. (1941)

12 We . . . fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 4, 153. (1597)

The Knight that fought by th' clock at Shrewsberry.

EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, 183. (1654)

My master is . . . as nice and exact as Shrewsberry clock.

HANNAH COWLEY, More Ways than One. Act i, sc. 1. (1783)

Fifteen minutes, as thou say'st, by Shrewsbury clock.

JAMES WHITE, Falstaff's Letters, 17. (1796)

I remember . . . laughing for an hour by Shrewsberry clock.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters. Vol. iv, p. 86. (1891)

<sup>1</sup> A man who watches the clock generally remains one of the hands.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 485. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> Perfection in a clock does not consist in running fast, but in running on time. (La perfection d'une pendule n'est pas d'aller vite, mais d'être réglée.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 204. (1746)

CLOTHES

See also Dress

<sup>3</sup> Be not influenced by fine clothes, And refuse not him that is in rags.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxi, l. 1. (c. 700 B. C.)

For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment; And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my foot-stool; Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

New Testament: James, ii, 2-4. (c. 44 A. D.)

<sup>4</sup> What is expensive for the back; what is reasonable for the stomach.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 52a. (c. 450) Spend much on clothes, even if you have to stint your food. Derech Erets Zuta, ch. x, has, "The glory of men is their raiment." And in Pesachim, 114a, it is given: "Spend less on thy food and drink and more on thy dwelling."

<sup>5</sup> Clothes make the man.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 113b. (c. 450) The girdle shows who the wearer is.

Babylonian Talmud: Chullin, fo. 115a.

The clothes are the man. (εἰματα δρῶ)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 60. (1523) With the Latin, "Vestis virum facit," and references to Homer, Quintilian, and others. Cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 218.

Though manners makes, yet apparell shapes.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, p. 115. (1591)

Clothes do much upon the wit, as weather Does on the brain; thence comes your proverb, "The taylor makes the man."

BEN JONSON, The Staple of Newes. Act i, sc. 2. (1626) See also under TAILOR.

We are all Adam's children; but Silk makes the Difference.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5425. (1732)

FINE FEATHERS MAKE FINE BIRDS, see under FEATHER.

Art may produce a suit of clothes; but nature must produce a man.

DAVID HUME, Essays: The Epicurean. (1741)

Clothes give us individuality, distinctions, social polity; Clothes have made Men of us.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1836)

Clothes make people. (Kleider machen Leute.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 332. (1856) The Germans also say "Kleider machen Leute, Pfaffen machen Bräute," (Clothes make people, priests make brides); "Kleider machen Leute, Schuhe den Soldaten" (Clothes make people, shoes the soldier); and "Kleider machen Leute, und Lumpe machen Läuse" (Clothes make people, and rags make lice). There is an old French proverb, "Robe refait moult l'homme" (Clothes do much to make a man).

Clothes make the gentleman or lady. (Yu i ta pan pien ch'eng jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 365. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> All in your Sunday-go-to-meeting togs.

S. BARING-GOULD, Queen of Love, i, ii, 15. (1894)

Such funny, grand, best smart Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes.

ELINOR GLYN, Visits of Elizabeth. p. 15. (1900)

<sup>7</sup> Clothes too rich and sumptuous show that the man who wears them has little sense. (Les habits trop chiers et sumptueux monstrent que l'homme a peu de sens que les porte.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regime de Mesnage. (c. 1130) Sometimes condensed to "Costful cloth shows poverty of wit."

Mayntene thy-self aftir thy rent,

Of robe and eek of garnement;

For many sythe fair clothing

A man amendith in mich thing.

(Moine toi bel, selonc ta rente,

E de robe e de chauceamente:

Bele robe e bel garnement

Amendunt ome durement.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. l.

2141. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 2255. (c. 1365)

Let thy attyre bee comely, but not costly.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1579)

On p. 154 Lyly has, "Let your attyre be comely, but not too costly."

She saith yet decent attyre is good though it be not costly, and they sweare vnlesse it be deere, it is not comely.

JOHN LYLY, Liuidia to Euphues, p. 193.

Let thy apparell be but meane, neyther too braue to shew thy pride, nor too base to bewray thy pouertie.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 308.

For thy dyet be not sumptuous, nor yet simple: For thy attyre not costly, nor yet clownish.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 476.

Exceed not in the humour of rags and bravery, for these will soon be out of fashion; but money in thy purse will ever be in fashion; and no man is esteemed for gay garments, but by fools and women.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. vii. (1616)

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 70. (1600)

Neat, not gaudy.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Wordsworth, 11 June, 1806.

The admiration of the "neat but not gaudy," which is commonly reported to have influenced the devil when he painted his tail pea-green.

JOHN RUSKIN, in Architectural Magazine, Nov., 1838. See also under NEATNESS.

Love of dress is sure the very curse.

Ere fancy you consult, consult your purse.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 487. (1940)

1 Better to see a clout [patch] than a hole out.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 325. (1605)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6310. (1732) The Germans say, "Besser ein Flick als ein Loch" (Better a patch than a hole).

The best Patch is off the same Cloth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4417. (1732)

2 The selvidge makes shew of the cloth.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maistre. (1611)

The self-edge makes show of the cloth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1670)

The Selvidge sheweth the Cloth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4744. (1732)

3 Fine Cloaths oftentimes hide a base Descent.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1535. (1732)

4 Good Clothes open all Doors.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1705. (1732)

There is one other reason for dressing well, namely that dogs respect it, and will not attack you in good clothes.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1870.

5 So I be warm, let the people laugh.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4195. (1732)

6 You are in the end—exactly what you are. Put on a wig with a million curls, put on your feet the boots with the highest heels, yet you remain in the end just what you are. (Du bist am Ende—was du bist. | Setz' dir Perücken auf von Millionen Locken, | Setz' deinen Fuss auf ellenhohe Socken, | Du bleibst doch immer, was du bist.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4. (1806)

7 The hood makes not the monke, nor the apparel the man.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ix, 19. (1617) See also under APPEARANCE.

Dress does not make the man, but it often makes a successful one.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 23. (1880) Clothes and manners do not make the man; but, when he is made, they greatly improve his appearance.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 20. (1887)

8 Mend your clothes and you may hold out this year.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 105. (1640)

Another proverb declares that "Mendings are honourable, rags are abominable." The Spaniards say, "Hilo y aguja, media vestidura" (Thread and needle are half clothing).

When you incline to have new clothes, look first well over the old ones, and see if you cannot shift with them another year, either by scouring, mending or even patching if necessary. Remember, a patch on your coat, and money in your pocket, is better and more creditable than a writ on your back, and no money to take it off.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

Patch your coat and it will last another year. (Remienda tu paño, y pasaras tu año.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 276. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

9 Ever since we wear clothes, we know not one another.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 174. (1640)

10 It is a bad clothe that will take no colour.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. ((1546)

"Ye are never so wise," Heywood continues, "To take specke of colour, of good aduysse."

Be your cloath neuer so badde it will take some colour.

JOHN LYLLY, Euphues and His England, p. 408. (1580)

It's a bad cloth indeed that will take no colour. (Cattiva è quella lana che non si può tingere.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Italian, p. 71. (1670)

11 'Tis not the robe or garment I affect;

For who would marry with a suit of clothes?

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Royal King and the Loyal Subject. Act ii, sc. 2. (1637)

12 Take your clothes and go.

IRVING JONES. Title and refrain of song. (1897)

13 It's not in clothes that diversity pleases me, it's in spirit. (Ce n'est pas sur l'habit | Que la diversité me plaît; c'est dans l'esprit.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 3. (1678)

14 I will not put off my clothes until I am ready to go to bed. (Je ne me veux pas despouiller, devant que de m'aller coucher.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580) Quoting a saying often in the mouths of fathers, who refuse to divide their possessions among their children.

An Englishman . . . loves not to pull off his clothes till he goes to bed.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, sc. 3. No. 11. (1645) Archbishop Grindall . . . was willing to put off his clothes before he went to bed, and in his lifetime to resign his place to doctor Whitgift.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), i, 343. (1662) He'll not put off his doublet before he goes to bed, i. e., part with his estate before he die.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 239. (1678)

Robert demanded . . . Normandy and Maine. William refused with many pithy sayings. It was not his manner to take off his clothes till he went to bed.

E. A. FREEMAN, William the Conqueror. Ch. 10. (1888)

<sup>1</sup> Care not too much for thy clothes.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 61. (c. 900)

<sup>2</sup> The soul of this man is his clothes.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii. 5. 45. (1602)

All his reverend wit Lies in his wardrobe.

JOHN WEBSTER, White Devil. Act ii, sc. 1. (1612)

Thy clothes are all the soul thou hast.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune, v, 3, 170. (c. 1613)

<sup>3</sup> Little girl, you look so small;

Don't you wear no clothes at all?

Don't you wear no chemise shirt?

Don't you wear no petty-skirt?

Don't you wear no underclothes

But your corset and your hose?

W. A. SUNDAY, Sermon. (c. 1912)

<sup>4</sup> We won't tear his clothes to hold him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>5</sup> She wears her clothes as if they were thrown on her with a pitchfork.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

She looked as if she had walked straight out of the ark.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 7.) [She] looked as though her clothes had been stuck on her back with a pitchfork.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 15. (1857)

Her dresses always looked as though they had been designed in a rage and put on in a tempest. . . . She tried to look picturesque, but only succeeded in being untidy, . . . like a bird of paradise that had been out all night in the rain.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 4. (1891)

<sup>6</sup> He who was born first has the greatest number of old clothes.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849) Quoted as "a saying of the Wolofs."

CLOUD

<sup>7</sup> Did you never see a cloud in the sky which might be a centaur or leopard, or a wolf or bull? (καταύρω δμοίαν ἢ παρδάλει ἢ λύκῳ ἢ ταύρῳ;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 346. (423 B.C.)

Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel? . . . Or like a whale?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 393. (1600)

Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish; A vapour sometime like a bear or lion.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 14, 2. (1606)

Small black fragments of clouds like smoke, flying underneath, which some call messengers, and others Noah's Ark.

THOMAS BEST, Treatise on Angling, p. 145. (1787) Referred to also in CLARE's Village Minstrel, ii, 27, and in BLACKMORE's Cradock Nowell, ch. 31.

I saw . . . several parcels of those white, curled clouds that we call "judges' Wigs."

WILLIAM COBBETT, Rural Rides, 2 Aug., 1823.

<sup>8</sup> They have no more to do with . . . than with last year's clouds. (Que ne tienen que ver más . . . que con las nubes de antaño.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 73. (1615)

<sup>9</sup> All our fathers were under the cloud. (οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν πάντες ὑπὸ τὴν νεφέλην ἦσαν.)

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, x, 1. (c. A.D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Patres nostri omnes sub nube fuerunt."

When he was under a cloud at court.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Norfolk, ii, 453. (1662)

I have known him to do great service to gentlemen under a cloud.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. v, ch. 4. (1752) Being under a cloud and having little differences with his relations.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 31. (1840)

<sup>10</sup> The Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire. (Dominus autem praecedebat eos ad ostendendam viam per diem in columna nubis, et per noctem in columna ignis.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xiii, 21. (c. 800 B.C.)

The Pillar of the Cloud.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN. Title of hymn beginning, "Lead, kindly light." (1868)

<sup>11</sup> A single cloud can hide the whole of the sun (Una nube á eclipsar todo un sol.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim 23. (1647)

One Cloud is enough to eclipse all the Sun.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3743. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> All clouds are not rain clouds. (Non stillant omnes, quas cernis in aere nubes.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 283

Every cloud engenders not a storm.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 3, 13. (1591)

<sup>13</sup> When clouds appear like rocks and towers. The earth's refreshed by frequent showers.

WILLIAM HONE, Peep Book, col. 300. (1831)

When mountains and cliffs in the clouds appear. Some sudden and violent showers are near.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 96. (1869)

A round-topped cloud with flattened face
Carries rainfall in its face.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 96. See INWARDS for further weather proverbs connected with clouds.

1 The brightest hours of prosperity have their clouds.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 165. (1751)
Few days pass without some clouds.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 4. (1846)

2 Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. (Ecce nubecula, parva quasi vestigium hominis ascendebat de mari.)
Old Testament: 1 Kings, xviii, 44. (c. 700 B. C.)

3 That fole . . . wuneden in the cluden.

LAYAMON, Brut, l. 31180. (c. 1205)

He cleaves the clouds.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678)
They amuse themselves with phantoms in the clouds.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 176. (1751)
In the clouds were they cradled, . . . in the clouds will they die.

THOMAS ATTWOOD, Speech, 7 May, 1832. Referring to the House of Lords. "In nubibus" is the Latin proverbial phrase.

4 Was I deceiv'd, or did a sable cloud
Turn forth her silver lining on the night?

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 221. (1634)

I turn my silver lining outward like Milton's cloud.

CHARLES DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 18. (1852)
Nature is kind enough to give even her clouds a humorous lining.

LOWELL, My Study Windows: Thoreau. (1871)
While we see the cloud, let us not shut our eyes to the silver lining.

SAMUEL SMILES, Character. Ch. 8. (1871)
Don't let's be downhearted. There's a silver lining to every cloud.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)

Though outwardly a gloomy shroud,
The inner half of every cloud

Is bright and shining:

I therefore turn my clouds about
And always wear them inside out

To show the lining.

ELLEN THORNECROFT FOWLER, The Wisdom of Folly. (c. 1900)

There's a silver lining
Through the dark clouds shining,
Turn the dark cloud inside out,

Till the boys come home.

IVOR NOVELLO AND LENA GUILBERT FORD, Keep the Home Fires Burning. (1915) every cloud | has its silver | lining but it is | sometimes a little | difficult to get it to | the mint.

DON MARQUIS, certain maxims of archy. (1927)
Turn the bluebird inside out and you'll find the silver lining.

THEODORA DUBOIS, The McNeills Chase a Ghost, p. 142. (1941)

Stop seeing dark clouds behind every silver lining.
BUDD SCHULBERG, What Makes Sammy Run, p. 28. (1941)

My clouds have at least pewter linings.

ILKA CHASE, Past Imperfect, p. 135. (1942)

It sure looks like the old sayin' 'bout every cloud havin' a silver linin' is true!

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 130. (1942)

BEHIND THE CLOUDS THE SUN IS SHINING, see under COMPENSATION.

5 Clouds are wont to scatter and bright daylight to return. (Nube solet pulsa candidus ire dies.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 142. (c. A. D. 9)

After clouds comes clear weather.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch.

10. (1762) See under SUN AND RAIN.

6 When clouds appear, wise men put on their cloaks.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 3, 32. (1592)

7 He has a cloud in 's face.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 2, 51. (1606)

8 Wait till the Clouds Roll By.

J. T. WOOD. Title of song. (1881)

CLOVER

9 The clover is a homely little flower, but which flower has more honey?

JOHN A. SHEED, Salt from My Attic, p. 36. (1928)

10 I liv'd in clover.

UNKNOWN, The British Apollo. Vol. ii, No. 105, p. 3/1. (1710)

You might have lived your day in clover.

W. M. PRAED, Poems (1864), i, 136. (c. 1835)

He has been sometimes in clover as a travelling tutor.

ROBERT VAUGHAN, Hours with the Mystics (1856)

Grisi yet lives in clover.

ROBERT BROWNING, Youth and Art. (1864)

A man with coals and candles and a pound a week might be in clover here.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. I, ch. 15. (1864)

Pigs in Clover.

FRANK DANBY (MRS JULIA FRANKAU). Title of novel. (1903)

He was soon in clover.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Helping the Other Fellow. (1908)

He is just Adam's-apple-deep in clover.

OGDEN NASII, Are You Saving That Seat for Anyone? (1935)

You dwell in clover.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Song Against Sweetness and Light. (1940)

The stock would go up . . . and he would be wading in four leaf clovers.

C. W. GRAFTON, The Rat Began to Gnaw the Rope, p. 229. (1943)

CLOWN

<sup>1</sup> He is no clown that drives the plow, but he that doth clownish things.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736. The original meaning of "clown" was a rustic or peasant, as in FULLER's "Clown from Colonus, one that plougheth the ground," (Worthies, ii, 177); or COWPER's "The clown, the child of nature, without guile" (The Task, iv, 623).

<sup>2</sup> Clowns are best in their own Company, but Gentlemen are best everywhere.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1117. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> You know well the proverbe: Clawe a Clowne he will thee Scratch, Scratch a Clowne he will thee clawe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk iii, p. 104. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Anoynt a clowne, and hee will grip you, grip a clowne and hee will anoynt you.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 520. (1623)

Give a clown your finger, and he will take your hand.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 116. (1640) Anoint a clown, and he will prick you.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p.9. (1659) Clowns kill [each] other, and gentles cleave together.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 520. (1623)

CLUB

<sup>4</sup> Taking up a cudgel, . . . sware solemnly that she would make clubs trump if hee brought any bastard brat within her dores

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto, 27. (1538)

I knew by their shuffling, clubs would be trump.

UNKNOWN, Widow of Wailing Street, iii.1. (1607)

Beware, Clubs are trumps; or clubs will prove trumps.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 29. (1639)

No place in England where everyone can go is considered respectable. This is the genesis of the club—out of the Housewife by Respectability.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 9. (1888)

TO CUT A CLUB TO KNOCK ONE'S OWN BRAINS OUT, see under RETRIBUTION.

COAL

<sup>5</sup> [He] knew best how to fetch an heretick over the coles.

CARDINAL WILLIAM ALLEN, in FULKE, Consultation, p. 372. (1522)

Heretikes finely fetcht over the coales.

GEORGE GILPIN, The Bee Hive of the Romische Church. Title. (1580)

They'd haul you o'er the coals.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 4. (1818)

To haul over the coals, is to give a severe reprimand. Supposed to refer to the ordeal by fire.

JOHN T. BROCKETT, Glossary of North Country Words, p. 43. (1825)

"Hauled over the coals" by the Admiralty.

MARRYAT, Newton Forster. Ch. 13. (1832)

The captain had been hauling him over the coals.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 13. (1834)

He is being raked backwards over a bed of coals.

OGDEN NASH, I Never Even Suggested It. (1938)

<sup>6</sup> Glowing coales sparkle often.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 84. (1633)

Glowing coals sparkle oft. When the mind is heated with any passion, it will often break out in words and expressions. Psalm xxxix.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1670)

Glowing coals will be sparkling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1662. (1732) Conversely "If coals do not burn, they blacken."

<sup>7</sup> We may well call it black diamonds. Every basket is power and civilization. For coal is a portable climate. It carries the heat of the tropics to Labrador and the polar circle; and it is the means of transporting itself whithersoever it is wanted.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

<sup>8</sup> Its a cold coal to blow at.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (c. 1595)

That's a cauld coal to blow at, mither.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 7. (1816)

<sup>9</sup> So far from being needless pains it may bring considerable profit to carry Char-coals to New-castle.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine, p. 128. (1650) Newcastle-on-Tyne is a great center of the coal industry, and the meaning of the proverb is that it is labor lost to take anything to a place where there is already a superfluity of it. Fuller, however, apparently thinks differently.

To send you our news from England, were to carry coals to Newcastle.

RALPH THORESBY, Correspondence, i, 16. (1682)

It would be a sending of coals to Newcastle with a vengeance.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Joanna Baillie, 10 Feb., 1822.

Talk about coals to Newcastle! Why didn't he take a ship-load of palm-leaf fans to Spitzbergen?

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Shoes. (1909)

However much she carried coals to Newcastle, or tobacco pouches to those who did not smoke.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Tatterdemalion, p.9. (1920)

It would be like bringing coal to Newcastle, Pa.

RING LARDNER, Now and Then. (1926)

Coals to Newcastle, and so on.

THEODORA DUBOIS, Death Is Late to Lunch, p. 92. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> Both abyde and suffire [both abide and suffer] a while, and go blawe at the fyre, that es, first do thi werkes, and go than allane to thi prayers and thi meditacyons.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, Prose Treatises. No. xi, p. 33. (c. 1350)

By my fayth, syr duc, ye can wel playe and blowe atte cole.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Charles the Grete, p. 119. (1485)

Leat them that be a colde blowe at the cole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Let them who expect to profit by a business drudge at it.

Let him that is cold blow at the coale.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 29. (1633)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1670) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 235. (1721)

Let him that is cold blow the fire.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3184. (1732)

1
Thou seemest to blow ye coale which thou woldest quench.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 249. (1580)

Blowing the coals between polemical divines.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Alciphron. Ch. 2. sec. 23. (1732)

By these means he blew the coals of her jealousy.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Count Fathom, p. 129. (1753)

To blow a coal, is to make mischief or sow dissension between neighbours.

J. F. and MARY PALMER, The Devonshire Dialect, p. 31. (1837)

2
If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink; For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head. (Prunas enim congregabis super caput eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 21–22. (c. 350 B.C.) Paul quotes this in his Epistle to the Romans, xii, 20 (C. A.D. 57), the Greek being, ἀνθρακας πυρὸς συναθροῖς ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ. The version in the Vulgate differs somewhat: "Carbones ignis congeres super caput eius." "To heap coals of fire" is to produce remorse by requiting evil with good.

To loue

Thine enemye in al wyse eueue forth with thiselue,

Cast coles on his hed.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xiii, l. 144. (1377)

Doe good against euill: and heap hoat burning coales upon his head.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Perciuall, p. 7. (1589)

If thou must needs haue thy Revenge of thine Enemy, with a soft Tongue break his Bones, heap Coals of Fire on his head, forgive him, and enjoy it.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12. (1682)

I forgive your reviling of me: there's a shovelful of live coals for your head.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letter to Landor, 22 Nov., 1846.

I almost never spoke of [Disraeli] without contempt . . . and here he comes with a pan of hot coals for my guilty head.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to John Carlyle. (1874)

Few heads are sensitive to coals of fire.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 134. (1940)

3
We have found a coal instead of a treasure, as the saying is. (Carbonem, ut aiunt, pro thesauro convenit.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fable 6. (c. 25 B.C.)

The fable of the two bald men who found a comb. Smart, in his translation, puts it, "A hobnail for a hundred pound."

4
Wyll ye bere no coles?

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), ii, 34. (1522)

To carry or bear coals, to do degrading work, or submit to humiliation.

He carryed coales that could abide no geast.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Churchyard's Chippees, p. 37. (1575)

He had offended one that would beare no coales.

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell, p. 112. (1581)

O' my word, we'll not carry coals.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 1. (1592)

I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 2, 50. (1598)

Above all things, you must carry no coals.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, May-Day. Act i. (c. 1602)

If one . . . will carrie coales, and meekly suffer rebuke, he is noted of cowardize.

HENRY CROSSE, Vertues Common-wealth, p. 15. (1603)

I am no dog in the manger—but I will not carry coals neither.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 28. (1821)

COAST

5
All was not cleare in the coste.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

Seeing the coast cleare . . . he sate him downe.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde. Works (1883), i, 52. (1590)

See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, i, 3, 89. (1591)

No sooner cleered was the Coast, but that the bidden Guest Steales to her Chamber Doore.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albions England, xii, 74. (1602)

Herod is now sent home. The coast is clear for the return of that holy family.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, i, 6. (1612)

He is sure the coast is clear.

ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, ii, 288. (1634)

With these distinctions, he says, he clears the coach.

THOMAS HOBBS, of Libertie and Necessite, p. 57. (1656)

Swagger while the coast is clear.

SWIFT, On a Printer Being Sent to Newgate, l. 7. (1736)

COAT

<sup>1</sup> He that has but one Coat, cannot lend it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2135. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> They stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours. (Nudaverunt eum tunica talari, et polymita.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxxvii, 23. (c.800 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Turn your coat according to the wind. (Man soll den Mantel keren nach der Wind wehet.)

GOTTFRIED OF STRASSBURG, Apothegm. (c. 1215)
According to Büchmann.

So turned they their typpets by way of exchange.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Many times Melanchthon hath turned his coat.

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, The Hatchet of Heresies, p. 74. (1565)

You marvel that I should so soon turn my tippet and recant.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Prefatory Letter. (1576)

There are many who in time of danger turn their coats. (Plusieurs se sont trouvés qui, d'écharpe changeants, | Aux dangers.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Chauve-Souris et les Deux Belettes. Bk. ii, fab. 5. (1668)

Wear the coat of two parishes. (Porter l'habit de deux paroisses.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 11. (1694)

He had not learn'd to turn his Coat,
Nor for a Party give his Vote.

SWIFT, The Beasts' Confession, l. 97. (1732)

Sir John Urrie, a soldier of fortune . . . had already changed sides twice during the Civil War, and was destined to turn his coat a third time before it was ended.

SCOTT, Legend of Montrose. Ch. 17. (1819)

He . . . turn'd his coat—and would have turn'd his skin.

LORD BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 97. (1822) Referring to Robert Southey.

A high reward . . . might tempt him once more to turn his tippet.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 29. (1826)

<sup>4</sup> A narrow toga befits a client of sense. (Arta decet sanum comitem toga.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 30. (20 B. C.)

I shall cut my cote after my cloth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

The phrase is said to be a relic of the sumptuary laws.

Cut thy coat according to thy cloth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 430. (1580)

Cutting thy coat by the cloth, go no farther then shall become thy estate.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 456.

They must shape their cotes good men according to their cloth.

THOMAS NASH, Unfortunate Traveller. (1594)

You cannot be content to shape your coate according to your cloth.

UNKNOWN, Health to the Gentlemanly Profession of Serving-Men. (1598)

I measure my garment according to my cloth.
JOHN FLORIO, Montaigne, i, 40. (1603) Florio's paraphrase of Montaigne's, "Je foyz courir ma despense quand et quand ma recepte" (I make my expenses run according to my receipts).

Seek not to go beyond your tether,
But cut your thongs unto your leather.

CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)

Conform thyself to thy present fortune, and cut thy coat according to thy cloth.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3. (1621)

Cut your cloth, sir, according to your calling.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Beggar's Bush. Act iv, sc. 1. (1622)

(After the commune proverbe) cute your thong after or accordyng vnto your ledler.

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Housholders, sig. F5. (1637)

I must cut my coat according to my cloth.

JOHN DRYDEN, Wild Gallant. Act i, sc. 2. (1669)

According to her cloth she cut her coat.

JOHN DRYDEN, Cock and the Fox, l. 20. (1700)

One should have his coat according to the cold. (On doit avoir le robe selon le froid.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 145. (1814)

A French proverb. The French also say, "Faire de tel pain telle soupe" (To make your soup according to your bread), or "Selon ta bourse gouverne ta bouche" (According to your purse govern your mouth) or, "Il faut mesurer son vol à ses ailes" (One must measure one's flight by one's wings). or "Tailler la robe selon le corps" (To cut the dress according to the body).

If thy camel break down, put on an ass-load.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 17. (1817)

If ready money be mensura publica, let every one cut his cloak according to his cloth.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1823) Reporting a debate in the House of Commons.

We must cut our coat according to our cloth and adapt ourselves to changing circumstances.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 12. (1869)

Cut your cloth according to your measure (Liang t'i ts'ai i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2010. (1875)

We must cut our capers according to our cloth.
NGAIO MARSH, Death of a Peer, p. 371. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> Coats change with countries.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

<sup>6</sup> Whose coat was as bare of nap as a frog's is of feathers.

J. G. LOCKHART, Reginald Dalton, vi, 1. (1823)

<sup>7</sup> It's not the gay coat makes the gentleman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)

It is the coat that makes the man respectable.
ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act ii, sc. 1. (1787) See also under CLOTHES.

<sup>1</sup>
Lady Smart: Colonel, methinks your coat is too short.

Colonel Atwit: It will be long enough before I get another, madam.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

NEAR IS MY COAT, see under SELF.

COBBLERS, *see Shoemakers

COCK

<sup>2</sup>
Of cocks are many capons made, but from capons no one ever made cocks. (Des coqs il se faict des chappons assez; mais des chappons il ne s'en faict jamais des coqs.)

ARCESILAUS, when sneered at because many of his pupils left his school for the Epicurean, but none ever came from the Epicurean to his. (c. 250 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 11.

The capon is not welcomed by the hens.
(Bien savez le coc chaponnez Est as gelines mal venus.)

JEAN DE CONDÉ, Le Sentier Batu, i. 133. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 250.

<sup>3</sup>
Young cocks love no coops.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 336.
(1605) FULLER, Gnomologia, No.6036.(1732)

<sup>4</sup>
Another cock will crow to you. (Otro gallo te cantara.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 70. (1615)
Spaniards have always been passionately fond of cock-fighting, and many of their proverbs and expressions have their origin in the language of the pit

<sup>5</sup>
Whan that the firste cok hath crowe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 501. (c. 1386)

This joly lyf han thise two clerkes lad
Til that the thridde cok bigan to synge.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale, l. 312. (c. 1386)

The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 209. (1592)

Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 1, 158. (1600)

We were carousing till the second cock.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 27. (1605)

Here we are, half way to Alcalá, between cocks and midnight.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i. sc. 4. (1840)

<sup>6</sup>
The captain of the boat, a determined fellow, went ashore in the hope of persuading them to refund—but that cock wouldn't fight.

DAVID CROCKETT, Exploits, p. 99. (1836) That scheme wouldn't work.

Tell that to the marines, major, that cock won't fight with me.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 67. (1850)

That won't "go down."

I tried to see the arms on the carriage, but there were none; so that cock wouldn't fight.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Allon Locke. Ch.24.(1850)

That cock won't fight here, young man.

BRET HARTE, Luck of Roaring Camp. (1860)

My lawyer argued that . . . no proof had been brought . . . that I had wilfully killed anybody
. . . But that cock wouldn't fight. I was found guilty.

ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), *Robbery
Under Arms*. Ch. 1. (1888)

That cock won't fight any longer.

BERNARD SHAW, Widowers' Houses. Act iii. (1892)

<sup>7</sup>
If the cock crows on going to bed,
He's sure to rise with a watery head.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 18. (1846)

There will be rain next day.

If the cock crows when he goes to bed,
He gets up in the morning with a wet head.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 133.
(1893) For other sayings connecting the cock with the weather, see INWARDS.

<sup>8</sup>
The cock does crow. To let us know,
If we be wise, 'Tis time to rise.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 19. (1846)

<sup>9</sup>
As the cocke croweth, so the chekyn lernyth.
FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MSS., 52. (c. 1350)
The yonge Cocke learneth to crowe hye of the olde.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folys, p. 91.
(1509) TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 19. (1550)

The young cocke croweth, as he the olde heereth
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

As the olde cocke crows so doeth the chick.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, *The Arte of English
Poesie*, iii, 18 (1589)

Which by the proverb every man discerns,
Since as the old cock crows, the young cock learns.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Divell, 176. (1615)

As the old cock crows, so crows the young. (Chi de gallina nasce conven che rozole.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1678)

An Italian proverb. The Germans say, "Wie die Alten singen, so zwitschern die Jungen"
(As the old birds sing, the young twitter)
RAY has a variant, "The young pig grunts like the old sow"

The young cock crows as he heard the old one
SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs,
p. 300. (1710)

As the old cock crows the young cock learns.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 18. (1821)

There's an old adage which saith, "As the old cock crows, so doth the young."

MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 25. (1834)

1
A Barley-corn is better than a Diamond to a Cock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 7. (1732)
Like Teague's Cocks; that fought one another, tho' all were of the same Side.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3234.

2
Rooster makes mo' racket dan de hin w'at lay de aig.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

Hongry rooster don't cackle w'en he fine a wum.

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs.

The only recourse of the rooster without a tail is to prove that the other roosters are far from being nightingales.

H. S. KEELER, The Book with the Orange Leaves, p. 270. (1942)

3
He knows how to carry the dead cock home.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 193. (1869)

He knows how to bear defeat manfully

4
Bring him to weare a cocks comb at ende.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

5
He setteth all thynges at cocke in the hope

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 310. (1519)

The phrase "cock-o-hoop" is a synonym for unbridled drinking, and by extension for reckless enjoyment, or wasteful excess of any kind. It is said to have originated from the custom called "strunning" a barrel of ale, where the cock or spigot was taken out, laid on the hoop at the top of the barrel, and the ale permitted to run without stoppage until the barrel was empty. The O.E.D. questions this. See p. 568/2. To be "cock-a-hoop" is, of course, to be in a state of elation, whether alcoholic or otherwise. The ancestor, perhaps of "whoopie."

They . . . sette cocke a hoope, and fyll in all the cups at ones.

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Dialogue of Comforte Against Tribulation. Pt. ii. (1529)

Cheare now maye I make & set cocke on the hoope.

Fyll in all the pottes, and byd me welcome hostesse.

JOHN BALE, A Comedye Concernynge Thre Lawes, l. 1806. (1538)

Let us sette the cocke on the hope, and make good chere.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. G3. (1540)
Now I am a frysker, all men doth on me looke:

What should I do, but set cocke on the hoope?

ANDREW BOORDE, Introduction to Knowledge, p. 117. (1547)

He maketh hauok, and setteth cocke on the hoope.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 54. (1562)

Make mery, daunce, and sing,

Set cocke a whope, and play care away.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Livest, the More Foole Thou Art, sig. B2. (1568)

You'll make a mutiny among my guests!

You will set cock-a-hoop.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, l. 3, 82. (1594)

These knaues Sit cocke-a-hope, but Hobson pays for all.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, If You Know Me Not. Pt. ii. (1606)

To make good cheere, set cocke-a-hoope, throw the house out at windowes.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Se Goguer. (1611)

Resolved . . . to set cock in hoope, and in guzling and good cheere spent all that was left.

JOHN MOLLE, tr., Camerarius' Living Librarie, iii, 1, 147. (1621)

Hudibras . . . having routed the whole Troop, With Victory was Cock-a-hoop.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 14. (1663)

Your eyes, lips, breasts are so provoking

They set my heart more cock-a-hoop

Than could whole seas of cray-fish soupe.

JOHN GAY, Poems (1745), ii, 123. (1720)

They are all as cock-a-hoop about her chance as ever I saw folks in my life.

HAWLEY SMART, Cleverly Won. Ch. 10. (1887)

6
Better be a cock for a day than a hen for a year.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

The cock crows but the hen goes.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 19.

7
It is a very ill cock that will not crow before he be old.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 366. (1580)

It will be a forward cock that croweth in the shell.

JOHN LYLY, Endimion, ii, 2. (1591)

8
Well done, old cock!

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnaturall Combat Act ii, sc. 1. (1639)

Thou art a Cock of the right kind.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress, ii, 112. (1684)

Fetch up your nag, my old cock.

A. B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes, p. 22. (1835)

Certainly, my high old cock!

F. R. STOCKTON, Rudder Grange, p. 34. (1879)

9
Like a cock courageous only at home. (ἐνδοῦχος ἄρ' ἀλέκτωρ.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode xii, l. 14. (472 B.C.)

The cock is worth most on his own dunghill. (Gallus in suo sterquilino plurimum potest.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 7.

(A.D. 55) Referring to Claudius, and making a play on his birthplace, gallus meaning both a cock and a Gaul. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 25. The Spaniards say, "Cada gallo canta en su muladar" (Every cock will crow on his own dunghill).

The coc is kene on his owne mixenne.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwle, p. 140. (c. 1220)

As Seneca seith, a cock is most mygyt on his dongehille.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, vii, 5. (1387)

Every wyht ys bold upon hys owne (erly and late) at the dongel at hys gate. (Chascun est fort sur son fumier et en sa terre se fait fier.)

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., De Guilleville's Pilgrimage

of the Life of Man, l. 10048. (c. 1430) l. 6351 in the French text. Literally, "Everyone is bold on his dunghill, and on his own ground puts on proud airs." The French also say, "Chien sur son fumier est hardi" (A dog on his own dunghill is bold); and "Dessous son fumier se fait le chien fier" (Being on his own dunghill makes the dog proud).

Euery cocke is proude on his owne dunghill.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) They are on their own dunghill. (Ilz sont sus leurs fumiers.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 55. (1548) As cocke on his dunghill crowing cranck.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender, Sept., l. 47. (1580)

Much like bold cocks that lowd on midding [dunghill] crowes.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Challenge, l. 78. (1588) A cock is crouse [bold] on his own midding.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595) Another Scottish form is, "A cock aye craws crousest [with most spirit] on his ain midden-head."

Every cock will fight on his own dunghill.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelour. Act ii, sc. 2. (1692)

Akin to the arrogance of the village cock, who never crows but upon his own dunghill.

SMOLLETT, Humphrey Clinker, 13 July. (1771) Every cock may crow on his own dunghill.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 13. (1869)

Any cock can crow on his own midden.

HALL CAINE, The Manxman. Bk. vi, ch. 13. (1894) He's master in his own household and a strutting cock in his own chicken run.

WILLIAM O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 32. (1942)

<sup>1</sup> Quoeth the young cock, I'll neither meddle nor make.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678) There is chance in the cock's spur.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111.

<sup>2</sup> We'll see if the red cock craw not in his bonnie barnyard ae morning before day-dawing.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 3. (1815) Incendiarism.

The Crowing of the Red Cock.

EMMA LAZARUS. Title of poem. (c. 1885)

<sup>3</sup> Let ilka cock fight his ain battle.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

<sup>4</sup> The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 1, 150. (1600)

He's welly like a cock as thinks the sun's rose o' purpose to hear him crow.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 33. (1859)

I recoil dazzled at having, I, the cock, made the sun to rise. (Je recule éblouie . . . d'avoir, moi, le coq, faire élever le soleil.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Chanticleer. Act ii, sc. 3. (1910)

<sup>5</sup> Alexander and Darius when they straeue who should be Cocke of thys world's dung-hill.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, An Apologie for Poetrie, p. 43. (1581)

Sir Andrew is grown the Cock of the Club since he left us.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 131. (1711)

At cuffs I was always the cock of the school.

SWIFT, Grand Question. (1729)

The post, as they call it, of cock of the circuit.

ROGER NORTH, Life of Guilford, i, 68. (c. 1730) He was getting to be cock of the wood.

J. K. PAULDING, Westward Ho, ii, 56. (1832)

Bill was too much a cock of the walk to mind it.

C. F. HOFFMAN, Winter in the West, i, 259. (1835)

He was cock of the school out of doors, and the very last boy in.

W. M. THACKERAY, Catherine. Ch. 8. (1840)

In the states assembly they were then the cocks of the walk.

J. L. MOTLEY, Rise of the Dutch Republic, i, 253. (1855)

He thinks himself cock of the walk.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 48. (1880)

Mr. Richard is cock of the walk.

BERNARD SHAW, Devil's Disciple. Act i, (1897)

The cock-of-the-roost sits aloft like Jupiter.

O. HENRY, The Four Million, p. 165. (1906)

We're cock of the loft here.

C. C. ANDREWS, Recollections, p. 166. (1907)

<sup>6</sup> Delightsome-voiced cock. (ἡμερόφων' δλέκτορ.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 81. (c. 475 B.C.) Cited by ATHENAEUS, ix, 374D.

Hail, cockerel! (χαίρε δλέκτορ.)

DIOGENES, to a singer whose audience always walked out on him, explaining it was because his song "made everybody get up." (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 48.

She hadde a cok, hight Chauntecleer,

In al the land of crowing nas his peer.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 29. (c. 1387)

<sup>7</sup> Crito, we owe a cock to Aesculapius! Be sure that it is paid! (ὦ Κρίτων, τῷ Ἀσκληπιῷ δέδωμεν ἀλεκτρύονα.)

SOCRATES, to the friend with whom he had been conversing after drinking the hemlock. (399 B.C.) See PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 118. A cock was the usual offering made to Aesculapius, the Greek god of medicine and of healing. The phrase, "To sacrifice a cock to Aesculapius," meant to return thanks—to pay the doctor's bill, as it were—after recovery from illness.

When men a dangerous disease did 'scape,

Of old, they gave a cock to Aesculape.

BEN JONSON, Epigram. (1612)

Having purposely sacrificed the cock to Aesculapius.

HENRY HALLAM, Introduction to the Literature of Europe. Bk. ii, ch. 4, sec. 62. (1839)

<sup>1</sup>
An old proverbe groundid on sapience,
Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe schoon.
UNKNOWN, Political Poems, ii, 215. (1444)

COCKPIT

<sup>2</sup>
Now I have gained the cockpit of the Western world, the Academy of arms for many years.
JAMES HOWELL, Dodona's Grove. (1640)
The Netherlands have been for many yeares . . .
the very Cockpit of Christendome, the Schoole of Armes, and Rendezvous of all adventurous Spirits.

JAMES HOWELL, *Instructions for Foreign
Travel*. (1642)
The part of Belgium through which our route lies, has been called the 'Cock-pit of Europe.'
MURRAY, Handbook to Northern Germany, 158. (1843) Because it has been the scene of so many battles.

COCKROACH

<sup>3</sup>
The cockroach is never in the right where the fowl is concerned. (Ravet pas teni raison devant la poule.)

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 230.
(1916) Mr. Marvin states that Lafcadio
Hearn found this Trinidad Creole proverb in every West Indian dialect that he had been able to study during the three years he spent there. Another form is, "The cockroach is never so silly as to approach the door of the henhouse," or "The cockroach is always wrong when arguing with the chicken," or "The cockroach never wins its cause when the chicken is judge." It is said that hens in the West Indies feed on cockroaches to such an extent that the yolks of their eggs are pale, thin and more or less bitter. See Wit and Wisdom of the Haytiens,
Harper's Magazine, 1875.

COINCIDENCE

<sup>4</sup>
A "strange coincidence," to use a phrase
By which such things are settled nowadays.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 78.
(1823) Byron is referring to the expression of Queen Caroline's advocate in the House of Lords, who spoke of circumstances in her association with Bergami as "odd instances of strange coincidence."

One of those singular coincidences which occasionally appear.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering: Introduction. (1829)
The long arm of coincidence has reached after me.
C. HADDOX CHAMBERS, Captain Swift. Act ii.
(1888)

The long arm of coincidence could be strained only so far.

EDITH HOWIE, Murder at Stone House, p. 167
(1942)

Now you're dragging in the long arm of coincidence.

WHITMAN CHAMBERS, Bring Me Another Murder, p. 166. (1943)

COLD

<sup>5</sup>
The unfortunate traveller . . . often finds himself left out in the cold.

T. H. S. ESCOTT, England, i, 451. (1879)

He left her out in the cold.

D. C. MURRAY, First Person Singular. Ch. 20.
(1886)

<sup>6</sup>
Cold enough to freeze the hair off a dog's back.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 11. (1843)

It was cold enough to freeze a brass monkey.

JAMES WARREN, No Sleep at All, p. 60. (1941)
The more usual form is "freeze the tail off a brass monkey."

<sup>7</sup>
Leat them that be a colde blowe at the cole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

<sup>8</sup>
Cold weather and crafty knaves come out of the north.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 10. (1659) A Japanese proverb has, "Cold tea and cold rice may be endured, but not cold looks and words."

<sup>9</sup>
Cold of complexion, good of condition.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1119. (1732)

FEED A COLD AND STARVE A FEVER, see under FEVER.

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>10</sup>
Young maids were as cold as cucumbers.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Cupid's Revenge
Act i, sc. 1. (1615) Perfectly self-possessed; showing no excitement or disturbance of feeling.

I . . . cool as a Cucumber could see
The rest of Womankind.

JOHN GAY, A New Song of New Similies. (1727)

Cucumbers are cold in the third degree.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

I was dry as a stick, hard as a stone, and cold as a cucumber.

THOMAS GRAY, Letters, iii, 47. (1760)

I rose as cool as a cucumber.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 7 July, 1829.

Thucydides . . . is as cool as a cucumber upon every act of atrocity.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Greek Literature. (1838)
Nobody knows how the phrase originated, but "cool" has come to mean "collected" or "undisturbed," not "cold."

<sup>11</sup>
He felle dede doun colde as ony stone.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., *Langtoft's
Chronicle*, 56. (c. 1300)

Fil a-swown as cold as ston.

CHAUCER (?), The Book of the Duchesse, l.
123. (c. 1369)

My herte was colde as ony stone.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Castell of Labour.
sig. A6. (1503?)

As cold as any stone.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 3, 27. (1599)

In the morning he may find himself as cold as a stone.

THOMAS DILKE, The City Lady. Act iii, sc. 3. (1697)

1 I felt as cold as Finnegan's feet, the day they buried him.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 128. (1940)

The wet air was as cold as the ashes of love.

CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 241.

2 As frost, him thoughte, his herte gan to colde.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. v, l. 535. (c. 1380)

3 As cold as any frost now wexeth she.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: The Legend of Hypermnestra, l. 122. (c. 1385)

4 With . . . hart cald as a key.

BISHOP GAVIN DOUGLAS, The Palice of Honour. Pt. i, st. 61. (1501)

It grew as cold as a key.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch.1. (1546)

My corps als cold as ony kie.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, Sonnets, xli. (1585)

As colde as any kaye.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE, Tragical Tales, p. 276. (1587)

Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 2, 5. (1592) In The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1774, Shakespeare refers to "key-cold Lucrece."

They be as cold as a key.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act iv, sc. 3. (1702)

5 You're too calculating. You're cold as a fish.

JOHN ERSKINE, Mrs. Doratt, p. 111. (1941)

Cooler than a fish on a cake of ice.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 189. (1942)

6 As cold as a whetstone.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicle, iii, 916. (1577)

Colde as Whetstones.

THOMAS DEKKER, Newes from Hell. (1606)

7 Colde as yse.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium, sig. F1. (1552)

Colder than yce.

THOMAS GRANGER, Divine Logick, p. 128. (1620)

As cold, too as any ice.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures. Ch. 5. (1845)

Feeling my feet as cold as ice.

G. STURT, Wheelwright's Shop, p. 13. (1923)

8 Euphues is as cold as clocke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 106. (1570)

As coole as a clock.

THOMAS LODGE, Euphues Shadow, sig. G2. (1592)

9 Charity is not cold enough to relieve me!

JAMES SHIRLEY, St. Patrick for Ireland. Act iii, sc. 1. (1640) See also under CHARITY.

Weather cold as charity.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin Almanack. Nov., 1675

I'm as cold as charity.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 15. (1837)

10 He was as cool as a refrigerator.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 264. (1943)

11 My hert is colde as clay.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, 227. (c. 1540) Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 480 (c. 1680) has, "The world as cold as clay."

His hands were as cold as clay.

SIR PAUL RYCAUT, tr., Gracian's Critick, 228. (1681)

The old man was as cold as clay.

RAYMOND, Love and Quiet Life, p. 168. (1894)

COLLEGE

12 You think, 'cause you been to college, you know better than anybody.

R. H. DANA, Two Years before the Mast. Ch. 6. (1840)

13 Colleges hate geniuses, just as convents hate saints.

R. W. EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education. (1870)

14 A pine bench, with Mark Hopkins at one end of it and me at the other, is a good enough college for me!

JAMES ABRAM GARFIELD, Address, at a Williams College alumni dinner, at Delmonico's, New York, 28 Dec., 1871. As quoted by WASHINGTON GLADDEN, Recollections, p. 73. Gladden was present at the dinner, but his version differs considerably from those given in The Williams Vidette, 27 Jan., 1872, and The Williams Review, 5 Feb., 1872, both of which published an account of the dinner. HINSDALE, President Garfield and Education, p. 43, gives still another version. For full discussion, see STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems, rev. ed., ch. 19. Garfield was arguing against a movement which had been started by the alumni to secure a fund to provide new buildings for the college, his contention being that a distinguished and well-paid faculty was the first essential of a great college, and in this he was merely echoing Hopkins's well-known disdain for apparatus of any kind, as expressed in his Lectures on Moral Science, p. 39, where he says that for this subject at least, "no learning is needed, no science, no apparatus, no information from distant countries." Garfield's words are usually quoted, "A university is a student on one end of a log and Mark Hopkins on the other." ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 151, quotes it as, "The ideal college consists of a log of wood with an instructor at one end and a student at the other," and attributes the saying to Hopkins himself, but it has not been found in his works.

15 Of all horned cattle, the most helpless in a printing-office is a college graduate.

HORACE GREELEY, Remark. (c. 1860)

<sup>1</sup> Colleges had turned him out and distilleries had taken him in.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Helping the Other Fellow. (1908)

<sup>2</sup> I believe that college makes complete fools of our young men. (Ideo ego adulescentulos existimo in scholis stultissimos fieri.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 1. (C. A. D. 60)

A set o' dull, conceited hashers
Confuse their brains in college-classes!
They gang in stirks, and come out asses,
Plain truth to speak.

ROBERT BURNS, First Epistle to J. Lapraik. St. 12. (1785) Stirk: young bullock.

Colleges are places where pebbles are polished and diamonds are dimmed.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Abraham Lincoln. (1894)

A college degree does not lessen the length of your ears: it only conceals it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1911)

<sup>3</sup> It is, Sir, as I have said, a small college. And yet there are those who love it.

DANIEL WEBSTER, referring to Dartmouth College, in the peroration of his argument in the Dartmouth College case (Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheaton, 517) before the Supreme Court of the United States, 10 Mar., 1818. No contemporary account of his speech contains these words, but they are quoted in a letter written by the Rev. Chauncey Allen Goodrich to Rufus Choate, 25 Nov., 1852. Goodrich, then Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory at Yale University, had gone to Washington to hear Webster's address, and his letter gives a detailed account of the scene. He was writing Choate because the latter had been asked to deliver a eulogy of Webster at the next Dartmouth Commencement exercises. (See The Colophon, second series, vol. iii, No. 1, p. 7.)

COLOR

<sup>4</sup> Colors speak all languages.

JOSEPH ADDISON: The Spectator, 27 June, 1712.

<sup>5</sup> Other colour then asshen hath she noon.

CHAUCER (?), Anelida and Arcite, l. 173. (c. 1372) See also under PALENESS.

And wher my colour was bothe fresh and reed,
Now it is wan and of a leden hewe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 174. (c. 1389)

<sup>6</sup> He wyll . . . set a false colour of lernyng on propre wittes.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Governour, i. 15. (1531) He puts a false colour upon one part of his Argument.

RICHARD BENTLEY, The Epistles of Phalaris, p. 540. (1699)

<sup>7</sup> Blue is true, Yellow's jealous,
Green's forsaken, Red's brazen,

White is love, And black is death.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes of England. (1842)

Yellow's forsaken, and green's forsworn,
But blue and red ought to be worn.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, 334. (1862)

See also under BLACK, BLUE, GREEN, RED, WHITE

<sup>8</sup> Everybody . . . considered her a little "off color."

J. G. HOLLAND, Sevenoaks, p. 114. (1875)

All the "off color" men and women of New York's "fly" circles.

R. H. SAVAGE, The Midnight Passenger, p. 21. (1900)

<sup>9</sup> Though Polypus chaunge his hue, yet the Salamander keepeth his colour.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 73. (1579)

<sup>10</sup> This garland of flowers, which hath all the colours of the rainbow.

JOHN LYLY, Love's Metamorphosis. Act iv. sc. 1. (1601)

I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iv, 5, 119. (1601)

<sup>11</sup> Freshest colours soonest fade.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Germanicus and Agrippina, p. 80. (1576) Repeated p. 148. A rendering of the Latin proverb, "In rerum natura spectatissime florent celerime marcescunt."

COLORS

<sup>12</sup> To paint out that puisant Prince in such lively colours as hee deserveth.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, 377. (1576)

<sup>13</sup> The reason why fond women love to buy
Adulterate complexion: here 'tis read.—
False colours last after the true be dead.

THOMAS DEKKER, A Description of a Lady by Her Lover. (a. 1632)

Exhibit things in their true colours.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Inquirer, i. 2. (1797)

[He] didn't venture . . . to come out in his true colours.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 65. (1840)

<sup>14</sup> Stripped of his stolen colors. (Furtivis nudata coloribus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 20. (20 B. C.) "Borrowed plumes."

<sup>15</sup> It may . . . bring a man off with flying colours.

JOHN LOCKE, Toleration. Pt. iii, ch. 8. (1692)

<sup>16</sup> Stood for his country's glory fast,
And nailed her colours to the mast.

WALTER SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i: Intro. (1803)
The reference is to Fox. "To nail one's colors to the mast" is to adopt an unyielding attitude. A flag nailed to the mast cannot be hauled down.

I never heard him [Ashburton] make a speech in the course of which he did not nail, unnaïl, renail and unnaïl again his colours.

SIR ROBERT PEEL, in Croker Papers. Vol. iii, ch. 23. (1844)

Nail to the mast her holy flag.

O. W. HOLMES, Old Ironsides. (1830)

Mrs. Chick had nailed her colours to the mast. DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 5. (1848)

1 I do fear colourable colours.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 157. (1595)

I will be as good as my word . . . Fear no colours.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 5, 94. (1598)

I can tell thee where that saying was born of, I fear no colours. . . . In the wars.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 10. (1599)

To fear no foe, hence, in a more general sense, to have no fear.

I perceive thou fearest no colours.

THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron Walden, sig. E4. (1596)

I'll fear no colours.

ROBERT YARINGTON, Two Lamentable Tragedies. Act i, sc. 4. (1601) I'll fear no enemy.

Fear no colours and speak your mind.

DRYDEN, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 2. (1679)

He was a person that feared no colours.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 11. (1704)

2 Our Female Candidate . . . will no longer hang out false colours.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 52. (1711)

COLT

3 She was a wild, untamed colt.

DANIEL DEFOE, Colonel Jack, p. 209. (1722)

4 A Colt you may break, but an old Horse you never can.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 45. (1732)

TEACH OLD DOG NEW TRICKS, see under DOG.

She's yet a colt—Take, break her.

TENNYSON, The Princess, v, 445. (1847)

When you ride a young colt, see your saddle be well girt.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

5 That which the colt learns in his youth

He will continue in his old age.

(Ce que poulain prent en jeunesse,

Il le continue en vieillesse.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i.

194. Quoting a proverb of c. 1450. The French also say, "A colt is worth nothing unless he breaks his halter" (Rien ne vaut poulain s'il ne rompe son lien).

6 A young cowt [colt] will canter, be it up hill or down.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 1. (1824)

7 The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young,

Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 419. (1593)

That's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 44. (1596)

8 The wildest colts make the best horses, if only they get the proper breaking and training. (τοὺς τραχυτάτους πώλους ἀριστεροὺς ἵππους γίνεσθαι.)

THEMISTOCLES, Maxim. (c. 490 B. C.). See PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 2, sec. 5

A ragged colt may make a good horse.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 299. (1855)

COMB

9 This shall pluck down your comb, as they used to say.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (P.S.), p. 205. (1542)

My life stood in leopordie and my combe was clerely cut.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle Henry IV, fo. 12. (1548)

Their combes are cut, and few that are wise regard them.

REGINALD SCOT, The Discoverie of Witchcraft Bk. viii, ch. 3, 9. (1584)

God cuts their combe, fils their new hopes with new sorrow.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 45. (1642)

To cut ones comb. As is usually done to cocks when gelded.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 169. (1670)

All the Counts in Cumberland shall not cut my comb.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 2. (1822)

Domestic anxiety has cut his comb.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 13 May, 1826.

[He] was cock of the middleweights until Mendoza cut his comb for 'im.

CONAN DOYLE, Rodney Stone. Ch. 10. (1896)

10 Set up thy combe, when thou geuest thy brother a farthing.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Exposition of Matthew, vi. 1. (a. 1536) To be proud or vainglorious.

Repentaunce hath cast downe our combe.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Paraphrase of Erasmus: Luke: Preface. (1545)

COMEDY

11 Comedy aims at representing men as worse, and tragedy as better than in real life.

ARISTOTLE, Poetics. Pt. ii. (c. 322 B. C.)

The debauching of virgins and the amours of strumpets are the subjects of comedy.

LACTANTIUS, Divinae Institutiones. Sec. 6. (c. 310)

A comedy hath in its gynnynge,

A pryme face a maner complaynyng,

And afterwarde endeth in gladnesse.

UNKNOWN, Chronicle of Troy, ii, 11. (1430)

All comedies are ended by a marriage.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 9. (1821)

1 A talent for comedy equal to that of the Greeks. (Comica ut aequato virtus polleret honore | cum Graecis.)

JULIUS CAESAR, referring to Terence. (c. 50 B. C.) See Suetonius, Lives: Terence. Sec. 5.

2 Comedy is the fountain of sound sense.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Idea of Comedy. (1877)

3 As in comedies, where all the characters find out everything. (Ut in comoediis omnia omnes ubi resciscunt.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 866. (165 B. C.)

Pat he comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 2, 147. (1605)

COMFORT

4 As comfortable as matrimony.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary Britannicum: Comfortable. (1736) A two-edged saying.

5 With plentiful store of all creature-comforts.

THOMAS BROOKS, Works (1867), vi, 161. (1670)

They have . . . the sweetest relish of their creature comforts.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Psalm xvii. (1710)

Toulouse . . . abundantly supplied with all the creature-comforts of life.

THOMAS A. TROLLOPE, Impressions of a Wanderer. Ch. 18. (1850) The French say, "Mieux vaut aise qu'orgueil" (Comfort is better than pride).

The comfortable creature, which the carnal denominate brandy.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 4. (1816)

6 The comforter's head never aches.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 394.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4454. (1732)

7 Colde watz his cumfort.

UNKNOWN, Early English Alliterative Poems, C, 264. (c. 1325)

I beg cold comfort.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 7, 42. (1596)

He receives comfort like cold porridge.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 1, 10. (1611)

It was cold comfort that he heard.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, iv, 11. (1612)

A cold Comfort to go to hot Hell for Company.

ALEXANDER NICHOLES, A Discourse of Marriage and Whoring. Sec. 7. (1615)

This is cold comfort in cold weather.

THOMAS SHERIDAN, Letter to Dean Swift, l. 58. (1727)

COMMAND

8 It is a fine thing to command, though it is but a herd of cattle. (Es bueno mandar aunque sea a un hato de ganado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 42. (1615)

It is a pleasure to command, were it but a barn, and a pleasure to be obeyed. (Il y a quelque commodité à commander, feust ce dans une grange, et à estre obeï des siens.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

9 It belongs not to a man to command who is not of more worth than those whom he commands. (Il n'appartenoit de commander à homme qui ne vaille mieulx que ceulx à qui il commande.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1580)

10 When the commander-in-chief is not with his army, things are more likely to go wrong than right. (Ubi summus imperator non adest ad exercitum, | citius quod non factu est usus fit quam quod factu est opus.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 504. (c. 200 B. C.)

11 Command your man, and do it yourself, as the English say.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 60. (1666) RAY, Proverbs, p. 169. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1124. (1732)

Men are more sensible in their own case than in another's; . . . according to the old saying. "Command your man, and do't yourself."

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Aesop's Fables, liii, 66. (1692)

NO ONE CAN COMMAND OTHERS WHO CANNOT COMMAND HIMSELF, see under SELF-CONTROL

II—Command and Obedience

12 He that commandeth well shall be obey'd well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2068. (1732)

13 He commands enough that obeys a wise man.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, No. 549. (1640)

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, ii, 4, gives the Italian, "Assai commanda, chi ubbidisce al saggio." (1650)

14 Much better 'tis, in quiet to obey,
Than to desire with King's-power all to sway.
(Ut satius multo iam sit parere quietum quam regere imperio res velle et regna tenere.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1130. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i. 42

The translation is Florio's

15 I am strongly of the opinion that it is much more easy and pleasant to follow than to guide. (Je suis fort de cet advis, qu'il est bien plus aysé et plus plaisant de suivre que de guider.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1580)

<sup>1</sup> There was neither command nor obedience. (Nusquam imperium, nusquam obsequium.)
 PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis. 14. (c. A. D. 98)

<sup>2</sup> Obedience is yielded more readily to one who commands gently. (Remissus imperanti melius paretur.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 24. (c. A. D. 60)
 He that most curteisly commandeth, to him men most obeyen.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 77. (c. 1387) A rendering of Seneca.

Great force lies hid in gentle Soueraigntie.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, p. 173. (1586)
 Pettie, tr. The context is, "Threatening words, wherewith they make all the house to shake: not knowing that (as the Poet saith), Great force, etc."

There is great force hidden in a sweet command.
 HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 591. (1640)

<sup>3</sup> You must learn to obey before you command. (ἀρχε πρῶτον μαθὼν ἀρχεσθαι.)

SOLON, Apothegms. (c. 590 B. C.) As quoted by APOLLODORUS, Philosophic Sects, DIOGENES LAERTIUS, i, 60, ARISTOTLE, Politics, bk. iii; PLATO, Laws, bk. vi, and many others.

The man who has never been a servant can never become a praiseworthy master. (ὁ μὴ δουλεύσας οὐδ' ἂν δεσπότης γένοιτο ἄξιος ἐπαίρου.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. vi, sec. 762E. (c. 345 B. C.)

No one can ever command well who has not first learned rightly to obey, as Plato says. (οὐδ' ἀρξαι καλῶς τοὺς μὴ πρότερον ὀρθῶς δουλεύσαντας. ἢ φησὶν ὁ Πλάτων, δυναμένους.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 806F. (c. A. D. 95)

The man who leads an army when he has never been a soldier leads out a hecatomb to offer to the foe. (ὅστις στρατηγεῖ μὴ στρατιώτης γερόμενος, | ὅτος ἐκατόμβην ἐξάγει τοῖς πολεμίοις.)

MENANDER, Fragmentis. Fr. 640K. (c. 300 B. C.)

The man who commands efficiently must have obeyed others in the past, and the man who obeys dutifully is worthy of being some day a commander. (Qui bene imperat, paruerit aliquando necesse est, et qui modeste paret, videtur qui aliquando imperet, dignus esse.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 2, sec. 5. (c. 46 B. C.)

There is a Latin proverb founded on this passage, "Non bene imperat nisi qui paruerit imperio" (He does not command well who has not obeyed command)

No man safely commands but he who has learned to obey. (Nemo secure praecipit, nisi qui bene obedire didicit.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 20. (c. 1429) Quoted by HUNYKER. Painted Veils, p. 296. (1920)

The common saying, "He was never good master that never was scholar, nor never good captain that never was soldier."

THOMAS STARKY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1538)

I think it a matter impossible, that he should know how to play the mayster well, who never had mayster.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 97. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Those onely knowe well how to commaund, which know well howe to obaye.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 98. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The French say, "Qui ne sait obéir, ne sait commander" (He who does not know how to obey, does not know how to command).

Who hath not serued, can not commaund. (Chi non ha seruito, non sa comandare.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28 (1578)

How fit is he to sway That can so well obey.

ANDREW MARVELL, An Horatian Ode upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland. (1650)

Who best

Can suffer, best can do; best reign, who first Well hath obey'd.

JOHN MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. iii, l. 194. (1671)

He that cannot obey, cannot command.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

<sup>4</sup> I think with the Romans of old, that the general of today should be a common soldier to-morrow

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Madison, 1797. No man can ever end with being superior who will not begin with being inferior.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 9. (1804)

He had never learnt to obey, and thus was unfit for command.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 43. (1841)

Obedience alone gives the right to command.

EMERSON, Lectures and Sketches: Perpetual Forces. (1870)

TO BE A GOOD RULER ONE MUST FIRST BE RULED, see under RULER

COMMANDMENT

<sup>5</sup> No mere man since the Fall, is able in this life perfectly to keep the Commandments.

Book of Common Prayer: Shorter Catechism (1549)

<sup>6</sup> Begin where we will, we are pretty sure in a short space to be mumbling our ten commandments.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Prudence (1841)

<sup>7</sup> The Commandments have made as many good Martyrs as the Creed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4455. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> They have the ten commandments at their fingers' ends.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 15. (1843)

<sup>9</sup> Thy wife's ten commandments may search thy five wits.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Four PP. (c. 1540)

Or else her ten commandments
She fastens on his face.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1560)

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
I'd set my ten commandments in your face

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 3, 144. (1593)

Your harpy . . . set his ten commandments upon my back.

THOMAS DEKKER, Westward Ho! Act v, sc. 4.
(1607)

I'll set my ten commandments in the face o' the first loon that lays a finger on him.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 30. (1814)

I'll write the ten commandments on your face.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 40.
(1830)

1

There never was at any time written a more excellent, complete, or compendious book of virtues than the Ten Commandments.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 268. (1569)

2

When one has broken the tenth commandment, the others are not of much account.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar
(1893)

3

[They] wink at the infraction of every commandment in the Decalogue, provided you are scrupulous to keep the eleventh, . . .
which says, "Thou shalt not be found out!"

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Holmby House Ch
14. (1860)

After all, the eleventh commandment is the only one that is vitally important to keep in these days.

BERTHA H. BUXTON, Jenny of the Prince's, iii,
314. (1879)

They stand in awe of but one commandment,
"Thou shalt not be found out."

DEAN HOLE, More Memories. Ch. 12. (1894)

Guard yourself from being found out, in order that you may sin freely. (D'être pincé te garderas, afin de fauter librement.)

PRINCE DE JOINVILLE, Mémoires. (a. 1900) The Prince adds that this "Eleventh Commandment, according to the late Lord Clarendon, sums up all the rest."

The only commandment he believed in was one he wouldn't have found in the Bible—Thou shalt not be found out.

JOSEPH SHEARING, Airing in a Closed Carriage,
p. 130. (1943)

4

The new and great commandment that nothing succeeds like success.

UNKNOWN, Pall Mall Gazette, 10 Sept., 1884.

COMMERCE

See also Business, Trade

5

In matters of commerce the fault of the Dutch

Is offering too little and asking too much.

The French are with equal advantage content,

So we clap on Dutch bottoms just twenty per cent.

GEORGE CANNING, Dispatch, in cipher, to Sir
Charles Bagot, English Ambassador at The Hague, 31 Jan., 1826. Original attributed to Andrew Marvell. See London Morning Post,
25 May, 1904; also Notes and Queries, ser ix, vol. x, p. 270. A paper on the subject was read before the Royal Historical Society by Sir Harry Poland, 16 Nov., 1905.

6

Generous commerce binds

The round of nations in a golden chain.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 138. (1727)

What war could ravish, commerce could bestow.
And he returned a friend, who came a foe.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 205. (1732)

Commerce is the great civilizer. We exchange ideas when we exchange fabrics.

R. G. INGERSOLL, *Reply to the Indianapolis
Clergy*. (c. 1890)

7

Commerce is the school of cheating. (Le commerce est l'école de la tromperie.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 310. (1746)

Honour sinks where commerce long prevails.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 92. (1764)

Perish commerce. Let the constitution live!

GEORGE HARDINGE, Debate, House of Commons, 22 March. 1793.

The selfish spirit of commerce knows no country and feels no passion or principle but that of gain

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Larkin Smith 1809.

COMMON

8

Bright as the day and as the morning fair.
Such Chloe is, & common as the air.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

9

Venus . . . that made her self as common as a barbar's chayre.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Apologie of the Schoole of Abuse, p. 66. (1579)

It is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii. 2.
17. (1598)

Like a barber's Chair, fit for every one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3218. (1732)

Unlike some lasses, common known,

As is a barber's chair.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Orson and Ellen. (1796)

10

Common as get out.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 60. (1869)

The usual American form is, "As common as all-get-out."

11

[She is] as comuyn as the cart-wei to knaues and to alle.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text
A, passus iii, l. 127. (1362)

As common as the carte way.

UNKNOWN, Dives and Pauper, fo. 1. (1493)

DRANT, tr., Horace: Satires, sig. D6. (1566)

Common as Ratcliff Highway.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 80. (1667)

As common as the highway.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)

1 Common as an old shoe.

MELBA MARLETT, Death Has a Thousand Doors, p. 102. (1941)

2 The most common things are the most useful.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 68. (1693)

3 Common as pig's tracks.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 494. (1940)

COMMUNISM

4 Communism is a hateful thing. . . . But the communism of combined wealth and capital . . . is not less dangerous than the communism of oppressed poverty and toil.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1888

5 What is a communist?—One who has yearnings

For equal division of unequal earnings:

Idler or bungler, or both, he is willing

To fork out his penny and pocket your shilling.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Epigram. (c. 1830) Works (1876), ii, 202.

The Communist is a Socialist in a violent hurry.

G. W. GOUGH, The Economic Consequences of Socialism. Ch. 1. (1926)

6 Communism and religion are the two trades a fool may succeed at as well as the smartest practical man.

E. W. HOWE, Indignations. (1933)

7 The theory of Communism may be summed up in one sentence: Abolish all private property.

KARL MARX AND FRIEDRICH ENGELS, The Communist Manifesto. (1848)

Parlor Bolshevism.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, in Metropolitan Magazine, June, 1918.

COMPANION

See also Comrade

8 Well am I acquainted with the mirror of companionship. (εὖ γὰρ ἐπεστάμαι | δουλίας κάτοπτρον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 838. (458 B. C.)

9 It brings comfort and encouragement to have companions in whatever happens. (παρὰ μὲν θλίαν φέρει τὸ κοινωνεῖν εἶναι τῶν συμφορῶν.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 103. (c. A. D. 75)

MISERY LOVES COMPANY, see under MISERY.

10 Never have a companion who casts you in the shade. (Nunca acompañarse con quien le pueda deslucir.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 152. (1647)

11 To no man make yourself a boon companion: Your joy will be less, but less will be your grief.

(Nulli te facias nimis sodalem: Gaudebis minus et minus dolebis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 34. (A. D. 103)

12 He was made a knight-companion of the Bath, in the last batch, but he shall never be my night companion, I promise you.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act i, sc. 1. (1815)

13 Companionship with a powerful person is never to be trusted. (Numquam est fidelis cum potente societas.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 5, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

14 There is no satisfaction in any good without a companion. (Nullius boni sine socio iucunda possessio est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 65)

Which made Architas Tarentinus to say that if any might by Gods permission ascend to heaven, and there beholde the nature of the worlde, and the beautie of the starres, that sight woulde bee no great delight unto him, if hee had not some or other to whom he might impart it and tel what he sawe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 36. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Who can enjoy alone,

Or all enjoying, what contentment find?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 365. (1667)

The possession of no good can be delightful without a companion.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly. Sec. 72. (1668)

II—Companions on a Journey

15 A merry companion is better than music, and . . . comes iucundus in via pro vehiculo, as a wagon to him that is wearied on the way.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, ii, vi, 4. (1621)

A merry companion is Musick in a Journey

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 324. (1732)

16 A Man knows his Companion in a long Journey and a little Inn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 284. (1732)

Or, in a variant, "If you want to know a man, travel with him."

17 A witty road-mate is as good as a carriage. (Comes facundus in via pro vehiculo est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 116. (c. 43 B. C.) Usually given "comes iucundus."

A pleasant companion is a bait in a journey.
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 196. (1579)
 A merry companion is as good as a wagon.
 JOHN LYLY, Woman in the Moon. Act iv. (1597)
 A merry companion is a wagon in the way.
 NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs, ii, 8. (1616)

Good company is a good coach.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 291. (1639)
 A merry companion on the way is as good as a nag.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 49. (1666)

A pleasing companion is worth a carriage. (Compañero gracioso, vale por coche.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 236. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Spaniards also say, "Con alegre compania se sufre la triste via" (With merry company the dreary way is endured); the French, "Mieux vault amy en voye que denier en curroye" (Better a friend on the way than money in the purse). See DE LINCY, Proverbes Français.

1 Palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 791. (1594)
 "Make short the miles With talk and smiles."
 Good company makes the way seem shorter (as the Italians say).

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler, p. 2. (1653)
 "Good company upon the road," says the proverb, "is the shortest cut."

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 18. (1768)
 A pleasant companion is said to shorten the road, and I . . . I always try to find the 'comes iucundus' which the facetious Publius (sic) Syrus says, is as good as a coach itself.

C. J. APPERLEY, Nimrod's Northern Tour, p. 10. (1838) The Germans say, "Gefährte munter kürzet die Meilen" (Lively companionship shortens the miles).

COMPANY

2 Unknown company is proved by time. (ἀγνώστου ὄμιλον ἐξελέγχεσθαι χρόνον.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 993. (c. 485 B.C.)

Better to be without company than with a comrade who has a sweetheart.
 (Mieux velt estre sanz compaignie Qu'avoir compaignon à amie.)

HENRI D'ANDELI, Le Lai d'Aristote, l. 507. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, v, 407.

3 Be rather a tail to lions than a head to foxes.
Babylonian Talmud: Pirke Aboth, iv, 20. (c. 450) Be rather a humble member of an eminent company than associate with inferiors. See also under HEAD.

Endeavour, as much as you can, to keep company with people above you.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.
 I love good creditable acquaintance; I love to be the worst of the company.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 17 April, 1710.

4 Take the tone of the company you are in.
 LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747

5 In church with saints, in the tavern with guzzlers. (Nella chiesa | coi santi ed in taverna coi ghiottoni.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxii, l. 15. (c. 1300)
 When neede shall require, it shall not be amisse to consort with all sortes of persons, though of never so base condition: which Diogenes ment to shew, who being asked, why he went to drinke at the Taverne, answered, I likewise goe to be powled in the Barber shop.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 193. (1574) Pettie, tr.

6 Two are better than one. (Melius est ergo duos esse simul.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 9. (c. 250 B.C.)

7 A man, a horse, and a dog are never weary of each other's company.

WILLIAM ELLIS, Compleat System of Improvement, p. 9. (1749) Quoted as a proverb

8 Company in Distress Makes the Sorrow less
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6283. (1732)

9 Account solitarinesse for poyson. and companie, for an Antidote, and the foundation of life.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 18. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A man sometime hath company being by himself . . . and sometime is solitary being in Company
 GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 47 See also under ALONE.

To appreciate company a man must be acquainted with solitude.

HULBERT FOOTNER, Death of a Saboteur, p. 1 (1943)

10 The company makes the feast.

HACKWOOD, Good Cheer, p. 361. (1911) See under DINING.

11 We often boast that we are never dull, and our vanity is such that we dislike to appear bad company. (Nous nous vantons souvent de ne nous point ennuyer. et nous sommes si glorieux, que nous ne voulons pas nous trouver de mauvaise compagnie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 141. (1665)

12 For want of company welcome trumpery.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)
 After company welcome thrump'ry. Spoken by them who are not well pleas'd that you took not notice of them as soon as other company; or when people come to visit us that we care not for.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (1721)

13 Good manners to except my Lord Mayor of London.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1678)

You should always except the present company.

JOHN O'KEEFE, The London Hermit. Act 1, sc. 2. (1793) "Present company excepted" is the form in which the phrase is usually quoted.

1 One's too few, three too many.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 471. (1678)
Two is company, but three is none.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 442. (1869)
The proverb that "two is company, but three is none" had great weight with me just then.

JAMES PAYN, Halves. Ch. 21. (1876)

Two's company and three's trumpery, my dear.

LOUISA PARR, Adam and Eve. Ch. 9. (1880)

Two is company, three is trumpery, as the proverb says.

EDNA LYALL, Wayfaring Men. Ch. 24. (1897)

Two's company, three's none, that's what I say.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. ii, st. 39. (1912)

Two's company, three's a chaperon.

PHILIP MOELLER, Madame Sand. Act ii. (1917)

The proverb is true. When you are courting, two is company, three is none.

CHRISTIE, Patriotic Murders, p. 187. (1941)

Four's company, three's a crowd.

DAVID DODGE, Death and Taxes, p. 4. (1941)

When two make company, a third's a crowd.

HOWIE, Murder at Stone House, p. 227. (1942)

2 It is an extreme evil to depart from the company of the living before you die. (Ultimum malorum est e vivorum numero exire. antequam moriaris.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 60)

3 For such a scoffing prelate, hys rowme had bene better then his company.

RICHARD STANYHURST, Description of Ireland, p. 7. (1577)

I had as lief have their room as their company.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Folly. (1591)

Better his roome, than company (quoth ech one).

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Plutarch's Morals, 645. (1603)

She would rather haue his roome then his company.

SAMUEL HIERON, Works, ii, 254. (1617) MORE, Brief Reply, 306. (1672) BERKELEY, Alciphron, i, 113. (1732)

Preferring his room, and declining his company.

THOMAS FULLER, A Wounded Conscience, p. 283. (1646)

Let me have your room instead of your company.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch 10. (1865)

4 The company in which you will improve most will be least expensive to you.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Bushrod Washington, 15 Jan., 1783.

5 Company keeps our rind from growing too coarse and rough.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 22 Sept., 1765.

II—A Man Is Known by the Company He Keeps

6 Tell me what company you keep, and I'll tell you what you are. (Dime con quién andas, decirte he quién eres.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 10, 23.

(1615) The Portuguese say, "Dirte he que manhas has." A Spanish variant is, "Dime con que iras, dezir te he lo que haras." See CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 254.

There is a Spanish proverb, which says very justly, Tell me who you live with and I will tell you who you are.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

Tell me with whom you associate and I will tell you who you are. (Sage mir, mit wem du umgehst, so sage ich dir wer du bist.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

"Show me a man's companions," says the proverb, "and I will tell you what the man is."

WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Letter i. (1829)

7 As a man is, so is his company.

ARTHUR DENT, The Plaine Man's Path-way to Heaven, p. 312. (1601)

You shall know the Parson by his Company.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote, ii, 23. (1620)

8 This common Proverb, Tel me with whom thou doest goe, and I shall know what thou doest.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 57. (1574) Pettie, tr

Tell me with whom thou goest, and I'll tell thee what thou doest.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 147. (1678)

9 That common rule that wee are alwayes taken for suche as those are, with whom we are conversant.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 214. (1574) Pettie, tr.

10 If one wishes to be esteemed, one must live with estimable people. (Si l'on voulait être estimé, il faudrait vivre avec des personnes estimables.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 2. (1688)

11 This minded me of the old saying, "Tell me thy company, and I'll tell thee thy manners."

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, 151. (1667)

"Tell me your company, and I will describe your manners," is an old saying.

GEORGE PARKER, Life's Painter, 137. (1789)

12 You may know the man by the conversation he keeps.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote, ii, 68. (1620)

There is a proverb, Mrs. Joyner, "You may know a man by his company."

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act i, sc. 1. (1672)

Men are known by their companions.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vi, 362. (1748)
It is a common saying that men are known by the company they keep.

SAMUEL SMILES, Character, p. 65. (1871)
A man's mind is known by the company it keeps.
J.R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Pope. (1871)
"A man is known by the company he keeps"—it is the motto of a prig. Little men with foot rules six inches long, applied their measuring sticks in this way to One who lived nineteen centuries ago. "He sits at meat with publicans and sinners," they tauntingly said, assuming that his character was smirched thereby.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xii, p. 62. (1901)

A man is known by the paper he pays for.
J. A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 19. (1928)
A lady is known by the product she endorses.
OGDEN NASH, First Families, Move Over! (1940)
One is known by the type of women who mourn for one.

SALLY WOOD, The Murder of a Novelist, p. 145 (1941)

I have always contended that a man is best known by the company he keeps.

WILLIAM O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 149. (1942) A proverb in many languages. The Latin is "Noscitur ex sociis" (He is known by his companions), or "Magni refert quibuscum vixeris" (It matters much with whom you have lived). The French, Italians, Spanish and Dutch say, "Tell me the company you keep and I'll tell you what you are"; the Louisiana Creoles, "Tell me whom you love, and I'll tell you what you are"; the Syrians say, "With whom you are, such a one you are"; the Irish, "If had the raven, his company is no better"; the Japanese, "A man's character depends on whether his friends are good or bad." Finally, an army saying of 1916 has it that "A man is known by the Company he joins." Aesop, as usual, has a fable illustrating this proverb, the fable of The Ass and the Purchaser. A man desired to try an ass before buying it, and taking it home, placed it in the stable with the other asses. The newcomer began at once to associate with the laziest and greediest ass in the place, whereupon the man immediately returned the ass to its owner, saying that it was unnecessary to test the animal any further, since its character was evident from that of its chosen companion. The fable of The Stork and the Goose has the same moral. The Hindus say, "A lazy horse is sure to stand near the chaff house."

III—Good Company

1 Approach the perfumer and thou wilt be perfumed.

Babylonian Talmud: Shehuoth, fo. 47b. (c. 450) Another version is given in Genesis Rabbah, xvi, 3: "Attach thyself to honorable people and men will bow to thee." The English proverb is: "Keep good men company and you shall be of the number." Another variation is: "On account of the teacher the pupil has eaten." (Joma, 75b.) "Live with a singer if you would learn to sing" is still another.

2 Stay near the good, if you can't stay near the best. (Proximus esto bonis, si non potes optimus esse.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

3 Lay aside the best book whenever you can go into the best company; and depend upon it, you change for the better.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 31 May, 1752.

4 He that dies without the company of good men, puts not himself into a good way.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 993. (1640)

5 Consorting with the wise will make you wise (σοφοῖς ὁμιλῶν καὶ τὸς ἐκβήσῃ σοφός.)

MENANDER, Fragment. Fr. 475. (c. 300 B.C.)
Conversely there is another proverb, "Consorting with the bad will make you bad" (κακοῖς ὁμιλῶν καὶ τὸς ἐκβήσῃ κακός.)

He that walketh with wise men shall be wise: but a companion of fools shall be destroyed. (Qui cum sapientibus graditur, sapiens erit: amicus stultorum similis efficitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 20. (c. 350 B.C.)
Acompanye the[e] with good people and thou shalt be on[e] of them; acompanye the[e] with badde & thou shalt be on[e] of thoos.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs: Seynges of [H]Omer, fo. 23 (1477)

According to the prouerbe, by companying with the wise, a man shall learne wisdom.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 5. (1560)
Live with him who prays and you will pray; live with him that sings and you will sing.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 427. (1817)
Keep company with good men, and good men you'll imitate;
Keep company with beggars, and sleep outside some gate.

(Kén 'hao jên hsio 'hao jên;
Kén 't'ao fan ti shui miao mên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 30. (1875)

POVERTY PARTS GOOD COMPANY, see POVERTY.

6 The good are those from whom to learn good. (ἐσθλῶν μὲν γὰρ ἀπ' ἐσθλά μαθήσοι.)

THEOGNIS, Elegy, l. 35. (c. 600 B.C.)
Good lessons from the good. (ἐσθλῶν μὲν γὰρ ἀπ' ἐσθλά.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 12, sec. 3. (c. 335 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb.
The more closely you associate yourself with the good, the better. (Quam ad probos propinquitae proxime te adiunxeris, tam optimum est.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 236. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> Walk in good company. (Cum bonis ambula.)
CATO (?), Disticha: Prologus. No. 6. (c. 175 B. C.)
Sit by the good, and by the good arise.

THOMAS WILSON, A Discourse upon Usurye, p. 359. (1572)

Attach thyself to the good, and thou wilt become one of them. (Júntate a los buenos, y serás uno de ellos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32. (1615)

The Portuguese proverb is, "Arrima-te aos bons, seras hum delles," and there is another Spanish form, "Lledavros á la compañía de los buenos á seredes uno dellos." Bland in quoting the proverb (i, 236) gives it as "Arimate a buenos, y seras uno dellos" (Associate with the good, etc.).

Keep good men company, and you shall be of the number.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 125. (1640)

IV—Bad Company

<sup>2</sup> Naught is more evil than evil associations.
(ἔσθ' ὁμιλίας κακῆς κάκιον οὐδέν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 599. (467 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Keep thyself far from men of evil ways, and make none of them thy companion.

ANI, Teaching. No. 17. (c. 2000 B. C.) BUDGE, Teaching of Amen-em-apt, p. 240.

Shun evil company. (μὴ κακοῖς ὁμιλεῖ.)

SOLOON, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon, i, 60.

<sup>4</sup> The company of a good man is the light of the soul, of an evil man the poison of life.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

<sup>5</sup> He keeps his road well enough who gets rid of bad company.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 378. (1855)

<sup>6</sup> The best remedy against an ill man, is much ground between both.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 153. (1640) The Spanish form, as cited by CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 259, is, "Con malo persona, el remedio: Mucha tierra en medio."

<sup>7</sup> It is better to sit alone than in company with the bad; it is better to sit with the good than alone.

MOHAMMAD, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 76.

It is better a man . . . to be alone than to be accompanied with evil people.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 9. (1477)

It is better to be alone than in ill company.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 124. (1574) Young, tr. The Italian is, "Meglio solo che male accompagnate."

Better be alone than in bad company.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 291. (1639)

Better therefore ride alone than have a thief's company.

FULLER, The Holy State: Of Company. (1642) Better alone than have a false friend for company.

WALTER SCOTT, The Betrothed. Ch. 14. (1825) Hold it as a maxim that you had better be alone than in mean company.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 368. (1859)

No company is better than bad company.

RICHARD FORD, A Hand-book for Travellers in Spain. Ch. 1. (1845)

<sup>8</sup> This forbids a good man to consort for any purpose with an evildoer. (Interdecit ne cum maleficio | usum bonus consociet ullius rei.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 10. l. 20. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Do not taste of black-tails. (μὴ γεύεσθαι μελαρούρων.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children.

Sec. 12E. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is quoting a proverb. "Blacktails" are a kind of fish, and he is saying, "Do not spend your time with men of bad character." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 2, with the Latin, "Ne gustaris quibus nigra est cauda." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 70, with the rendering, "Taste not of thynges that haue blacke tayles," and the comment, "That is to say, medle nat with naughtye felowes and suche as haue blacke and difamed maners."

One should abstain from the taste of those things that haue blacke tayles: That is we must not use the company of those whose corrupt manners doe as it were make their lyfe blacke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His Ephoebus (Arber), p. 148. (1579) Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

<sup>10</sup> Better to be beaten than in bad company.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670)

<sup>11</sup> One may be sure that one who frequents the company of the wicked is as wicked as the others.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

V—Evil Communications Corrupt Good Manners

<sup>12</sup> Two dry logs will set a green one on fire.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 83a. (c. 450) Bad company spreads infection. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1755, says, "Two dry sticks will burn a green one."

As a dead coale, laied to a lively, kindleth: so a naughty person meeting in companie with the good, partaketh with their conditions.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 44. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>13</sup> Ill egging [urging] makes ill begging.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 325. (1605) Quoted by RAY, p. 84 (1670) who explains.

"Evil persons by enticing and flattery, draw on others to be as bad as themselves." W. G. SMITH, Oxford Dictionary of Proverbs, suggests that the more probable meaning of the saying is that the man who cannot insist on getting a dole is an unsuccessful beggar.

<sup>1</sup> Who serveth a feloun is yvel quit.

CHAUCER (?), tr., Romaunt of the Rose, l. 3146. (c. 1400) RAY, Proverbs, p. 412, expands this to, "If we would avoid a mischief, we must not be very kind and familiar with an evil man," giving it as a Hebrew proverb. The Germans say, "Mitgefangen, mitgehangen (Caught with, hanged with). Another form is, "Mitgegangen, mitgefangen, mitgehangen" (Going with, caught with, hanged with). The fact that theft is the crime probably referred to indicates that the proverb is a very old one. The Dutch say, "Bad company," said the thief, as he went to the gallows between the hangman and a monk."

<sup>2</sup> Company makes cuckolds.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 152. (1639)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1132. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Il company is that, that bringes many to the gallows. (La mala compagnia i quella, che mena molti alla forca.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

Who sleepeth with dogges, shal rise with fleas.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. See under Doc.

Go with mean people and you think life is mean.
EMERSON, Representative Men: Plutarch. (1850)

<sup>4</sup> As one reprooved him for that hee used the companie of lewde and naughtie persons: The Sunne (sayth Diogenes) shyneth and spreadeth its beames on uncleane places, and yet never defileth it selfe. And as another reproched him for the like, hee answered, The Phisitions are all day with the sicke, and yet are not infected: and in trueth ill conditions take no holde of an honest minde, and a vertuous man waxeth not worse for being in companie with the wicked.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 52. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>5</sup> The proverb says, Who fights with durty foes, Must needs be soyl'd, admit they win or lose.
SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. ii, No. 36. (1618)

If you wrestle with a Collier, you will get a Blotch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2802. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Keep not ill men company, lest you increase the number.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 316. (1640)

<sup>7</sup> The grape gets its purple tinge from looking at another grape. (Uvaeque conspecta livorem ducit ab uva.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 81. (c. A. D. 120) A variant is, "Uva uvam videndo varia fit" (The grape changes its hue [ripens] by looking at another grape). The Persians say, "One plum gets its color by looking at another."

Live with a hangman, and you will never be rid of your cruelty; if an adulterer be your club-mate, he will kindle the baser passions. If you would be stripped of your faults, leave far behind you the patterns of the faults. (Numquam saevitiam in tortoris contubernio pones. Incident libidines tuas adulterorum sodalicia. Si velis vitiis exui, longe a vitiorum exemplis recedendum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 21. (c. A. D. 65)
The proverb-makers say, "If you live with a lame man, you will learn to limp." (δὲν χωλῷ παροικῆσης, ὑποσκάσεις μᾶθησιν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children. Sec. 4A. (c. A. D. 95) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 73, who gives the Latin, "Si iuxta claudum habites, subclaudicare discas"

Associate with the stout and you will become stout.

Babylonian Talmud: Shebuoth, fo. 47a. (c. 450)
It is an olde Prouerbe that if one dwell the next doore to a cre[e]ple he will learne to halt; if one bee conversant with an hipocrit, he wil soone endeouour to dissemble.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 131. (1579)
As some diseases of the body are infectious, so the vices of the mind take from one to another, so that a drunkard draweth his companions to love wine, a Carpet knight corrupteth and effeminateth a valiant man: and so much force hath continual conversation, that oft times against our wils, we imitate the vices of others.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 44. (1574) George Pettie, tr.

It is certain that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. v, 1, 84. (1598)
Falstaff moralizing.

The rotten apple spoils his companion.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

Follow the owl, and she will lead thee to a ruined place.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 65. (1817)
He who squeezes in between the onion and the peel, picks up its stink.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 93.
He who goes into a mill comes out powdered. (Wer in die Mühle geht, der wird bestäubt.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 338. (1856) A German proverb. The Germans also say, "Wer mit Katzen jagt, der fangt gern Maeuse" (He who lives with cats will get a taste for mice).

He who keeps company with a wolf will learn to howl.

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 408.

(1869) See under WOLF. There are many other variants. The Tamils say, "A calf that goes with a pig will eat excrement"; the Arabians, "Live with a singer and you'll learn to sing," and so on.

Near vermilion one gets stained pink. (Chin chu chē tzu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 31. (1875)

Near fish you'll stink. (Chin pao chē ch'ou.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 32.

A man who lives in a lavatory gets used to filth.

LION FEUCHTWANGER, Paris Gazette, p. 535. (1940) Quoting a line from Pushkin.

1 Contagion is very dangerous in a crowd. (La contagion est tres dangereuse en la presse.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)

2 An euyl felawe is like a tree kindeled, wherof the one branche setteth the other afiere.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 18. (1477)

3 One dog can defile a cistern filled with rose-water.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

One crop of a tourd marrrth a pot of potage.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

One grain of rat dung will spoil a whole pan of rice. (Yi li lao shu shih ta 'huai yi kuo fan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2699. (1875)

4 Ill company is like a dog, who dirties those most whom he loves best.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

5 Good men teach good; companionship with bad

Will but corrupt the good mind that you had. (ἐσθλῶν μὲν γὰρ ἀπ' ἐσθλὰ διδάσκει· ἣν δὲ κακίαι συμμίσγῃς, ἀπολεῖς καὶ τὸν εὖντα νόον.)

THEOCNIS, Elegies. Frag. 35. (c. 600 B.C.)

Quoted by XENOPHON, Symposium, 4; Memorabilia, i, 2, 20.

He is not by nature of a bad disposition but has fallen into evil communications. (ὁμιλίαι κακαίς.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. viii, sec. 550B (c. 375 B.C.) Plato repeats the phrase in Phaedrus, 250A.

Communism with the bad corrupts good character. (φθειρουσιν ἥθῃ χρηστὴ ὁμιλία κακά.)

MENANDER, Thais. Frag. 218K. (c. 300 B.C.)

Quoting a fragment from Euripides (1013 Nauck).

Evil communications corrupt good manners. (φθειρουσιν ἥθῃ χρηστὰ ὁμιλία κακά.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 33. (A.D.

57) Paul is quoting the phrase from Menander, which was probably already a proverb when Menander used it. The Vulgate rendering is, "Corruptum mores bonos colloquia mala," but Erasmus, who cites the proverb (Adagia, i, x, 74), gives the Latin as "Corruptum mores bonos, colloquia prava," and notes its use by Aristotle, Tertullian, Seneca, and others. It is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 28. with the rendering, "Naughtye communycacyons spyll good maners."

Just see what evil communications do. (Aspice quid faciant commercia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 166. (c. A.D. 120)

Worthless associations engender evil manners.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 301. (c. 1050)

Gude forgie me for swearing—but evil communication corrupteth good manners.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 30. (1821)

"Evil communications corrupt good manners"

... Jails, barracks, factories, do not corrupt by their walls, but by their condensed numbers.

COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 5. (1829)

Evil communications corrupt good mutton.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Nile Notes of a Howadji. Ch. 3. (1851)

The unrighteous penny corrupts the righteous pound.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 517. (1855)

Iniquitous intercourses contaminate proper habits.

LORD WILLIAM LENNOX, Lacon. (c. 1866)

A disposition of such sweetness that no evil communications could corrupt his good manners.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday, p. 30 (1939)

COMPARISON

6 To liken them to your auld-worl'd squad,

I must needs say comparisons are odd.

ROBERT BURNS, Brigs of Ayr, l. 177. (1786)

7 Purple must be compared with purple. (ῥομφύρα παρὰ τὴν πορφύραν διακρίετα.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 74.

(1524) The Latin is, "Purpura iuxta purpuram diiudicanda." Erasmus cites another one, δοῦλοι πρὸ δοῦλου, δεσπότης πρὸ δεσπότης.

(A slave must be compared with a slave, and a master with a master)

8 Man, Woman, and Devil, are the three Degrees of Comparison.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3335. (1732)

9 Odyous of olde been comparisonis.

JOHN LYDGATE, Debate Between the Hors, Shepe and Goose, 204. (c. 1430)

Comparisons are odious.

JOHN FORTESCUE, De Laudibus Legum Angliae.

Ch. 19. (1471) GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poies

(1575) BARNABE RICH, Introduction to Pettie's Petite Pallace. (1576) DONNE, Elegies, viii. (c. 1600) HEYWOOD, A Woman Kill'd With Kindness, i, 2. (1607) BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, iii, i, 2. (1621) HERBERT,

Jacula Prudentum. No. 720. (1640) SWIFT,

Polite Conversation. Dial. III. (1738) FIELDING,

Joseph Andrews, i, 16. (1742) etc., etc

Comparisons should seeme odious.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 68. (1579)

I dare not infer comparisons because they be odious.

ROBERT GREENE, The Carde of Fancie. (1587)
Comparisons are odorous.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 5, 18. (1598)

All comparisons are odious. (Toda comparacion es odiosa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23. (1615)

The French say, "Toute comparaison est odieuse"; the Italians, "I paragoni son tutti odiosi."

Comparisons bee ever harsh, and most times odious.

ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, 36. (1635)

Not making odious comparisons.

FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1642)
Take heed that thou make no comparisons, and if any body happen to be praised for some brave act, or virtue, praise not another for the same virtue in his presence, for every comparison is odious.

FRANCIS HAWKINS, Youth's Behaviour, VI, 1663.
Thus on Comparison you see,
In every Instance they agree.

THOMAS SHERIDAN, A New Simile for the Ladies, I. 77. (1732) In a note, Sheridan adds: "I hope none will be so uncomplaisant to the Ladies as to think these Comparisons odious."

We own your verses are melodious,
But such Comparisons are odious.

SWIFT, Answer to a Scandalous Poem, I. 179. (1732)

Poor Satan will think the Comparison odious;
I wish I could find him out one more comm odious.

SWIFT, On the Irish Bishops, I. 11. (1732)

Comparisons are odious, because they are impertinent . . . making one thing the standard of another which has no relation to it.

HAZLITT, Table-Talk. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1822)

Many men . . . forgetting that "comparisons are odious," are never happy but in detecting infelicities.

S. R. HOLE, Little Tour in Ireland. Ch. 14. (1859)
Nuremburg is excellent—and comparisons are odious; but I would give a thousand N's for one ray of Verona.

HENRY JAMES, Letters Vol. i, p. 32. (1872)

1
Comparisons make enemies of our friends.
(ἐχθρούς ποιοῦσι τοὺς φίλους αἱ συγκρίσεις.)

PHILEMON, Fabulae Incerta. Frag. 17. (c. 300 B.C.)
Comparisonis do offtime greate grievance.

JOHN LYDGATE, Bochas. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (c. 1440)

2
No man is happy but by comparison.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Virtuoso. Act II. (1676)
Comparison, more than Reality, makes Men happy or wretched.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1133. (1732)
It is Comparison that makes men happy or miserable.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5071. (1732)
Nothing is good or bad, but by Comparison.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3966.

Nothing is good or ill but by comparison.

MRS. FRANCES SHERIDAN, The Discovery. Act
iv, sc. 1. (1763)

3
No caparisons, miss, if you please. Caparisons don't become a young woman.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 2. (1775)

4
There's no comparing the windflower with the rose. (οὐδ' ἀνεμώνα πρὸς ῥόδα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. v, l. 92. (c. 270 B.C.)

Comparing the bee with the grasshopper. (τέττιγι τὴν μέλιτταν συγκρίνει.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, i, 15. (c. A.D. 125) Quoting Lucian. Diogenianus cites many other such comparisons, among them, καρκίνους δασύποδι συγκρίνει (Comparing crabs with a hare); κώνωπα ἐλέφαντι παραβάλλειν (Comparing a mosquito with an elephant), αὐλὸν σάλπιγγι συγκρίνει (Comparing the flute with the trumpet).

Comparing the cat with Athena. (Ἀθῆνα τὸν αἴλουρον.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, ii, 25. (c. A.D. 130)

Hyperion to a satyr.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 140. (1600)

5
Knowing pups are like dogs and kids like goats,

So used I to compare great things with small (Sic canibus catulos similis, sic matribus haedos

noram, sic parvis componere magna solebam.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 23. (37 B.C.)

If we may compare small things with great
(Si parva licet componere magnis.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 176. (29 B.C.)

To compare Great things with small.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 921. (1667)

COMPASSION

See also Pity

6
Compassion will cure more sins than condemnation.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit. (1887)

7
Compassion breathes along the savage mind.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 106. (1820)

8
O'er friendless grief Compassion shall awake.
And smile on innocence, for Mercy's sake!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope Pt ii, l. 455. (1799)

9
Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? (κλεῖσθαι τὰ σπλάγχνα.)

New Testament: I John, iii, 17. (c. A.D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Clauferit viscera."

One must tighten one's belt over one's bowels of compassion.

THAYER, Plain Case of Murder, p. 19. (1944)

- 1 The wretched have no compassion.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters, ii, 215. (c. 1776)
- 2 Compassion is the fellow-feeling of the unsound.
SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)
- 3 Wide and sweet and glorious as compassion.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Dunwich. Pt. i, st. 8. (1878)

COMPENSATION

See also Sweet and Sour

- 4 To buy the swamp with the salt. (τὸ ἔλος πρίσθαι καὶ τοὺς ἄλας.)
ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 23, sec. 15. (c. 330 B. C.) Quoted as a proverb, meaning to take the bad with the good.
- The cabbage is torn out together with the weeds.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92a. (c. 450)
- 5 If thou hast more water, put in more flour.
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 62a. (c. 450)
- To two measures of dates, one measure of stones.
Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 79b.
- In two Cabs of dates there is one Cab of stones.
JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 406. (1678)
"The meaning," Ray explains, "is that there is much evil mingled with the good which is found in the world."
- Two Kabs of dates—one Kab of stones and more.
There is no such thing as unalloyed pleasure.
A. COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p. 35. (1911) The Kab is a dry measure.
- 6 If a Sickness invades a City, it turns to the Profit of Physicians; if a Conflagration lays a great part of a City in Ashes, or a Tempest destroys a Navy, it helps Builders to a good Stroke of Work. So that Unius dispendium alterius est compendium [The expense of one is the saving of another], as say the Latins; and A quelque chose malheur est Bonne [Sometimes bad luck is good luck], the French.
NATHAN BAILEY, Divers Proverbs, p. 3. (1721)
- 7 Night brings out stars as sorrow shows us truths.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Water and Wood. (1839)
- 8 Were it not for pottery broken there would be no demand for new.
J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 577. (1817) Misfortunes sometimes have good consequences. The Spanish say, "It was for my good I broke my leg"; the French, "Ill luck is good for somebody"; the Italians, "Great good is born of great evil"; the Arabs, "The misfortunes of some people are advantageous to others"; the Telugus, "The lady who found the ring was as glad as the lady who lost it was sorry."

- 9 When the sun sets, the moon rises; when the moon sets, the sun rises.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 378. (1938) A Chinese proverb. They also say, "If one door shuts another will open."
- 10 Eek whyt by blak, by shame eek worthinesse, Ech set by other, more for other semeth.
CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 642. (c. 1380)
Ther is a lawe that says thus,
That gif a man in a point be y-greved,
That in another he sal be releved.
CHAUCEUR, The Reves Tale, l. 260. (c. 1386)
- 11 Kind day comes after night, toil after sleep. (Alma dies noctem sequitur somnosque labores.)
COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 38. (c. A. D. 600)
- 12 No corne without some chaffe.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Paille. (1611)
See under CORN.
- 13 After Sun-shine comes a Cloud; after fair Weather comes foul; after Joy comes Sorrow. . . . The Sun shines bright after dark Clouds.
OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1709) See SUN: SUN AND RAIN.
- 14 Forever and ever it takes a pound to lift a pound.
R. W. EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: Aristocracy. (1849)
Evermore in the world is this balance of beauty and disgust, magnificence and rats.
EMERSON, Considerations by the Way. (1860)
- 15 Good for the Liver may be bad for the Spleen.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1711. (1732)
- 16 Everie commoditie, bringeth with it a discommoditie.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 29. (1574) After the unidentified early Latin proverb, "Omnis commoditas sua fert incommoda secum."
- Every commodity hath a discommodity annexed unto it.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 59. (1576)
As the Poet saith, Ther is no light without darknesse, no vertue without vice, no shadowe without a bodye, no commoditie without a discommoditie.
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 57. (1578)
Every commodity hath its discommodity.
BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. E1. (1583)
No convenience without its inconvenience.
WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 36. (1672)
There's no inconvenience but has its convenience. said Betty, giving me proverb for proverb.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, ii, 110. (1748)
There never was a conweniency without an ill conweniency.
L. T. JENNINGS, Field Paths. Ch. 21. (1877)

<sup>1</sup> When grasshoppers are so plenty as to make pastures poor, gobblers grow fat.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 6. (1843)

If the hide is thick on the ribs, it's thin on the flanks.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 13.

<sup>2</sup> So much as there is of the more, so much there is of the less.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Ser. ii, ch. 10. (1847) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>3</sup> After a storm comes a calm.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Acts, ix. (1710) See under STORM.

After a typhoon there are pears to gather up.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 380. (1938)

<sup>4</sup> Every path hath a puddle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 217. (1640) See under PATH.

<sup>5</sup> The longer forenoone, the shorter after noone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)

<sup>6</sup> Give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. (Darem eis coronam pro cinere, oleum gaudii pro luctu, pallium laudis pro spiritu moeroris.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxi, 3. (c. 900 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> After a flowe, an ebbe folweth ay.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 2013. (c. 1420) See under TIDE.

<sup>8</sup> The foule Toade hath a faire stone in his head, the fine golde is found in the filthy earth: the sweet kernell lyeth in the hard shell.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 53. (1579) Achilles speare could as wel heale as hurt, the scorpion though he sting, yet he stints the paine, though the hearb Nerius poyson the Sheepe, yet is a remedy to man against poyson, though I have infected some by example, yet I hope I shall comfort many by repentaunce.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 107.

Earth bringeth forth as well Endiue to delight the people, as Hemlocke to endaunger the patient, as wel the Rose to distil, as the Nettle to sting, as wel the Bee to giue Hunny, as the Spyder to yeeld poyson.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 107.

Daunger and delight growe both vppon one stalke, the Rose and the Canker in one bud, white and blacke are commonly in one border.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 226.

<sup>9</sup> No way so smooth but it has some rub.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 364. (1710)

There will be rubs in the smoothest road.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 16. (1821)

Take the rough with the smooth.

BERNARD SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act ii. (1893) See under ROUGHNESS.

<sup>10</sup> I see & I sigh, and sorow to see, that there is no clothe so fine but moathes will eate it, no yron so harde but rust will fret it, no wood so sounde but wormes will putrifie it, no mettall so course but fire will purifie it, nor no Maide so free but love will bring her into thraldome and bondage.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Cephilus and Procris, p. 188. (1576) A succession of proverbs. On p. 23 (Hartman, ed.), Pettie has: "The Moath which most of all eateth the best cloath." See under MOTH for other examples. The iron simile is drawn from Erasmus. See under IRON. The one referring to wood seems to be original with Pettie. Lyly copied it in his Euphues, p. 58.

<sup>11</sup> Ther was neuer ioye withoute sorowe, nor neuer light without derkenesse, nor neuer rest withoute labour, nor assemble withoute departing.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 51. (1477) Quoting Socrates

<sup>12</sup> Wherever there is a rose there is a thorn, with wine is intoxication, a serpent is coiled over a treasure, and where there are royal pearls there are also devouring monsters.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258) Who would have friends a foe's hate must sustain;

Linked are snakes, gold; thorns, flowers; joy, pain.

SADI, Gulistan, vii, 19. (c. 1258) Eastwick. tr. Vnder the Cristal yse, is the daungerous myre; within the wrought wall, is the cursed serpent nourished: within the white tooth, doth the importune woorme fret.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 85. (1578) Quoting Antonio Guevara.

<sup>13</sup> Day follows on the murkiest night, and, when the time comes, the latest fruits will ripen (Tag wird es auf die dickste Nacht, und, kommt die Zeit, so reifen auch die spät'sten Früchte.)

SCHILLER, Die Jungfrau von Orleans. Act iii. sc. 2. (1800)

<sup>14</sup> There is no evil without its compensation (Nullum sine auctoramento malum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxi, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 65) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, ii, 20.

<sup>15</sup> Them ez wants, must choose.

Them ez hez, must lose.

Them ez knows, won't blab.

Them ez guesses, will gab.

Them ez borrows, sorrows.

Them ez lends, spends.

Them ez gives, lives.

Them ez keeps dark, is deep.

Them ez kin earn, kin keep.

Them ez aims, hits.

Them ez hez, gits.

Them ez waits, win.

Them ez will, kin.

EDWARD ROWLAND SILL, A Baker's Duzzen Uv Wize Saws. (1880)

1 All larks must grow a crest. (πάσαις κορυδαλλίσαι χρὴ λόφον ἐγγενέσθαι.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 68, Bergk, iii, 418. (c. 650 B.C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 809B. That is, there is a drawback in everything, every sweet has its sour, or, as Plutarch goes on to say, "Every public career bears its crop of enmities."

Where there's a teat, there's a tumor. (Ubi uber, ibi tuber.)

APULEIUS, Florida, 359. (c. A.D. 150) One of the "purple passages" preserved by Apuleius himself from a series of his lectures on philosophy.

No weale without woe.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) A variation is, "No joy without alloy," or "No joy without annoy." See under JOY AND SORROW. The French say, "Nul vie sans peine" (No life without pain); the Danes say, "Every day has its night, and every weal its woe."

As therefore the sweetest Rose hath his prickell, the finest veluet his bracke, the fairest flower his branne, so the sharpest wit hath his wanton will, and the holiest head his wicked way.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 33. (1579)

Every medal has its reverse. (Ogni medaglia ha il suo rovescio.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (1595)

Quoting an Italian proverb. See under MEDAL.

No gold without some dross.

RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Or. (1611)

DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 62, has, "No silver without his dross"; DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend, bk. ii, ch. 7, "There's no gold without its alloy."

Every light has its shadow.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, p. 262. (1669)

Every gap has its bush.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 254. (1678)

Every Bean hath its Black.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 103.

(1709) "No Man was ever yet born of Woman without some Imperfections," Dykes comments. "It is as natural for all Men to offend sometimes, as it is for every Bean to have a black Eye."

There was never a good town but had a mire at one end of it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 312. (1721)

"The deficiency and unsatisfactoriness of every created being," Kelly comments, "has given occasion to this, and many other proverbs."

No Garden without its Weeds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3376. (1732) See under GARDEN.

No wood without bark.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

No by-path without its pitfall. (No hay atajo sin trabajo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 226. (1856) A Spanish proverb. A similar one is, "Quien deja el camino real por le vereda, piensa atajar, y rodea" (He who leaves the highway for the byway, thinks to shorten his road, but makes it longer).

No wheat without chaff. (Non est triticum sine paleis.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 276.

(1869) COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Paille, has, "No corne without some chaffe." See under CORN. There are many variations: "No house without mouse"; "No throne without thorn"; and so on. The Dutch say, "Geen huis of t' heeft zijn kruis" (No house but has its cross). BRADY, Varieties of Literature, p. 37, notes another: "Every gran hath its bran."

In every pomegranate a decayed pip is to be found. (Omni malo punico inest granum putre.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 306.

(1869) "Even the sun has its spots."

No land without stones, Or meat without bones.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 120.

You may kill the wasp but he leaves his sting behind.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

HONEY IS SWEET BUT THE BEE STINGS, see under BEE.

EVERY GAIN HAS ITS LOSS, see GAIN AND LOSS

EVERY GOOD HAS ITS EVIL, see GOOD AND EVIL

EVERY JOY HAS ITS SORROW, see JOY AND SORROW

EVERY PLEASURE HAS ITS PAIN, see PAIN AND PLEASURE.

EVERY ROSE HAS ITS THORN, see ROSE AND THORN.

EVERY SWEET HAS ITS SOUR, see SWEET AND SOUR.

2 When a thing brings many advantages, it is only fair to put up with its disadvantages. (Multa ex quo fuerint commoda, eius incommoda aequomst ferre.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 840. (165 B.C.)

Who will eat the kernel of the nut must break the shell.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis. (1577)

He who wishes a fire must put up with the smoke. (Chi vuol fuoco, ha da patir il fumo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,

p. 192. (1856) An Italian proverb. The Germans and French have the same: "Wer Feuer haben will, muss den Rauch leiden": "Qui veut du feu, supporte le fumée."

He that would have eggs must endure the cackling of hens.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1670)

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 223 gives a variant, "I would not have your cackling for your egg, I would not have your trouble and noise for all the advantage you bring me."

3 It is never so cold but it melts somewhere . . . It is always melting and freezing at the same time when icicles are formed.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 24 Dec., 1850.

Under the coarsest rind the sweetest meat.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts, 28 March, 1856.

Between the hard crust of the lobster is found a delectable and luscious food.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Between Rounds. (1906)

1 Every balance hath its counterpoise.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 53. (1666)

Every Scale hath its Counterpoise.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1458. (1732)

2 One plucked, another fills its room
And burgeons with like precious bloom.

(Primo avolso non deficit alter aureus, et simili frondescit virga metallo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 143. (19 B.C.)

3 There's no deepe Valley, but neere some great Hill.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act iii, sc. 5. (1614) See under MOUNTAIN.

4 After drogt commyth rayne.

WRIGHT AND HALLIWELL, eds., Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 323. (c. 1450)

After a drought there fallyth a showre of rayne.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 12. (1529)

5 The hurtful ne'er without some good was born:
The stones that mar the hill will grind the corn.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). Pt. ii.

Bk. iii. Moral Lessons. (c. 600 B.C.) Legge, tr.

6 Every white will have its black
And every sweet its sour.

UNKNOWN, Sir Caudine. (c. 1450) See under SWEET AND SOUR.

COMPETITION

See also Rivalry

7 By competition the total amount of the supply is increased, and by increase of the supply a competition in the sale ensues, and this enables the consumer to buy at lower rates. Of all human powers operating on the affairs of mankind, none is greater than that of competition.

HENRY CLAY, Speech, U. S. Senate, 2 Feb., 1832. The battle of competition is fought by cheapening of commodities.

KARL MARX, Capital. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1867)

8 Thou shalt not covet: but tradition
Approves all forms of competition.

A. H. CLOUGH, The Latest Decalogue. (1849)

9 Never compete. Every competition damages the reputation. (Nunca competir. Toda pretension con oposicion daná el crédito.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 114. (1647)

10 The only competition worthy a wise man is with himself.

MRS. ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays: Washington Allston. (1846)

11 Competition is as wholesome in religion as in commerce.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Martin and Jack. (c. 1825)

Industry can be saved only by itself; competition is its life. (L'industrie ne peut être sauvée que par elle-même; la concurrence est sa vie.)

BALZAC, The Country Doctor. Ch. 1. (1833)

Competition is the life and soul of business.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 442. (1903)

Competition is the life of cocottes.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 235. (1920)

COMPETITION MAKES A HORSE-RACE, see under HORSE.

COMPLAINT

12 A good complaint is better than a wrong payment. (Más vale buena queja que mala paga.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

It is better to complain to some purpose, than to lose your money by paying it wrongly.

13 He gan to grucche and blamed it a lyte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Prologue, l. 9. (c. 1386)

14 He just got into that habit of bellyaching around.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 97. (1938)

15 A tarrowing [complaining] bairn was never fat.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595) "Grumbling makes the loaf no larger"; "Growling will not make the kettle boil"

16 He that always complains, is never pitied.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2038. (1732)

17 Never complain. (Nunca quejarse.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 129. (1647)

18 All complain.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 752. (1640)

19 Still whining? I'll see that you have something to whine over. (Etiamnum ploras? iam curabo, fatum tuum plores.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 75. (c. A.D. 60)

Heraclitus the whiner. (Heraclitus le pleurart.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1548)

A achwyno heb achos; gwneler achos iddo. (A complainer without cause, give him cause to complain.)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

- <sup>1</sup> To complain about anything is a crime in a plebeian. (Palam mutire plebio piaculum est.)
 PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25. (c. 25 B.C.)
 What boots complaint, when there's no remedy?
 THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act i, sc. 4. (c. 1589)

COMPLIMENT

See also Flattery, Praise

- <sup>2</sup> Compliments cost nothing, yet many pay dear for them.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1135. (1732)
 Compliments cost nothing, but may be dearly bought.
 F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 223. (1902)
<sup>3</sup> A compliment is usually accompanied with a bow, as if to beg pardon for paying it.
 J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)
<sup>4</sup> We sometimes make use of envenomed compliments which reveal by contrast in the objects of our eulogy faults we dare not expose in any other way. (Nous choisissons souvent des louanges empoisonnées, qui font voir par contre-coup en ceux que nous louons des défauts que nous n'osons découvrir d'une autre sorte.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 145. (1665)
<sup>5</sup> Tedious wast of time to sit and hear
 So many hollow complements and lies.
 MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. iv. l. 123. (1671)
 I have heard say that complimenting is lying.
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
 Light coin, the tinsel clink of compliment.
 TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 41. (1847)
 The accuracy of compliment is not that of algebra.
 W. C. BROWNELL, French Traits. (1889)

- <sup>6</sup> One complementarie Letter asketh another.
 THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron-Walden, fo. S2. (1596)
 My Lord Chancellor returned the compliment with much civility.
 WILLIAM TEMPLE, Essex Papers, p. 119. (1673)
 There's compliments you can return, and there's compliments you can't.
 MICHAEL INNES, Daffodil Affair, p. 50. (1942)

- <sup>7</sup> This was really a compliment to be pleased with—a nice little handsome pat of butter made up by a neat-handed Phillis of a dairy-maid instead of the grease fit only for cart-wheels which one is dosed with by the pound.
 WALTER SCOTT, Diary, 18 Nov., 1826. On having been complimented by Frances Burney.

- <sup>8</sup> Farewell compliment!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii. 2. 88. (1595)
 Manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliment.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iv, 1, 321. (1598)

- 'Twas never merry world
 Since lowly feigning was called compliment.
 SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 109. (1599)

- <sup>9</sup> Compliment—a thing often paid by people who pay nothing else.

HORATIO SMITH, The Tin Trumpet. (1836)
 Compliments fly when gentlefolk meet.
 R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 28. (1894)
 "When quality meet compliments pass" is another form.

- Compliments pass when beggars meet.
 G. F. NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, p. 12. (1894)

- <sup>10</sup> [They] ready Compliments supply
 On all Occasions, cut and dry.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Furnilure of a Woman's Mind, l. 13. (1727)

- Banging compliments backward and forward: it looked like two asses scrubbing one another.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

- <sup>11</sup> You play the wire-drawer with her commendations.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act i, sc. 1. (1614)

- <sup>12</sup> Women are never disarmed by compliments; men always are.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii. (1895)

- <sup>13</sup> I heartily wish you the Compliments of the Season.

THOMAS WROUGHTON, Letter, 24 Dec., 1766

COMPROMISE

- <sup>14</sup> All government—indeed, every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act—is founded on compromise and barter.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America, 22 March, 1775.

- All virtue is a compromise.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Inquirer, i, i, 2. (1797)

- All great alterations in human affairs are produced by compromise.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: The Catholic Question. (a. 1845)

- The essence of politics is compromise.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 10. (1849)

- <sup>15</sup> Every compromise was surrender and invited new demands.

R. W. EMERSON, American Civilization. (1849)
 Everything yields. . . . The stiffest patriots falter and compromise.

EMERSON, The Fortune of the Republic. (1849)
 Compromise is never anything but an ignoble truce between the duty of a man and the terror of a coward.

R. W. KAUFFMAN, The Way of Peace. (c. 1920)

- <sup>16</sup> A lean compromise is better than a fat lawsuit.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
 See under LAW.

<sup>1</sup> Life cannot subsist in society but by reciprocal concessions.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1766.

<sup>2</sup> Man, a bear in most relations—worm and savage otherwise,—

Man propounds negotiations, Man accepts the compromise.

Very rarely will he squarely push the logic of a fact

To its ultimate conclusion in unmitigated act.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Female of the Species. (1911)

<sup>3</sup> Compromise makes a good umbrella but a poor roof.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy. Address at Birmingham, England, 6 Oct., 1884.

<sup>4</sup> Heaven forbids, it is true, certain gratifications, but there are always ways and means of compounding such matters. (Le Ciel défend, de vrai, certains contentements; | Mais on trouve avec lui des accommodements.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act iv, sc. 5. (1664)

<sup>5</sup> [He] basely yielded upon compromise
That which his noble ancestors achieved with blows.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 253. (1595)

<sup>6</sup> Is not Compromise of old a god among you?
A. C. SWINBURNE, A Word from the Psalmist. (1871)

COMRADE

See also Fellowship

<sup>7</sup> A Comrade is a familiar male friend.

WILLIAM DAMPIER, Voyages. Vol. i, ch. 11. (1697)

<sup>8</sup> To have eaten from the same crib. (ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς φάτνης ἰδνῶκεναι.)

EUBULUS, Fragment. (c. 375 B. C.)

We were like two kernels in one almond.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. v, apol. 4. (c. 1258)

They cleave together like burs.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

See under BURR.

I was comerade to the Earl of Kildare, and slept both on one pillow.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Nugae Antiquae, p. 33. (1599)

We were nurst upon the self-same hill.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 23. (1637)

We get on like a house on fire.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 257. (1941)

Like two peas in a pod.

H. I. PHILLIPS, On White or Rye, p. 37. (1941)

They just "suited each other down to the ground."

P. C. WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 135. (1941)

AS GREAT AS THE DEVIL AND DR. FOSTER, see under DEVIL.

AS GREAT AS INGLE-WEAVERS, see under THICK

<sup>9</sup> No whit less dear than a brother is a comrade who has an understanding heart. (ἐπεὶ οὐ μὲν τι κασιγνήτοιο χεπέων | γίγνεται, ὅς κεν ἑταῖρος ἔων πεπνυμένα εἰδῇ.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 585. (c. 850 B. C.)
Comradship is a strangely potent tie. (τὸ συγγενὲς τοῖς δεινὸν ἢ θ' ὀμίλια.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 39. (c. 470 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> To no man make yourself too much a comrade. (Nulli te facias nimis sodalem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 34. (A. D. 103)

See also under FAMILIARITY.

<sup>11</sup> Wood burns most bright when joined with other wood.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. v, Apologue 10. (c. 1258)

<sup>12</sup> To be a comrade with the wolf and owl.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 213. (1605)

<sup>13</sup> Comrades in many ways; whence the saw.
"Messmate before a shipmate, shipmate before a stranger, stranger before a dog."

W. H. SMYTH, Sailor's Word-Book, 478. (1867)
I remember a sailor reciting, "A messmate before a shipmate, a shipmate before a stranger, a stranger before a dog, but a dog before a soldier"

W. C. RUSSELL, Romance of a Midshipman. Ch. 14. (1898)

CONCEIT

See also Egotism, Self-Love, Vain-glory, Vanity

<sup>14</sup> Conceit is the most incurable disease that is known to the human soul.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit. (1887)

<sup>15</sup> Conceited as Old Nick.

WALTER BESANT, Children of Gibeon. Bk. i. ch. 8. (1886)

<sup>16</sup> He who has heard but part of the truth thinks no one equal to himself.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 1. (c. 400 B. C.)

Giles tr. Quoted as a common proverb.

He thinks himself no page's peer.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 160. (1721)

He thinks nobody comparable to himself.

The French say, "Il se croit le premier moutardier du pape" (He thinks himself the first mustard-maker of the pope).

The greatest magnifying glasses in the world are a man's own eyes when they look upon his own person.

ALEXANDER POPE, Letter to William Wycherley, 23 June, 1705.

Every Sprat, now-a-days, calls itself a Herring.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1464. (1732)

They came to shoe the horses of the Pashá; the beetle stretched out its leg [to be shod].

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, p. 58.

(1875) Quoted by SIR ALGERNON WEST, Recollections. Ch. 9. (1899)

THE FLY ON THE WHEEL, see under FLY.

<sup>1</sup> What fine lady hast thou been putting out of conceit with herself.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelour. Act i, sc. 4. (1687)

Enough to put us out of conceit with such defenders.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. (1788)
Out of conceit with our lot in life.

J. H. NEWMAN, Parochial Sermons, iv, 10. (1838)

<sup>2</sup> Every man has a right to be conceited until he is successful.

BENJAMIN DIERRELL, The Young Duke. (1831)
The world tolerates conceit from those who are successful, but not from anybody else.

JOHN BLAKE, Uncommon Sense. (c. 1850)

<sup>3</sup> Thus when we fondly flatter our desires
Our best conceits do prove the greatest liars.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. vi, st. 94. (1596)

<sup>4</sup> I've never pity for conceited people, because I think they carry their comfort about with them.

GEORGE ELIOT (MARY ANN EVANS), The Mill on the Floss. Ch. 5. (1860)

<sup>5</sup> Safe screened by hills on either hand
From winter storms and summer heat,
There lies a silly little land—

The Country of Conceit.

ELLEN THORNEYCROFT FOWLER, Concerning Isabel Carnaby. Ch. 13, heading. (1900)

<sup>6</sup> Consait grows as natural as the hair on one's head, but is longer in comin' out.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 18. (1843)

<sup>7</sup> She thinkth her farthyng good syluer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
She thinks her farthing as good silver as an others.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

<sup>8</sup> Conceit . . . is to human character what salt is to the ocean; it keeps it sweet and renders it endurable.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1858)

<sup>9</sup> Conceit is the finest armour a man can wear.

JEROME K. JEROME, Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow: On Being Shy. (1889)

<sup>10</sup> His crest begins to rise. (Illi surgebant cristae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. iv, l. 69. (c. A. D. 120)
He is blown up with conceit.

<sup>11</sup> However much good we hear of ourselves, we never learn anything new. (Quelque bien qu'on nous dise de nous, on ne nous apprend rien de nouveau.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 303. (1665)

<sup>12</sup> Cease fancying yourself to be what you alone fancy yourself to be. (Desine iam tibi videri, quod soli tibi videris.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 41. (c. A. D. 85)

<sup>13</sup> Conceit . . . hath overthrowne many.

THOMAS MORLEY, Introduction to Musicke, p. 87. (1597)

<sup>14</sup> Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? there is more hope of a fool than of him. (Vidisti hominem sapientem sibi videri? magis illo spem habebit insipiens.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 12. (c. 400 B. C.)

The phrase is repeated twice in Proverbs: "Wiser in his own conceit" (Sapientior sibi), xxvi, 16; "Wise in his own conceit" (Sapiens sibi), xxviii, 11.

Be not wise in your own conceits. (μὴ γίγασθε φρόνιμοι παρ' εαυτοῖς.)

New Testament: Romans, xii, 16. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Nolite esse prudentes apud vosmetipsos."

Wise and wittye in hys owne conceyte.

UNKNOWN, The Monk of Evesham, p. 63. (1482)

Be not proud in youre awne consaytes.

MILES COVERDALE, New Testament: Romans, xii, 16. (1535)

Standing to miche in our own consaighes.

GEORGE JOYE, Apology to Tindale, p. 5. (1535)

The wise man admonisheth us, not to bee wise in our owne conceite, for that such wisdom is called divelish.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 93. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Standing too much in his owne conceite.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 144. (1579)

To stand too much in mine owne conceite would gain me little.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England, p. 369.

By falling down in your own conceit, you are mounted higher in the opinion of all others.

BISHOP JOHN HACKET, Scrinia Reserata, i, 176 (c. 1665)

When Christian saw that the man was wise in his own conceit, he said to Hopeful whisperingly. There is more hope of a fool than of him.

JOHN BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

A drunkard does . . . fancy himself a king in his own conceit.

THOMAS BROWN, Praise of Drunkenness. (c. 1700)

<sup>15</sup> Conceited goods are quickly spent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1678)

<sup>16</sup> Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 114. (1600)

Conceit is God's gift to little men.

BRUCE BARTON, Conceit. (c. 1925)

<sup>17</sup> Conceit—taking ourselves at our own valuation, generally about 50 per cent above the fair worth.

HORATIO SMITH, Tin Trumpet, 100. (1836)

CONCLUSION

1 Who is free from self-conceit? The partridge sleeps with its feet upwards through fear of the sky falling.

UNKNOWN, Hitopadesa. (c. 1250) Dubois, tr. Take away the self-conceited and there will be elbow-room in the world.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral and Religious Aphorisms. (1753)

We can bear to be deprived of everything but our self-conceit.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 421. (1823)

That hateful smirk of boundless self-conceit Which seems to take possession of the world.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Noon. Pt. ii. (1841)

2 This is a short conclusion.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 885, (c. 1386)

O most lame and impotent conclusion!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii. 1, 162. (1605)

This denoted a foregone conclusion.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii. 3, 428.

A Foregone Conclusion.

W. D. HOWELLS. Title of novel. (1875)

It was almost a foregone conclusion.

C. B. ADAMS. The Black Door, p. 225. (1941)

3 If their eyes trie not conclusion.

They will not trust a strangers true reporting.

ROBERT CHESTER, Love's Martyr. (1601)

Unpeg the basket on the house's top.

Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,

To try conclusions, in the basket creep,

And break your own neck down.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii. 4, 195. (1600)

Try no mad conclusions.

THOMAS D'URIEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, iii, 314. (1719)

4 Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii. 13. (c. 900 B.C.) See under God.

What will be the conclusion of all this?

ROBERT BOLTON, Comforting of Afflicted Consciences, ix, 45. (1635)

5 Mak thou conclusion, or ende.

JOHN WYCLIF, Ezekiel, vii. 23. (1382)

Drawe to a conclusyoun.

OSBORN BOKENHAM, Lyvys of Seyntys: Introduction. (1447)

Warne him to make a conclusion.

MILES COVERDALE, Ecclesiastes, x. 14. (1535)

I think it high time to hasten to a conclusion.

ROBERT BOYLE, Occasional Reflections, p. 70. (1665)

We must then come to this inevitable conclusion.

JOHN BRIGHT. Speech: Canada, 23 March, 1865.

CONCORD, see Discord

CONDUCT, see Behavior, Manners

CONFESSION

6 Open confession, open penance.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, p. 46. (1608)

7 Whatever thou hast to thy discredit, be the first to tell it.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)

8 May confession be a medicine to the erring. (Sit erranti medicina confessio.)

CICERO, Ad O. Tavianum. (43 B.C.)

Open confession is good for the soul.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 270. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 471. (1855) WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 96. (1943)

Confession may be good for the soul.

JAMES PAYN, A Grape from a Thorn. Ch. 39. (1881)

Confession is good for the soul.

CARLYN COFFIN, Mare's Nest, p. 107. (1941)

PERCIVAL WILDE, Design for Murder, p. 95. (1941)

That's open confession, but I don't know that it does my soul any good.

R. A. J. WALLING. The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 141. (1942)

9 A generous Confession disarms Slander.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 126. (1732)

10 Confession is the first step to repentance.

EDMUND GAYTON, Festivous Notes on Don Quixote, p. 66. (1654)

11 Blame not us but the proverb, Confess and be hanged.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1592)

Confesse and be hang'd, and so he was.

ANTHONY COPELEY, Wits, Fittes and Fancies, p. 148. (1594)

To confess and be hang'd for his labour. First to be hang'd, and then to confess.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv. 1. 38. (1604)

I haue confest, and shal be hangd.

THOMAS DEKKER, If It Be Not Good, the Diuel Is in It. (1612)

The simple Earl was perswaded to confess . . . and so soon after found the Proverb true, "Confess and be beheaded."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, ii. 407. (1662)

After so simple a confession, . . . must he now be hang'd too to make good the proverb?

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed Pt. i. (1672)

Confess and be hanged is a most reverend proverb

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 39. (1821)

Similarly, "An evil conscience breaks many a man's neck."

12 They shall confess their sin which they have done. (Confitebuntur peccatum suum.)

Old Testament: Numbers, v. 7. (c. 550 B.C.)

Confess your sins to one another. (Confitemini alterutrum peccata vestra.)

THE VENERABLE BEDE, Commentary on the Epistle of James. (c. 725) "Sub sigillo confessionis" (Under the seal of the confessional), is a medieval Latin phrase.

<sup>1</sup> I will confess; if it advantages in aught to own one's faults. (Confiteor, si quid prodest delicta fateri.)

OID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 4, l. 3. (c. 13 B.C.) Confession is neigheore to innocence.

CHAU'ER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 67.

A fault confest were half amended.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. iii, No. 25. (1618) See under FAULT.

He's half absolved who has confessed.

<sup>2</sup> MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 22. (1709)

Confess yourself to heaven;

Repent what's past; avoid what is to come.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 149. (1600)

Confess thee freely of thy sin.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 54. (1605)

<sup>3</sup> I own the soft impeachment.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act v, sc. 3. (1775)

CONFIDENCE

See also Self-Confidence, Trust

<sup>4</sup> Confident because of our caution. (δια τῆς εὐλάβειας θαρραλέος.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 7. (c. A.D. 100) In the first section of the same chapter Epictetus says, "We should do everything both cautiously and confidently at the same time."

<sup>5</sup> You have no need to borrow Confidence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5923. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Confidence does more to make conversation than wit. (La confiance fournit plus à la conversation que l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 421. (1665)

<sup>7</sup> Confidence placed in another often compels confidence in return. (Habita fides ipsam plerumque obligat fidem.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxii, ch. 22, sec. 14. (c. 10 B.C.) An expansion of the Latin proverb, "Fides facit fidem" (Confidence begets confidence). See also under TRUST.

<sup>8</sup> Confidence is wont to come slowly in matters of great moment. (Tarda solet magnis rebus inesse fides.)

OID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 130. (c. 10 B.C.) Confide in you? Oh, no! you must pardon me, gentlemen. Youth is the season of credulity: confidence is a plant of slow growth in an aged bosom.

WILLIAM PITT, FIRST EARL OF CHATHAM, Speech, House of Commons, 14 Jan., 1766. I see before me the statue of a celebrated minister who said confidence is a plant of slow growth. But I believe, however gradual may be the growth of confidence, that of credit requires still more time to arrive at maturity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 9 Nov., 1867.

<sup>9</sup> By mutual confidence and mutual aid Great deeds are done, and great discoveries made.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. x, l. 265. (1720)

<sup>10</sup> My last confidence will be like my first. (Ultima talis erit quae mea prima fides.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 20, l. 34. (c. 26 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint. (Dens putridus, et pes lassus, qui sperat super infideli in die angustiae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 19. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> Confidence scarce ever returns to the mind it has quitted. (Fides in animum unde abiit [vix] umquam redit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 211. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Lack of confidence is not the result of difficulty; the difficulty comes from lack of confidence. (Non quia difficilia sunt, non audemus, sed quia non audemus, difficilia sunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucium. Epis. civ, sec. 26. (c. A.D. 65)

<sup>14</sup> Confidence is never secure. (Nunquam tuta fides.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 373. (c. 19 B.C.) Sometimes written, "Nusquam tuta fides" (Nowhere is confidence secure). "Uberrima fides" (The most implicit confidence) is another Latin proverbial phrase <sup>15</sup> Confidence is a thing not to be produced by compulsion. Men cannot be forced into trust.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, U. S. Senate. (1834)

CONFUSION

<sup>16</sup> He rattled her so That . . . a sunder they go. JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

<sup>17</sup> The grete Babilon, whare the confusion of tungen was made.

SIR JOHN MAUNDEVILLE, Travels, vi, 21. (c. 1400) The first great judgement of God upon the ambition of man was the confusion of tongues.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. i, ch. 6, sec. 8. (1605)

<sup>18</sup> Confusion worse confounded.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 996. (1667)

Confusion unconfus'd.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1117. (1745)

My efforts, I fear, serve only to make confusion more confounded.

S.H. ADAMS, The Man Who Spoke Latin. (1911)

CONGRESS

1 You can't use tact with a Congressman. A Congressman is a hog. You must take a stick and hit him on the snout.

HENRY ADAMS, The Education of Henry Adams, quoting an unnamed member of the cabinet of U. S. Grant, c. 1875.

2 Some statesmen go to Congress and some go to jail. It is the same thing, after all.

EUGENE FIELD, Tribune Primer. (1882)

3 After a man has been out of Congress awhile, people say, "You wouldn't think that man had been in Congress, would you?"

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926)

4 I have been up to see Congress and they do not seem to be able to do anything except to eat peanuts and chew tobacco, while my army is starving.

R. E. LEE: To his son Custis, in Richmond (1864), referring to the Confederate Congress.

5 Being elected to Congress, though I am very grateful to our friends for having done it, has not pleased me as much as I expected.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to J. F. Speed, 22 Oct., 1846.

6 Reader, suppose you were an idiot. And suppose you were a member of Congress. But I repeat myself.

MARK TWAIN (S. L. CLEMENS), Manuscript Note. (c. 1882) Twain discovered that this quip always drew a laugh, and he used it in various speeches.

Fleas can be taught nearly anything a Congressman can.

MARK TWAIN, What Is Man? (1917)

CONQUEROR

7 Though Victory fruit of skill or fortune be,
To conquer always is a glorious thing.
(Fù il vincer sempre mai laudabil cosa, Vincasi o per fortuna o per ingegno.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xv, st. 1. (1532)

8 Augustus Caesar would say, "That he wondered that Alexander feared he should want work, having no more to conquer; as if it were not as hard a matter to keep as to conquer."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 125. (1625)

9 Woe to the vanquished. (τοῖς νενικημένοις ὀδύνη.)

BRENNUS, leader of the Gauls and conqueror of Rome. (c. 390 B.C.) It was agreed that on the delivery of a thousand pounds of gold by the Romans, the Gauls should straightway depart out of the country. Oaths were sworn to these terms and the gold was brought to be weighed. But the Gauls tampered with the scales. The Romans were incensed at this, but Brennus, with a mocking laugh, stripped off his sword, and added it, belt and all, to the weights. When Sulpicious asked, "What means this?" "What else," said Brennus, "but woe to the vanquished?" and the phrase passed at once into a proverb. See PLUTARCH, Lives: Camillus. Ch. xxviii. sec. 5. (c. A. D. 110)

Woe to the vanquished! (Vae victis!)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1317. (c. 195 B.C.) This, of course, was the phrase which passed into a proverb, and not the Greek as given by Plutarch above. It was frequently used, by LIVY, v, xlviii, 9; FLORUS, i, xiii, 17; FESTUS, p. 372, and is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 1, who also gives Plutarch's explanation of the origin of the phrase.

Woe to the conquering, not the conquer'd host.

LORD BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 25. (1812)

Woe to the vanquished, Caesar.

BERNARD SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act ii. (1897)

10 It is the right of war for conquerors to treat the conquered according to their pleasure (Ius esse belli, ut qui vicissent eis quos vicissent, quem ad modum vellent imperarent.)

ARIOVISTUS, KING OF THE GERMANS, to Julius Caesar. (56 B.C.) See CAESAR, De Bello Gallico. Bk. i, sec. 36.

11 I came, I saw, I conquered. (Veni, vidi, vici.) JULIUS CAESAR, Letter to Amantius, announcing his victory over Pharnaces at Zela, in Pontus. (47 B.C.)

Never shall the insolent barbarian say, "I came. I saw, I conquered." (Ne insolens barbarus dicat "Veni, vidi, vici.")

LUCIUS ANNAEUS SENECA,  Suasoriae. Bk. ii. sec. 19. (c. A. D. 32) This is said to be the earliest occurrence of the phrase in literature, written by the elder Seneca shortly before his death. The context is: "If you wish I will also give you an example of the blundering historian Thucydus, the same who charged Scourus Mamercus with treason, when he declaimed this discourse [respecting an event in the reign of Xerxes]: 'Let us expect that this, if nothing else, would be done, lest the haughty barbarian should say, Veni, vidi, vici'—whereas the divine Julius said this many years after, when Pharnaces was conquered."

In announcing the swiftness and fierceness of this battle to one of his friends at Rome, Amantius, Caesar wrote three words: "Came, saw, conquered." (ἦλθον, εἶδον, ἐνίκησα.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 50, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 110)

In his Pontic triumph he displayed among the show-pieces of the procession an inscription of but three words, "Veni, vidi, vici," not indicating the events of the war, as the others did, but the speed with which it was finished.

SUETONIUS, De Vita Caesarum: Divus Julius.

Ch. 37. (c. A. D. 120) There is no authority for the frequent statement that the words were applied by Caesar to his expedition to Britain in 55 B. C., which was not speedy, and only partially successful.

He it was that might rightly say, Veni, vidi, vici; which to annotherize in the vulgar—O base and obscure vulgar!—videlicet, He came, saw, and overcame.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1, 67. (1595)

I may justly say, with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, "I came, saw, and overcame."

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 3, 44. (1598) Caesar's thrasonical brag of "I came, saw, and overcame."

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 2, 34. (1600) I came, I saw, God conquered.

JOHN SOBIESKI, Message, to the Pope, with the Mussulman standards captured before Vienna, 12 Sept., 1683.

The enemy came, was beaten, I am tired, good-night.

TURRENE, announcing his victory over the Spaniards at Dunkirk, June 14, 1658.

Hurrah! Prague! Suwarrow!

SUWARROW, announcing the capture of Prague, in 1794, to Catherine of Russia. Catherine's answer was, "Bravo! Field-marshal! Catherine!"

"Peccavi—I've Scinde" wrote Lord Ellen so proud.

More briefly Dalhousie wrote—"Vovi—I've Oude."

UNKNOWN, Punch. Vol. xxx, p. 141. (1856)

1 Who yields himself conquered at fit moment, conquers. (Qui vinci sese patitur pro tempore, vincit.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

2 Long live he who conquers. (Viva qui venice.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 20. (1615)

The French say, "Vive le vainqueur." "Io triumphe!" (Hail, conqueror!) was the address of the populace to Roman emperors. Most Men cry, Long live the Conqueror.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 3467 (1732)

3 The fame of a conqueror; a cruel fame, that arises from the destruction of the human species.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters to His Son, 30 Sept., 1757

4 You [Caesar] seem to have conquered victory itself [in granting privileges to the conquered]. (Ipsam victoriam vicisse videris.)

CICERO, Pro Marcello. Ch. 4, sec. 12. (46 B. C.)

Mercy in power is good fortune for a people. (Potens misericors publica est felicitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 523. (c. 43 B. C.)

With the same hand that he conquers he protects the conquered. (Qua vicit, victos protegit ille manu.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 52. (c. 13 B. C.) It is impossible to imagine anything which better becomes a ruler than mercy. (Excogitare nemo quicquam poterit quod magis decorum regenti sit quam clementia.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 1 (c. A. D. 54)

It is noble to give life to the vanquished. (Pulchrum est vitam donari minori.)

STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. vi, l. 816. (c. A. D. 92)

Clemency in victory tempers armed strength (Mitigat armatas victrix clementia vires.)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i, l. 69. (c. A. D. 416)

Our forefathers and ancestors of all times have been of this nature and disposition, that, upon the winning of a battle, they have chosen rather for a sign and memorial of their triumphs and victories, to erect trophies and monuments in the hearts of the vanquished by clemency, than by architecture in the lands which they have conquered. (Noe peres, ayeulx, & ancestres de toute memoyre, ont esté de ce sens & ceste nature; que des batailles par eulx consommées ont pour signe memorial des triumphes & victoires plus voluntiers erigé trophées & monumens es cueurs des vaincuz par grace, que es terres par eulx conquestées par architecture.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1534)

Tigers have courage and the rugged bear, But man alone can, whom he conquers, spare

EDMUND WALLER, Epistle to My Lord Protector. (a. 1687)

Humanity always becomes a conqueror.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act i, sc. 1. (1799)

5 Rats and conquerors must expect no mercy in misfortune.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 400. (1820)

6 He who resolves to die or conquer is rarely conquered: such noble despair perishes with difficulty. (Qui veut mourir ou vaincre est vaincu rarement: | Ce noble désespoir périt malaisément.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Horace Act ii, sc. 1 (1640)

7 The vanquished never yet spake well of the conqueror.

SAMUEL DANIEL, A Defence of Rhyme. (1602)

8 They can conquer who believe they can.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Cour age. (1870) See also under ABILITY

9 He who has conquered is not conqueror unless the conquered confesses it. (Qui vicit non est victor nisi victus fatetur.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Frag. 485, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

10 I have lived long enough, for I die unconquered. (Satis vixi, invictus enim morior.)

EPAMINONDAS. Last words. (362 B. C.) See CORNELIUS NEPOS, Epaminondas, sec. 15.

<sup>1</sup> The conqueror weeps, the conquered is ruined. (Flet victor, victus interiiit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 24. (1523) Both sides suffer in war or litigation. A variant of the proverb, "Patitur qui vincit" (He suffers who conquers).

<sup>2</sup> King or ass. (Βασιλεὺς ἢ ὄνος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 41. (1523) That is, as Erasmus explains, conqueror or conquered, either very high or very low (Aut victor, aut victus; aut ter sex, aut tres tali). The Latin is, "Rex aut asinus."

<sup>3</sup> He that will conquer, must fight,

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2346. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Russia seems undoubtedly . . . to be carrying on a process of absorption in Persia, and it is being done by what, I think, a French writer has called "peaceful penetration."

SIR EDWARD GREY. (Parliamentary Debates, 18 Feb., 1903.) The earliest use of the phrase "peaceful penetration" which the editor has been able to discover. Used in The Nation in 1913 (July 31, p. 103). In 1916 an Australian writer, A. D. McLaren, wrote a book by that title, placing the phrase in quotation marks, with no indication of its source. In common use since.

<sup>5</sup> There is no such conquering weapon as the necessity of conquering.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1062. (1650)

<sup>6</sup> It is difficult to contend with a conqueror. (Contendere durum est cum victore.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 42. (35 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Greece, the captive, made her savage victor captive. (Graecia capta ferum victorem cepit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, No. i, l. 156. (c. 15 B. C.)

Their own conquerors a conquered race keeps down. (Victoresque suos natio victa premit.)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i, l. 398. (c. A. D. 416) Of the Jews.

The conqueror always acquires some of the qualities of the conquered.

BERNARD SHAW, Jitta's Atonement: Preface. (1926)

<sup>8</sup> Some stoop to conquer, others stoop and conquer. (Hwo' hsia 'i 'ts'ü, hwo' hia' erh 'ts'ü.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 61. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

She Stoops to Conquer.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Title of comedy. (1773)

In this surrender, the National Government does not even stoop to conquer.

CHARLES SUMNER, Speech, U.S. Senate, 7 Jan., 1862.

<sup>9</sup> The good fighter is not wrathful; the greatest conqueror does not wage war. (Shan' chen' ché pu mi; shan' shǎng ti ché pu chǎng.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 68. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

<sup>10</sup> The conquering cause was pleasing to the gods. (Victrix causa deis placuit.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 128. (c. A. D. 60)

The conqueror would rather burst a city gate than find it open to admit him; he would rather ravage the land with fire and sword (ferri populetur et igni) than overrun it without protest from the husbandmen. He scorns to advance by an ungarded road or to act like a peaceful citizen.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 443. (c. A. D. 60) Referring to Caesar. "With Fire and Sword" is the title of a historical novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, published in 1890

<sup>11</sup> Yield if you are opposed: by yielding you conquer. (Cede repugnanti: cedendo victor abibis.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 197. (c. 1 B. C.)

The slender shrub which is seen to bend, conquers when it yields to the storm. (Sai che piegare si vede Il docile arboscello, Che vince allor che cede Dei turbini al furor.)

METASTASIO, Il Trionfo di Clelia, i, 8. (c. 1730)

See also under BENDING.

<sup>12</sup> It is hard to conquer, but conquer you shall. (Male vincetis, sed vincite.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. viii, l. 509. (A. D. 7)

<sup>13</sup> Conquered, we conquer. (Victi vicimus.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 510. (c. 200 B. C.)

He is hailed a conqueror of conquerors. (Victor victorum cluet.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 309. (c. 194 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup> He is conqueror, not conquered, who yields to his own people. (Non vincitur, sed vincit, qui cedit suis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 443. (c. 43 B. C.) Another Latin proverb is, "Victor volentes per populos dat iura" (A conqueror gives laws to a willing people). Curtius says, "Leges a victoribus dicuntur, accipiuntur a victis" (The laws laid down by the conquerors are accepted by the conquered).

<sup>15</sup> To conquer is honorable, to oppress bitter, to forgive beautiful. (Vincere est honestum, opprimere acerbum, pulchrum ignoscere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 733. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> Do this, and you will conquer. (Hoc fac & vinces, c'est à dire, Fais ainsi, & tu auras victoire.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 29. (1532)

The Greek is, ἐν τούτῳ νικά (In this you shall conquer). BY THIS SIGN YOU CONQUER, see under CROSS.

1 He went forth conquering and to conquer.
(ἐξῆλθεν νικῶν καὶ ἵνα νικήσῃ.)

New Testament: Revelation, vi, 2. (c. A. D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Exivit vincens ut vinceret."

2 Without glory is the man conquered who is conquered without danger. (Sine gloria vinci, qui sine periculo vincitur.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Sec. 3. (c. A. D. 40) "To win without danger is to win without glory."
The honor of the conquest is rated by the difficulty.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)
To conquer without peril is to triumph without glory. (A vaincre sans péril, on triomphe sans gloire.)

CORNEILLE, Le Cid. Act ii, sc. 2. (1636)

3 Which would you rather be,—a conqueror in the Olympic games, or the crier who proclaims him? (ὁ νικῶν ἢ ὁ κηρύττων.)

THEMISTOCLES, when asked whether he would rather be Achilles or Homer. (c. 470 B. C.)
See PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 185: A.

4 A conqueror, like a cannon-ball, must go on. If he rebounds, his career is over.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON. Quoted in SAMUEL ROGERS, Recollections, c. 1827.

5 I have conquered the universal conqueror. (Omnium victorem vixi.)

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on medal commemorating Diane de Poitiers, with a bas relief showing her trampling underfoot the God of Love.

And though mine arm should conquer twenty worlds,

There's a lean fellow beats all conquerors.

THOMAS DEKKER, Old Fortunatus. Act i, sc. 1. (1600) See also DEATH THE INEVITABLE.

CONQUEST

6 Quietly rested under the drums and trappings of three conquests.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5. (1658)

7 Conquest pursues where courage leads the way.

SAMUEL GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iv. l. 99. (1699)

8 Conquest is the acquiring of the right of sovereignty by victory.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan: Conclusion. (1651)

9 If there be one principle more deeply rooted than any other in the mind of every American, it is that we should have nothing to do with conquest.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to William Short. (1791)

10 To joy in conquest is to joy in the loss of human life. ('Mei chi ché shi lö shah iän.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 31. (c. 350 B. C.) Old, tr. Or, "To rejoice in conquest is to rejoice in murder."

11 A small conquest it is to ouerthrowe those that neuer resisteth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 64. (1579)

12 Conquest has explored more than ever curiosity has done; and the path of science has been commonly opened by the sword.

SYDNEY SMITH, Table-Talk. (a. 1845)

CONSCIENCE

I—Conscience: What It Is

13 Conscience and reputation are two things. Conscience is due to yourself, reputation to your neighbor. (Duæ res sunt conscientia et fama. Conscientia tibi, fama proximo tuo.)

ST. AUGUSTINE. (c. A. D. 397) See Works, xxi, 347. Chaucer quotes this in The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 52. (c. 1387)

14 Conscience, which is the sparkle of the purity of his first estate.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1605)

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire, called Conscience.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Rules of Civility. (c. 1785) See SPARKS, Writings of Washington, ii, 413.

15 Conscience is a thing of fictitious existence, supposed to occupy a seat in the mind.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Deontology. Ch. 1 (1834)

16 Conscience emphasizes the word ought.

JOSEPH COOK, Boston Monday Lectures: Conscience. (c. 1830)

17 Conscience, that good companion which fortifies a man beneath the hauberk of his self-felt purity. (Coscienza . . . la buona compagna che l'uom francheggia | sotto l'osbergo del sentirsi pura.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxviii, l. 115. (c. 1300)

18 The moral sense, or conscience, is as much a part of man as his leg or arm.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Peter Carr, 1787

19 Conscience is an instinct to judge ourselves in the light of moral laws. It is not a mere faculty; it is an instinct.

IMMANUEL KANT, Lecture at Königsberg. (1775)

Conscience is instinct bred in the house.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

20 Conscience is a god to all mortals. (ἄσπερ ἡ συνείδησις θεός.)

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 564. (c. 300 B. C.)

Conscience is God's presence in man.

SWEDENBORG, Arcana Caelestia. Sec. 4299. (c. 1750)

<sup>1</sup> The laws of conscience, which we pretend are born of nature, are born of custom. (Les loix de la conscience, que nous disons naistre de nature, naissent de la coustume.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. (1580)

What is morality but immemorial custom? Conscience is the chief of conservatives.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

<sup>2</sup> Conscience is a heavy servitude. (Conscientia animi gravis est servitus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 264. (c. 43 B.C.)
O conscience, silent torture of the soul. (O tacitum tormentum animi conscientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 490.

Conscience is a cut-throat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 66. (1639)

<sup>3</sup> Conscience is the voice of the soul. (La conscience est le voix de l'âme.)

J. J. ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv. (1762)

<sup>4</sup> Conscience is, in most men, an anticipation of the opinion of others.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 63. (1836)

Conscience is an imitation within ourselves of the government without us.

ALEXANDER BAIN, The Emotions and the Will. (1859)

<sup>5</sup> Conscience is the most changeable of guides. (La conscience est la plus changeante des règles.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 133. (1746)

<sup>6</sup> Conscience without judgment is superstition.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral and Religious Aphorisms. (1753)

II—Conscience: Apothegms

<sup>7</sup> Conscience windy on an empty stomach.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 66. (1941)

<sup>8</sup> There is another man within me that's angry with me.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 7. (1643)

Inexorable conscience holds his court,
With still small voice the plot of guilt alarms.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Mores Concluded. (c. 1800)

See also under VOICE.

<sup>9</sup> Conscience was born when man had shed his fur, his tail, his pointed ears.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. v, st. 19. (1853)

<sup>10</sup> Of nyce conscience took he no keep.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 400. (c. 1386)

Your conscience is too nice
And bites too hotly of the Puritan spice.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Amboise. Act iii. (1604)

He that hath a scrupulous conscience is like a horse that is not well weigh'd: he starts at every bird that flies out of the hedge.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Conscience. (1689)
Save me from curious conscience, that still lords
Its strength for darkness, burrowing like a mole.

JOHN KEATS, To Sleep. (1819)

<sup>11</sup> Conscience, avaunt! Richard's himself again!

COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (alt.). Act v, sc. 3. (c. 1700)

<sup>12</sup> A conscience as large as a shipman's hose.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 66. (1639)

A conscience like Coldingham common.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 328. (1862)

<sup>13</sup> Asking no question for conscience sake. (μὴδὲν ἀνακρίνορες διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 25. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Nihil interrogantes propter conscientiam."

The fourth would return for conscience sake.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 3, 36. (1607)

You will suffer for conscience-sake.

DEFOE, The Family Instructor, i, 4. (1715)

<sup>14</sup> Who sometimes make it a matter of conscience to spitt in the church, and at another time will beray the altar.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 31. (1591)

Some make a conscience of spitting in the Church, yet rob the Altar.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 652. (1640)

Some make Conscience of wearing a Hat in the Church, who make none of robbing the Altar.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

<sup>15</sup> Conscience can't be compelled.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1144. (1732)

Not to hear Conscience is the Way to silence it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3584.

<sup>16</sup> He that sinnes against his Conscience sinnes with a witness.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Recreations. (1642)

<sup>17</sup> Sell not your conscience; thus are fetters wrought.

What is a Slave but One who can be Bought?

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 80. (1924)

<sup>18</sup> Woe be to that man who shall tie himself so close to the letter of the law as to make shipwreck of conscience, that bird in his bosom.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Cases of Conscience. Ch. 2. (c. 1645)

<sup>19</sup> I suppose the Nonconformists value themselves upon their conscience.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed,

i, 125. (1672) A Nonconformist is a member of the Church of England who refuses to conform to its discipline and practice, or one who has separated from the church, a Protestant Dissenter.—O.E.D.

Nothing less will satisfy the Nonconformist conscience.

UNKNOWN, London Times, 28 Nov., 1890, p. 8/6.

<sup>1</sup> The sting of conscience, like the gnawing of a dog at a bone, is mere foolishness.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human. Ch. 2. (1878)

One may so train one's conscience that it kisses one when it bites.

NIETZSCHE, Beyond Good and Evil. (1886)

He who is ridden by a conscience

Is worried by a lot of nonsense.

OGDEN NASH, The Conscience. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> According to the state of a man's conscience, so do hope and fear on account of his deeds arise in his mind. (Conscia mens ut cuique sua est, ita concipit intra pectora pro facto spemque metumque suo.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 485. (c. A. D. 8.)

<sup>3</sup> A bright guinea, like a bright sun, is very apt to throw light upon a case of conscience.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iv, sc. 1. (1815)

The human conscience can subsist on very questionable food.

BERNARD SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma: Preface. (1906)

<sup>4</sup> Liberty of conscience is the first step to having a religion.

WILLIAM PENN, The People's Ancient and Just Liberties Asserted. (1673)

<sup>5</sup> The conscience is the one and only court which is never misled by oratorical artifices. (συνειδότος, ὁ μόνον ἐξ ἀπάντων δικαστήριον τέχαις λόγων οὐ παράγεται.)

PHILO, De Virtutibus. Sec. 206. (c. A. D. 40)

No guilty man is ever acquitted at the bar of his own conscience. (Iudice nemo nocens absolvitur.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 3. (c. A. D. 120)

"In fero conscientiae" (Before the tribunal of conscience) is a Latin proverb.

Why should not Conscience have vacation

As well as other Courts o' the nation?

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 317. (1663)

It is always Term-Time in the Court of Conscience.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2914. (1732)

The most miserable pettifogging in the world is that of a man in the court of his own conscience.

H. W. BECHER, Life Thoughts. (1858)

<sup>6</sup> A scar on the conscience is the same as a wound. (Cicatrix conscientiae pro vulnere est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 132. (c. 43 B.C.)

O faithful conscience, delicately pure,
How doth a little failing wound thee sore!
(O dignitosa coscienza e netta, come t'è picciol fallo amaro morso!)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto iii, l. 8. (c. 1310)

The wounds sustained for the sake of conscience carry their own balsam with the blow.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 9. (1818)

<sup>7</sup> Conscience sets a bridle on the tongue. (Frenos imponit linguae conscientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 226. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> He who has no conscience has nothing. (Qui n'a conscience n'a rien.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel; Prologue de l'Auteur. (1534)

He that loses his conscience has nothing left that is worth keeping.

CAUSSIN, The Holy Court. (c. 1645) As quoted by WALTON, The Compleat Angler.

<sup>9</sup> Listen to your conscience, for you may be listening to God.

J. H. RHOADES, Jonathan's Apothegms. Vol. ii, No. 51. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> Conscience always has the rocking-chair,
Cheerful as when she tortured into fits
The first cat that was ever killed by Care.

E. A. ROBINSON, New England. (1925) See also under CARE.

<sup>11</sup> Going through life with a conscience is like driving your car with the brakes on.

BUDD SCHULBERG, What Makes Sammy Run, p. 69. (1941)

<sup>12</sup> Tell me, even upon thy conscience.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 3, 113. (1593)

Once a year a man may say, On his conscience

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 969. (1640)

<sup>13</sup> Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet cli. (1609)

<sup>14</sup> My conscience is my crown,
Contented thoughts my rest;

My heart is happy in itself;
My bliss is in my breast.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Content and Rich. (c. 1595)

<sup>15</sup> Trust that man in nothing who has not a Conscience in everything.

LAWRENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1759)

<sup>16</sup> The lawiers have such chauerell consciences.

PHILIP STUBBS, The Anatomie of Abuses, ii, 12. (1583) A cheverel is a kid or wild goat, but the word is always used in the sense of the full cheverel-leather, kid-leather, noted for its pliancy and capability of being stretched.

Their consciences are like chieurell skins, that will stretch every way.

UNKNOWN, Discouerie of Knights of the Poste, sig. B4. (1597)

Your soft cheveril conscience.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 3, 33. (1612)

They have cheveril consciences that will stretch.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 2, subs. 3. (1621)

Cheveril consciences, which will stretch any way for advantage.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Wales, iii, 484. (1662)

He hath a conscience like a cheverels skin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)

As guardian of His Majesty's conscience.

LORD CHANCELLOR EDWARD THURLOW, Speech, House of Lords, 1780. See BUTLER, Reminiscences, p. 199.

The conscience of the dying belies their life. (La conscience des mourants calomnie leur vie.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 136. (1746)

He shot upright as the boot of conscience kicked him in the pants.

JAMES WARREN, No Sleep at All, p. 38. (1941)

III—The Good Conscience

Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men. (ἐν τοῦτω καὶ αὐτὸς δακῶ ἀνθρώπων συνείδησιν ἔχει πρὸς τὸν θεὸν καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους διὰ παντός.)

New Testament: Acts, xxiv, 16. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Sine offendiculo conscientiam habere ad Deum, et ad homines."

A good conscience is a continual feast.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. ii, mem. iii, sec. 7. (1621) Quoting Boethius. HOWELL, Familiar Letters, sec. 9, let. 22. (1645)

A good Conscience is the best Divinity.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 141. (1732)

A good conscience is a continual Christmas.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

A man that will enjoy a quiet conscience must lead a quiet life.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 24 April, 1741.

Be this our wall of bronze, to have no guilt at heart. (Hic murus aeneus esto, | nil conscribere sibi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 60. (20 B. C.)

A healthy conscience is like a wall of bronze. (Murus aeneus conscientia sana.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. x, No. 25.

(1523) An English variant is, "A clear conscience is like a coat of mail."

A cleere conscience is a sure card.

JOHN LYLY, Ruphues and His England, p. 207.

(1580) Also. HOWELL, Proverbs. d. 3. (1659)

A cleere conscience needeth no excuse, nor feareth any accusation.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 256.

(1580) See also under INNOCENCE.

A clear Conscience laughs at false Accusations.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 42. (1732)

A clear conscience can bear any trouble.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 40.

Keep Conscience clear, then never fear.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Men whose consciences are clear

Of a knock at midnight have no fear.

(Wei jên pu tso k'uei hsin shih pan yeh ch'iao mên hsin pu ching.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1640. (1875)

O that I were as happy as my conscience is clear! (Tam felix utinam quam pectore candidus essem.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv. epis. 14, l. 43. (A. D. 13)

A good conscience invents no glib excuses. (Conscientia animi nullas invenit linguae preces.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 115. (c. 43 B. C.) Friedrich takes conscientia as "a bad conscience" and reads nimias.

The glory of a good man is the testimony of a good conscience. Have a good conscience, and thou shalt ever have gladness. (Gloria boni hominis, testimonium bonae conscientiae. Habe bonam conscientiam: et habebis semper laetitiam.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (c. 1420) Paraphrasing II Corinthians, i, 12.

What better bed than conscience good, to pass the night with sleep.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Poesies for Thine Own Bed-Chamber. (1573)

It is quieter sleeping in a good conscience, then a whole skin.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: Newes from My Lodging. (1613)

A safe conscience makes a sound sleep.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 14. (1721)

"And doubtless," Kelly adds, "a bad conscience will have a contrary effect."

A quiet conscience causes a quiet sleep.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 374. (1732)

A quiet Conscience sleeps in Thunder.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 375.

A quiet conscience sleeps in thunder,

But rest and guilt live far asunder.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

Preserve a clear conscience, and sleep without fear in the desert.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 125. (1817)

That sweet sound sleep that is the lot o' a gude conscience.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. (1827) See Blackwood's Magazine, Apr., 1827, p. 476.

A good conscience makes an easy couch.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore. d. 216. (1902) The Germans say, "Gut Gewissen ist ein sanftes Ruhkissen" (A good conscience is a soft pillow); the French "There is no pillow so soft as a clear conscience."

IV—The Guilty Conscience

See also Remorse

<sup>1</sup> A burthen'd conscience
Will never need a hangman.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Lawes of Candy. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1615)

An evil Conscience breaks many a Man's Neck.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 602. (1732)

See CONFESS AND BE HANGED.

The disease of an evil conscience is beyond the practice of all the physicians of all the countries in the world.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, at Plumstead, 1878.

<sup>2</sup> An ill Conscience can never hope well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 621. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> There is no sting to the worm of conscience.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde. (1590)

The worm of conscience shall begnaw thy soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 222. (1592)

Those whom God forsakes, the devil . . . persecutes with that worm of conscience, as he did Judas, Saul, and others. The poets call it Nemesis.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 2, subs. 3. (1621)

The worm of conscience consorts with the owl.
(Nur der Gewissenswurm schwärmt mit der Eule.)

SCHILLER, Kabale und Liebe. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1784) Or "wakes and watches with the owl."

<sup>4</sup> There is . . . no hell to a minde toucht with guilt.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde. (1590)

No hell to a bad conscience.

JOHN CROWNE, The Ambitious Statesman. Act v, sc. 3. (1679)

There is no hell like a troubled conscience.

UNKNOWN, The Connoisseur. No. 28. (1754)

Conscience, the bosom-hell of guilty man!

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Pelican Island. Canto v, l. 127. (1827)

<sup>5</sup> A bad conscience is a kind of illness, in the sense that pregnancy is an illness.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, The Genealogy of Morals. Ch. 2. (1887)

<sup>6</sup> There is nothing more wretched than the mind of a man conscious of guilt. (Nihil est miserius quam animus hominis conscius.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 544. (c. 220 B.C.)

No curse is more severe than a bad conscience. (Nullum maledictum esse gravius conscientia.)

PHAEDRUS (?), New Fables. No. 25. (c. 25 B.C.)

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 6, 41. (1595)

The guylt conscience thinks what as is sayd, Is alwayes spoken himselfe to vpbrayde.

UNKNOWN, Servingsmans Comfort. (1598)

A guilty conscience feels continual fear.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Owle. (1604)

The guilty conscience fears, when there's no fear.

ROWLAND WATKYN, Flamma Sine Fumo: The Righteous Is Confidant as a Lion. (c. 1662)

A guilty Conscience never thinketh it self safe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 208. (1732)

THE GUILTY FLEE, see under GUILT.

EACH BUSH AN OFFICER, see under BUSH.

<sup>7</sup> Even without a law conscience punishes. (Etiam sine lege poena est conscientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 194. (c. 43 B.C.) A variation of the Greek proverb, ἡ συνείδησις τὴν ψυχὴν πλάττει (Conscience chastises the soul).

If thou injurest conscience, it will have its revenge on thee.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

<sup>8</sup> Conscience is a thousand witnesses. (Conscientia mille testes.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. v, ch xi, sec. 41. (c. A.D. 80) Quintilian is quoting a proverb, and is himself quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 91. Taverner (fo. 29) translates it, and comments, "Nothyng so much accuseth a man as his owne conscience."

Conscience serueth in stead of a thousand witnesses. (La conscientia serue per mille testimonii.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

A guilty conscience is a thousand witnesses.

ROBERT GREENE, Philomela. (1592)

Conscience is witness enough.

JOHN CLARKE, Puroemiologia, p. 66. (1639)

<sup>9</sup> Bad deeds are lashed by the whip of conscience. (Mala facinora conscientia flagellari.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 15. (c. A.D. 64) Quoting Epicurus. The Germans say, "Bös Gewissen, böser Gast, Weder Ruhe, weder Rast" (Bad conscience, a worse guest, neither rest nor peace).

<sup>10</sup> She felt the terrors of her own conscience.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii, p. 121. (1580)

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues.

And every tongue brings in a several tale,

And every tale condemns me for a villain.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 193. (1592)

It is an old saying, a guilty conscience needs no accuser.

UNKNOWN, Life and Adventures of Mut. Bishop, p. 106. (1744)

Conscience is a self-accuser.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs in Verse, p. 112. (c. 1800)

V—The Coward Conscience

<sup>11</sup> Conscience turns a man into a coward. (ἡ σύνεσις ἀνδρὸν δειλότατον εἶναι ποιεῖ.)

MENANDER, Frag. 632K. (c. 300 B.C.)

Guilty consciences ever make people cowards.

BIDPAI, Fables: The Prince and the Minister. (c. 300 B.C.)

O the cowardice of a guilty conscience!
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii. (c. 1580)
I'll not meddle with it [conscience]: . . . it makes a man a coward.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 4, 137. (1592)
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 179. (1592)

Conscience does make cowards of us all.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 83. (1600) OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray, ch. 8, twists this to, "Conscience makes egoists of us all."
There is no coward to an ill conscience.

THOMAS POWELL, Tom of All Trades, p. 161. (1631)

Guilty consciences make men cowards.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife, Act v, sc. 6. (1697)

Conscience makes cowards of us all, Whittaker.
H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 69. (1942)

1
Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devised at first to keep the strong in awe.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 309. (1592)
2
Conscience and cowardice are really the same things.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1. (1891)

CONSERVATISM

See also Party: Tory

3
Conservative. A statesman who is enamored of existing evils, as distinguished from the Liberal, who wishes to replace them with others.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

4
If we glance into that Assembly-Hall of theirs, . . . rudiments of Parties disclose themselves. There is a Right Side (Côté Droit), a Left Side (Côté Gauche); sitting on M. le President's right hand, or on his left. The Côté Droit conservative; the Côté Gauche destructive.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. I, bk. vi, ch. 2. (1837) Referring to the French Constituent Assembly, of July, 1789. The first use of "left" as applied to persons of advanced or reform views. "Right," as applied to conservatives, goes much farther back, to Shakespeare, in fact, for in Coriolanus, ii, 1, 26, Menenius, who describes himself as a "humorous patrician," asks of the two tribunes, Sicinius and Brutus: "Do you know how you are censured here in the city, I mean by us o' the right-hand file?" and adds that the "right-hand file," that is, the conservatives, find them fools, "ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs."

5
We have a maxim in the House of Commons, and written on the walls of our house, that old ways are the safest and surest ways.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Speech, 8 May, 1628.

6
It seems to me a barren thing, this Conservatism—an unhappy cross-breed, the mule of politics that engenders nothing.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Ch. 5. (1844)

7
The courtiers who surround him have forgotten nothing and learned nothing. (Les courtisans qui l'entourent n'ont rien oublié et n'ont rien appris.)

MARÉCHAL CHARLES FRANÇOIS DUMORIEZ, referring to Louis XVIII, at the time of the Declaration of Verona, Sept., 1795.

They have learned nothing and forgotten nothing. (Ils n'ont rien appris, ni rien oublié.)

CHARLES-MAURICE DE TALLEYRAND-PÉRIGORD, referring to the courtiers who returned to France at the time of the Bourbon restoration, which placed Louis XVIII on the throne. The attribution is by the Chevalier de Panat, in a letter to Mallet du Pan, Jan., 1796, the exact phrase being, "Personne n'est corrigé, personne n'a su ni rien oublier ni rien apprendre." See Mémoires et Correspondance de Mallet du Pan (1851), ii, 196.

Those poor Bourbons who have been so impudently blamed for a universal characteristic, had learnt nothing and forgotten nothing.

BERNARD SHAW, The Revolutionist's Handbook. Sec. 8. (1903)

8
The two parties which divide the state, the party of conservatism and that of innovation, . . . have disputed the possession of the world ever since it was made.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conservative. (1841)

I often think it's comical

How Nature always does contrive

That every boy and every gal

That's born into the world alive,

Is either a little Liberal,

Or else a little Conservative!

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act ii. (1882)

9
Men are . . . conservatives after dinner.

EMERSON, New England Reformers. (1844)

10
Them whome nothing contenteth out of their accustomed Mumpsimus.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Governour, iii, 15. (1531) The allusion is to the story of an illiterate English priest, who when corrected for reading "quod in ore mumpsimus" in the Mass, replied, "I will not change my old mumpsimus for your new sumpsimus."

Some be to stiff in their old Mumpsimus, other be to busy and curious in their new Sumpsimus.

HENRY VIII, Speech to Parliament, 24 Dec., 1545. See HALL, Chronicle: Henry VIII, 261.

How many gray heads he hath addled by vain attempts to exchange their old Mumpsimus for his new Sumpsimus.

WALTER SCOTT, Monastery: Introduction. (1820)

11
The gentleman . . . failed to better his hand.

The other stood pat.

CHARLES WELSH, Poker: How to Play It, p.

12. (1882) He kept the hand which had been dealt him, drawing no cards.

To use a poker term, Peter was standing "pat."
P. L. FORD, Peter Stirling, p. 384. (1894)

We'll stand pat.

MARK HANNA, when asked by a reporter to state the principal issue of the 1900 presidential campaign to re-elect William McKinley. Hence the sobriquet "stand-patters."
See STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 259.

[Senator Hanna] was an avowed "stand-patter" on the tariff; in fact, the author of the expression.
Boston Transcript, 16 Feb., 1904, p. 11/2.
I felt as if I were . . . tarred with the brush of being a thick-and-thinnite.

A. J. BALFOUR, Speech, 9 Jan., 1900. The British for standpatter.

1
A conservative is a man who is too cowardly to fight and too fat to run.

ELBERT HUBBARD, 1001 Epigrams. (1895)

A Conservative is a man with two perfectly good legs who, however, has never learned to walk.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Radio Speech, 26 Oct., 1939.

2
One generation is apt to get all the wear it can out of the cast clothes of the last, and is always sure to use every paling of the old fence that will hold a nail in building the new.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 9. (1862)

3
Savages are the most conservative of human beings.

A. H. SAYCE, Introduction to the Science of Language. Ch. 1. (1879)

4
The Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington.

SYDNEY SMITH, Speech on the Reform Bill, at Taunton, Oct., 1831. The context is, "The attempt of the Lords to stop the progress of reform, reminds me of Mrs. Partington . . . trundling her mop . . . and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused, Mrs. Partington's spirit was up; but I need not tell you that the contest was unequal. The Atlantic beat Mrs. Partington." The story is that Mrs. Partington had a cottage on the beach at Sidmouth, Devon, and during a great storm in November, 1824, tried to mop up the waves which were driven into her house. After Smith's speech, she became a symbol for an incorrigible conservative.

The refinement of good breeding could go no further.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners, referring to the fact that when the Marquess of Hartington, later the Duke of Devonshire, visited the United States in 1862, he wore a secession badge in his button-hole, and President Lincoln, when the Englishman called upon him, persisted in calling him "Mr. Partington."

Like Mrs. Partington mopping against the tide of the Atlantic.

F. COWAN, See Proverbs, p. 60. (1894)

5
The man for whom the law exists—the man of forms, the Conservative is a tame man.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

Mossback was first used in 1885 to designate an Ohio Democrat of the conservative wing. Soon afterward it began to be used for any conservative.

H. L. MENCKEN, American Language: Supplement I, p. 299, note. (1945)

CONSISTENCY

See also Inconsistency

6
The rarest of all human qualities is consistency.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Principles of Morals and Legislation. Ch. i, sec. 12. (1789)

7
A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen and philosophers and divines. With consistency a great soul has simply nothing to do.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

What a good time small minds have had with that saying!

WALDO FRANK, The Bridegroom Cometh, p. 394. (1939)

8
Believe me, it is a great rôle, to be always the same man. (Magnam rem puta unum hominem agere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, sec. 22. (65 A. D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 1.

9
Consistency, thou art a jewel.

A phrase whose origin is shrouded in mystery. Although it has all the tang of Shakespeare, he never used it—in fact the word "consistency" does not occur in his works, nor in the Bible. It is cited neither by the O.E.D. nor by the Century, and no example of its use occurs in any of the standard compilations. This mystery existed as far back as 1867, when some unknown wag asserted that he had discovered the phrase in an old ballad, Jolly Robyn-Roughhead, published in Murtagh's Collection of Ballads, 1754. But no such book ever existed, and the ballad itself proved to be a fake. Its first four lines ran, "Tush! tush! my lassie, such thoughts resigne, | Comparisons are cruele: | Fine pictures suit in frames as fine, | Consistencie's a jewell." Aesop, as usual, has a fable, The Hound and the Hare, with consistency as a moral. When the hare ran, the hound pursued as though intent on killing it; when the hare stopped, the hound frisked around as though wanting to play. At last the hare said, "I wish you would show your true self. If you are my friend, why snap at me? If you are my enemy, why seek to play with me? Be consistent."

CONSTANCY

See also Fidelity; Inconstancy; Love:
Constant and Inconstant; Trueness

- 1 Stedefast as a wal.
CHAUCER, tr. (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5250. (c. 1365)
- And she ay sad and constant as a wal.
CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 991. (c. 1388)
- 2 To be constant one must be immortal. (Pour être constant il faut être immortel.)
JEAN FRANÇOIS COLLIN-HARLEVILLE, L'Inconstant. Act i, sc. 10. (1786)
- 3 A man without constancy can be neither a soothsayer nor a doctor.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiii, ch. 22. (c. 500 B. C.) Legge, tr.
- 4 Constancy is but a dull sleepy quality at best.
GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act i, sc. 2. (1706)
- 5 Constancy is like vnto the Storke, who wheresoeuer she flye commeth into no neast but hir owne.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 416. (1580)
- 6 Were man But constant, he were perfect.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, v, 4, 109. (1594)
- 7 I am constant as the northern star.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 1, 60. (1599)
- As fickle as the North Star.
O. HENRY, (W. S. Porter), The Marionettes. (1902)
- TRUE AS NEEDLE TO POLE, see under TRUE.
- 8 From head to foot I am marble-constant.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 240 (1606)
- CONSTANT IN NOTHING BUT INCONSTANCY, see under INCONSTANCY.

CONSTITUTION

- 9 Whenever the Constitution comes between men and the virtue of the white women of South Carolina, I say—to Hell with the Constitution!
- COLE L. BLEASE, Public Statement, as Governor of South Carolina, 1911.
- 10 No matter whether th' Constitution follows th' flag or not, th' Supreme Court follows th' illicion returns.
FINLEY PETER DUNNE, The Supreme Court's Decision. (1901) "The Constitution follows the flag" was the slogan of the Republican party after the conquest of the Philippines. (1900)
- We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the judges say it is.
CHARLES E. HUGHES, Speech at Elmira, N.Y., 3 May, 1907.

The United States Constitution has proved itself the most marvellously elastic compilation of rules of government ever written.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Radio Speech, 2 March, 1930. Our Constitution is so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1933.

If the Constitution is to be construed to mean what the majority at any given period in history wish the Constitution to mean, why a written Constitution?

FRANK J. HOGAN, Presidential Address, American Bar Assn., San Francisco, 10 July, 1939.

11 "Here we stan' on the Constitution, by thunder!

It's a fact o' wich ther's bushils o' proofs;
Fer how could we trample on't so, I wonder,
Ef 't worn't thet it's ollers under our hoofs?"
Sez John C. Calhoun, sez he.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 5. (1848)
We stand upon the Constitution.

W. J. BRYAN, Memoirs, p. 245. (1925)

12 A good constitution is infinitely better than the best despot.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Milton. (1825)

Your Constitution is all sail and no anchor.

MACAULAY, Letter to H. S. Randall, 23 May, 1857. Referring to the American constitution.

13 The American constitutions were to liberty. what a grammar is to language: they define its parts of speech, and practically construct them into syntax.

THOMAS PAINE, The Rights of Man, p. 93. (1791)
A covenant with death and an agreement with hell.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Resolutions, adopted by the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, 27 Jan., 1843, referring to the constitution of the United States.

When you came to examine the American Constitution, you found it was not really a constitution, but a Charter of Anarchism.

BERNARD SHAW, Address, New York, 11 April, 1933.

14 What's the Constitution between friends?

TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL, Tammany Congressman from New York, to President Grover Cleveland. (c. 1885) The attribution is on the authority of William Tyler Page who states that Campbell made the remark while urging the President to sign a bill, which the latter had refused to do on the ground that the bill was unconstitutional. "What are twenty acts of Parliament among friends?" has been attributed to John Selden. (c. 1689)

The Constitution rides behind
And the Big Stick rides before (Which was a rule of precedent
In the reign of Theodore).

WALLACE IRWIN, The Ballad of Grizzly Gulch. (1905) Referring to Theodore Roosevelt.

I hope that your committee will not permit doubt as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation.

PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Letter to Representative Samuel B. Hill, referring to the Guffey Coal Control bill, July, 1935.

What's the Constitution between policemen?

HELEN MCCLOY, The Deadly Truth, p.9. (1941)

It is too probable that no plan we propose will be adopted. . . . If to please the people, we offer what we ourselves disapprove, how can we afterwards defend our work? Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair. The event is in the hand of God.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Remark, during a discussion at the Constitutional Convention, 1787. See FARRAND, The Framing of the Constitution, p. 66.

CONTEMPT

See also Ridicule, Scorn, Sneer

No one considers himself contemptible.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 650. (1817)

Contempt is egotism in ill humor.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Omniana, 110. (1812)

Know how to play the card of contempt. (Saber jugar del desprecio.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 205. (1647)

Some evils are cured by contempt.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1050. (1650)

It is only the contemptible who fear contempt. (Il n'y a que ceux qui sont méprisables qui craignent d'être méprisés.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 322. (1665) As the air to a bird or the sea to a fish, so is contempt to the contemptible.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1868)

See how the mountain goat hangs from the summit of the cliff; you would expect it to fall; it is merely showing its contempt for the dogs. (Despiciit illa canes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 98. (c. A.D. 85)

A man must first despise himself, then others will despise him.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. i, sec. 4. (c. 300 B.C.)

Those who are despised are apt to return the favor. (Solet a despectis per ferri gratia.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 2, l. 1. (c. 25 B.C.)

Despise not any man.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirke Aboth, iv. 6. (c. 450) He that alle despyseth all displeaseth. (Qui omnes despiciit, omnibus displicet.)

ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis. As quoted by CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, sec. 15. (c. 1387)

There is no reply so sharp as silent contempt. (Il n'est réplique si piquante comme est un tel mespris.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 31. (1580)

Contempt is the sharpest reproof.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 339. (1855)

Contempt will sooner kill an injury than revenge.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 339

Man is much more sensitive to the contempt of others than to self-contempt.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human. Ch. i. (1878)

Contempt hurts the wise man more than a scourge does the fool. (Contemni [sapienti] gravius est quam stulto percuti.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 118. (c. 43 B.C.)

O Poverty, thy thousand ills combined Sink not so deep into the generous mind, As the contempt and laughter of mankind. (Nil habet infelix paupertas durius in se, quam quod ridiculos homines facit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 152. (c. A.D. 120)

Contempt is usually worse borne than real Injuries.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1149. (1732)

Many can bear Adversity, but few Contempt.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3340

There is nothing that people bear more impatiently, or forgive less, than contempt; and an injury is much sooner forgotten than an insult

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746

Contempt, says the eastern proverb, pierces even through the shell of the tortoise.

MACAULAY, Essays: Frederick the Great. (1842)

To call one Sir and something else.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 269. (1678)

i.e., Sirrah, a contemptuous form of address Sirrah your Dog, but Sirrah not me;

For I was born before you could see.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6496. (1732)

It may be worth noting that this is the closing entry in Fuller's great collection

Contempt is Failure's share.

G. L. SCARBOROUGH, To the Vanquished. (c. 1900) Schiller has a line, "Verachtung ist der wahre Tod" (Contempt is the real death)

CONTENT

See also Discontent, Moderation, Wants

Contented among the living, contented among the dead. (ὁ δ' εὐκολος μὲν ἐνθάδ', εὐκολος δ' ἐκεῖ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 82. (c. 420 B.C.)

Referring to Sophocles. Sometimes translated, "Sweet-tempered as on earth, so here below."

Hee that studies his contentment overmuch, ever wants it.

RANDLE COTURAVE, Dictionary: Aise. (1611)

He that studies his content, wants it.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 5. (1640)

1 A quiet heart is a continual feast.
MILES COVERDALE, Bible: Proverbs, xv, 15.
(1535) The King James version is, "He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast."

It is a sweete continuall feast

To liue content I see.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albions England. Bk. vii,
ch. 37. (1592)

A contented mind is a continual feast.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis,
381. (1681) See also under MIND.

Where Content is, there is a Feast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5637. (1732)

2 For who did ever yet, in honour, wealth,
Or pleasure of the sense, contentment find?

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. xxx,
st. 50. (1599)

And his best riches, ignorance of wealth.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 61. (1770)

3 Contented from the bottom of their hearts.
(Cordibus imis laetantes.)

ENNIUS, Annals Bk. xii, frag. 363, Loeb. (c.
180 B. C.)

4 Fortify yourself with contentment, for this is an impregnable fortress.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 138 (C. A. D. 100)

5 Content with little
Hath charm no less than joy in great estate.

(ιση γὰρ ἡ χάρις, μεγάλοισι χαίρειν μικρά θ' ἡδέως ἔχειν.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 646. (c. 419 B. C.) Way, tr Him whom a little will not content, nothing will content. (ὦ δλίγον οὐχ ἱκανόν, ἀλλὰ τοῦτω γε οὐδὲν ἱκανόν.)

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. (c. 300 B. C.)
Content with little. (Contentus parvo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 110. (30 B. C.)
Content with little, I can piddle here
On brocoli and mutton round the year.

ALEXANDER POPE, Imitations of Horace: Sa- tires, ii, 2, 137. (1732)

Be contented with little or much.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
xxix, 23. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Who with a little cannot be content,
Endures an everlasting punishment.

ROBERT HERRICK, Poverty and Riches. (1648)
Nature with little is content.

HERRICK, No Want Where There's Little.

Whatever comes, let's be content withall:

Among God's blessings, there is no one small.

ROBERT HERRICK, Welcome What Comes.

Better is a little with content than much with contention.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

If I'm content with a little,
Enough is as good as a feast.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFF, Love in a Village. Act iii, sc. 1. (1763) See also under ENOUGH.

Contented wi' little, and cantie [merry] wi' mair.

ROBERT BURNS, Contented wi' Little. (c. 1794)
My motto is, "Contented with little, yet wishing for more."

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Wordsworth, 13 Oct.
1800.

6 To be content look backward on those who possess less than yourself, not forward on those who possess more.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

He that's content hath enough; he that complains hath too much.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

7 Seek for the philosopher's stone, . . . this jewel of contentment (which turns all into gold).

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Con- tentment. (1642)

Content is the Philosopher's Stone, that turns all it touches into Gold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1154. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

It will be noted by anyone who compares the two, how often Franklin quoted from Fuller.
That he possessed a copy of Gnomologia cannot be doubted.

8 Contentment consisteth not in adding more fuel, but in taking away some fire: not in multiplying of wealth, but in subtracting men's desires.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Content- ment. (1642)

9 Content is Happiness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1152. (1732)
We are contented because we are happy, and not happy because we are contented.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations:
Brooke and Sidney. (1853)

10 Content lodges oftner in Cottages than Palaces.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1155. (1732)

He who wants Content, can't find an easy Chair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2408.

11 Where wealth and freedom reign, contentment fails.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 91. (1764)

Let us draw upon content for the deficiencies of fortune.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 3. (1766)

12 Sweet are the thoughts that savour of content.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Folly. (1587)

13 Content layeth pleasure, nay virtue, in a slumber. . . . It is to the mind, like moss to a tree, it bindeth it up so as to stop its growth.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 248.
Contentment is a kind of moral laziness; if there wan't ennything but kontentment in his world, man wouldn't be any more of a suckcess than an angleworm iz.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom. (1874)

I'm so glad contentment hasn't caught us—and wrapped us in cotton wool.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act iii. (1923)

1 Be content with such things as ye have. (ἀρκοῦμενοι τοῖς παροῦσιν.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 5. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Contenti praesentibus."

Learn this of me, where e'er thy Lot doth fall; Short lot, or not, to be content with all.

ROBERT HERRICK, Lots to be Liked. (1648)

2 'Tis not the food, but the content That makes the Table's merriment.

ROBERT HERRICK, Content, not Cates. (1648)

3 Content's a kingdom.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Kill'd With Kindness. Act iii, sc. 1. (1607)

Content is more than a Kingdom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1153. (1732)

An interesting example of the way in which Fuller took old sayings, revised, and frequently improved them.

4 He who is content can never be ruined. (Chi tsü pu ju'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 44. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

He who knows contentment's contentment is always content. (Chih tsu tsü tsu chang tsu.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 46

There is no greater misfortune than not to know contentment. (Hwo' mo' ta' yü pu chih tsu.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 46.

Contentment is an everlasting competence. (Ku' chi tsu chi tsu chang tsu.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 46. Giles puts it. "He who is content always has enough."

5 Contentment furnishes constant joy; much covetousness, constant grief. To the contented, even poverty is joy; to the discontented, even wealth is a vexation.

WILLIAM MILNE, tr., Ming-hsin Pao-chien. (c. 500 B. C.) See Indo-Chinese Gleaner, Aug., 1818.

6 I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content (ἐν ᾧ γὰρ ἤμαθ' εἰς οἷς εἶμι ἀνέστημι εἶμαι.)

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 11. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Ego enim didici, in quibus sum, sufficiens esse."

7 He who is contented with his lot has the greatest and surest riches. (Qui suis rebus contentus est, huic maximae ac certissimae divitiae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 617. (c. 43 B. C.) Not to be greedy is money; not to be fond of buying is a revenue; but to be content with what we have is the greatest and most certain wealth of all. (Non esse cupidum, pecunia est; non esse emacem, vectigal est; contentum vero suis rebus esse, maxima sunt, certissimaque divitiae.)

CICERO, Paradoxa. Pt. vi, sec. 3. (c. 45 B. C.) Contented with your lot, you will live wisely. (Laetus sorte tua vives sapienter.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. x, l. 44. (20 B. C.) Who is rich? He who is contented with his lot.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirke Aboth, iv, 1. (c. 450) He who is satisfied with the portion allotted to him by God may properly be deemed the richest of all mankind.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Pensnim (Choice of Pearls). No. 158. (c. 1050)

No wealth can surpass contentment.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Pensnim. No. 493.

Contentment maketh a man rich.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 6, Maxim 2. (c. 1257)

Poorly content is better than richly covetous.

ROBERT GREENE, Perimedes. (1588) Works, vii, 60.

He who is content in his poverty is wonderfully rich.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 480. (1623)

Contentment is the greatest wealth.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 31. (1633)

Content is all.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 38. (1639)

Content surpasses wealth. (Contentment passe richesse.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 65. (1666) The Italians say, "E meglio il cuor felice che la borsa" (Better the contented heart than wealth).

Content is wealth, the riches of the mind.

DRYDEN, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 466. (1700)

The greatest Wealth is Contentment with a little THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4581. (1732)

Content makes poor Men rich; Discontent makes rich Men poor.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749

A contented man is always rich. (Qui cum fortuna convenit, dives est.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 357 (1869) "He is rich that is satisfied"

8 To be satisfied with little is worship and not to be satisfied with moche is shame.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Savings of the Philosophers, fo. 53. (1477) Quoting Socrates

9 A man ought to be content to haue so moche as he neded nat to flatre nor borowe of other.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 69. (1477)

He may be well contented who needs neither borrow nor flatter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1670)

10 The kingdom of contentment is dependent on a fixed income.

SADI, Gulistan Ch. 7, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)

He drew the feet of contentment under the skirt of security.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 3, Apologue 28.

<sup>1</sup> No man when he views the lot of others is content with his own. (Nulli ad aliena respicienti sua placent.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 31, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 55) See also under POSSESSIONS.

<sup>2</sup> My crown is in my heart, not on my head, . . .

My crown is called content.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 1, 62. (1591)

Content is worth a crown.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, 203. (1630)

Contentment has been worn as a crown by no end of sleepy heads.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 104. (1940)

<sup>3</sup> Such is the fulness of my heart's content.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 1, 35. (1593)

I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 4, 42. [She] lived now at her owne hearts sweet content.

SIR JOHN HAYWARD, tr., Eromena, p. 110. (1632)

<sup>4</sup> Whate'er our lot, life would not be evil if we were content therewith. (οὐ γὰρ ἂν κακῶς | οὐδ' ὧδ' ἔχοντες ἤμεν, εἰ τερποίμεθα.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 798. (c. 408 B.C.)

As the old saying goes, I'll make the best of what I've got. (κατὰ τὸν παλαιὸν λόγον τὸ παρὸν εἶ ποιεῖν.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 499C. (c. 385 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vi, 5, where Winsted (Loeb), renders it by Dryden's line, "Take the goods the gods provide thee."

Keep what goods the gods provide you. (Habeas quod di dant boni.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1229. (c. 200 B.C.)

Take the goods the gods provide thee.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 106. (1697)

Make the best of what fortune gives. (τὰ ἐκ τῆς τύχης διδόμενα κόσμει.)

OLYMPIODORUS III, Commentary on the Gorgias. (c. 600)

Take all things as it comth, and be content.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

Hee which is not content with that hee hath, hath never a whit more, then hee, who hath nothing at all.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. II, p. 206. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Happye is that man, that hath euerie thing, and possesseth nothing, and possessing nothing, hath euerie thing, but abydeeth content with that he hath.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 49. (1578)

This saying, quoted as "the proverbe of our Poete," has not been traced, but the thought is frequent in medieval and later writers.

Take all things as they come and be content.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scurge of Folly, p. 296. (1611)

Make much of what you have.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 129. (1639)

When we have not what we like, we must like what we have. (Quand on n'a pas ce que l'on aime, Il faut aimer ce que l'on a.)

BUSSY-RABUTIN, Letter to Madame de Sévigné. (c. 1670)

Gnaw the bone which is fallen to thy lot.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Adagia Hebraica, p. 411. (1678)

Be content with whatever you have. (Tê kuo ch ieh kuo.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1875. (1875)

Take things as you find them.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. iv, p. 105.

(1904) The French say, "Tel le voyez, tel le prenez" (As you see a thing, so take it); the Germans, "Nimm die Welt wie sie ist, nicht wie sie sein sollte" (Take the world as it is, not as it ought to be).

<sup>5</sup> No chance is evil to him that is content.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living: Of Contentedness. (1650)

Who is contented, enjoys.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 52. (1666)

<sup>6</sup> In vain we seek Content in outward things.

'Tis onely from within where Quiet springs.

SIR SAMUEL TUXE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act i, fin.

<sup>7</sup> Godliness with Contentment,—these be the pillars of felicity.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Contentment. (1839)

<sup>8</sup> What better fare than well content?

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Posies for Thine Own Bed Chamber. (1573)

<sup>9</sup> Contentment is not a proof of worth. (Le contentement n'est pas la marque du mérite.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 69. (1746)

<sup>10</sup> Seldom it comes; to few from Heav'n sent.

That much in little, all in naught, Content.

JOHN WILBYE, Madrigals: There Is a Jewel (1598)

<sup>11</sup> The wisest, happiest of our kind are they

That ever walk content with Nature's way.

WORDSWORTH, Evening Voluntaries, v. (1834)

<sup>12</sup> Contentment is the highest happiness.

UNKNOWN, Makabharata: Canti Parva. Sec. 331. (c. 200 B.C.)

The utmost we can hope for in this world is contentment; if we aim at anything higher, we shall meet with nothing but grief and disappointment.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 6 Sept., 1711. From labour health, from health contentment springs:

Contentment opes the source of every joy.

JAMES BRATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. I, st. 13. (1771)

CONTENTION

See also Quarreling

<sup>1</sup> In a hundred ells of contention there is not an inch of love.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 818. (1640)

BONE OF CONTENTION, see under BONE.

<sup>2</sup> Never contend with a man who has nothing to lose. (No empenarse con quien no tiene que perder.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 173. (1647)

<sup>3</sup> As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire, so is a contentious man to kindle strife. (Sicut carbones ad prunas, et ligna ad ignem, sic homo iracundus suscitatur rixas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi. 21. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Reply not roughly to smooth language, nor Contend with him who knocks at peace's door.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 14. (c. 1258)

CONTRADICTION

<sup>5</sup> Contradiction should awaken Attention, not Passion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1157. (1732)

When the Devil of Contradiction once possesses a Man, he is hard to be cast out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5577.

<sup>6</sup> It is an olde saying, that the vice of contradiction is proper to men of small discretion.

STEPANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 92. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>7</sup> I love to mark sad faces in fair weather, And hear a merry laugh amid the thunder.

JOHN KEATS, Fragment. (c. 1817)

<sup>8</sup> Be dumb, Thou spirit of contradiction.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Picture. Act i, sc. 2. (1629)

There's the dear spirit of contradiction in it

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Hypocrite. Act i, sc. 1. (1769)

<sup>9</sup> One that is a gainsayer becometh a strife-maker.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 36. (c. 3550 B. C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

<sup>10</sup> Contradiction in terms. (Contradiction en termes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 33. (1545)

A contradiction in terms.

T. MEEKE, Sophistry Detected, p. 11. (1795)

A virtuous tyrant is a contradiction in terms

BENJAMIN JOWETT, The Dialogues of Plato, v, 9. (1875)

How can what an Englishman believes be heresy? It is a contradiction in terms.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Act iv. (1924)

<sup>11</sup> I prythee contradict thyself.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 94. (1605)

If some one finds that I contradict myself, I reply: Because I was wrong once, I do not intend to be wrong always. (Si quelqu'un trouve que je me contredis, je réponds: Parce que je me suis trompé une fois, je ne prétends point me tromper toujours.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 643. (1746)

They . . . never failed to contradict themselves.

GEORGE BORROW, Zincali, i, viii, 2. (1841)

Do I contradict myself?

Very well then I contradict myself.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 51. (1855)

CONTRARY

<sup>12</sup> O blinde world, O blinde entencioun!

How ofte falleth al th' effect contraire

Of surquidrye and foul presumpcioun.

(O cecità delle mondane menti,

Come ne seguon sovente gli effetti

Tutti contrarii a' nostri intendimenti!)

Boccaccio, Il Filostrato. Canto i, st. 25. (c. 1250)

CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde.

Bk. i, l. 211. (c. 1280) Surquidrye: arrogance.

By his contrarie is every thing declared.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 637. (c. 1380)

<sup>13</sup> He that goes the contrary Way, must go over it twice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2120. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> If ye hale this waie, I will an other waie drawe

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

CONVENTION

See also Society

<sup>15</sup> In general, the more completely cased with formulas a man may be, the safer, happier is it for him.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1843)

It's wiser being good than bad;

It's safer being meek than fierce.

ROBERT BROWNING, Apparent Failure. (1864)

<sup>16</sup> Forms keep fools at a distance.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Englishman Return'd from Paris. Pt. ii. (1756)

<sup>17</sup> We are grown stiff with the ramrod of convention down our backs.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Green Door. (1906)

<sup>18</sup> He that dooth as most men doo,
Shalbe least wondred on.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

Least is he mark'd that doth as most men do

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Owle. (1604)

Do as the most do, and fewest will speak evil of thee.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 122. (1670)

The Danes say, "Do as most men do, and few will jeer at you."

Do as most do, and Men will speak well of thee.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1303. (1732)

Keep the common Road, and thou'rt safe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3118. After the Latin proverb, "Via trita est tutissima" (The beaten path is the safest).

1 I seemed straight laced.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus and His England (Arber), p. 299. (1580)

2 Custom and convention govern human actions. (νόμος δὲ καὶ ἔθει πάντα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους πᾶρτεν.)

PYRRHO, Maxim. (c. 300 B.C.) See Diogenes Laertius, bk. ix, sec. 61. See also under CUSTOM.

3 It is the height of art to do what is fitting. (Caput artis decere quod facias.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. xi, ch. i. (c. A.D. 80) Citing a proverb which is noted by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 2.

4 Keep decorum.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 77. (1606)

Let them cant about decorum

Who have characters to lose.

ROBERT BURNS, The Jolly Beggars. (c. 1789)

CONVERSATION

See also Speech, Talk

5 Madam, I have but ninepence in ready money, but I can draw for a thousand pounds.

JOSEPH ADDISON, when a lady complained that he took little part in conversation. See BOSWELL, Johnson, 1773.

6 Debate is masculine; conversation is feminine. . . . Many can argue, not many converse.

A. B. ALCOTT, Concord Days: May, 1872.

7 "Let me not live," said Aretine's Antonia, "if I had not rather hear thy discourse than see a play."

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 1. (1621)

With thee conversing I forget all time.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 639. (1667)

With thee conversing I forget the way.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 480. (1716)

8 There are three hundred and forty-six subjects for elegant conversation.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 354. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

9 Conversation, in its better part, May be esteem'd a gift and not an art. . . . Words learn'd by rote a parrot may rehearse. But talking is not always to converse.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 3. (1781)

10 Conversation is our account of ourselves.

R. W. EMERSON, Miscellanies: Woman. (1849)

Conversation is the vent of character, as well as of thoughts. . . . It is the laboratory and workshop of the student.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs. (1870)

11 I never, with important air, In conversation overbear. . . .

My tongue within my lips I rein;

For who talks much must talk in vain.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Pt. i, Introduction, l. 53. (1727)

12 The delights of a pleasant and improving conversation. (Laxantes iucundis honestisque sermonum.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xviii, ch. 2. (c. A.D. 150)

13 Discretion in conversation is more important than eloquence. (La discrecion en el hablar importa más que la elocuencia.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 148. (1647)

14 Conversation is not onely profitable, but moreover necessary to the perfection of man.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 35. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Conversation is the beginning and end of knowledge.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 39.

Conversation is the full perfection of learning.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 43

Conversation makes one what he is.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 925. (1640)

He that converses not knows nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1670)

Conversation teaches more than meditation.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1158. (1732)

Education begins a Gentleman, Conversation completes him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1359.

Studying in the solitude of the mountains is not equal to sitting at the cross-roads and listening to the talk of men.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs. p. 354. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

15 It was usually better not to walk through conversational doors other people had left ajar.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 48. (1942)

16 Conversation is more than half the time a refuge from thought or a blind to conceal it

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 8. (1843)

17 The best kind of conversation is that which may be called thinking aloud.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 180. (1822)

18 They tossed the feathery ball of conversation.

O. HENRY, Transients in Arcadia. (1908)

19 And when you stick on conversation's burrs. Don't strew your pathway with those dreadful urs.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 414. (1846)

<sup>1</sup> The pleasure which men are able to give in conversation holds no stated proportion to their knowledge or their virtue.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 4 Jan., 1752. The happiest conversation is that of which nothing is distinctly remembered, but a general effect of pleasing impression.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1781.

His conversation does not show the minute hand; but he strikes the hour very correctly

SAMUEL JOHNSON. See KEARSLEY, Johnsoniana, p. 604.

<sup>2</sup> The genius of conversation consists much less in showing a great deal of it, than in causing it to be discovered in others. (L'esprit de la conversation consiste biens moins à en montrer beaucoup, qu'à en faire trouver aux autres.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. (1688)

The Wit of Conversation consists more in finding it in others, than shewing a great deal yourself.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

<sup>3</sup> Now is the time for conversation. (Conloquium tempus adest.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 607. (c. 1 B.C.) Flee not from conversation. (Nec fuge conloquium.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 587. (c. 1. B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> Washing away the salt-water taste with a fresh-water discourse. (πολύμω λόγῳ ὁλοῦ ἀλμυρὰν ἀκοήν ἀποκλύσασθαι.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 243D. (c. 385 B.C.)

Seasoning with the salt of conversation the business in which they happen to be engaged. (ἀλσι τοῖς λόγοις.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 514F (c. A.D. 95)

He sought to inject a few raisins of conversation into the tasteless dough of existence.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Complete Life of John Hopkins. (1908)

<sup>5</sup> I converse only with myself and my books. (Mecum tantum et cum libellis loquor.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles Bk. i, epis 9. (c. A.D. 98)

<sup>6</sup> Nephew, what means this passionate discourse.

This peroration with such circumstance?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 1, 104. (1590)

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 145. (1593)

Your fair discourse hath been as sugar.

Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 3, 6. (1595)

A kind Of excellent dumb discourse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 3, 38. (1611)

Sweet discourse makes short the days and nights.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 729. (1640)

Sweet discourse, the banquet of the mind.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 432. (1700)

Discourse, the sweeter banquet of the mind.

ALEXANDER POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 433. (1714)

<sup>7</sup> His conversation was marked by its happy abundance.

MARY GODWIN SHELLEY, Preface, to the first collected edition of Shelley's Poems. (1839)

<sup>8</sup> They converse as those would who know that God hears. (Ita fabulantur, ut qui sciant dominum audire.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 39, sec. 18. (A.D. 197)

<sup>9</sup> Conversation, the commerce of minds.

CYRIL TOURNEUR, A Funerall Poeme. (1609)

<sup>10</sup> Female conversation softens our manners, whilst our [men's] discourse, from the superiority of our literary advantages, improves their minds.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act iii, sc. 2. (1787)

<sup>11</sup> Conversation should touch everything but should concentrate on nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

CONVICTION

<sup>12</sup> Such dimity convictions.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 130 (c. 1880)

<sup>13</sup> Men in former days had convictions (Ueberzeugungen), we moderns have opinions (Meinungen).

HEINRICH HEINE, Confidential Letters to August Lewald Let. 9 (c. 1850)

<sup>14</sup> Convictions are the mainsprings of action, the driving powers of life. What a man lives are his convictions.

BISHOP FRANCIS C. KELLY, Address, at Oklahoma City, Okla., 28 Nov., 1933.

<sup>15</sup> Convictions are more dangerous to truth than lies.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human Ch. 1. (1878)

What was a lie in the father becomes a conviction in the son.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, The Antichrist Ch. 55

<sup>16</sup> Every man . . . is encompassed by a cloud of comforting convictions, which move with him like flies on a summer day.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 28 (1928)

<sup>17</sup> Conviction is the Conscience of the Mind.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. iv, ch. 26. (1888)

COOK

<sup>1</sup> Dip your fingers in the hot gravy and let your moist tongue lick them as it darts in and out. (Vibranti lambat quos umida lingua recursu.)

AUSONIUS, Ephemeris. Pt. vi, l. 7. (c. A. D. 370)
It is an euyl coke that can not lycke his owne lypes.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig. C4. (c. 1510)
He is an evyle cook, that cannot lycke his owne fyngers.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 19. (1539)
A poore cooke that maie not licke his owne fyngers.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
'Tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 2, 6. (1592)
A bad cooke that cannot his owne fingers lick.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie, p. 199. (1598)

A bad cook licks his own fingers.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, The Pennyles Pilgrimage. (1618)

Sir Thomas Cook . . . one who had well lick'd his fingers under Queen Margaret (whose Ward-rober he was).

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 8. (1642)

He's but a silly cook that wists not how to lick his fingers.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Works (Grosart), iii, 222. (1646)

He's a sarry [poor] cook that may not lick his own fingers.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 138. (1721)
"Apply'd," Kelly explains, "satirically to receivers, trustees, guardians, and other managers. Signifying that they will take a share of what is among their hands." The French say, "Celui gouverne bien mal le miel qui n'en tâte et ses doigts n'en lèche" (He manages the honey very badly who does not taste it and lick it off his fingers).

'Tis an ill cook that can't lick her own fingers.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

They say, a good cook knows how to lick his own fingers.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 6. (1822)

<sup>2</sup> God may sende a man good meate, but the deuyll may sende an euyl coke to dysttrue it.

ANDREW BOORDE, Dyetary of Helth, p. 260. (1542) Referred to as "a common proverb."

He maye have cause to saye so of his fletcher as . . . is communelye spoken of Cookes, . . . that God sendeth us good fethers, but the deuyll noughtie Fletchers.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, ii, 132. (1545) A fletcher is a maker of arrows.

God sends Meate, and the diuell sends cookies.

THOMAS DELONEY, Works (1912), p. 221 (c. 1600)

Such diet we had that the proverb was truly verified, "God sent meat, and the Devil sent Cooks."

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Observation

and Travel from London to Hamburgh. (1617)

Great pity were it if this beneficence of Providence should be marr'd in the ordering, so as to justly merit the reflection of the old proverb, that though God sends us meat, yet the Devil does cooks.

UNKNOWN, Cooks' and Confectioners' Dictionary. (1724)

The waste of many good materials . . . and the curses not unfrequently bestowed on cooks with the usual reflection, that whereas God sends good meat, the devil sends cooks.

EDWARD SMITH, The Compleat Housewife. (1728)

God sends Meat, and the Devil finds Cooks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1688. (1738)

The most disagreeable thing at sea is the cookery; for there is not, properly speaking, any professional cook on board. The worst sailor is generally chosen for that purpose. Hence comes the proverb used among the English sailors, that "God sends meat, and the Devil sends cooks."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Precautions to be Used by Those Who are About to Undertake a Sea Voyage. (1760)

This goose is quite raw; well, God sends meat, but the devil sends cooks.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Bad commentators spoil the best of books, So God sends meat (they say), the devil cooks.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

Heaven sends us good meat, but the Devil sends cooks.

DAVID GARRICK, On Goldsmith's Cookery. (1774)

That homely proverb that men taunt my calling with,—“God sends good meat, but the devil sends cooks.”

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 27. (1822)
“God sends meat, but the devil sends cooks.” is an old adage which Giraldus Cambrensis, in his caustic criticisms on the greed of the monastic Orders, thus revised: “God sent the abbays, but the devil sent the kitchens and the cellars.”

J. C. WALL, Devils, p. 127. (1904) The Italians say, “Dio ci manda la carne ma il diavolo cuochi”; the Dutch, “God zendt hem wel de spijzen, maar de duivel kookt ze” (God sent him meat, but the devil cooked it)

<sup>3</sup> A good Cooke can make you good meate of a whetstone.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health, xcii, 150. (1584)

<sup>4</sup> Too many generals lost Caria. (πολλοὶ στρατηγοὶ Καρίαν ἀπώλεσαν.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 72. (c. A. D. 125) A naval variant is, “Many commanders sink the ship.”

There is the proverb, the more cooks the worse pottage.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Life of Carew, p. 33. (1575)

<sup>5</sup> Too many Cooks spoil the Broth.

SIR BALTHAZAR GERBIER, Principles of Build- ing, p. 24. (1662) KINGSLEY, Yeast. Ch. 3. (1851) COLE, Topers' End, p. 244. (1942) etc., etc.

The more Cooks, the worse Broth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4657. (1732)

The Germans say, "Zu viele Köche verderben den Brei"; the Dutch, "Veel koks verzouten de brij" (Too many cooks make the porridge too salt).

If the steersmen become too numerous, the ship sinks.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 15.

(1877) The Japanese say, "Many captains and the ship goes to the rocks."

It is vain to use a multitude to do what can be done by a few. (Frustra fit per plura, quod fieri potest per pauciora.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 137.

(1869) The French say, "Un bon conseiller en vaut cent" (One good counsellor is worth a hundred).

Seven steersmen, eight sailors. (Ch'i shao kung, pa shui shou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 106. (1875)

Seven hands and eight feet. (Ch'i shou pa chiao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 108.

If there are too many cooks, the dog's flesh will never get done.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xl. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Too many suspects spoil the broth.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 158. (1943)

There are too many cooks for this special pot of hellbroth.

A. M. STEIN, The Case of the Absent-Minded Professor, p. 148. (1943)

1 A Cook is known by his Knife.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 50. (1732)

Cook Ruffian, able to scald the Devil out of his Feathers.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1159.

Cooks are not to be taught in their own Kitchen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1160. (1732)

2 Many excellent cooks are spoiled by going into the arts.

PAUL GAUGUIN. (a. 1903) See COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 48.

3 Every cook commends his own sauce.

SIR BALTHAZAR GERBIER, Counsel to All Builders. (1663)

Every cook praises his own broth.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 349. (1855)

4 'Tis by his cleanliness a cook must please.

WILLIAM KING, The Art of Cookery, l. 603. (1708)

I always wash my kettle before I put the meat in it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

5 Let the Cooke be thy Phisition.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 230. (1580)

Better bide the cookes nor the mediciners.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 24. (c. 1595) Better wait on the cooks as the leaches.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 57. (1721) I'm sick and hungry, more need of a cook than a doctor.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

6 A cook ought to possess the taste of his master. (Cocus domini debet habere gulam.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, No. 220. (c. A. D. 85)

7 We may live without poetry, music, and art; We may live without conscience and live without heart;

We may live without friends, we may live without books,

But civilized man cannot live without cooks.

OWEN MEREDITH (EDWARD R. BULWER-LYTTON), Lucile. Pt. i, canto 2, st. 19. (1860)

You may live without faith, you may live without hope;

But civilized man cannot live without soap.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Second Scrap Book, xxiv. Paraphrasing Meredith.

8 His cook is his chief merit, and it's his table that people visit. (Que de son cuisinier il s'est fait un mérite. Et que c'est à sa table à qui l'on rend visite.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act ii, sc. 4. (1666)

9 Salt cooks bear blame, but fresh bear shame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6300. (1732)

10 It is prudent to live on good terms with one's cook.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

COOKING

11 Cookery has become an art, a noble science; cooks are gentlemen.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 2. (1621)

12 In a house where there's plenty supper is soon cooked. (En casa llena presto se guisa la cena.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 30, 43.

(1615) The Germans say, "Ohne Mehl und Wasser, ist übel backen" (It's ill baking without flour or water).

13 The greatest animal in creation, the animal who cooks.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit. (c. 1850)

14 Women cannot make a good book of cookery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 15 April, 1778.

15 O! Cookery—cookery, that kills more than war, pestilence, and famine.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iii, sc. 2. (1815)

- <sup>1</sup> Good sops may be made in an old pot.
 TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 111. (1666)
 Many a drop of good broth is made in an old pot.
 C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures,
 p. 84. (1880)

COQUETRY

See also Flirtation

- <sup>2</sup> Yet let us not their loose coquett'ry blame,
 Women of every nation are the same.
 JOHN GAY, Poems. (1745), ii, 22. (1720)
 She who trifles with all is less likely to fall
 Than she who but trifles with one.
 JOHN GAY, The Coquette.
 By keeping men off, you keep them on.
 JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i. (1727)
 The coquets of both sexes are self-lovers, and that is a love no other whatever can dispossess.
 JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act iii.
 A coquet commonly finds her own perdition, in the very flames which she raises to consume
 others.
 CATHERINE GRAHAM, Letters on Education, p.
 221. (1790)
- <sup>3</sup> Of auncient fathers she tooke no cure nor care,
 She was to them, as koy as a croker's mare.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)
- <sup>4</sup> From waving fans, coy glances, glicks, cringes, and all such simpering humors, good Mercury defend us.
 BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v. (1601)
- <sup>5</sup> It is a species of coquetry to make a parade of never practising it. (C'est une espèce de coquetterie de faire remarquer qu'on n'en fait jamais.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 107. (1665)
 "The original meaning [of coquetterie] 'desire to please,' came to be applied almost exclusively to the relations of the sexes," says
 F. G. Stevens, in his edition of La Roche-foucauld, "in particular to the desire of women to please men. It is not necessarily a bad quality."
 All women are fundamentally coquettes, though all do not practise coquetry; some are restrained by fear and some by reason. (La coquetterie est le fond de l'humeur des femmes; mais toutes ne la mettent pas en pratique, parce que la coquet-terie de quelques-unes est retenue par la crainte ou par la raison.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 241.
 Women know not the whole of their coquetry.
 (Les femmes ne connaissent pas toute leur co-quetterie.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 332.
 Women are less able to control their coquetry than their passion. (Les femmes peuvent moins surmonter leur coquetterie que leur passion.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 334.
 The greatest miracle of love is that it cures coquetry. (Le plus grand miracle de l'amour, c'est de guérir de la coquetterie.)

- LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 349.
 Envy is cured by true friendship, and coquetry by true love. (L'envie est détruite par la véritable amitié, et la coquetterie par le véritable amour.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 376.
- <sup>6</sup> Coquetry is one of the main ingredients in the natural composition of a woman.
 SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act
 i, sc. 1. (1697)
- <sup>7</sup> A coquette is a woman who rouses passions
 she has no intention of gratifying.
 BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iv.
 (1903)

CORINTH

- <sup>8</sup> If there were any manne in anye parte of Asia, verye wealthye and riche. he was called by a common Phraze, a Corinthian.
 SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Golden Epistles, 282.
 (1577)
 I am no proud Jack, . . . but a Corinthian. a lad of mettle.
 SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 12. (1597)
 Goodly vessels and peeces of Corinth mettall.
 PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Pliny's History, ii.
 487. (1601) "Corinth metal," or "Corinth brass," was an alloy of gold, silver and copper, much prized in ancient times as the material of costly ornaments. Figuratively it came to mean shamelessness, such as was attributed to the Corinthians.
 Corinthian, an impudent brazen faced fellow; a frequenter of brothels.
 FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785) Grose also notes that "Corinth" was the vulgar name for a bawdy house.
 Nothing can be more excellent in kind than the Corinthian grace of Gertrude's manners.
 R. W. EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behaviour.
 (1860) It should not be forgotten that the Corinthian capital was named after Corinth, which became a synonym for grace and elegance. Matthew Arnold in his Essays (ii.
 74) refers to the "Corinthian style."
- <sup>9</sup> It is not for every man to get to Corinth.
 (Non cuivis homini contingit adire Corinthum.)
 HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xvii, l. 36. (20
 B.C.) A rendering of the Greek proverb quoted by AULUS GELLIVS (see below). There are two explanations of the proverb. One is that the harbor at Corinth was very difficult to enter; the other is that Lais, the famous courtesan of Corinth, asked such a high price for her favors, that few men could afford it. According to Sotion, Demosthenes once asked her price, and Lais demanded ten thousand drachmas, the drachma being about sixteen cents. Demosthenes turned away, remarking, "I will not buy regret at such a price." ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 1, who agrees with the first explanation, gives the Latin as "Non est cuislibet Corinthum appellere." Aulus Gellius gives the second, and the proverb afterward came to be applied to the great expense of a self-indulgent life at Corinth. Horace, however, applies the saying differently: "Not every one can gain the prize of virtue." Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 54, with the rendering, "It is not for every man to arrive at Corinth," and the comment, "This prouerbe is of lyke sense with that oure Englyshe prouerbe, whiche sayeth, Euery man may not be a lorde."

Not every man can put in to Corinth. (οὐ πάντες ἀνδρὸς ἐς Κόρινθον ἔσθ' ὁ πλοῖος.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 8, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 150) Quoted as a proverb common among the Greeks (frequens apud Graecos adagium), and accompanied by the story about Lais, as given by Sotion in his Horn of Amaltheia (Κέρας Ἀμαλθείας), or Horn of Plenty (Cornum Copiae), a work, as Gellius says, "filled with wide and varied information." See also under REPENTANCE.

Lais an harlot of Corinthe . . . was for none but lordes and gentlemen that might well paie for it. Whereof came up a prouerbe, that it is not for euery man to go unto Corinthe.

NICOLAS UDALL, Apophthegmes, 379. (1542) It is not for everyone to enter and live at Corinth. (A chacun n'est outlroyé entrer & habiter Corinthe.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, Prologue. (1545) Repeated Bk. v, Prologue.

You know the proverb, "Corinth town is fair. But 'tis not every man that can get there."

JOHN CONINGTON, tr., Horace's Epistles, i, 17, 36. (1863)

He who hasn't seen Seville, has never seen a wonder. (Quien no ha visto Sevilla, | No ha visto maravilla.)

CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 781. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

I know full well that here below

Bliss unalloyed there is for none;

My prayer would else fulfillment know—

Never have I seen Carcassonne!

'Je vois bien qu'il n'est ici-bas

De bonheur complet pour personne.

Mon vœu ne s'accomplira pas:

Je n'ai jamais vu Carcassonne!

GUSTAVE NADAUD, Carcassonne. (c. 1875) Thompson, tr.

CORN

<sup>1</sup> Much corn lies under the straw that is not seen.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 145. (1639) It should perhaps be noted that "corn," as this proverb indicates, is used in England for the grain which Americans call "wheat." What Americans call "corn" the English call "maize," or "Indian corn."

Much Corn lies in the Chaff unseen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3480. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> My folkes are so corne fed that we have much adoe to please them in their diet.

THOMAS DELONEY, Jack of Newbery, viii, 104. (1597) So fed with good food.

What, are you grown so corn-fed, goody Gillian, You will not know your father?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act iv, sc. 6. (1619) So supercilious.

A woman is said to be corn-fed when stout and plump, an allusion to the nourishing qualities of this kind of food [Indian corn].

JOHN S. FARMER, Americanisms Old and New, p. 170. (1839)

<sup>3</sup> Behold I have heard that there is corn in Egypt. (Audivi quod triticum venundetur in Aegypto.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xlii, 2. (c. 800 B.C.)

There is corn in Egypt while there is cash in Leadenhall.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter. (c. 1830) See AINGER, Life, ch. 7. Said of a plentiful supply of anything to be had in the proper quarter

<sup>4</sup> When the corn is in the shock
The fish are on the rock.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 528. (1869)

An allusion to the correspondence of the fishing season, especially the pilchard fishery, with the harvest.

When the frost is on the punkin, and the fodder's in the shock.

J. W. RILEY, When the Frost is on the Punkin. (1890)

<sup>5</sup> In good years corn is hay, in ill years straw is corn.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 218. (1640)

Corn in good Years is Hay; in ill Years Straw is Corn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1162. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> The corn hides itself in the snow as an old man in furs.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 243. (1640)

<sup>7</sup> We must not measure everybody's corn by our own bushel.

WILLIAM HUNTINGTON, The Bank of Faith, p. 35. (1801) See under MEASURE

<sup>8</sup> Out off good corn may cum darnel weede.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Bochas' Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 6732. (c. 1440)

In much corn is some cockle.

THOMAS NASHE, Summer's Last Will and Testament: Epilogue. (1600)

No corne without some chaffe.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Paille. (1611)

The Dutch have the same proverb: "Geen koorn zonder kaf."

He that hath good Corn may be content with some Thistles.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2159. (1732) See also under COMPENSATION.

<sup>1</sup> Corn is not to be gather'd in the budde but the eare.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 360. (1580)

Corn is not to be gather'd in the Blade, but the Ear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1163. (1732)

YOUR CORN IS STILL IN THE BLADE, see under CHICKEN: DON'T COUNT TILL HATCHED.

<sup>2</sup> Look at your corn in May,
And you'll come weeping away;
Look at the same in June,
And you'll come home to another tune.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1678)

<sup>3</sup> Corn and horn go together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1678)

That is, for prices. When corn is dear so are cattle.

The old cry of "down corn, down horn," frightened the stout British farmer.

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mamma. Ch. 25. (1858)

<sup>4</sup> Corne, which is the staffe of life.

EDWARD WINSLOW, Good Newes from New England, p. 47. (1624) See under BREAD

II—Corn: Corns

<sup>5</sup> A coming Show'r your shooting Corns presage.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Description of a City Shower, l. 9. (1710)

And when too short the modish shoes are worn,
You'll judge the seasons by your shooting corn.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 39. (1716)

<sup>6</sup> Insulted the doctor, and trampled on the inmost corns of the nurse.

THACKERAY, Newcomes. Bk. ii, p. 239. (1855)

We cannot avoid treading on each other's corns as we go on our various ways.

ANN FRASER TYTLER, Buried Diamonds, Ch. 4. (1886)

Have you been treading on any corns lately?

J. J. CONNINGTON, The Twenty-One Clues, p. 15. (1941)

<sup>7</sup> I acknowledge the corn.

CHARLES A. WICKLIFFE, of Kentucky, Debate, House of Representatives, 1828. See DEVERE, Americanisms. To admit the truth about a matter.

I was frightened . . . I own it; yes, sir, I acknowledge the corn.

UNKNOWN, Tall Tales of the South-West, p. 26. (1845)

He might as well have confessed the cob.

PAIGE, Dow's Sermons, iv, 127. (1853)

You just acknowledge the corn.

W. M. BAKER, The New Timothy, p. 211. (1868)

His prisoner at once "knuckled" to the Chief; . . . he "acknowledged the corn."

G. P. BURNHAM, Three Years, p. 99. (1875)

[He] acknowledges the corn as regards his . . . imprisonment.

G. A. SALA, Living London, p. 97. (1883)

CORNER

<sup>8</sup> This thing was not done in a corner. (οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶν ἐν γωνίᾳ πεπραγμένον τοῦτο.)

New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 26. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Neque enim in angulo quidquam horum gestum est."

The things were not done in a corner.

GENERAL THOMAS HARRISON, Defence, at his trial for regicide. (1660) See Trial of Twenty Regicides, p. 39.

Such things were not done in a corner.

AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, The Coming of the Priars. Ch. 3. (1889)

<sup>9</sup> I see he has turned the corner.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 5. (1687) A street corner.

That expression which I heard in the country. . . . He has turn'd the corner, i. e., gone away so as no more to be seen [he is dead].

SAMUEL PEGGE, Anonymiana, p. 375. (1796)

"You're round the corner now," cried Miss Pecksniff.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 2. (1844)

Now he had turned the corner, he could afford [it].

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Orley Farm, i, 13. (1862)
Got out of difficulties.

<sup>10</sup> In his honde all ye corners of the earth.

MILES COVERDALE, Bible: Psalms, xciv, 4. (1535)
From the foure corners of ye worlde.

MILES COVERDALE, Bible: Isaiah, xi, 12. (1535)
From the four corners of the world do haste

GUILLAUME DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 1. (1592) Sylvester. tr.

From the four corners of the earth they come
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 7, 39. (1597)

The spirit of the Church is eternally entombed within the four corners of acts of parliament

JOHN MORLEY, On Compromise, p. 37. (1874)

<sup>11</sup> Clement was cornered.

O. W. HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1867)

He felt he was morally "cornered."

E. H. YATES, The Rock Ahead. Ch. 3. (1863)

Animal resistance, the instinct of the male animal when cornered, is no doubt common.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude. (1870)

When a man of that nature gets cornered he is going to endure a great deal.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Life Amongst the Modocs, p. 87. (1873)

I felt sort of cornered, and was afraid I was looking it, too.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 11. (1884)

I guess the visible supply of May wheat . . . is cornered.

FRANK NORRIS, The Pit. Ch. viii. (1902) In the next chapter, Norris wrote, "Corner wheat!

It's the wheat that has cornered me."

Perceiving that the flour crop was short, . . . he cornered the flour market.

O. HENRY, Strictly Business, p. 95. (1910)

<sup>1</sup> They make most excellent drivers, and think nothing of turning short corners.

JOHN JOHNSON, The Oriental Voyager, p. 54. (1807)

Tourists, in their anxiety to cut off a corner, are sometimes induced to cross the valley.

JENKINSON, Guide to the English Lakes, p. 189. (1872)

Freckles was trimming his corners as closely as he dared.

GENE STRATTON PORTER, Freckles, p. 157. (1904)

Taking a chance or risk.

Stranger, pause and shed a tear

For one who leaves no mourners.

D. F. Sapp reposes here:

He would cut corners.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Mr. Sapp. (c. 1910)

<sup>2</sup> He allowed himself to be metaphorically whipped and put in a corner.

JAMES PAYN, The Luck of the Darrells. Ch. 37. (1886)

<sup>3</sup> All carnall temptacyons . . . driuen to a corner.

WYNKEN DE WORDE (?), The Pilgrimage of Perfection, fo. 121. (1526)

Driven into a corner by this merciless reasoning.

GEORGE ELIOT, Silas Marner. Ch. 7. (1861)

He had been driven into a corner.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, He Knew He Was Right. Ch. 36. (1869)

CORNWALL

<sup>4</sup> There are more saints in Cornwall than in heaven.

J. M. BULLOCK, Article, Sunday Times (London), 15 May, 1927. "A common saying in the West of England." "The process of creation is continued. . . . I lately, in a Cornish paper, met with Saint Newlyn."—Notes and Queries, ser. iii, v, 275. (1864)

<sup>5</sup> By Tre, Pol and Pen

You shall know the Cornish men.

RICHARD CAREW, The Survey of Cornwall, p. 149. (1602) Quoting an old proverb.

Tre signifies a town. Pol an head. Pen a top.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Cornwall, i, 306. (1662) The three words are frequently found in Cornish place names and proper names.

By Tre, Pol, and Pen,

Ross, Caer, and Lan,

You know Cornish men.

ROBERT HEATH, Account of the Islands of Scilly, p. 338. This is the full form of the proverb, but the second line is usually omitted.

A worthy name . . . of Cornish lineage; for . . . "By Pol, Tre, and Pen, You may know the Cornish men."

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 1. (1821)

<sup>6</sup> All Cornish gentlemen are cousins.

RICHARD CAREW, The Survey of Cornwall, p. 179. (1602)

They generally intermarry . . . from whence they say that the proverb on them was raised, viz., 'That all the Cornish gentlemen are cousins.'

DANIEL DEFOE, Journey to Land's End, p. 138. (1724)

In Cornwall are the best gentlemen.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 1, note. (1851)

<sup>7</sup> I'll show her the Cornish hug.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, A Faire Quarrell. Act ii, sc. 2. (1617)

You are so taken with your Cornish prentice . . . hearing him talke the other day of the huggle.

THOMAS NABBES, Totenham-Court. Act iii, sc. 3. (1638)

"To give one a Cornish hug." . . . The Cornish are masters of the art of wrestling. . . . It is figuratively applicable to the deceitful dealing of such, who secretly design their overthrow whom they openly embrace.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Cornwall, i, 306. (1662)

And a warm Cornish hug at thy landing.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Invitation to Bonaparte. (c. 1802)

TO SEND A HUSBAND INTO CORNWALL WITHOUT A BOAT, see under CUCKOLD.

CORPORATION

<sup>8</sup> They [corporations] feel neither shame, remorse, gratitude, nor goodwill.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk, xxvii. (1817)

<sup>9</sup> Corporations are many lesser commonwealths in the bowels of a greater, like worms in the entrails of a natural man.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 22. (1651)

<sup>10</sup> They [corporations] are invisible, immortal, and they have no soul, therefore no subpoena lieth against them, because they have no conscience or soul.

SIR ROGER MANWOOD, Opinion as Touching Corporations, while Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, c. 1580. See BULSTRODE, Reports, pt. ii, p. 233; Dict. Natl. Biography, xxxvi, 108/1.

Corporations cannot commit treason, nor be outlawed, nor excommunicated, for they have no souls.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Case of Sutton's Hospital, 1612. (5 Rep. 303; 10 Rep. 32 b) Coke was perhaps paraphrasing Manwood, whom he greatly admired.

Lord Coke gravely informs us that corporations cannot be excommunicated, because they have no souls, and they appear to be as destitute of every feeling as if they had also no bowels. . . . There is in truth but one point through which they are vulnerable, and that is the keyhole of the cash box.

GROTIUS, De Jure Belli et Pacis. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1654)

1 It has been truly said that a corporation has no conscience; but a corporation of conscientious men is a corporation with a conscience.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

2 Did you expect a corporation to have a conscience, when it has no soul to be damned and no body to be kicked?

EDWARD THURLOW, first Baron Thurlow. (c. 1775) See WILBERFORCE, Life of Thurlow. Vol. ii, Appendix.

Lord Chancellor Thurlow said that the corporations have neither bodies to be punished nor souls to be damned; they therefore do as they like.

JOHN POYNTER, Literary Extracts. (c. 1820)

Why, you never expected justice from a company, did you? They have neither a soul to lose nor a body to kick.

SYDNEY SMITH, Remark. (c. 1830) See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 331.

You know what Lord Eldon said about Corporate Boards—that they had neither souls to be saved nor bodies to be kicked.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA, America Revisited, p. 360. (1886)

A corporation is just like any natural person, except that it has no pants to kick or soul to damn, and by God, it ought to have both:

ERNST AND LINDLEY, Hold Your Tongue. (1932) Ascribed to an unnamed Western judge.

3 A corporation cannot blush. It is a body, it is true; has certainly a head—a new one every year; arms it has and very long ones, for it can reach at anything; . . . a throat to swallow the rights of the community, and a stomach to digest them! But who ever yet discovered, in the anatomy of any corporation, either bowels or a heart?

HOWEL WAISSE, Speech, at the Tralee assizes. (a. 1825) See WILLIAM HONE, Table Book Bk. i, col. 524.

CORRUPTION

4 The corruption of the best is the worst. (Corruptio optimi pessima.)

ST. THOMAS AQUINAS, Summa Theologica Pt. ii, Prim. Sec., i, 5. (c. 1270)

There is nothing so ill as the corruption of the best.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, iv, 9. (1612)

So true is the old saying, Corruptio optima pessima. (The best things corrupted become the worst.)

SAMUEL PURCHAS, Purchas His Pilgrim: To the Reader: Of Religion. (1619)

I know, when they prove bad, they are a sort of the vilest creatures; yet still the same reason gives it: for, Optima, corrupta, pessima: the best things corrupted become the worst.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Of Women, p. 70. (1623)

The corruption of best is worst.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 34. (1642)

'Tis the most certain sign, the world's accurst That the best things corrupted are the worst.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, The Progress of Learning. (c. 1650)

Beasts Act by Sense, Man should by Reason; else he is a greater Beast than ever God made: And the Proverb is verified, The corruption of the best things is the worst and most offensive.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Pt. ii, No. 160. (1702)

Corruption of the Best becomes the Worst.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1166. (1732)

Corruption of best is ever the worst corruption.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Testament of Beauty. Bk. i, l. 186. (1930) THE OPPOSITE OF THE BEST MUST BE THE WORST, see under WORST.

5 Corruption's not of modern date; It hath been tried in ev'ry state.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. ii, fab. 9. (1738)

6 Al is corumpable. (Sont tuit corrompable.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 4408 (c. 1270) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 4856. (c. 1365)

7 The time to guard against corruption and tyranny is before they shall have gotten hold of us. It is better to keep the wolf out of the fold than to trust to drawing his teeth and talons after he shall have entered.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia. (1782)

8 The olde maxime of Philosophie, Corruptio unius, generatio alterius: The corruption of one is the generation of another.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 244. (1576) Quoted by BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Y3. (1583)

The corruption of a bawd is the generation of a witch.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, May-Day. Act iii, sc. 3. (1611)

They say that the corruption of pipes is the generation of stoppers.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

9 Stew'd in corruption.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 93. (1600)

Rank corruption, mining all within, Infects unseen.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 148. (1600)

I have seen corruption boil and bubble Till it o'er-run the stew.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 320 (1604)

10 Corruption wins not more than honesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 444. (1612)

COSMOPOLITANISM

<sup>1</sup> Where most I prosper, there's my fatherland.
(πατρίς γὰρ ἐστὶ πάσα ἢν ἀνὴρ πατρίῃ τις εὖ.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 1151. (388 B.C.) In the Corpus Paroemiographorum (MACARIUS, ii, 45), this is given as ὅπου γὰρ εὖ πράσσει τις, ἐνταυθοὶ πατρίς, apparently a cynical version of πάσα γῆ πατρίς (All earth is my country), ZENOBIUS, v, 74, and said to be "part of an oracle given to Meleus the Pelasgian, when inquiring about a habitation." STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xl, 7, has ἀνδρὶ σοφῷ πάσα γῆ πατρίς, ψυχῆς γὰρ ἀγαθῆς πατρίς δὲ σύμπας κόσμος.

One's native land is wherever all is well. (Patria est, ubicumque est bene.)

PACUVIUS, Teucer. Frag. 380, Loeb. (c. 160 B.C.)

Quoted by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 37, sec. 108. HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 161, cites another: "Illa mihi patria est, ubi pascor, non ubi nascor" (That shall be my country which supports me, not where I was born), often contracted to "Pascor, non nascor," and adds one of his own, "A clever man's inheritance is found in every country."

I count any place my country, where I may live wel and wealthily.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Camma, p. 32. (1576)

Where a man lives well, there is his country
KYD, Solyman and Perseda. Act iv. (1594)

Every soil,

Where he is well, is to a valiant man
His natural country.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Picture. Act ii, sc. 2. (1629)

My country is where ever I am well.

THOMAS PECKE, Parnassi Puerperium, p. 94. (1659)

Our country is wherever we are well off.

JOHN MILTON, Letter to Peter Heimbach, 15 Aug., 1666.

